By the Court: Let him identify it. You are not the one to identify it. He is the one to identify it, the witness.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit 5 and I ask you to look at that document and state whether or not your signature is on it.

A. Yes, sir, my signature is on it.

Q. What are the other signatures on it?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I have no idea what that document is but if there has been no foundation laid and it is immaterial to the issues—

938 By the Court: Well, he can identify it, if he knows.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir. The other signatures are the signatures of George Burry, Abigale Norman and Frank Hankermyer.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you lay a foundation as to the date?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, is that the agreement whereby you acquired the interest in the Eatsum Food Products Company.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think we are entitled to know whether this is in the period that has relevancy.

By the Court: These are all just foundation questions.

By the Witness: Sir, I don't see any date.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I didn't ask you about seeing any date.

Will you read the question to the witness.

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

939 By the Witness:

A. I don't know, sir, unless I read the whole paper.

By Mr. McConnell: The question is raised here as to whether I am properly questioning him on cross examination. Now in his direct examination he was asked:

"Q. Now, after you had worked with the Eatsum Food Products Company, as a division of the Burry Biscuit Company, what did you do?

"A. Later on I continued Eatsum Food Products Company as a sole ownership.

"Q. You bought it from the Burry Biscuit Company?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And when did you purchase it?

"A. I believe it was April or May of 1944, maybe a little earlier."

I certainly have a right to cross examine the witness on that transaction.

940 By the Court:

You haven't a right to cross examine him on details of the purchase, because that is immaterial. The mere fact that Mr. Lockley went into some of his past experience doesn't mean you have to go into all of the details of his experience. It is immaterial.

We are not concerned with the Burry Biscuit Company, his career with that company, except in so far as he bought the Eatsum Food Products Company from it. The terms of the sale are immaterial.

By Mr. McConnell: It is material in this respect, if the Court please, if I may suggest the materiality here: That this witness can be shown by these documents to have received—

By Mr. Lockley: If counsel is going to argue before the jury, your Honor, I would request that the jury be withdrawn.

By the Court: I think if you have an offer of proof, you should make it to the Court.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't want to make any offer
941 at this time, in the midst of my cross examination.

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear that.

By Mr. McConnell: I say, if I make an offer of proof, I will make it later, at some other time. There is no need to excuse the jury now. There is no need to interrupt the trial for that.

Now, is there a question before the witness?

By the Court: I guess he answered it. He said he couldn't tell whether that is an agreement unless he went into the entire agreement, or something to that effect.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Do you know of any other agreement that you signed with Mr. Burry yourself, with reference to that business?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Now, how long did you operate this Eatsum Food Products Company as sole proprietor?

A. Until about June 1st of 1945.

Q. From what date?

A. I only hazard—I mean, it appears to me it
942 was around the early part of January or February of 1944. I might be wrong, sir. You are talking about a sole proprietorship?

Q. Did you carry on the same bookkeeping system after you had bought out the interest of the Burry Biscuit Company?

A. Sir, I don't know what system of bookkeeping they had. I didn't take their books.

Q. You didn't take over their books?

A. No, sir.

Q. You started a new bookkeeping system of your own, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you set those books up at the time you bought from Burry, is that right?

A. To the best of my recollection, yes, sir.

Q. Now, what happened in 1945, so far as the termination of the sole proprietorship was concerned?

A. I sold 50 percent of my business.

Q. And you sold it to whom?

A. To a Mr. William Giglio and—

Q. And for how much?

943 By Mr. Lockley: I think that is immaterial, your Honor.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

944 By Mr. McConnell: Well, I think, if the Court please, we have a right to examine him on this because it involves the integrity of the whole bookkeeping system of this Eatsum Products.

By the Court: No. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Who was Mr. William Giglio?

A. Who is he, sir?

Q. Who is he?

A. He is a man.

Q. I understand that. Where was he from?

A. I don't know where he was from, sir.

Q. Well, he became your partner. What was the occasion for his becoming a partner of yours?

A. I sold him a 50 per cent interest.

Q. Where did that transaction take place?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see the materiality of when they became partners or where.

By the Court: Well, are you questioning that he became a partner?

945 By Mr. McConnell: We are questioning the whole bookkeeping system involved here and why these entries were made and why these transactions were made.

It is tied up with the question of relationship with Mr. Giglio.

By the Court: You didn't answer my question. I asked you whether you are questioning that Mr. Giglio was a partner. He stated he had 50 per cent interest.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't question he became a partner.

By the Court: Well, I think your question—I think I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, after Mr. Giglio became a partner in Eatsum Food Products Company, was there any change made in the bookkeeping system?

A. Well, a slight change, sir, for the first month or two.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, tell us what change was made or what you had had when you were running alone?

946 A. Well, sir, when I was running it alone and when a customer wanted a payment in cash in addition to his premium—

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. When I was running it alone, when a customer, when a supplier wanted a payment in cash in addition to his regular invoice price, we drew a check and we cashed that.

And then when Mr. Giglio's associate and accountant Mr. Roth came in, Mr. Roth insisted that we change that, but that he wanted us to sell a certain amount of merchandise for cash and keep that in a book or keep that in a box and pay the cash premiums out of the box.

This was objected to, sir, and later on—I mean, the practice, I mean. It stopped for a while and then it was insisted. It was a source of constant conflict, sir, during the nine months I was in partnership with him.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. That is the $400,000.00 box you are talking about?

947 A. No, sir. That is a candy box. Sir, that was kept in what you call a candy box. It was just a cash box that was kept in the beginning, sir, of the partnership.

Q. Now, that is the box out of which you made these cash payments but into which came cash payments which you received from people you dealt with, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir, and a record of that was kept, sir.

Q. It was not on the books?

A. I wouldn't know whether it was on the books or not but I know a record was kept of who paid the money to us and who we paid it to.

948 Q. In other words, you had one set of books for your bank account, and another set of books for what was in the cash box, is that right?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. Well, is that true?

A. I don't know that it is true, sir.

Q. Is that what you had your dispute about with Mr. Giglio?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. About whether or not you should keep a cash book, or a cash box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, now, you kept a cash box in the sole proprietorship, didn't you?

A. There may have been one, sir, but I can't recall that it was ever used.

Q. You kept more than one, didn't you, as a matter of fact?

A. Sole proprietorship?

Q. The sole proprietorship, yes.

A. I don't recall that, sir.

By the Court: Perhaps we can take our afternoon recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

949 (Short recess.)

A Juror: Your Honor, may we have the witness and counsel speak a little louder, please?

By the Court: Yes. Gentlemen, the jury has trouble hearing, and I gather that refers both to counsel and the witness. I told the Marshal to turn off the fan, thinking it might help some, but I think the witness and counsel have to bear in mind the acoustics apparently aren't too good, and you will have to raise your voices so the jury won't have to strain their ears.

Mr. Lubben, you will have to remember that you have a habit of dropping your voice. Unless you continually bear in mind that you have got to speak louder so the last juror can hear you, much of it, you say, will be lost. The jury tells me they have difficulty hearing you.

By the Witness: I am sorry, sir. I will be more careful in the future.

950 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. During the period, Mr. Lubben, when you were operating this business as the Eatsum Food Products Company, as a sole proprietorship, approximately how much business did you do?

A. I don't recall, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to it, your Honor. It seems to me to be immaterial.

By the Court: Oh, it is a correct question.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you do around twelve million dollars of business?

A. When, sir?

Q. With Eatsum Food Products?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, approximately how much did you do?

A. What period of the Eatsum Food Products are you asking me? You asked me about the sole proprietorship?

Q. Well, I am asking you about the sole proprietorship, when you were operating it alone?

951 A. I can't recall, sir. I had a certified public accountant to keep my statements. If you have one, or if the Government has one, I could refresh my memory with it, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I ask that this document be marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 6.

(Document so marked.)

By the Court: Pardon me. Mr. Marshal, I think if you will close that door, we will avoid noises in the hall, and that will help some.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Who is Mr. Bernard Berku?

A. A certified public accountant, sir.

Q. He was your certified public accountant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I ask you to examine this document and state whether or not you can identify your signature and the signature of Bernard Berku?

A. Yes, sir, I can identify my signature.

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness: I can identify my signature, and it appears to be the signature of Bernard Berku here (indicating.) I haven't seen his signature enough to be 952 familiar with it, with whether it is his or not, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now that is a balance sheet of April 30, 1945. How long had your company been in business as a sole proprietorship at that time?

A. I would say, sir, about—this is only a guess, but about maybe a year or a year and two months, or three months, something like that, or maybe a little more or a little less.

953 That shows total assets of $429,327.20, doesn't it?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to his reading from the document.

By Mr. O'Connell: He has testified—

By the Court: I suppose if you are going to introduce the document you should lay the foundation and then make an offer rather than reading from the context.

By Mr. McConnell: I had the signatures on it identified and it is out of turn for me to offer it, I believe, your Honor, at this time while I am cross examining him.

By the Court: It doesn't make any difference. You don't have any more right to read from a document on cross examination than you have to read from it on direct.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, at this time I will offer in evidence Defendants Exhibit 6 for identification into evidence. It is dated April 30, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to it on the grounds it 954 is improper at this time for the defense to be offering exhibits in evidence. There has been no relationship and there is no connection between that and the case at issue and it is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: As I understood your testimony, Mr. Lubben, you identified this as a certified copy of the balance sheet prepared by your CPA, Mr. Berku?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: For the year April, or as of April, 1945.

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 6.)

By the Court: Now, then, may I call your attention, Mr. McConnell, to the fact that as long as you stand by the witness, we don't get the benefit of his testimony. I appreciate that when you have the exhibit you must be near him but as soon as you are through pointing 955 out something, some figures, or whatever you have in mind, then if you would repair to your table, we would get along much better.

By Mr. McConnell: I certainly want to do everything that is possible to make this easier for all of us. I have got to hand the document to the witness.

By the Court: I know.

By Mr. McConnell: I can't do it any other way.

By the Court: I know.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, after looking at this document, will you tell us, after its being in existence for some nine months, what the net worth of your business was as of that date?

A. It says "net worth after taxes, $67,074.28 plus provisions for taxes, $43,000.00."

Q. And how much does it show that you have drawn out of the business yourself during that period of time?

A. I wouldn't know where to look for that, sir. I don't see it on here.

956 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think I am going to object to that on the ground it is immaterial how much he drew out of the business during that time.

By the Court: The exhibit is in evidence. Counsel has a right to examine him as to the contents.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. This was drawn by you?

A. These were drawings of who?

Q. Was there anybody else drawing except yourself out of your own business?

A. Well, I don't know what drawings mean.

Q. You don't know what a drawing is? Was there anybody drawing any money out of your business, Eatsum Food Products, the sole proprietorship, except yourself?

A. Well, we were paying the rent, we were paying the electric light, we were paying a salary and we were buying merchandise.

Q. Do you think that that means that is a drawing?

A. I wouldn't know it.

Q. Let me ask you, did you draw out of that business for your own account, put in your own pocket, 957 $41,000.00 during that period?

A. If that is what it says, sir, that is what I drew.

Q. And you had a net worth after taxes of $67,074.28, according to the exhibit, didn't you?

A. After a provision of 43,000 for taxes.

Q. Well, you never paid that, did you?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to counsel testifying.

958 By Mr. McConnell: I am just cross examining. This is just cross examination, as I understand it.

By the Court: Cross examination, of course, is limited to material evidence and not immaterial matters.

By Mr. Lockley: I object on the ground that it is immaterial.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, you can't tell us without a reference to a document how much business you did during the co-partnership, is that right?

A. Well, sir, I don't have those records. I am trying to rack my mind and think where they are and I could almost—

Q. Let me ask you this: How long have you been working with the preparation of this case with the Government agents?

A. What do you mean by "working", sir?

Q. How long have you been in Chicago prior to this time?

A. I have been here a week, sir.

Q. What have you been doing during that time?

959 A. Well, sir, one day I went up to Green Bay, Wisconsin, to see about some school desks for Puerto Rico.

Q. Did Mr. Twohig go up there with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you spent any time in the prosecutor's office preparing, going over your testimony in this case?

A. I believe on Sunday we did, sir.

Q. Have you spent any time with Mr. Twohig going over your testimony, preparing it?

A. No, sir. I have not. I did ask him the other day if they could—where my expense vouchers were at because my expense vouchers showed where I was at on those days.

Q. Did Mr. Twohig come down to Puerto Rico to see you to go over your testimony in this case?

By Mr. Lockley: I think it is immaterial, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, yes.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Mr. Twohig was with you down in Hackensack when you were down there, you were down there as a witness?

960 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you go over your testimony with him at that time?

By the Court: What is the testimony in Hackensack? Was that about this?

By Mr. McConnell: I am talking about this matter, whether he went over this testimony here.

By the Witness: No, sir, I haven't gone over my testimony. Geez, the Government has been asking me questions. I mean, this was before I went to Puerto Rico, for years.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. So you were going over your records and answering questions for the Government for years before you went to Puerto Rico, weren't you?

A. They wanted to know where the money was, and so forth. They took my books. They called me down and asked me questions. I can't just flip it away, sir. It is the United States Government.

Q. Then you had some familiarity with what your business was?

A. Sir?

Q. You had some familiarity with what your busi-

961 ness was in answering their questions, didn't you?

A. Well, I knew what my business was.

Q. How much did you do? That is what I am trying to find out.

A. During the time of the partnership?
Q. Yes.
A. A very substantial amount, sir.
Q. Well, how much?
A. Well, if I only had those records, sir, I could tell and I think I know where the records are at.
Q. What records are you talking about now?
A. I mean the records of the partnership. I think I know where part of them are at.
Q. Did you testify before the Kefauver Committee as to how much business you were doing?
A. I believe, sir.
Q. What did you tell them there?
A. I don't recall at the moment. If you have the notes there and if you could refresh my memory—because this has been several years, I think it has been a number of years. I think it is four or five million dollars that we did in the partnership. I may be wrong.
962 Q. That was four or five years ago?
A. Several years ago. I said four or five—it was several years ago. I said, sir, I said four or five million dollars.
Q. How long ago was your Kefauver testimony?
A. I think, sir, it was in 1950.
Q. You have trouble remembering what you testified to?
A. No. I will not forget that day, sir.
Q. Do you remember what you testified to?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What did you testify to?
A. The truth.
By the Court: Oh, well, now, that is just a general question. Obviously he can't answer that.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. I mean on this amount, this figure.
A. I testified to the truth, sir.
963 Q. Well, how much, four or five million dollars?
A. I believe so. That is only a guess, sir.
Q. You recollect the exact conversations which were had with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner back in 1946. You recollected that on the witness stand this morning, didn't you?
A. The exact conversations, sir, with who, sir?
Q. Well, let us take Mr. Huebner. You recollected the exact words he used, didn't you?

A. What words were those? I don't recall any exact words.

Q. You testified this morning about conversations you had with Mr. Huebner.

A. I had many of them.

Q. Well, sir, you remembered exactly what he said and what you said, didn't you?

A. Pertaining to particular transactions, yes, sir.

Q. In 1946?

A. I had something to refresh my memory.

Q. It was seven years ago. Have you anything to refresh your memory as to what exactly was said at those conversations seven years ago?

A. What conversations, sir? Anything specific?

964 Any specific conversation?

Q. Any of them.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?

A. Well, sir, when we paid Mr. Huebner the money, it was the same ritual and there was dozens and dozens, hundreds I would say, telephone calls from Mr. Huebner. It was "Get the money up. Get the cash down here. The more cash that comes down here, the more merchandise you are going to get," sir.

Q. Do you have—.

A. Also, at times he said, "Give me,"—I mean, "I can give you a lot of merchandise if you can give me a hundred per cent cash."

Q. Do you have a memoranda of the specific conferences, as to what he said and what you said?

A. No, sir. I have no specific—but I have it in my head.

Q. You remember that perfectly and it was seven years ago?

A. I didn't say I remember it perfectly.

Q. Well, you remembered it word for word?

A. I didn't say it was word for word.

By Mr. McConnell: Will you mark this document

965 Defendants' Exhibit 7 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 7 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you a document which purports to be a statement—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to counsel reading from the document. Hand it to the witness and see if he recognizes it.

By the Court: I don't think he was reading from it. I think he was merely incorporating some matters in his question in order to put it to the witness. Go ahead.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you a document which purports to be Eatsum Food Products Company statement of income, profit and loss from June 1st to December 1st of 1945—Bernard Berku purports to be—for the month of December, 1945. Will you look at that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to how much your business was per month?

966 A. Sir, you didn't ask me how much my business was per month.

By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness: You didn't ask me how much my business was per month, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I am asking you now if it refreshes your recollection as to what your business was per month.

A. It doesn't show how much my business was per month, sir, except one month, in the month of December.

Q. How much was that?

A. $204,210.00. It says "Total income".

967 Q. Now, the Shotwell Company wasn't the only company your company was doing business with, was it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who was Mr. Kramer?

A. Crane?

Q. Kramer.

A. Mr. Kramer, you mean Morley Kramer?

Q. Yes, I mean Morley Kramer.

A. He was the president of Gum Products Company in Boston and I believe of Two-Star Confections.

Q. And you did business with him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You did a cash business with him?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to what he did with Mr. Kramer. It has no bearing on the issues in the case and it is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: I think it has some direct bearing.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness: What was the question, ma'am?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:
968 A. By that, what do you mean, by "cash business", sir?
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Well, did you pay him over the ceiling payments in cash?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Did you do any business with Mr. Close?
A. No, sir.
Q. Or Close & Company, Mr. Urban, Mr. Edward Urban?
A. Yes, sir, I did.
Q. Did you make payments to him over the ceiling cash?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now these goods you bought and paid over the ceiling prices for, what did you do with those goods?
A. Resold them, sir.
Q. And you sold them for over the ceiling price, did you?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to what he did. It is immaterial to the issues. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.
969 By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir. We applied, in many cases, for other ceiling prices.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Was there a ceiling on these different kinds of candies?
A. What kind, sir?
Q. Well, was there a ceiling on these spice drops?
A. It depended upon who made it, sir. I mean, what the ceiling was.
Q. Was there a ceiling on it, if you know?
A. You mean, an over-all blanket ceiling of the United States?
Q. Was there a ceiling on a sale to a store?

A. Well, there were ceiling prices, sir, but whether any specific item—I can't say yes or no.

Q. Well, on spice drops you paid over the ceiling prices, didn't you?

A. That was Shotwell's ceiling price, sir. The same ceiling price may not apply to somebody else.

970 Q. Well, whatever the ceiling price was that applied, you paid over it, didn't you?

A. For what candy, sir? What specific candy are you talking about?

Q. Let's talk about Mr. Kramer for a minute. Did you pay over the ceiling prices for his candy?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: What is the materiality of it?

By Mr. McConnell: The materiality of it, I can't discuss in front of the jury. I know I am subjecting myself to counsel's criticism.

By the Court: Are you going to connect it up?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, I am definitely going to connect it up.

By the Court: If I have your assurance that you are going to connect it up so as to make it material to this law suit—

By Mr. McConnell: I am certainly going to make it material to this law suit.

By the Court: All right. Go ahead.

By Mr. McConnell: Will you read the question?

971 (Question read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know whether I paid over the ceiling prices for his candy. All I know, sir, I paid him cash premiums. Whether it was an over the ceiling price or not, I wouldn't know.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. After you paid him cash premiums what did you do with his candy?

A. Resold it, sir.

Q. And how did you resell it?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is immaterial, beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I don't think that a transaction that he may have had in selling products that he purchased from somebody else could have any bearing on the issues in this law suit.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, it attacks the credibility of his books, the way they are recorded.

972 By the Court: No, we haven't any books here as yet, except the isolated records. You may attack them.

By Mr. McConnell: It will attack them.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You testified by deposition prior to this trial, did you not; a deposition was taken down in Puerto Rico?

A. You mean, sir, when your Mr. Cain, and your Mr. —the other gentleman over there came down and asked me questions?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir; I did testify.

Q. I ask you if you were asked these questions and made these replies:—

By Mr. Lockley: What page, counsel?

By Mr. McConnell: Page 99.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. "Question: Now, that was on the acquisitions, Mr. Lubben. Now you acquired those items and you resold them, did you not?

"Answer: Yes, sir.

"Question: It is not clear to me, because Miss Feld-973 man, as well as Berku testified that the goods were invoiced to your customers for the full price. Can you tell me what is meant by 'full price'?"

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

974 By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. McConnell: I am laying a foundation by testimony which he made at the deposition.

By the Court: I said he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, I haven't had any—just to pick out one question and expect an answer is a little difficult, but I will try and answer it for you, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, thank you very much.

A. Yes, sir. By full price I would mean—

Q. Wait a minute. I haven't read the whole question.

A. Pardon me, sir.

Q. Did you make this answer.

"The actual price we paid the manufacturer, plus our profit. By that I mean, his legitimate price, his black market price, and our profit."

Did you make that answer?

A. Yes, sir; that was the price we sold the merchandise to the customer.

975 Q. So that the price that you sold to your customers included the regular price and the black market price plus your profit, wasn't that right?

A. Yes, sir. And in many cases, sir, that would be ceiling price.

Q. Did you always do that by invoice?

A. I'd say the greatest percentage of the time, sir.

Q. Well, were there some exceptions?

A. Yes, sir; there were exceptions, sir, where we sold other merchandise for cash.

Q. Did you ever sell it for invoice plus cash?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And when you did that, that cash went back into that candy box, didn't it?

A. Which particular box, sir?

Q. The candy box.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he lays a better foundation. He hasn't said what transaction.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. Many times, sir—and I am sure, sir, if you will examine some records you will find that when we 976 sold the merchandise—for instance, we would sell a customer for one price, and we would get so much cash back, that the cash many times would be deposited in the bank—in our bank as a cash sale. And I am sure if you examine the books you will find many of those instances. I don't say all the time, but many times, sir.

977 By Mr. McConnell: Well, at this time I want to offer in evidence the documents which have been marked for identification Defendants' Exhibits 1-A to D, inclusive, which have been identified by the witness.

By Mr. Lockley: May I see them, counsel?

By Mr. McConnell: Pardon me.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the Government objects to the introduction of all of these with the exception of Defendants' Exhibit 1-D, on the grounds that there is no foundation laid to show that they are in any way connected with the dealings of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. We do not object to 1-D because there are entries on there which relate to Shotwell.

By Mr. McConnell: They are related to the corn box, your Honor.

978 By Mr. Lockley: The fact that it relates to a matter he testified to on cross examination doesn't make it admissible.

By Mr. McConnell: You brought it out on direct, about the corn box. That was the reason he gave for writing out the checks.

By Mr. Lockley: That doesn't make it material to the issues in the case.

By the Court: Well, I will receive it in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 1-A, 1-B, 1-C, and 1-D.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, I call your attention to an item under date of June 5, entitled, "Shotwell to Wachtel," 3405, which is entitled, "Money received". That's money you received on goods that you got from Shotwell, isn't it?

By Mr. Lockley: Let him testify, counsel.

By Mr. McConnell: This is cross examination.

979 By Mr. Lockley: Well, you haven't shown him yet, and you are explaining it to him.

By the Witness: Yes, sir; I have told you—

By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness:

A. I have told you, sir, that these papers here—if you will look at the dates, with the time—the very beginning of the partnership where Mr. Roth and Mr. Giglio insisted we change our method of bookkeeping by—that we sell a certain amount of merchandise for cash, and pay out—when we paid it out, mark it on a page over here. And that is what this is for, sir.

And this is where—we didn't do this before, sir. I objected to this type of bookkeeping, and it was changed. We went back to our regular type of bookkeeping. And later on, they went back to it again.

By Mr. McConnell: Now, will you read the question I asked him, and see if we can get an answer to it.

(Question read by the reporter.)

980 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Can't you give me a yes or no answer?

A. Yes, sir. I would say that I received the money

Q. All right. That is all I asked you.

Now, as a matter of fact you had a cash box before the partnership, didn't you?

981 A. There may have been one, sir, but I don't think there was very much or—if anything, in it. I can't remember. But if there were, sir, whatever was in it was picked up on our books as sales, or purchases, or what not.

Q. In other words, your position is that your proprietorship books, sole proprietorship books, covered the cash account, is that right?

A. To the best of my knowledge, sir.

Q. Now, passing to another subject for a minute.

By the Court: It is very difficult to hear you, Mr. McConnell, when you put your head down. I am having trouble and I am sure the jury does, too.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I said: Passing to another subject for a moment now, this meeting down at your farm, or down at New Jersey—what is the name of that place again, Hillsdale?

A. Yes, sir. Well, the farm is really in—it is on a dividing line between Woodcliff Lake and Hillsdale.

Q. You finally moved your corporation over there to Hillsdale, did you not?

982 A. You mean General Confections?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had a chicken farm of some kind over there, isn't that right?

A. You mean prior, sir, to moving the corporation over?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you move your corporation at the same time you had your chicken farm?

A. I believe we did, sir. We had some poultry out on the fields and on the range, sir,—yes, sir; I am sure we did.

Q. You moved the candy factory in with the chickens, is that it?

A. No, sir; there were no chickens when we made the candy.

Q. Did you move your machinery down there on the farm?

A. Yes, sir; I did. It was a big building, sir. It had fourteen thousand square feet of space.

Q. Now, you got into some trouble with that corporation down there, did you not?

983 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to the general form of the question, and to the materiality. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: No, it isn't. It is leading to something.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Do you mean zoning trouble, sir? I had zoning trouble, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You had business troubles, too, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember a transaction with the Sterling Bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. I believe it was in June of 1947.

Q. Was your company in financial difficulty at that time?

By Mr. Lockley: I object; immaterial.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

984 If you want to bring out that the General Confections went into bankruptcy, if that is a fact, receivership, that may be, I suppose—it may have some bearing, at least, I think he may answer. But we are certainly not going into the corporate history of General Confections in '47.

985 By Mr. McConnell: I have no intention of doing it, your Honor.

By the Court: Nor any transactions of that concern in 1947, except if you—

By Mr. McConnell: It is simply a foundation and background of something, a transaction that occurred between these defendants and this man.

By the Court: Oh, all right. Then you may proceed.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Was the company in some financial difficulty at that time?

A. It needed some money, sir.

Q. And that was in the fall of 1947?

A. I believe I said June, sir.

Q. June of 1947?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You got in touch with Mr. Cain, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir. Or Mr. Huebner, or both.

Q. And you asked them for money, didn't you?

A. I asked them if they could arrange—for a loan.

Q. How much money did you want from them?

986 A. Sir, they examined my accounts—

Q. How much money did you want from them?

A. I didn't want any money from them.

Q. Did you ask them for some money?

A. No, they—Mr. Cain volunteered to come down and look over my statement, and give me some financial advice and help me.

Q. Let's see how the matter came up. First, did you call him or did he call you?

A. No, I think the way the matter came up, we were running behind in our legitimate payments to Shotwell. There was something on the books, if I recall correctly, we owed them some money, and I had to sell them some peanuts out of the warehouse, and I sold them some chocolates, that is, my—an equity I had in some chocolate. And then I sold them a peanut roaster—I mean a chocolate enrober, and I think this came about at the same time.

Q. In other words, you were behind about $47,000.00 on your open account with Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir, that's right, sir.

Q. At that time. That was the amount of money you were paying to Shotwell?

987 A. Yes, that was right, the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. That's right.

Q. Not the amount of money you were dividing in piles, the part you were paying directly to Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir. But it was ultimately paid, sir.
Q. Did I ask you that?
A. Pardon me, sir.
988 Q. Well, did you ask Mr. Cain to come down there, or did Mr. Huebner volunteer to come down; how did you get together, with reference to a transaction with the Sterling Bank?
A. Well, after they examined my financial statement, Byron Cain talked to me and said, "Dave, you will need some money in this business," and so forth, "and you can't—probably you can't pull through without it. But I think that with a little help that you can come out of it all right."
Q. Now, where was this conversation?
A. Probably in the Gotham Hotel, sir.
Q. Well, can't you remember any better than that?
A. Well, I believe Mr. Cain came up to our factory, too, sir, and went all over it, and he checked it thoroughly, Mr. Huebner did—I mean Mr. Heubner had. And I believe they had some experts from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company come about that time.
Q. Well, what occurred after that talk?
A. Well, sir, you want to know what Mr. Cain said?
Q. No, what did you do; did you get some money somewhere?
989 A. Yes, sir; Mr. Cain—
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.
By the Witness:
A. Mr. Cain said that I would need about $125,000, but I might be able to pull through with seventy-five, and he'd loan me $75,000.00, and if I needed any additional money that he would give it to me, that he would loan me another $50,000.00 at a later date, but to try to get through with the seventy-five. But there was a condition on the loan, sir.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. That money was borrowed on Mr. Cain's note at the Sterling Bank, was it not?
A. Well, sir, I don't know the mechanics of it, but I know Mr. Cain—
Q. Do you remember that you got the money?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You got the $75,000.00?
A. Yes, I remember that, from the Sterling Bank.

Q. All right. What happened after that; was that paid?

A. You mean after I got the loan, sir?

Q. Yes.

990 A. Well, after we got the loan, sir, we proceeded to follow instructions, the conditions of the loan.

Q. Conditions of the loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, one of them was that you were to give a mortgage, wasn't it?

A. That was one, sir, a mortgage, and a chattel mortgage, and a mortgage on my house, everything, all kinds of mortgages.

Q. As security for the money which you got?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Did you pay the notes?

A. Well, there was another condition, sir.

991 Q. What was the other condition?

A. The other condition, sir, is that we would follow the recommendation of Mr. Huebner and move the plant.

Q. From where to where?

A. To move it from New York City, where it was located, to Hillsdale, New Jersey, in where the chickens formerly were.

Q. Well, you did move it, didn't you?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you pay the notes?

A. I paid, sir, I believe down to about $67,000. That included five or six payments on the interest.

Q. Then you defaulted, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then you had a transaction with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner which involved the Haberkorn Candy Company, didn't you?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Now, will you tell us what that transaction was?

A. Well, that transaction was, sir, that Mr. Cain—it seems that the Sterling Bank—

By the Court: Speak up.

992 By the Witness:

A. —the Sterling Bank gave the mortgage back to Mr. Cain, who now had the mortgage on my machinery, my plant, my house, all of the chattels, and we were running into some financial trouble. And I went to Mr. Cain and I asked him—I felt that we had followed his instructions to move over there, and where the estimate of moving and setting up of machinery was only going to be about 12 to 15 thousand dollars—I don't have my records, but I believe it was fifty, sixty, seventy thousand dollars, because we had to fix the roof, and had to put in air conditioning, and everything else.

So the money that had been intended for additional operating capital went into fixed assets, and we didn't have too much to pay the bills.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, when was this?

A. When was what.

Q. This transaction when you—

A. That we moved?

Q. —were trying to adjust, and the defaulted
993 situation on the notes?

A. The default situation?

Q. Yes.

A. I think, sir, it was around November or December of 1947.

Q. That was when the notes were in default, or when the mortgage was put on?

A. No, we put the mortgage on, sir, if I remember correctly in June, 1947. I have testified to that, sir.

Q. Yes. And they went in default in 1947, in October?

A. We might have got the mortgage in May. But I didn't say October. I think it was November or December.

Q. Now, when was the Haberkorn Candy deal?

A. What do you mean, when was the Haberkorn Candy deal? That don't make any sense to me, sir. When was what?

Q. Do you know anything about the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. Do you know about the sale of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did that take place?

994 A. I believe that took place some time, sir, in February, 1948.

Q. February of 1948?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was it that you had this talk down in the Riviera?

A. At the following August, sir.

Q. August?

A. Yes, sir. The place was closed then. We closed in March.

Q. All right. Now, what happened in February of 1948?

A. What do you mean, specifically, what happened in February? Many things could happen.

Q. Well, with reference to the Haberkorn Candy deal. You know what I am talking about, don't you?

A. Well, sir, I want to be very specific. I want to be right on the point.

Q. That is just the way I want you to be.

A. That's the way you are going to get it, sir. What happened to the Haberkorn Candy Company, sir?

995 Q. The notes are in default.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what happened? You say the notes are paid off. Tell us how you paid off the notes.

A. Well, I have to tell you a little bit about Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. All right. That's what I want to know. Tell us about Haberkorn Candy Company.

A. Well, sir, when Byron Cain had told me I was going to get—the seventy-five thousand he didn't think would be enough, but if I needed fifty thousand more he would give it to me, and when I went to get the fifty thousand dollars, sir, to borrow the other fifty thousand dollars—he had previously sent up some more experts to the farm, and they estimated my house, and went over my books, and everything else, and made cost systems, and so forth.

Q. When did you get the other fifty thousand dollars?

A. I am coming to that.

Q. When?

A. Let me answer.

Q. Just give me a date, please.

996 A. In November, sir, of—November or December of 1947. And I asked Mr. Cain for the other fifty thousand dollars. And he said before he could do that he would have to send some experts and some—he wanted to look the plant over. And they did, sir. They came, and they stayed several days in the plant, made recommendations, and so forth, and they would have to report back to Mr. Cain. I think Mr. Graflund was one, sir.

And when they left, they'd let me know. And shortly thereafter,—these experts went back—I remember meeting Mr. Cain in the hotel—the Hotel Gotham, and Mr. Cain says he thought it best not to loan me any more money, and the best thing for me to do was to go broke and get out of the candy business.

Well, sir, I didn't agree with him, because I felt that now we had turned the corner, and we had all this plant and equipment that had been moved and set up, and everything was all set, that if I could get the $50,000, I would be able to stay in business.

Sir, he wouldn't loan it to me. So I asked him if 997 he had any objections if I got it elsewhere. And I told him—he says, no. So I went to some people who were factoring my accounts, budget factors. And so they came out and brought some man out to the place. And I think he was from the Bronx National Bank, if I remember correctly.

And they said the bank—the Haberkorn—the budget factors told me they would loan me the money if we would get Byron Cain to let this mortgage go before his. I believe the word is subordinate.

Q. All right. Did you take that up with Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, sir; I did. And we went to the hotel. And I took—I believe I took Mr. Cary and maybe Mr. Glassman—I am not sure of the budget factors—with me, and I told him about borrowing the money. And they wouldn't subordinate their mortgage. In other words, Mr. Cain wanted it first.

By the Court: A little louder.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Cain wanted his money first, and he said he wouldn't do it.

998 So I said, well—he says no, he wouldn't do it. "Go broke."

About this time, sir, my sister had a fifty percent interest in Haberkorn Candy Company, sir. And my sister knew that I was in financial trouble. And about this time somebody came to Haberkorn Candy Company and they were dickering around for it. And I believe the price was $125,000.

And so my sister told me—she said, "Dave, we can sell the candy company,"—talking about the deal—"and if you need the money, why, I will loan it to you.

I mean—so she said, "After all, we are brother and sister."

And so—

999 Q. She was your sister, that's true.

A. Beg pardon?

Q. Go ahead.

A. A very good one, too, sir.

And so there were some further negotiations, on the Haberkorn Candy Company, and I expected to get the $60,000 from that company. She was going to loan me the sixty thousand if it was sold for a hundred and twenty.

And about this time, sir, the deal went sour. In other words, the people changed their mind, or something else. But some new people came in.

I told this to Mr. Huebner and to Mr. Cain.

Q. You went out and sold some preferred stock, didn't you, in your company at that time?

A. No, sir, no. Wait a minute. You are asking me to explain about the Haberkorn Candy Company. Will you let me finish it, sir?

Q. Go ahead. Explain it.

A. And so the people who were going to pay
1000 $120,000, they didn't—decided not to go ahead with that deal, for one reason or another, I don't know.

But the sales manager of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company—I can't think of his name—came in at the time. And he then came into the picture over at Shotwell—over at Haberkorn, and he was going to buy it, for $80,000.

And so I didn't have enough money. So I believe Mr. Cain at that time—I don't think he was around—I think I talked to Mr. Huebner, and I think Mr. Cain was in Palm Springs. And so I asked Mr. Huebner—I said, "The sales manager is going to buy—of your own company—is going to buy it."

And he was quite amazed. I said, "Well, I am just telling you. We are going to get $80,000 of which we will get $40,000." And if we would have any—I mean, if he would take the $40,000.

He says, "I don't think they would take forty thousand for a sixty-seven thousand mortgage."

I said, "Ask Byron if he will take a note, or take a second mortgage on it."

1001 But—he asked him, because he called me back, and he said he would be willing to take the $40,000, and he would call the other $27,000 off the books, and it was—he was in a high tax bracket, and he would do it for me.

So we are proceeding with the sale of the Haberkorn Candy Company to the sales manager of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and they would put up a $10,000 deposit. And shortly after—just a few days after I had talked to him, the Haberkorn Sales Manager withdraws from the picture, and Shotwell Manufacturing Company entered the picture. And Shotwell Manufacturing Company bought the company for $60,000.

So my sister got $40,000—or they bought it for, maybe, seventy thousand—I don't remember the figure—but my sister got $40,000 for the company. I thought until—I thought they had got paid the $80,000, sir, but about two or three years ago, sir, I saw some records that refreshed my memory that they didn't pay the eighty thousand.

But, anyway, my sister got $40,000 for the company, for her part of it, which she loaned to me.

1002 And I spoke to Mr. Huebner, and I said, "Look. There is no reason to kick my brother-in-law out of a job. He didn't do anything to me. And he did a good job. And he worked very hard building the company up. And they have a mortgage on their home, and it may be some time before he gets a job, and I would like to give you $30,000 and take a $10,000 note."

And Mr.—he says,—well, I think he called out to Palm Springs, California, I believe—yes, it was Palm Springs, and they decided to take the $30,000, and which is what they got for the mortgage.

1003 Q. So that you ended up with the company, is that it?

A. So, sir, they loaned the thirty—the $30,000.00 was given to the attorney of Byron Cain in exchange for the mortgage, and which ultimately wound up with my sister. She had the mortgage on my property in Hillsdale.

Q. She paid it out of the money she had gotten from Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. She got forty and they paid back thirty to Byron Cain for his note, is that right?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Did you talk to Mr. Cain about that transaction?

A. About what, sir?

Q. Making that deal.

A. I may have, sir. I think I did.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Huebner if he didn't make that transaction you were going to the Internal Revenue Department?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Witness:

A. I have never gone to the Internal Revenue.

1004 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you tell him that? That is all I asked.

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Let's see if we can get the net of that transaction now. You got $75,000.00 on the original Cain loan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't pay the notes.

A. I didn't say I didn't pay them. I paid—

Q. Well, you defaulted on all except $67,000.00, isn't that right?

A. I think we paid $2800.00 a month. I think that was 2,000 on the principal. I don't know, sir. But it was principal and interest. We had paid a substantial amount. And the balance of the principal was around $67,000.00.

Q. Was that mortgage ever foreclosed, by the way?

A. The bank came off us?

Q. No, the mortgage that was on that farm, was it ever foreclosed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't it end up with a man by the name of Edward Dane Bookman?

A. The mortgage?

1005 Q. Yes.

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. Who is Edward Dane Bookman?

A. He is a friend of mine, sir.

Q. He is a chorus boy, isn't he?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I don't think it is material, what Mr. Bookman's occupation is.

By the Court: I see no materiality. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did he have anything to do with that transaction?

A. What transaction, sir?

Q. Of the Sterling Bank loan, and the mortgage that was given with reference to it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, when did your company go into receivership?

A. March 8, 1948.

Q. He did have something to do with that, didn't he?

A. The receivership?

Q. Yes. He bought the property, at the receivership sale.

1006 A. You mean when it was sold ultimately?

Q. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I object. I fail to see the materiality.

By the Court: Well, he may answer. I don't appreciate the materiality of it.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, the only materiality to it is that the man is posing here as a great beneficiary—

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. McConnell: —and ends up—

By Mr. Lockley: I object. This is not the time for argument.

1007 By the Court: Is it wrong to buy property from a receiver? That is done every day. There is nothing improper about that.

By Mr. McConnell: I haven't been able to develop it. That's what I was going to develop, to show it wasn't proper, if the Court please.

By the Court: You will have to make it more clear to me that it is material.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, I am about to start on a longer line, and we are within two minutes of a recess.

By the Court: We will be in recess now until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause until the following morning being Friday, September 18, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

Chicago, Illinois,

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, The United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

By the Court: You may proceed.

1009 DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Lubben, yesterday you stated that you had no interest in the Haberkorn Company, is that right?

A. I personally had none, sir.

Q. And you testified that way on your deposition, too, did you not, that you personally had no interest in the Haberkorn Company?

A. I just didn't have any, so I—

By the Court: I don't hear you, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. I didn't have any interest in the Haberkorn Candy Company, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You never had any interest in the Company?

A. There was never any stock issued to me, sir. I never had any interest in it. Never had any interest in it.

1010 Q. Do you recall how that property was purchased?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think it is material.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, this is a matter of impeachment.

By the Court: It is impeachment on an immaterial issue.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't believe it is an immaterial issue. The man says he has no interest in the Haberkorn Company. I am going to connect the Haberkorn Company up with a transaction with the defendants, which is very material to this case, which involves a matter of extortion of money from the defendants.

By the Court: You mean the transaction you referred to yesterday where the Haberkorn Company was sold and from that sale he derived certain money that he paid Mr. Cain?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By the Court: What difference does it make whether he had any interest in it, or he got it from his 1011 sister? What materiality does it have?

By Mr. McConnell: It makes a lot of difference. It makes this difference, that he had an interest in getting that property sold, and the reason he got it sold was because of transactions with these defendants.

It is very material to show his motive here as to the way this whole prosecution is going and why he is testifying the way he is. It has a very definite and direct relationship to it.

By the Court: I don't see any connection, as yet. Whether he got the money from his sister, or whether he got it because of some interest in the Haberkorn Company, he got $30,000.00. Whether he got it from John Jones or got it from his sister, I can't see that it makes any difference.

By Mr. McConnell: He got more than $30,000.00, he got over a hundred thousand dollars out of the transaction.

1012 By Mr. Lockley: I object to counsel testifying. If he wants to make an offer of proof, I suggest that the jury be withdrawn.

By Mr. McConnell: I certainly would like to argue out this point, because if I am going to cross examine this witness I have got to be able to show where his interest is and what his motive is in testifying in this case.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, what he has been talking about occurred, as he has already brought out, in 1947 and 1948. I can't see that it has any relationship to the years at issue here.

By Mr. McConnell: It comes out of his relationship, of what has happened in the past. It goes to his motive as a witness in this case.

By the Court: Well, rather than hear any long argument on the point, go ahead. If it isn't material I will entertain a motion to strike.

By Mr. McConnell: Now, read the question to the 1013 witness, please.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I do, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. How was it purchased?

By the Court: Counsel, if you will remember my request—

By Mr. McConnell: I am sorry, your Honor. I am so used to rambling around the court room it is hard for me to stay in one place.

By the Court: You will have to get over that habit.

By Mr. McConnell: I guess I will.

By the Witness:

A. In 1946 I was in Chicago, and I went out to the Walgreen drug store chain, their general buying offices, in the company of Mr. Edward Urban.

1014 And while we were talking to a Mr. Dave Kupfer—he was the buyer of confections—he told us about a candy company here in Chicago that was for sale, that it seems that the owner had passed away and the property was going to be sold.

He asked me—so I asked him, or Mr. Urban—I don't recall which—how many pounds of chocolate there was in the quota, and how many pounds of sugar there were on a quota, and certain other items that were on an allotment basis that were very instrumental—which would be important in making the price. And he gave us the number of pounds of cocoa, and chocolate and corn syrup, and so forth. And he says that the estate wanted $35,000.00.

And I looked at Mr. Urban and he nodded. And I says, "We will take it." And I think—Eddie Urban says, "Dave, do you want to go fifty-fifty on it?" I said, "Sure, after all, you were here when the offer was made."

But then Kupfer says, "That isn't all. I want a $10,000.00 check and Mr. Paul Hershey of the Warfield Company wants $10,000.00."

I says, "What is that for?" He says, "It's mine. I told you about it. And Mr. Paul Hershey with the Warfield Chocolate Company, he wants that money so that he will continue the allotment of chocolate," because that was where the chocolate allotment was with.

So that made the cost of the company $55,000.00.

So we figured how many pounds of chocolate there were, and so forth, and corn syrup, and so on. And we told Mr. Kupfer, I believe that day, that we would buy it.

We returned to the—to Chicago here, and we bumped into Mr. Gertz. Mr. Gertz was familiar to both Mr. Urban and myself. And he wanted to know where we had been, and so forth. And we said, "We just bought a chocolate company that makes chocolate candy." And we told him the name. And he says, "Gee, I heard about that place and I was going to get it." He says, "Is there any chance of getting a piece of it?" He says, "I can use those chocolates in my business."

I don't know—and I think Urban and I stepped back. We talked a few minutes. And we went back and we says, "Yes, if you want a third of it we will sell you a third of it." And he said, "Okay," how much was it?

I don't know whether I told it to him, or Mr. Urban told it to him, but one of us told it to him. And I think we said $40,000.00 for the third. He says, "Okay, I will take it."

So all right—so I says, "Well, you work it out with Eddie Urban here. And I am going out to California." A man out there, I believe, at that time owed me a lot of money. And so I told Mr. Urban, I says that "I don't want this candy company as long as Sam Gertz is in it. And when it comes time to allocating any stock, you can give it to my sister. And if there is any additional money that is necessary for it that—on my part—I mean, on the part she was going to get, why, let me know."

So I went to California—or I think I went to Seattle first, and then to Portland, and then down to Los Angeles. And while I was in Los Angeles, I remember Mr. Gertz coming out there with his wife and family for a vacation. And he said that he had been down to the Probate Court and he said he found out where the estate had only gotten $35,000 for the candy company.

I said, "That's correct." But I says, "What you don't know is that we had to give $10,000 to Mr. Kupfer, and $10,000 to Mr. Hershey of the Warfield Company, so that made it $55,000."

He says—I don't know whether it was thirty or forty thousand dollars he paid—he said, "I paid this much for a third."

Nobody ever told you a third of it—we were going to sell you a third of the place for what it was paid for. You wanted to buy an interest in it, and we told you what it was, and if you don't want it, you don't have to take it."

"No, no, no, no. I have already given my money to Eddie Urban and it's all right."

And he says, "But I want to make sure I get some of the production."

1018 I says, "Well, you will have to work that out with Eddie. And I am not interested in how much you get, or how much you don't get." That was immaterial to me, at the time.

So later on Mr. Gertz withdrew from the—he didn't want to be in as a third partner of the Haberkorn Candy Company. So his money was returned to him, that is, he got his money back, plus a very substantial profit in merchandise, out of the Haberkorn Candy Company. And I believe that I had to advance—there was a certain deficit there that I had to give him some merchandise from my factory, and Mr. Urban gave him some merchandise from his factory. And that was the end of it.

So then instead of Mr. Urban having one-third of it, Mr. Gertz having one-third of it, and Janet Moran having a third of it, they then—the stock was issued, I believe—I have never seen the stock, but I believe it was issued so that the Urbans had 50 percent, and Janet Moran had the other 50 percent.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you put up the $35,000 with which it was bought?

1019 By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike. I think counsel failed to show any materiality.

By the Court: It may stand.

1020 By the Witness:

A. Did I put up the $35,000.00?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir; I didn't.

Q. Paid in the Probate Court?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who put up that money?

A. I presume it was Mr. Urban, sir. Mr. Urban advanced the money for the deal, I believe.

Q. Well, did you enter into a contract with the executrix of the estate, Marie Haberkorn, to buy the property for $35,000.00, you and Mr. Urban?

A. I told you, sir, that the property—they were going to sell the property for $35,000.00. I don't recall any contract. I remember when I went to California Mr. Urban handled the transaction. I don't recall any transaction—I mean, I don't recall any contract.

Q. You don't recall that you entered into a contract about it?

A. No, sir.

1021 By Mr. McConnell: I ask the court reporter to mark these minutes Defendants' Exhibit 8 for identification, starting there (indicating) and numbering the pages consecutively, A, B, C, D, if you will, please.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 8-A, 8-B, 8-C, 8-D for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you a document which purports to be some minutes of the Haberkorn Candy Company and ask you if you can identify your signature?

A. Yes, sir, it is my signature.

Q. Is that Mr. Urban's signature, too?

A. It appears to be, yes, sir.

Q. And you approved these minutes?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Witness: I don't recall what the minutes say, sir.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you approve the minutes?

1022 A. I don't know—I don't ever recall reading any minutes.

Q. What is above your signature there?

A. It says, "Approved", sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to offer this document in evidence at this time as Defendants' Exhibits 8-A to 8-D, inclusive. I want to ask this witness some questions on it.

By Mr. Lockley: May I see it?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, counsel, you may see it.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

If your Honor please, the Government objects to the admission of Defendants' Exhibit 8 on the ground the witness' signature appears only on one page. There is nothing to establish the authenticity of the remaining pages. He hasn't identified them as being documents made in his handwriting, or in his presence at any time. The one page which does bear his signature is completely immaterial.

By the Court: Is that a certain portion of the 1023 minutes?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. The minutes of that meeting which he has approved.

By the Court: All of them?

By Mr. McConnell: No, just the minutes of that meeting, starting at Defendants' Exhibits 8-A, B, C, and D.

By Mr. Lockley: We have no way of knowing when that page was inserted, or whether it was inserted in the proper place in the book. That page could have been put in after any of the minutes.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the suggestion. I object to a suggestion of that kind. If there is any suggestion of an alteration, you can prove it by the witness.

1024 By Mr. Lockley: Now, the minutes of the Haberkorn Candy Company are completely immaterial to the issues.

By the Court: I will receive them in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibits 8-A, 8-B, 8-C, and 8-D.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. On your deposition prior to this trial, were you asked this question and did you make this answer:

By Mr. Lockley: What page, counsel?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. At page 126, referring to Mrs. Moran, your sister.

"Q. Did she take title as your nominee?

"A. She was no nominee for me, sir."

Were you asked that question and did you make that answer?

A. I did, sir.

Q. On your deposition, were you asked this question at page 127—no, I don't believe I want to read that at 1025 the moment.

Now, in the minutes of the meeting, on page 8-C, the minutes of the meeting of the Haberkorn Candy Company at which it was stated as follows:

"The chairman further stated that subsequent to the date of said subscription agreement, Edward T. Urban and David G. Lubben had purchased the assets of Haberkorn Candy Company, unincorporated, from the estate of William P. Haberkorn, deceased, for the sum of $35,000.00 cash and in addition thereto had invested in said business or were about to invest therein, the additional total sum of eighteen thousand nine hundred eighty-five and 28/100ths ($18,985.28) for additional equipment and also for additional working capital, making a total capital investment in said business of fifty-three thousand nine hundred eighty-five and 28/100ths ($53,985.28) and that said Edward T. Urban and David G. Lubben were agreeable to the transfer of all of said assets of Haberkorn Candy Company, Inc., a corporation, 1026 in consideration of the issuance to them or to their nominees of three hundred shares of the stock of said corporation."

Did you certify to that as approved in those minutes?

A. Well, sir, I never bought—

Q. Can't you answer that question?

A. I don't recall reading those minutes.

Q. You don't recall ever reading them?

A. No, sir.

1027 Q. Well, look at these minutes. Are they in any different condition now than they were when you signed them?

A. I don't remember seeing them, sir. Do you mind if I read them? I would like to go over them.

Q. Go ahead. Take your time.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, this appears to be merely an attempt to impeach the witness on a collateral matter that has no bearing on the issues.

By the Court: Counsel said he is going to connect it up. I cannot advise on the materiality. If it isn't material, I will entertain a motion to strike.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Are those the minutes you approved?

A. I don't remember. I cannot specifically remember approving those minutes.

Q. Well, your signature is there, isn't it?

A. Well, sir, I don't even remember reading it before.

Q. Is your signature there?

1028 A. It is, sir, but the way it happened, the way the Haberkorn Candy Company was purchased, was the way that I told you.

Q. And that is different from the way it is recited in these minutes, isn't it?

A. That is some legal gibberish in there, but I know I told you the way it was handled. I got the money. I went out to the Walgreen's drug store. You can bring in any witnesses and ask them about it.

Q. And you got the money? What money did you get?

A. I mean, I went out to the Walgreen drug store. The man told us about the factory.

Q. We know that. I am asking you now whether the minutes are true?

A. Well, sir, the minutes are not true because I didn't put up any money.

Q. Let me ask you this: Are the minutes in the same condition now as when you signed them?

A. Sir, I don't even remember ever seeing the book.

Q. You can't tell us whether they are in the same condition as when you signed it?

1029 A. I don't even know whether I signed those minutes, sir.

Q. Do you know your own signature?

A. I do know my own signature.

Q. And it is your signature there?

A. I told you how, sir, the money was paid into the Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. Is that your signature?

A. It appears to be, yes, sir.

Q. Is there some doubt in your mind about it?

A. I don't know, sir. I would say it is my signature.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask that this document be marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 9.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 9 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, you had some talk with Mr. Cain, did you not, about the sale of the stock of the Haberkorn Company to the Shotwell people?

A. I am not familiar—as I stated yesterday, I believe not—whether I talked or didn't talk to Mr. Cain, I believe I did, but I am not sure.

1030 Q. Now, about when was that?

A. In January or February, somewhere around there, in 1948.

Q. That was about the time that you had that meeting down there where you were talking about those documents on your porch, wasn't it?

A. That was after, sir. I think it was after.

Q. It was after that?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, when did you have the meeting with Mr. Huebner on the porch when you had these documents?

A. Early in February of 1948.

1031 Q. You had a talk with Mr. Huebner about documents on the porch down there at your home in Hillsdale, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time you showed him these documents, these memoranda that you produced here in evidence, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Let me have those documents, will you, counsel?

By Mr. Lockley: Will you tell me what documents you mean?

By Mr. McConnell: The ones he said he had on the porch down there in Hillsdale, a little memoranda.

By Mr. Lockley: Can you identify them?

By Mr. McConnell: Maybe we can. Maybe we can help you. Have you got the exhibits on those, anybody on my side of the table?

The numbers are 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 100, 101, and 102.

By Mr. Lockley: Here is 94, 95, 96, 97, 98 and 100. May I have the balance of them again? What numbers are 1032 missing?

By the Court: Well, go ahead with those, and they can look for the balance later.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now I show you documents which have been identified here as Government's Exhibits 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, and 100, which purport to be photostats of some documents. Are those photostats of the documents you were talking to Mr. Huebner about down on the porch at Hillsdale?

A. Yes, sir, they are.

By Mr. McConnell: Have you found the rest of them?

By Mr. Lockley: Not yet.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You don't know where the originals are?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Are you sure about that?

A. I personally don't know where the originals are at, sir.

Q. Well, now, shortly after that meeting with Mr. Huebner, namely on the 24th day of February, 1948, there was a sale arranged of the stock of the Haberkorn Candy Company, wasn't there?

1033 A. You said, sir, namely after that meeting with Mr. Huebner on February 24th?

Q. I said after your meeting with Mr. Huebner—probably I should put a comma in—on February 24th, there was a sale arranged of the Haberkorn Candy stock to somebody at Shotwell, wasn't there?

A. You mean, sir—yes, it was around about that date.

Q. So that one thing follows the other, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you recall if there was a written contract which had to do with that deal?

A. No, sir, I do not.

Q. I show you document marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 9, and ask you if you can identify the signatures on that document?

A. Well, they appear to be—I can identify the signature of Edward Urban, the other Urban family, and the other one is Graflund, which is an officer, or associate or somebody—secretary it says here, that worked for Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

1034 By Mr. McConnell: I offer this document in evidence. It is a contract of sale of capital stock of the Haberkorn Candy Company to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: I suppose counsel might like to look at it.

(Handing document to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley: I question its materiality, your Honor, but I won't object to it.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 9.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I call your attention to page 3 of this document in which it is stated:

"Buyer agrees to pay the seller the total sum of $65,000.00 in cash to be paid in the following manner: $10,000.00 in cash as earnest money upon execution of a memorandum agreement of the delivery of possession of said premises as of February 12, 1948, and 1035 $55,000.00 in cash upon the execution and delivery of this contract."

Are those the terms upon which that sale was made?

A. Sir, I don't know anything about the terms of the sale because neither I nor Janet Moran had anything to do with that sale. Her signature and mine do not appear. This is a contract between the Urbans and the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. On what basis they sold it, I don't know.

Q. You spent about ten minutes yesterday afternoon of our time telling us about all the details of the Haberkorn Candy deal from your own knowledge.

A. I don't recall spending that time speaking of the Haberkorn Candy Company, for ten minutes yesterday, sir.

Q. So you don't know anything about it, is that it?

A. I didn't say that, sir. If you want to know, I am trying to tell you.

Q. Well, I am asking you.

A. Asking me what, sir?

Q. Just wait until I ask it, please.

A. Yes, sir.

1036 Q. I am asking you, did you get $65,000.00?

A. I didn't—

Q. As a purchase price on Haberkorn Candy Company stock?

A. Does that contract say I got it?

Q. I am asking you did you get it.

A. No, sir, I didn't.

Q. Did you get any part of it?

A. No, sir. I got no part of it.

Q. You got no part of it?

A. Wait just a minute. Let me answer your question. I received no part of that particular contract, nor did my sister receive any part of that contract.

My sister sold her stock to the Urbans prior, long prior —maybe a week or ten days or two weeks prior to any contract. The Urbans bought the stock of Janet Moran, sir, and from the Urbans, my sister received $40,000.00.

1037 Q. When did she receive the $40,000.00, before or after this contract of sale?

A. The minute she transferred the stock to the Urbans.

Q. At that time before this contract was executed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of the contract being made?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. At about that time?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. When did you first learn that the stock of this company had been sold, the Haberkorn Company, had been sold to the Urbans? When did you first learn of that?

A. Just a minute. When did I first learn what, sir?

By Mr. McConnell: Will you please read the question to the witness?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I knew about it when Shotwell agreed to buy the Haberkorn Candy Company, sir.

1038 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And that was when?

A. Early in February, 1948. I don't know, maybe it was the 10th or the 12th or something like that.

Q. That was just about the time you had your meeting out on the porch, wasn't it?

A. I think it was shortly after, sir.

Q. That was when you learned about it, wasn't it?

A. Learned about what, sir?

Q. The prospective sale of the Haberkorn Candy Company to Shotwell, at your meeting out on the porch?

A. No. I think I learned about the sale going to Shotwell before that, sir.

Q. Now, these documents that you were showing to Mr. Huebner at that time, these were the documents you claimed you got out of your barn, weren't they?

A. Well, sir, not entirely from that barn. Many of them came from the files of the office.

Q. We are not talking about many. We are talking about documents 94, 95, 96, 97, 98 and 100. Just tell us about those. Where did they come from? Did they come out of the barn?

1039 A. I think they did, sir. I think, if I remember correctly—I know I looked in the files in the office. Whether I took any records from the file in the office, I don't know, but I remember going in the barn, sir, and I remember that I took Mr. Huebner back in the barn after I said, "Here are the documents," and he wanted to look at them himself. I remember that.

Q. You took him in the barn and you came out with the documents?

A. No, sir. They were already in the house.

Q. What did you go in the barn for?

A. Because Mr. Huebner wanted to go in the barn to check the file.

Q. Who got the documents out of the barn, you or Mr. Huebner?

A. No, sir. I got them out before because I was told to have them ready.

Q. Oh, you were told to have them ready. Who told you that?

A. I believe shortly before Mr. Huebner came out there was a meeting in the Gotham Hotel between myself —I don't know whether Mr. Cain was there. I am of the opinion he was there at this meeting.

1040 Q. Now, when was this meeting in the Gotham Hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was it?

A. Early in February, 1948.

Q. All right. Now, who was there?

A. I think Mr. Huebner. I think Mr. Cain was there, sir. It might have been in the latter part of January, but somewhere about those days, Mr. Huebner was there and I remember speaking to Mr. Cain about it because he wanted to know if I had any documents on the place of how I handled the sales and how the discussion came up about it, sir, was the fact that—

Q. Just tell us what was said there at that meeting and who said it?

A. So I said, "We have recap sheets and so forth of how we paid the money and whatever information was necessary in keeping books in order to pay the money," I says, "We have copies of the bills of lading and unbilled shipments."

1041 Q. Is that the time you asked him for the $50,000?

A. I don't know whether it was—no, I don't think so.

Q. You first asked him for $75,000?

A. No, sir; I asked him in the beginning, sir—he came down and Mr. Cain volunteered to give me some help, and he sent the expert down, and he felt I needed $125,000, but they advanced me $75,000, and with the promise that if we needed any more money, he would see me through.

Q. You got the $75,000, and you asked him for the $50,000 at the time you are talking about the document?

A. No, sir; I don't say it happened at that time. I think that happened prior, sir. I think it happened in November.

Q. You think so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You didn't mention anything about wanting $50,000 more?

A. When, sir?

Q. At the meeting at the Gotham Hotel?

A. What meeting, sir?

1042 Q. You were just telling us about a meeting at the Gotham Hotel.

A. You have been jumping around from one meeting to another. Give me a specific meeting, and I will answer you, sir.

Q. We haven't jumped any further than the meeting in the Gotham Hotel between you and Mr. Cain.

By the Court: Counsel, you must remember that where we want to try a law suit, we have got to comply with certain rules and regulations. Now, you stay at counsels' table.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. The meeting at the Gotham Hotel between you and Mr. Cain. Now, I am asking you: Didn't you discuss at that meeting a payment of an additional $50,000?

A. Yes, sir; but I believe that meeting was in November, when I asked him for the additional $50,000. And he said at that particular time—he would send some expert down, and he would check over the books and records to see what progress we were making and so forth.

Q. Now, did you have a different meeting later on?

1043 A. Yes, sir.

Q. At the Gotham Hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In February?

A. I think there was another meeting in between there, sir.

Q. When?

A. I think it was in January, sir.

Q. In January?

A. Yes.

Q. And you discussed at that time getting a $50,000 advance from Shotwell, or from Cain, is that right?

A. No, sir. I don't know whether he did it by telephone, or whether it was at that meeting, but I know Mr. Cain told me, "Dave," he said, "they have checked over the books, and the best thing for you to do is to throw in the sponge and quit, and let it go bankrupt." And I didn't agree with him, sir.

Q. Well, now, did he tell you he wouldn't give you the $50,000; is that it?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. Was that the meeting just before the meeting

1044 down on your porch?

A. I think it was, sir. But I think there was another meeting the next day.

Q. All right. Let's get to the meeting the next day.

A. Well, the meeting the next day, sir, was when I went to the people who were the factors for my company and told them that Mr. Cain had turned me down on the $50,000 loan. And so I talked to—if they could get a $50,000 loan.

1045 I think he brought somebody out to see me. And they could go along on the $50,000.00, providing I get

Mr. Cain to let their fifty thousand come before theirs. I remember taking Mr. Cary, and I think Mr. Glassman, down to the Gotham Hotel, and they asked them—we asked them to let his mortgage come first and Mr. Cain said no.

Q. Now, this is the transaction where you are trying to get his mortgage subordinated to a new mortgage, is that right?

A. I asked him, sir, yes.

Q. He first turned you down on $50,000.00, is that right?

A. He did.

Q. Then he refused to subordinate his mortgage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To a new mortgage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For $50,000.00?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then after that, within a few days after that, you had this meeting with Mr. Huebner down on the porch?

A. No, I don't recall—I don't think—it seems to 1046 me there was an interlude in between that meeting—those meetings and this meeting about Mr. Huebner—about coming in my porch.

Q. A little interlude of a few days?

A. I don't know if it was a few days or a month, but there was an interlude there.

Q. But, anyway, you had a meeting down on the porch, and you had this talk with Mr. Huebner, and you showed him the documents, and then we have the sale of the Haberkorn Candy Company; isn't that the sequence of events?

A. Yes, sir. But I was to give him—

Q. That is all I asked, whether that was the sequence of events.

A. Yes, sir. Shortly after that Haberkorn was sold.

Q. Now, figuring in that deal, however, was the mortgage which had been put up with the Sterling Trust Company of New York?

A. I don't know. I just call it the Sterling Bank, sir.

Q. The Sterling Bank. So that we get this transaction straight in your mind, the Sterling Bank had advanced you $75,000.00 on notes which had been guaranteed
1047 by Mr. Cain, isn't that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you had gotten in default on that mortgage after you had paid a few payments?

A. Well, sir, I don't think we ever went into default on the mortgage, but—at any time, but if I recall—

Q. You testified yesterday that you went in default, didn't you?

A. Sir, I can refresh my memory at night.

Q. Oh, yes, I have no doubt you can. But did you testify yesterday that it went in default?

A. Well, sir, if I did, I don't know whether it went in default or not, but I think the reason now is the fact that—was the fact that about this time we were asking our creditors to give us a plan of deferred payment whereby we could pay them all over a period of several years.

Q. Now, I didn't ask you anything about a deferred plan. I asked you whether or not your note went in default. You can answer that yes or no.

A. I don't think it did, sir.

Q. You had paid how much on it?

A. It was a balance of around $67,000.00.

1048 Q. Whether it went in default or not, you went to see Mr. Cain about it, didn't you, to see if he would take it out and pay the bank?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. You didn't?

A. No, sir.

Q. You had nothing to do with that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Cain pick up the note?

A. I never knew, until a little later, that he did, sir. And I remember the reason why it happened.

Q. I asked you whether he did or not. Did he pick up the note at the Sterling Bank, if you know?

A. Yes, sir; he did.

Q. And paid off the bank loan, did he?

A. I don't know whether he paid off the bank loan, sir. I have no way of knowing what he did, sir.

Q. You have no way of knowing whether the bank loan was paid?

A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. Did the Sterling Bank ever attempt to collect from you, in the future after that transaction?

A. No, sir.

1049 Q. You know very well it was paid, don't you?

A. Sir, I don't know whether he still owes the bank for it or not. I don't know.

Q. Wait a minute. Have you testified here in this case that he did pay it?

A. I don't recall that he paid it, specifically paid it.

Q. I didn't ask you that. I said have you testified to that effect?

A. I don't recall the testimony, sir. Anyway, the bank didn't look to me, sir.

Q. You know that, don't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you know that you got the $75,000.00; you knew that much about it?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Are you a novice in these affairs with banks?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: No, he is trying to make it appear that he doesn't know how these transactions are handled.

By the Court: I didn't hear the question. State it again.

By Mr. McConnell: Read the question.

1050 (Question read.)

By the Court: He may answer. You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I am not as smart as I should be, as probably you are, in some of these affairs with banks, but I am learning.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, thank you.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. When did you just start to learn?

A. I learned—

By the Court: Let's not get into that.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, now, let me ask you this. Didn't you borrow over $12,000,000.00 during the period of time of the Eatsum proprietorship from banks or from banking establishments?

A. Yes, sir. But let me explain about the $12,000,000.00.

Q. Wait. You have answered my question. You did, didn't you?

A. But not at one time, sir.

Q. No, it was a lot of different transactions, wasn't it?

1051 A. I factored my accounts receivable.

Q. So this isn't the first banking transaction you have had, is it?

A. Factoring is a little bit different than going to the bank and getting any mortgages.

Q. Well, it is different, but this isn't the first time you have been to the bank and borrowed money on notes, is it?

A. I don't recall borrowing any money on notes from a bank, sir.

Q. You never did that?

A. I think—if I recall correctly, I factored my accounts receivable with the Manufacturers Trust, and then when the account got too big we moved over to General Commercial Acceptance. And it is true, sir, that of all the accounts receivable I borrowed was $12,000,000.00. And I also testified, sir, that it didn't mean I owed them $12,000,000.00. But if I got $10,000.00 today and paid it back the next day, and got 10 or 15 thousand the next day, that you added the two together it was a total amount. I got 80 per cent of my accounts receivable.

Q. And you kept factoring your accounts and putting up bills of lading, and invoices, and that, didn't 1052 you?

A. From the day I was in business.

Q. And that is a simpler transaction than borrowing money from the bank on a mortgage?

By the Court: You are arguing with the witness.

By Mr. McConnell: He is trying to tell us he doesn't know anything about business.

By Mr. Lockley: He hasn't said any such thing.

By Mr. McConnell: He is trying to give us that impression.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, this mortgage which the Sterling Bank had was assigned to Mr. Cain after he paid off the note, wasn't it?

A. Well, sir, I don't know how it was assigned to Mr. Cain, or whether — I have no specific knowledge whether Mr. Cain paid off the mortgage, or whether he paid it off, or whether he didn't pay it off. All I know is

Mr. Cain now had the mortgage on the property.

1053 Q. That's right. You knew that much about it?

A. That's right. Mr. Cain's reputation was such that maybe he didn't have to pay off the note. So that is why I don't know if he has paid off the mortgage. He is five times a millionnaire. He has told me that himself.

Q. So you think he got it for nothing?

A. No, but with a reputation like he has got, he could sign it on his own signature.

Q. Why are you telling us that he is five times a millionnaire? Do you want to prejudice this case?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, he is continually arguing with the witness.

By Mr. McConnell: He is volunteering statements, telling the jury that the man is worth five million dollars. It is not an answer to any question.

By the Court: If the answer isn't proper, you could make a motion.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it, and ask that the jury be instructed to disregard it.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike counsel's com-

1054 ments.

By the Court: Go on with the examination.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You know very well that he bought the note at the bank, don't you?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. You don't know that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You know he got the note?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you know the note was secured by a mortgage on your property, the farm, and the corporation, General Confections, don't you?

A. Yes, sir, and the machinery.

Q. And the machinery?

A. Yes, sir. And Saddle River Farms.

Q. And by the way, the machinery had an appraised value by the American Appraisal Company of how much?

A. I believe it was $75,000, or $80,000, maybe a hundred. I don't remember, sir.

Q. Wasn't it $128,000?

A. I don't remember, sir.

Q. What kind of machinery was it?

1055 A. It was revolving kettles, and pans, and so forth, and so on, and packing tables, and chairs, and scales.

Q. And you put $80,000 into improvements on the farm out of General Confections, didn't you?

A. I don't know, sir. If you can show me the books or—

Q. No, let's forget the books. Now, you know very well you spent money improving the farm down there, out of money of General Confections, didn't you?

A. I know I put some money from General Confections into the farm, sir, and I believe that it was charged to me.

1056 Q. On the books of General Confections?

A. Yes.

Q. And it amounted to $80,000.00, didn't it?

A. I don't know that, sir. If you have any papers that can substantiate these figures, sir, I would be glad to look at them.

Q. We will give you the papers.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. Now, this note and mortgage secured that farm, and your company and all the property you had at that time, didn't it; it was secured by it?

A. You can put it down, sir, as the word "everything."

Q. Everything you had?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is, everything that you could see.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that remark, your Honor.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. As a result of the transaction your sister ended up, in the Haberkorn transaction your sister ended up owning that mortgage, didn't she?

1057 A. She bought the mortgage, sir.

Q. She ended up owning it, didn't she?

A. Yes, she ended up owning it. Yes, sir.

Q. Yes. Had the mortgage ever been foreclosed?

A. No, sir; the property has been sold.

Q. Have you ever paid any interest on the mortgage?

A. To my sister?

Q. Yes.
A. No, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Can we have our recess at this time?
By the Court: Yes, we can take the morning recess at this time.
By Mr. McConnell: I want to get some documents.
By the Court: We will take a recess now for ten minutes.
(Short recess.)
By Mr. McConnell: Where are the rest of these documents?
By Mr. Lockley: There were no more documents, counsel. We gave you all there were. You had the wrong number.
1058 92 and 93 are in evidence. 99 has not been offered nor identified. 101 and 102 are in evidence and they are original documents.
By Mr. McConnell: Where are the documents that you identified with the witness as being copies which he had on the porch?
By Mr. Lockley: You hold them in your hand.
By Mr. McConnell: All of them?
By Mr. Lockley: To the best of my knowledge, yes.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, these documents that are marked here for identification Government's Exhibit 94 to 100—
By Mr. Lockley: Exclusive of 99.
By Mr. McConnell: 99 is not here?
By Mr. Lockley: It has not been offered nor identified.
By Mr. McConnell: All right.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. —94 to 100, exclusive of 99. On Government's Exhibit 94, can you identify the handwriting on that 1059 document?
A. Yes, sir; I can, sir.
Q. Whose handwriting is it?
A. Mr. Hankermyer's and my own.
By the Court: A little louder, please.
By the Witness:
A. Mr. Hankermyer's and my own, sir.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Now, what part is your own; is that the writing on the bottom?

A. The bottom part, sir.

Q. And were those entries made contemporaneously with the transactions which they purport to record?

A. What do you mean, contemporaneously?

Q. You don't know what the word "contemporaneously" means?

By the Court: If he doesn't, there is no use in arguing about it.

By Mr. McConnell: I am just asking if he doesn't know.

By the Court: Apparently he doesn't.

By the Witness:

A. I have no—an idea, but I want to be specific when I answer a question.

1060 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, were they made at the same time or directly after the time of the transaction which they are recording?

A. About the same time, sir, or shortly thereafter.

Q. Were they made at a time when your recollection was better than it is today in the courtroom?

A. My recollection about what, sir?

Q. The transaction.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So your recollection at that time would be better than it would be when you are testifying here in the courtroom about the transaction?

A. Well, if something happened yesterday, or last week, I could certainly remember it better today than something that happened seven years ago.

1061 Q. I call your attention to an item of June 17th, which you say is in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would that entry be made about June 17th?

A. If it says June 17th, sir, that is when it was made.

Q. What year is this transaction?

A. 1946.

Q. The entry says, "In the later part of May we shipped to McDonald Candy Company of—"

By Mr. Lockley: Counsel, do you intend to introduce that in evidence? It has not yet been offered in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: All right. I will offer it.

By Mr. Lockley: No objection.

By the Court: It may be received.

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. I will offer in evidence the entry of June 17th.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, unless he offers the whole document in evidence.

By the Court: I don't suppose you object to the foundation of the document.

1062 By Mr. McConnell: I am only offering June 17th.

By the Court: I say, then you don't object because it is a photostat copy of another document?

By Mr. McConnell: No.

By the Court: Well, then, if he offers a certain portion of it, you can offer the rest, if you want to, Mr. Lockley. He can limit himself to certain portions of it, if he desires.

By Mr. Lockley: Very well, sir.

(Said portion of document was received in evidence by the Court as aforesaid.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Calling your attention to the item of June 17, 1946, "In the later part of May we shipped to McDonald Candy Company of Eugene, Oregon, 199 cases No. 1 chocolate on an invoice. We also shipped early in June to William Barron Candy Company in Oakland, 70 cases on an invoice. We bought this merchandise for 100 per cent cash as Shotwell needed the money for a corn deal to get corn syrup. It was necessary for us to draw 1063 a check to cash as we sell all goods on an invoice. Check drawn for $27,322.67."

Did you make that entry?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

1064 Q. And that correctly records that transaction, does it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, were these documents the documents of the corporation, General Confections, the ones I have identified here as 94 to 100, exclusive of Exhibit 99?

A. Yes, sir; I say—I believe they are, sir. I am sure they are.

Q. And you had the originals of them in your possession?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at that time there was a receiver in possession, was there not?

A. Oh, no, sir. No, sir.

By the Court: At which time? You will have to be more definite.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, when was the receiver appointed?

A. March 8, 1948.

Q. In February you had these documents out at your barn?

A. February?

Q. Yes.

1065 A. Of what year, sir?

Q. Of '48?

A. Yes, sir; they were there then, sir.

Q. Is that where you kept the records of the company, in the barn?

A. Well, sir, we didn't have too much room in the office for records, for previous records—I mean, for a lot of the records that came from the General Confections' factory. It was much larger in New York. This was much smaller. And the barn was a good and dry barn. And it was upstairs in the top where it used to be for hay. And they were all in these trans-files, all labeled.

Q. Now, I believe you testified on your direct examination that as far as the partnership was concerned, you just put on your hat and walked out of the place, is that your testimony?

A. I don't recall testifying to that, sir, in my direct testimony. I can explain how I left the partnership, if you really want to know.

Q. All right. Suppose you do.

By the Court: You are now speaking of the Eatsum partnership?

1066 By Mr. McConnell: Eatsum Food Products Company.

By Mr. Lockley: At this time, your Honor, I wish to call your attention to the fact that counsel promised that he would connect up all of the Haberkorn deal, the $75,000 mortgage, the $50,000 loan, the sale of the mortgage, and so forth, with these defendants. I submit he has failed to do so. And I now make a motion that it be stricken. He is apparently going off on another subject at the present.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to finish my cross examination before the Court entertains that motion.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Will you proceed, Mr. Witness?

By the Court: I think he asked you, Mr. Lubben, to explain the circumstances under which you left the Eatsum Food Products Company when it was a partnership.

By the Witness:

A. In February, sir, of 1946, I began to consum-
1067 mate a plan that had been my desire from June of 1949. By that I mean I wished to get out of a partnership, and I went. And I asked my partner to split the thing down the middle, the way it was in the beginning, and I would go my way and he would go his way.

He told me, "What for?" He says, "We like you. You are a nice guy. You make a lot of money. No, stay in the place."

I said, "No, sir, I don't want to stay in."

And he said, "Well, we are not going to let you out on a 50-50 basis."

I said, "Look. I want to get out of here on any basis."

1068 So I went and I asked for advice to my friend Mr. Blumberg, who is an official of General Commercial Acceptance and who was always a very nice gentleman to me. And I asked him for advice, and I told him that I wanted to get out of there, and he said, "Dave, any price you pay will be a good price."

And I went back and I told him, "I want to get away from here."

By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness:

A. "I want to get out of here." And the result is, sir, I left him the accounts receivable, I left them the money in the bank, I gave them all of the inventory—but mind you, sir, I was a fifty per cent partner in this thing—all of the inventory, and I gave them everything, with the exception of the desk I had when I came with them, plus the leasehold on the plant up in the Bronx, and the machinery that I had in the Bronx.

And then if that wasn't enough, they went through the files. So that is what they wanted. And I agreed to it.

In other words, the inventory was $375,000.00.
1069 Half of it was mine, because I was a fifty per cent partner in the company. And then Mr. Roth and

Mr. Giglio—Mr. Roth especially—went through the books and he found out that I had paid a $2.00 deposit to the McKesson Robbins, or somebody, for an oil drum, and he charged that back to me, and he charged me back $6.75 for something here, and $1,200.00 deposit on the electric light, and I think it was something on some raisins—I don't recall correctly—that had shrunk in the warehouse. Also the stock of the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company, which was owned by the partnership, the $17,500.00 worth of stock. And I had to pay for it over again. But I agreed, sir.

1070 And I got out. And I went up to the Bronx, and I didn't have any money—I believe, sir, if I recall correctly, I had very little money. But I had the farm over in Hillsdale, that wasn't completely paid for.

So I went to Mr. Blumberg before I went on this deal and I said—the inventory, if I remember correctly—and if I had records I could refresh my memory—was $375,000.00—oh, the condition was the inventory, that they took the inventory, but I had to buy the inventory back. So I was buying back my own property.

And so, sir, I went to Blumberg and Mr. Blumberg recommended me a firm of attorneys, a very high class firm—

By the Court: Perhaps you better shorten it, Mr. Lubben. I don't know as we need all the details.

By the Witness:

A. Anyway, sir, I borrowed the money from General Commercial Acceptance, and I paid my partner back for this inventory. And I paid them all back, sir. And when I paid so much back—I paid $2500.00 a week in notes; and then the balance of the money, I think, was 1071 $12,000.00 balance—oh, the condition of the sale, sir, was—and it was all legal, drawn by reputable attorneys, sir, that the—the condition of the sale was that the partnership was going to continue in existence after I left, which it did, and they would pay the income tax, as set forth on the books of the company, as drawn out by me.

And when the time to pay the income tax came around, sir, they wouldn't pay the income tax. And so I wrote them letters and asked them, and everything else, and they weren't interested in paying my income tax, sir.

MATTHEW BENDER & COMPANY

So it came time to file my report. I attached a copy of the dissolution agreement to my income tax form, also some copies to show the registered—where I sent letters "Return receipt requested" and I sent it to the income tax man. And I sent them in a partial payment.

And that is the money, sir, that I owe the government. And some day, with the grace of God, I hope to be able to pay it back.

I was also told, sir, at the time that if I ever opened my mouth about this—by Mr. Giglio—I would find myself in a cement box on the bottom of the Hudson 1072 River.

When he told it to me, sir, he had some people in his office whose character I found out since that have been—were very, very bad people.

And, sir, that is the reason I have asked Mr. Twohig to be with me, because you, sir, and these people here have been seen in direct contact with these people. I left them. I knew what they were.

But, sir, that is why I am worried and I have Mr. Twohig with me.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You say I have been in contact with some people. Who; what people are you talking about now?

A. Mr. Howard Lawn, sir, and Mr. Giglio. I don't say you have, sir, but there has been people at your defense counsel that have been in contact with these people. And, sir, you were in Hackensack talking to Howard Lawn and conferring with him when this case was on in Hackensack, sir, and you knew who he was.

1073 By Mr. McConnell: Will you mark this document Defendants' Exhibit 10 for identification?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you a document, or a photostatic copy of a document which purports to be an agreement under the 4th day of June, 1946, between Eatsum Food Products, William J. Giglio, General Confections, and David G. Lubben, and ask you to look at the signatures on that document, and state if you will, whether you can identify them?

A. Yes, sir, they are my signatures, sir.

Q. Who else?

A. And the signature above appears to be Mr. Giglio's, and the witness is Roy Hankermyer.

By Mr. McConnell: I will offer in evidence this document, Defendants' Exhibit 10 for identification, because I want to examine the witness on it. I offer in evidence Defendants' Exhibit 10.

By Mr. Lockley: I fail to see the materiality, your Honor, but if the defendant wants to offer it, I have 1074 no objection.

By the Court: Well, if you have no objection, it may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 10.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Mr. Lubben, under this document which you have just identified, you agreed to purchase the inventory for $339,052.77, and you executed notes, you were to execute notes in the amount of $98,277.67.

What was the inventory? What did it consist of?

A. Cartons and boxes and cellophane, and printed with the Eatsum label on it; and some raw materials such as peanuts and raisins and dextrose, and things of that sort, sir.

Q. You already had at this itme, on the 4th day of June, 1946, acquired the machinery, had you not?

A. Well, sir, the reason that document is—

Q. Had you acquired the machinery at that time?

A. Had I acquired it?

Q. Yes.

1075 A. Yes, I had it, sir.

Q. Free of any claim of the partnership, is that right?

A. No, sir, it was—no, sir.

Q. Well, how had you acquired it?

A. Well sir, the understanding was that we were to part company on March 9th or March the 8th, somewhere around there, at that time, and then when it came time to sign the papers, Mr. Giglio wouldn't sign the papers, sir, and he had me over a barrel, and he wouldn't sign the papers until some time in June.

I believe he says until the fiscal year ended. And here,

I was doing a business in a plant under the name of General Confections, and I was paying my borrowed money from the factor to pay him on the inventory of something which I didn't even have a legal title to, and he wouldn't sign it until June, sir.

Q. He did sign in June, did he?

A. Yes, sir.

1076 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I am again going to object to this whole line of questioning on the ground it fails to show any materiality, any connection between the defendants in this case and the witness. If he has any purpose in going into this, I fail to see what it is up to this time. He has failed to connect it up.

By the Court: I don't appreciate the materiality at this time.

By Mr. McConnell: The materiality of it at this time is—

By Mr. Lockley: If you are going to make an offer of proof, Counsel, I suggest we do it outside the presence of the jury.

By Mr. McConnell: All right.

By the Court: We can do it out here. Miss Reporter, bring your book up here.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had beyond the hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. McConnell: What I had in mind, your Honor, was this: When he was in partnership, so-called, with 1077 this fellow Giglio, he was running a cash box, two cash boxes in which he was putting amounts of money and was charged by Giglio of not accounting properly to the partnership for the use of that cash. There was that underlying dispute all the time. He had the highest motive in the world to falsify his records, in order to avoid this dispute he had with Giglio. His statements about it are completely false.

By the Court: Which records are you referring to, the proprietorship records?

By Mr. McConnell: No. The copartnership records.

By the Court: You haven't any of those records with you?

By Mr. McConnell: We have got memoranda of payments out on which he purports to falsify. I can show this was done and the payments were made.

By Mr. Lockley: Just keep your voice down.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, honestly, I can't talk in 1078 just a certain modulation of voice.

As to the motive, it will be shown that he was in this dispute with Giglio where large sums of cash were taken out. He was taking out and spending it on his own account and not accounting for it to the company. That was the underlying dispute. That showed up in the dissolution agreement and the rest of it.

By the Court: Can you connect it up?

By Mr. McConnell: It can be connected up, your Honor.

By the Court: If you don't connect it up any more than you have the Haberkorn matter, I can't see the materiality of that.

By Mr. McConnell: In the Haberkorn matter, I will have direct evidence that this was a blackmail demand.

By the Court: A what?

By Mr. McConnell: A blackmail demand.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, will you admonish counsel to keep his voice down?

1079 By Mr. McConnell. A blackmail demand. The reason for all this Haberkorn deal, the documents he was threatening him with, we learn it is false.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, this partnership—

By the Court: We have a law suit to try and I will try it, and I don't want to go off on a lot of tangents here that would indicate that we are trying something else, besides the Shotwell case.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't want to either. I want to try the Shotwell case, and nothing else but the Shotwell case. I have to try to show the motive of the witness. Here is a man who is trying to swear away the life of another man.

By the Court: You must remember that I have heard motions to suppress. I know the position the defendants have taken, and I appreciate this law suit has got to be tried. The Government has got to establish the guilt.

You cannot expect me to let you go astray as far as 1080 the motion for suppression is concerned. We have had exhibits here that have been admitted. There is evidence here, I take it, for the jury. I am not going to let you go astray here.

By Mr. McConnell: I am not attempting to lead you astray. I certainly think the question of whether it is admitted or not, is a whole branch of argument. There are reasons why they did certain things, or didn't do certain things in those other proceedings. I wasn't in the case at that time. I have no responsibility for it. I am representing a corporation, and I am recognizing the validity of the evidence.

I think a large part is fake, and I think I can show it before we are through.

I think I have the right to lay the foundation for it, in the cross examination of the witness. Otherwise, I am precluded from making a defense.

By the Court: I don't want you to be precluded from making a defense. But, I don't want you trying other issues.

1081 By Mr. O'Brien: I assure you that the sole and specific items we will come down to—

By Mr. McConnell: We will tie up a foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: The other transactions are more simple than these two. There are specific items upon which the credibility of the witness is tested.

By the Court: I will hear it and see how far we get. You may proceed.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken within the hearing of the jury.)

By Mr. McConnell: I believe there was a question pending.

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. When did you acquire it? When did you actually get possession of it, title of it, without any claim against it so far as Mr. Giglio was concerned?

1082 A. I had acquired it physically in March, March 8th or 9th of 1946. Legally, that is, so far as the legal papers were concerned, sir, some time in June, 1946.

1083 Q. Now, by this agreement which we have offered in evidence and received in evidence here as Defendants' Exhibit 10, you got merchandise and inventory on hand on March 9, 1946, and all merchandise thereafter purchased by the partnership at the prices of $308,- 273.92, that was the price shown on the books, was it not?

A. How much?

Q. $308,273.92.

A. But I paid him more than that. There was a lot of other things.

Q. I didn't ask you that. I asked you if that wasn't the price on the books.

A. Whatever was reflected on the books, sir, and we took an inventory that was—that was the price that I paid.

Q. You also got the stock of the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company, fifty per cent of the authorized stock. What was the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?

A. It was a trucking company.

Q. What did it truck?

A. General merchandise.

Q. It trucked sugar, didn't it?

A. Yes, it did truck sugar and many other items.

1084 It was a common carrier, sir.

Q. It was a common carrier which carried your shipments of black marketing—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It seems to me we are getting far beyond the scope of this lawsuit.

By the Court: The objection is sustained and the question may be stricken.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now was Mr. Carry in that Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what business was Mr. Carry in?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I have no desire to prevent counsel from bringing forth any defense, but it seems to me he is going far astray.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. McConnell: Ordinarily counsel permits another counsel to ask a question without interposing an objection.

By the Court: He has a right to make an objection to protect the witness.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't think this witness needs

1085 any protection.

By the Court: He may answer.

He asked you, Mr. Lubben, who Mr. Carry was.

By the Witness:

A. He was in the trucking business at that time, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did he stay in the trucking business after you went in your sole proprietorship? I mean in the corporation, General Confections.

A. He was in the trucking business the first time I met him, sir, and continued it, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. He continued on in it all the time that you knew him?

A. Yes, sir.

1086 Q. Now, this corporation, I mean this copartnership that you say you walked off from and had to pay money to get back your own property, you didn't put any money into that partnership, did you?

A. Why, sure. I didn't put any money in but the sole proprietorship was mine at the start.

Q. Well, you were paid for that when you went into the partnership, weren't you?

A. Fifty per cent of it, sir, so therefore, I had 50 per cent, so that was mine.

Q. And you were paid all of the net worth, weren't you?

A. No, sir. You mean they paid me all and let me continue on as a 50 per cent partner?

Q. Isn't that what happened?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I ask that this document be marked Defendants' Exhibit 11 for identification and this be marked Defendants' Exhibit 12 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 11 and 12 for identification.)

1087 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you a document which purports to be a letterhead of Bernard Bereu & Company, a balance sheet of the Eatsum Food Products Company under date April 30, 1945; and ask you if you can identify the signatures on that document?

A. I believe I identified my signature here yesterday, sir.

Q. Well, maybe you are doing it twice, but will you please identify it now?

A. Yes, sir. That is my signature.
Q. And Bernard Bercu's?
Q. Bercu?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I am not familiar enough with his signature to know whether it is his signature or not, but it appears to be.

By Mr. McConnell: I offer this document in evidence.
By Mr. Lockley: What is the exhibit number?
By Mr. McConnell: Defendants' Exhibit 11.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to Defendants' Exhibit
1088 No. 11, your Honor, on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid for the introduction of the photostatic copy and that it is immaterial to the issues.

By the Court: Well, what is your position with respect to the objection, Mr. McConnell?

By Mr. McConnell: It is a photostat. He has identified the signatures on it.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, he objected to our photostats under the same circumstances.

By Mr. McConnell: I can't account for the original with this witness.

By the Court: What is the purpose of the offer?

By Mr. McConnell: The purpose of the offer is to show that his statement that he didn't receive back the total net worth of the sole proprietorship at the time of the dissolution of the partnership is false.

By the Court: What has the relationship of that 1089 to do with the issues of this lawsuit?

By Mr. McConnell: It has to do with whether this witness is telling the truth.

By the Court: We are not interested in testing the witness's credibility on immaterial matters. We can spend months here in going through all these matters that aren't a part of this lawsuit.

By Mr. McConnell: I don't want to try another lawsuit at all, but that is the beginning of the co-partnership and it leads up to the matter I discussed with you.

By the Court: I will reserve the ruling on it. You can go forward with what you discussed with me and I will see if it has any relevancy.

1090 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you document which is marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 12, and ask you if you can identify the signatures on that document?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose signatures are they?

A. David Lubben and William Giglio. The check is made out to the Eatsum Food Products Company, and it says, "New account".

Q. That means a new account of the co-partnership, doesn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is a check drawn on that account?

A. It says, "For deposit, the account of Eatsum Food Products Company."

Q. That is the old company, isn't it?

A. No. I think it is the new company. We took it in to the new company.

Q. You think the new company drew a check to itself and deposited it the same day?

A. Sir, I am not an accountant, a certified public accountant.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor.

1091 By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness: Sir, I had an accountant, and I was told at the time—and my bookkeeper can go into this thing here. I don't know the mechanics of it, but I know what my accountants told me: You have to take the money from one company and put it in the new company, and I got my pay from the new company, and I only got half of it, sir, and that's all I got.

B Mr. McConnell:

Q. That check is for $67,000?

By Mr. Lockley: If the Court please, that document is not in evidence. I have no idea what it is. I have not seen it.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: I offer this check in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: No foundation has been laid for the absence of the original, your Honor. However, if counsel is willing—if counsel will stipulate, we can put in 1092 the photostats that we have, we will agree to the admission of the photostat of the defense.

By Mr. McConnell: I called on you to produce the original.

By the Court: I didn't hear you.

By Mr. McConnell: I called on him to produce the original. He has got the original of that check.

By Mr. Lockley: That is the original check that belonged to the partnership, your Honor, and we have had some discussion about the partnership records, outside of the presence of the jury. I think your Honor understands why they aren't here.

1093 By Mr. McConnell: There is a sufficient foundation, because the original records are not available.

By the Court: Well, did I understand then that both counsel recognize that the photostatic copies of all records of the Eatsum Food Products Company, a partnership, may be received without any further foundation? Is that the understanding?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: That was the understanding, as I understood it when we were arguing it.

By the Court: Then there can be no objection to the foundation.

By Mr. Lockley: Very well, your Honor. I object to it on the materiality.

By the Court: Well, I will reserve my ruling until I have determined whether or not it has any materiality. You may proceed with your examination.

By Mr. McConnell:

1094 Q. Now on the balance sheet here which is Defendants' Exhibit 11 which purports to be a balance sheet of the Eatsum Food Products Company, the sole proprietorship, as of April 30, 1945, what is the net worth shown as of that date?

A. This is a net worth after taxes of $67,074.28.

By the Court: Didn't you go into that yesterday?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And what is the amount of this check?

A. $67,000.00.

Q. Now that check went into your own private bank account, didn't it?

A. No, sir, it didn't.

Q. It went into the Eatsum Food Products, the old account, didn't it?

A. I don't recall. I believe it went into the partnership account. When my accountant comes here you can ask him and you can ask Miss Feldman, my bookkeeper. My bookkeeper and my accountant will tell you what happened to the money.

By Mr. McConnell: I ask that this document be 1095 marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 13.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 13 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now the partnership wasn't in existence in January of 1945, was it?

A. The partnership was not in existence in January of 1945, sir.

Q. I show you a statement of Eatsum Food products Company, 1841 Broadway, New York 23, New York, at the Manufacturers Trust Company, and ask you if you can tell me whether that is a statement of the account of the old sole proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Well, sir, it appears to be, but I think Miss Feldman could identify it much better than I could, sir. She is the one that took care of these records and I don't—

Q. Well, it doesn't appear to be a partnership bank account, does it?

A. No, sir. It says "January, 1945" over here (indicating).

Q. And the partnership wasn't in existence on that day, was it?

1096 A. No, sir.

Q. Now under date of June 15th of 1945, do you find a deposit—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he lays a foundation for the introduction of the photostatic copy in evidence. That is a photostat of something which occurred outside of the partnership, and he is reading from it to him without offering it in evidence.

By the Court: Offer the document in evidence before you read from it.

1097 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, would you state whether or not that is a true and correct copy of your account with Manufacturers Trust Company?

A. Well, sir, they made a lot of mistakes. Many times when you went over there—once, I remember, sir, when we cashed one of these checks we came back with about $700.00 too much.

Whether this is a true and correct copy, sir, I wouldn't know. You would have to ask Miss Feldman.

Q. Well, you had an account at the Manufacturers Trust Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. After seeing that document, do you still tell this jury you didn't get $67,000.00?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I am looking right directly at the jury and I am under oath and I, for my part of the partnership, never received $67,000.00 and I am under oath, sir, and I remember it.

By Mr. McConnell:

1098 Q. You never received it on June 15, 1945?

A. I said I, David Lubben, personally never received $67,000.00. There were some mechanics that you have to do. I am answering you, sir. There were some mechanics that you had to go through to make the partnership. I don't know. When Miss Feldman comes in and my certified public accountant comes in, ask them. They know how. I don't know how the story was, sir, but it was legal and correct.

By Mr. McConnell: I ask that these documents be marked for identification Defendants' Exhibits 14-A and 14-B.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 14-A and 14-B for identification.)

By the Witness:

A. Sir, I remember something else about that transaction.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I haven't asked you any question. Your counsel can ask you about anything that you want to explain.

A. I was just giving you some additional information, if you wanted it.

1099 Q. I will ask you what I want.

A. All right.

Q. I show you a document which has been marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 14-A and 14-B and I ask you to examine that and state whether or not you can identify the handwriting on it?

A. Yes. Some of it, sir, appears to be mine.

By the Court: A little louder, please, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. Some of it is mine, sir, and the other part is Mr. Hankermyer and it might have been or—sir, not Mr. Hankermyer. It appears to be Mr. Loperfido. I wouldn't swear to it, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I offer in evidence Defendants' Exhibits 14-A and 14-B for identification. The signature has been identified on the documents. It is a photostat but it is a partnership photostat, if the Court please.

By the Court: Well, is there any objection?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. We object on the ground that it is immaterial.

1100 By Mr. McConnell: It has to do with these moneys in a cash box in the partnership.

By the Court: I think that this is one of the records of the partnership.

By Mr. McConnell: That is right.

By the Court: Shouldn't you establish some further foundation if you are going to offer the exhibit? He has identified the handwriting but it doesn't appear whether it is a record or what it is. It is just a paper, so far.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, what is this document, Mr. Lubben?

By the Court: Now, speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. It says at the top of it "Money taken in".

By Mr. Lockley: Don't read from it.

By the Court: You stand there, Mr. McConnell. The jury can't hear him. I am sorry, but you have to do it. All right, go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. It is a record of some moneys that came into 1101 the company, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. A record of the corn box, isn't it?

A. The other one is a record of money going out.

1102 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. A record—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to counsel testifying.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Sir?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I asked you whether it wasn't a record of the ins and outs of the corn box?

A. Yes, sir. It says so right here (indicating).

By Mr. McConnell: I offer it in evidence.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Defendants' Exhibit 14-A and 14-B.)

By Mr. McConnell: He has identified the signature on this document as made in his handwriting.

Q. You were a partner at that time?
A. My signature, sir, is not on that document.
Q. Your handwriting is on the document, isn't it?
A. Well, that is different, sir.
Q. The entries are made in your handwriting, are 1103 they not, sir?
A. Some of them are.
Q. You were a partner at that time?
A. Yes, sir.
By the Court: It may be received.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. The first item on this, "November 3 was taken over from Frankie", that is in your handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who was Frankie?
A. It was Mr. Loperfido, Giglio's cousin.
Q. Was he a partner in the outfit at that time?
A. He had something to do with Mr. Giglio. He was a limited partner for him.
Q. Now you kept this corn box in your own office, did you not, at that time?
A. No, sir, I didn't.
Q. Where did you keep it?
A. I believe the corn box at that time was in the possession of Mr. Giglio.
Q. You kept a record of how much went in it, and how much went out of it?
A. Well, yes, sir, I kept a record.
Q. Did you have access to that box?
1104 A. I would ask Mr. Giglio for monies I did want, and I would get it from Mr. Roth.
Q. Where did the money come from that went into this box?
A. From the sale of corn syrup and as reported on the other page.
Q. Corn syrup sold at over ceiling prices?
A. I wouldn't know. I wouldn't say it was over ceiling prices. It didn't have to be sold that way. It could have been sold under an invoice, because we had a legal ceiling, sir.

Q. Well, you sold it part invoice, and part cash, didn't you?

A. That is correct, sir. I think we sold some cars for 100 percent invoice.

Q. And this 5½ which is noted on the document, that is the overage, that is the 5½ cents overage on the corn syrup?

A. I wouldn't know, sir. I would have to read the whole thing.

Q. Well, look at it.

A. Yes, sir, that is 5½ cents a pound overage.

Q. It is over the ceiling price, isn't it?

1105 A. I didn't say that, sir.

Q. Isn't it?

A. I didn't say that.

Q. Well, it is over the invoice price?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now did you have some dispute with Mr. Giglio over the cash in that box?

A. What do you mean by a dispute, sir?

By Mr. Lockley: Fix a foundation, when and where.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you have any dispute with him about that box?

A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. And when did you have that dispute?

A. Almost the day we started in business.

1106 Q. He wasn't satisfied to have you handle that cash, was he?

A. No. That was not the dispute, sir.

Q. Was he satisfied to have you handle the cash in the box?

A. That was not the dispute, sir.

Q. I didn't ask you whether that was the dispute or not. You can just answer my question.

A. Yes, sir. I would say he was very satisfied to have me handle the cash that was in the box.

Q. Did he take it away from you?

A. No, sir. I gave it away.

Q. You gave it and he took it, is that it?

A. I didn't give it to him, sir. The first time I gave it to Mr. Loperfido, who was his cousin.

Q. That is Frankie?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, this entry says "November 30, taken over from Frankie."
A. I think at that time, sir, Frankie left the partnership. He had some trouble with Mr. Giglio, his cousin.
Q. And he left so you took it over from Frankie at that time, at the time Frankie left?
A. I don't know whether I took—no, I did not 1107 take over the box. I took over the keeping of the records, sir. There was some talking in the past and Mr. Roth would tell me that Frankie was taking money out of the box and couldn't account for it.
Q. You mean he was pinching?
A. I didn't say that, sir.
Q. You had a dispute about it as soon as you got in there, is that it?
A. Yes, sir, with Mr. Roth, sir, constant.
Q. I didn't ask you about Mr. Roth. I asked you about Mr. Giglio.
A. Well, Mr. Giglio—Mr. Roth spoke for Mr. Giglio.
Q. But as late as November 30th, after the partnership was formed, you were already making entries with reference to the corn syrup?
A. For a short space of time, sir. That is when Frankie walked out.
Q. Was the box kept in Mr. Giglio's office?
A. Yes, sir, it was.
Q. Now, what was that box that you talked about?
A. Later on, sir, the box was kept—once I went to Frankie and asked him for some money and the box was kept in Mr.—he said the box was in the safe in Mr.
1108 Giglio's home so when I would ask for some money, I couldn't get it that day; I would have to wait until the next day to get it when they brought it back.
Q. You withdrew money from that box from time to time, didn't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How much money did you withdraw while you were a partner?
A. You mean me, personally?
Q. Yes, you personally.
A. From my personal account?
Q. How much money did you withdraw personally, whether or not it was your account or not?

1109 By the Court: Are we going to go over the entire account he had with Mr. Giglio on the cash box?

By Mr. McConnell: No, we are not.

By the Court: You contend that this has a relationship to the Shotwell Company?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, I do.

By the Court: I wish you would arrive at that point of your inquiry.

By Mr. McConnell: Can I have an answer to this question, if the Court please, that is now pending?

By the Court: You want to know now what money he drew out of the cash box?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By the Court: Whether it was for his personal use, or for the business, or partnership. Obviously, that involved accounting—I just can't see it.

By Mr. McConnell: He took hundreds of thousands of dollars out.

By Mr. Lockley: I will object to that, your Honor.

By the Court: I will sustain it.

1110 By the Witness: I think you know that answer better than I do.

By Mr. McConnell: I ask that these documents be marked for identification Defendants' Exhibits 15-A, 15-B, 15-C, 15-D, 15-E, 15-F, 15-G, 15-H, 15-I, and 15-J.

(Said document were marked Defendants' Exhibits 15-A, 15-B, 15-C, 15-D, 15-E, 15-F, 15-G, 15-H, 15-I, and 15-J, for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you documents which have been marked for identification 15-A to 15-J, both inclusive, and ask you if you can identify the entries on those sheets as to who made them?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know in whose handwriting they are?

A. Some of it appears to be in the handwriting of Miss Feldman, sir, and others, is not hers, sir. I don't think it is, anyway. To me, it appears—

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. To me it appears there are four or five—

1111 several handwritings here, and then there is also some typewriting. I don't know who used the typewriter. There is no signatures. So, sir, I don't know.

By Mr. McConnell:
Q. What do those records purport to be?
A. They appear to be, sir, a record of transactions in the business of corn syrup, of the partnership. It is a record, sir, that I requested to be kept.
Q. That you requested to be kept, is that it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, now, will you tell us about this dispute of yours with Mr. Giglio?
A. Well, sir, he just—
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I thought we just went over that a moment ago.
By the Court: I thought so.
By Mr. McConnell: I don't think we ever got to it. I didn't think we got to it, Judge. He wanted to tell it.
By the Court: He went and gave you a long, long answer regarding his dispute with Mr. Giglio. That is my recollection.
1112 By Mr. McConnell: Well, let me ask the witness this—
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Is there something about the dispute that you haven't already told us?
A. Well, sir, we had a continued dispute. I don't know whether there was something I haven't told you or not.
By the Court: From the looks of it, I would think it was covered.
By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, there is one short inquiry I would like to make and it won't take long.
By the Court: I am sorry, I didn't hear you.
By Mr. McConnell: There is a short inquiry I would like to make.
By the Court: Ask him the question, and let him answer. You asked him the question: To relate the circumstances of his dispute with Mr. Giglio.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. What dispute did you have with Mr. Giglio about the bookkeeping?
1113 A. The dispute—the constant dispute, sir, was the fact, that we didn't like the cash box, and I preferred to draw checks for cash and handle it that way, and he didn't like it, and he wanted to sell, like, all of this corn syrup, sir, and there was absolutely no reason for this corn syrup to be sold for cash and invoice. We could have taken a legal ceiling from one of the biggest people in the east, and sold it that way, but that is the way they wanted it, and that is the way it was.

1114 Q. That was the way Mr. Giglio wanted the transaction?

A. Mr. Giglio and Mr. Roth wanted that money handled that way. He got so, sir, he didn't even want us to take the money out that was due Shotwell. That was why I couldn't get the money out any longer, out of the box, to pay Shotwell, and that is why I got the checks, because I knew I was going out and in addition to my walking out of the place I had to assume many thousands of dollars worth of debts, the debts of the partnership. One of them was the money I gave Mr. Huebner for the overages that were accrued by the partnership and not by the corporation.

Q. Let me get this straight.

A. Because if I didn't continue, sir, I couldn't have gotten any more merchandise.

Q. That was a nice speech, but I didn't ask you anything about it.

A. You asked me for an explanation, sir, and I gave it, to the best of my ability. I am sorry if it wasn't what you wanted.

Q. I asked you as to the dispute, as to the bookkkeping record. It was about whether or not you should 1115 keep records of the cash box, wasn't it?

A. I don't know, sir. Miss Feldman will tell you about that. They didn't—

Q. All right. Now, let me ask you about this: Whatever your dispute was, whether you had a dispute or didn't have a dispute, during the partnership time ,you didn't draw any checks to cash in making over-ceiling payments, but paid over-ceiling payments out of the cash box, isn't that true?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to counsel assuming something in his question.

By Mr. McConnell: I am cross examining.

By Mr. Lockley: That is not the evidence.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. These payments that you claim you made to Mr. Huebner during the time of the partnership, you got that money from the cash box, you say?

A. Not all the time, sir.

Q. Well, what time didn't you?

1116 A. Well, many times, sir, that I drew checks for cash.

Q. During the partnership period?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But there were some that you didn't draw the checks to cash for, is that it?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So there was nothing in your dispute with Mr. Giglio which would prevent you from drawing checks to cash, was there?

A. Yes, sir. We had constant arguments about it, Mr. Roth and myself.

Q. Whether you had the arguments or not, you did draw the checks to cash, did you not?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Now leaving that subject for a moment, I want to go to this deal that you had with Mr. Cain at the Riviera Club.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I move to strike out the previous testimony on the ground that counsel has failed to maintain his promise that he would connect it up with his lawsuit.

By Mr. McConnell: I think I stated it to your 1117 Honor.

By the Court: How is that?

By Mr. McConnell: I think I stated it to your Honor.

By the Court: I don't hear.

By Mr. McConnell: I think I stated—

By the Court: You can strike it from there.

By Mr. McConnell: I think I stated to your Honor how I was going to connect it up.

By the Court: You are going to connect it up by other testimony?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By the Court: All right. I will let it go in.

1118 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Coming to the transaction at the club, the Riviera Club which you told us about, when was that transaction?

A. In August, around August of 1948, sir.

Q. Had the ceiling, the black market ceiling gone off at that time?

A. I wouldn't know, sir. I was no longer in business.

Q. You were out of business at that time?

A. Yes, sir, since March 8, 1948.

Q. Anyway, you weren't engaged in any black marketing operations at that time, were you?

A. No, sir, I wasn't buying any more, sir.

Q. Now, you seem a little coy about this black market. You were in the black market, weren't you?

A. I have never denied I was in the black market. I have never denied it and I will never, never forget it and for which I am very, very sorry.

Q. I show you a document which purports to bear your signature—I will ask the Court Reporter to mark it Defendants' Exhibit 16 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 16 for identification.)

1119 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Will you look at this document and see if you can identify your signatures both on the affidavit part and on the body of the document? You don't have to read the document.

A. I am only, sir, looking at my initials on the page. Each one is an initial.

Q. All right.

A. That is my signature, sir.

Q. Now, who was present at this meeting again at the Riviera? What was it, a tavern or roadhouse or what?

A. No, sir. It is a very high class night club.

Q. Had you been there before?

A. I think I had twice, sir.

Q. Was it near your place?

A. It is about half way between my house and the Gotham Hotel.

Q. On the Jersey side?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you taken Mr. Cain there before?

A. No, sir.

Q. What time of the day was this meeting at the Riviera?

1120 A. It wasn't daytime, sir. It was nighttime.

Q. Well, what time of the night?

A. Oh, I would say it probably was around 11:00 or 11:30 when I arrived there.

Q. And Mr. Davidson was with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What time did you get this call to come to this meeting?

A. About 10:00 or 10:30, sir, in the evening.

Q. And Mr. Davidson just happened to be there, did he?

A. Sir, Mr. Davidson lived in Hillsdale, sir, and very frequently came over to watch television with his wife and—

Q. You just were sitting and watching television with Mr. Davidson, your lawyer?

A. Well, sir, I think back in 1948, sir, television was very popular and I stayed at the television pretty much then, sir. I enjoyed the programs, so I would stay. I don't remember what we were doing, but I assume we were watching television.

By the Court: I think it is recess time. We will be in recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

1121 And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein, in Chambers, out of the presence and hearing of the jury:-

By Mr. O'Brien: I was just saying that I have some concern as to just what was said during the colloquy before the bench, in the discussion on the materiality of certain evidence, between Mr. Lockley, Mr. McConnell and the Court to which I joined later.

The Court made an observation about the disclosure hearing, the fact that the Court had participated in that and that the Court took cognizance of the admissions. The precise statement wasn't too clear to me, and what troubled me particularly was the admission part and I want to be sure that the Court had in mind what I thought, that a distinction is made as to the record there and the record here in the sense that that record, or very little, if any, part of it up to date is in any way before the jury which is trying the facts in the 1122 case and that therefore, it should not, in itself, be in any way a bar so that we are relegated to the rules of evidence.

1123 By the Court: Certainly not. I told Mr. McConnell the burden of proof rests on the Government to establish the guilt of the defendants beyond a reasonable doubt. Of course, that is true regardless of what may have taken place in the disclosure. My remark is aside from that. After all, I didn't want to be led over a lot of irrelevant field by way of a cross examination that is going to take us into a lot of collateral matters. That is what I directed my remarks to.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I thought quite sure that was it. I wanted to inquire directly of the Court.

The second matter of concern—there are really two things I wanted to mention. One is on the rulings on the exhibits, whatever they may be, and whether they are proper, when exhibits are presented to a witness during his cross examination, it is foreign to our practice to offer the documents in evidence at that time.

By the Court: How is that again?

1124 By Mr. O'Brien: I say, it is foreign to our practice, or strange to us, to have a document offered in evidence during the course of the plaintiff's case, offered by the defendant, or received in evidence at that time.

By the Court: Well, you don't need to offer it if you don't want to, do you?

By Mr. O'Brien: True. Neither do we understand that that is a condition on which to interrogate the witness on the document to lay a foundation for its offer when we do get around to our case and offer it.

By the Court: You can ask all pertinent questions regarding foundation, but in asking questions regarding foundation, you can't go through the back door and get in contents of the exhibit.

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: That is elementary.

By Mr. O'Brien: I agree.

By the Court: I can't conceive that your practice here is any different than any other Federal Court 1125 in the United States. That is the law. You could lay a foundation for a document by asking him, of course, whether or not this is a true and correct record of the Shotwell Company, or of the Eatsum Food Products, and all pertinent questions that pertain to the foundation, but you can't say, "Well, didn't you say such and such a thing in that document."

By Mr. O'Brien: I agree.

By the Court: Is that clear? I can't conceive of any different practice. It must be new in whatever courts it is in.

The only observation I made—I trust I made it to Mr. Lockley as well as to Mr. McConnell—that is, if he was trying to get into the record part of a document outside of an appropriate foundation questioning, he would have to wait until the document was received in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is just one further matter, Judge, that I would like to cover.

1126 By the Court: Of course I may say this to you gentlemen here: Here you have a jury and some of the members of the jury I know are going to feel very much irked with what has been prevailing in this case for a long period of time. If we are going to try a lot of collateral questions and explore a lot of irrelevant matters, it certainly isn't going to go to the good will of the jury. You men know that as well as I do. I am perfectly willing to sit here. It makes no difference to me on my time, but while I have in mind what Mr. McConnell was driving at with reference to the Haberkorn Company and with reference to the so-called Eatsum partnership, I think we went into a lot of added material that can't possibly throw any light on the ultimate objective that he has.

Now this man admits he is in the black market and concededly so. Well, we needn't go into all the details of his black market operations. That certainly isn't competent cross examination. It is competent to show

1127 he was in black market operations. It is a relevant inquiry because it may have some bearing on his credibility. But how he operated and all the different details of his black market operations seem to me wholly irrelevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, on the black market, the corn black market, the question in this case on both sides—

By Mr. Lockley: I don't believe it at all, Mr. O'Brien. Proceed now.

By Mr. O'Brien: What I mean by that is this: This, I can vouch will be connected up as we get around to it. I mean, as we get into our case it will develop, but time has some importance here and several of the items that were last put in evidence by the Government—I am sure your Honor remembers; you took notes—had to do with the corn syrup transactions.

Your Honor will remember the delivery of the money to Graflund, and all that. Now you also remember that there was an overage of seven cents a pound on that 1128 syrup over and above that six cents invoice price.

The relevancy of the corn market and the corn market price at the time the witness is talking about here in that respect, is to show what the going overage was at that time. He has described it as five and a half cents. The truth is, as we have shown with respect to December, 1946, there weren't any overages being paid on corn syrup. Now we don't want to be charged with that overage, any overage on corn syrup. A large amount of this at that stage of the game was brought in for the purpose of their case. We have a mild interest in the corn syrup.

1129 We have a great degree of interest in the corn syrup in our case to the extent that payments were made, if they were made, during a time when the corn syrup market was short. It is necessary to show payments of money in order to offset any receipts the jury may sense came in.

Speaking generally, however, I don't suppose there is any different view between the Court and ourselves upon the rules of evidence. So far, I would be in agreement with what the Court has said.

The one remaining general thing that bothers me somewhat is the apparent requirement that we state to the Court the materiality of a matter on which we are pursuing a line of cross examination, at a moment even that the inquiry is at an early stage, at the very inception of the quest along that line. Now, the rule, as I understand it is one from your Circuit Court, Judge, and the opinion is by Judge Sandburn passing on a Supreme Court decision where he states that a full 1130 cross of the witness upon the subject of his examination in chief is an absolute right and so on, but when it comes to the Supreme Court opinion which he quotes and on which he relies, the Supreme Court says:

> "Counsel often cannot know in advance what pertinent facts may be elicited on cross. For that reason it is necessarily exploratory and the rule that the examiner must indicate the purpose of his inquiry does not in general apply. It is the essence of a fair trial that reasonable latitude be given the cross examiner even though he is unable to state to the court what facts reasonable cross examination might develop."

Again, that is a principle that must be reconciled with a balancing one.

By the Court: I have no quarrel with that statement. I suppose in general it is true. I think considerable latitude should be allowed and I think I have allowed considerable latitude to the defendants in their cross 1131 examination of Lubben.

We have gone into the Haberkorn matter with a great deal of detail. We have gone into the Giglio matter with a great deal of detail and I gather otherwise that what you are interested in is the transaction involved in the so-called cash box.

Well, there are a lot of matters we have gone into that I can't say have any possible relevancy to the ultimate end that you are seeking to direct the cross examination, but be that as it may, I appreciate there are times when there are questions of an exploratory nature, that at times you may not be entirely clear on what the objective is, but that doesn't mean that counsel can run far afield in collateral matters and try issues that are other than ones we are trying here.

We have a long lawsuit. I take it we are interested in knowing whether Lubben paid premium payments to 1132 the Shotwell Company which they did not report in their tax returns for 1945 and 1946. That is our question, isn't it?

1133 Mr. O'Brien: Substantially. I would say so.

By the Court: Substantially.

By Mr. O'Brien: I add this—

By the Court: You have a right, of course, to attack his credibility as a witness with reference to the payments that he contends he made to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Now, these dealings with Giglio, whether he has double crossed Giglio or whether Giglio double crossed him, or what may have transpired there, whether or not he says he got $60,000.00 from Giglio and the fact that he got $150,000.00, it doesn't have the slightest relevancy on the ultimate issue we are trying.

You say, "Well, we are testing his credibility."

Of course you have a right to test his credibility when he has made a statement that is not true, but you only have a right to test his credibility on material things and not immaterial things. Whether he double crossed 1134 Giglio is an immaterial thing in this lawsuit. It is perfectly immaterial except in so far is it refers to the money he contends went into the Shotwell coffers.

Now, you men are well experienced lawyers and I want to give you every opportunity and every opportunity for these defendants to have every defense they are entitled to under the law. I don't want to circumscribe you at all, but I am not prepared to have you wander into a lot of irrelevant fields that will merely becloud the issues we are going to try.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wanted to be sure that your Honor had no such impression.

By the Court: Now our issues are fairly simple. While they may be complicated in the sense that it involves accounting, ultimately, that is what we are trying to find out, whether or not Lubben did pay this money he contends he did.

By Mr. O'Brien: I will say very shortly on that, yes, but as I say, before saying that is right, I think I 1135 would put it this way: The issue is whether Lubben paid the amount or the kind of money that he says he did and whether the company owes a tax on that money.

By the Court: That is true. I appreciate we may also have an issue here as to whether or not in law there was any tax due on this money because you contend that any overages you have received, you had to pay your suppliers, and you are going to take the position, I take it, that one washed out the other and you really had no tax due. I haven't crossed that bridge yet. That is a matter you, I assume, will want to establish, if you can, in your defense but I am saying now that in so far as the Government's case is concerned the issues I have outlined or have tried to outline for you are the only ones before the Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right.

By the Court: Obviously you are not going to establish, the Government, or at least Lubben, what money you had to supply.

1136 The issue before the Court so far as Lubben is concerned is whether or not he is telling the truth as to these overages and the amount he contends came—

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I don't think I made myself clear in our talk before the bench, but my point is this: After all, there is a certain amount of this money that was received. There isn't any question about that, as your Honor has already pointed out, but a certain amount of money was spent—

By the Court: I want you to understand that was a mere aside from a judge to a lawyer. I said merely—you have got to bear in mind ultimately if we get into the defense of that lawsuit, you are going to admit you received some of this money.

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By the Court: You have already admitted it. Even so I am not so naive that I don't know what makes the wheels go around and around, you should recognize I was justified in keeping you somewhere on the reservation 1137 and not permitting you to wander too far afield.

1138 By Mr. McConnell: The point I want to make is this: After all, while the question of fact is simple, after all credibility is important here. We are dealing with these transactions. We are not dealing with documents. True, we are drawing documents to get the fact, but primarily we are dealing with the simple question of whether or not the witness is telling the truth, as against a witness who will deny in certain respects the receipt of this money. On that basis, if there ever was a situation where counsel should have some latitude to test the credibility of a witness, it seems to me it should be that. I can't test the credibility of the witness if I have to go just on one issue. I have got to have some leeway to move around with this witness, to test his credibility. At least I should think I have to.

It seems to me it is more important in this case than in the others.

I don't want to try a lot of collateral issues, and I am not trying to becloud any issues. I am trying 1139 to get at the fundamental issue of this case, whether or not this witness is telling the truth.

True, a lot of the statements which he has made can be shown to be false, and perhaps are not material in the sense they have to do with the payment of the money, but they are material in the sense they show the man on a matter of substance, doesn't tell the truth.

By the Court: I will just carry that a step further. Supposing Lubben now down in Puerto Rico engaged in some business transactions. You mean we should explore those in order to determine if a man has truth and veracity?

By Mr. McConnell: No. I am talking about transactions in his regular dealings in this whole situation.

By the Court: You are attempting, however, to explore his transactions with Giglio, not in so far as they pertain to whether or not he is telling the truth as to the 1140 money he contends came out of Eatsum into the coffers of Shotwell, or these three defendants, but you want to try him on whether or not when he sold out to Giglio he got the exact sum of money he contended he got.

Well, we have gone into it. I let you go into it. The relevancy and materiality of this law suit doesn't have to do with that. It is a collateral matter. If you want to explore all the activities of Lubben's business in order to determine whether or not he told the truth on every business dealing he has had, while he has been alive, we would be here until next spring.

By Mr. O'Brien: We don't want to do that.

By the Court: I don't think we are going to have any great difficulty, gentlemen. I haven't any objection to having you come in and talk to me this way. It is perfectly all right. I know lawyers' problems, and if you 1141 feel that you would like to come in and talk to me when the United States Attorney is present, about something you think I have been too short with you on, come right in. I will talk it over with you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you.

By Mr. McConnell: Thank you, your Honor.

Chicago, Illinois,
Friday, September 18, 1953,
8:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley;

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:

By the Court: You may proceed.

1143 DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, on the evening of this meeting in the Riviera Night Club you say you were just sitting there with Mr. Davidson listening to television, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You hadn't any indication prior to that time that there was going to be a meeting?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Didn't you tell the Government in your statement that Mr. Kramer had arranged that meeting in advance?

A. No, I didn't say that to anybody.

Q. You didn't tell that to the Government?

A. No, sir.

Q. In your statement?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now, at this meeting at the Riviera Night Club who was there again?

A. Mr. Byron Cain, Mr.—

1144 By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. Byron Cain, Pat Grace, Samuel Davidson, and myself.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. As I recall your testimony, it concerned the purchase of all of your property, is that it, for $75,000.00?

A. Yes, sir; it concerned the forming of a syndicate.

Q. Who were to be the members of that syndicate?

A. Mr. Byron Cain, Mr. Edward Urban—or the Urbans—and Mr. Morley Kramer.

Q. Well, did they offer $75,000.00 for your property, or did you put that price on your property?

A. No, sir; Mr. Cain said he figured that is what the property was worth.

Q. And that is what he offered?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you say anything about what you thought the value of the property was?

A. I thought it was worth more money, sir.

Q. How much more did you think it was worth?

A. At least $25,000.00 more.

1145 Q. Did you fix a figure of $135,000.00 for the value of the property?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. That figure doesn't ring any bell with you?

A. No, sir; it does not.

Q. But, anyway, you didn't think what they offered was enough for the value of your property, is that it?

A. No, I didn't think it was enough, sir. And Mr. Cain told me—

Q. Well, now, that is all I asked you.

A. Pardon me.

Q. I asked you whether you thought it was enough. And you told him you wouldn't take it, didn't you?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You refused to take it?

A. I didn't refuse to take the money, sir.

Q. You didn't agree to take it?

A. I didn't refuse to take it, sir.

Q. Well, you didn't agree to take it, either.

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Now, you spoke about a passport. As a result of that conversation, did you get a passport?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Now, when did you get the passport?

1146 A. Shortly thereafter.

Q. So that you had a talk and you had refused to sell your property for $75,000.00, and, as I understood you in your direct testimony, you had told them that you weren't going to leave the country.

A. Sir, I believe my direct testimony was a little different than that, sir.

Q. Well, Mr. Davidson told you, as I recall what you said, that you didn't have to leave the country.

A. That's correct, sir. He told me, and he told Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Grace.

Q. But after the meeting you went out and got a passport, is that it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was the passport for?

A. South America.

Q. And when was it issued?

A. I'd say probably a week or two weeks afterwards, sir.

Q. Have you got the passport?

A. I have, sir.

1147 Q. Have you got it here?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Have you ever used it?

A. No, sir, I have not. It has never been used.

Q. Now, let me get this straight. You left this meeting at the Riviera after having told them you wouldn't sell your property for $75,000, and still you went out and got a passport, is that it?

A. They told me if it brought more than $75,000 he would send it to me after they deducted the $75,000. And that was my testimony, I believe, sir.

Q. So you were going to get more than $75,000 for your property?

A. No, sir. I told them that I thought the property was certainly worth more than $75,000. And they said, "I think that is all it is worth. We will form a syndicate, and if it brings more than $75,000, we will send it to you, after we deduct our $75,000."

Q. Did you agree to that?
A. I didn't agree to anything, sir.
Q. But you were getting yourself in shape to accept by getting a passport, is that it?
1148 By Mr. Lockley: I object to the conclusion.
By Mr. McConenll: This is cross examination.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness: I beg your pardon, sir?
By Mr. McConnell: Read the question to the witness.
(Question read by the reporter.)
By the Witness: A. Well, I wasn't looking for any law suits, or any trouble with the Government.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. You were getting yourself ready to go out of the country, is that it?
A. Well, sir, I didn't want to testify against Byron—these gentlemen here.
Q. And that is the reason you got the passport?
A. That is correct, sir.
Q. It wasn't because anybody paid you any money?
A. I didn't get a five cent piece, sir.
Q. You were doing that on your own, then, getting the passport?
A. Correct, sir.
1149 Q. Well, did you go into Pat Grace's office after that meeting?
A. I did, sir.
Q. And who was there?
A. Mr. Grace, sir. There were some other people in his office. I don't recall who they were. I think his brother had an office there at that time. I don't recall it.
But the discussion was in Mr. Grace's office.
Q. Had you gotten the passport at that time?
A. I think I had applied for it, sir.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Grace you had a passport?
A. I think I told him I had applied for a passport, sir.
Q. Did you tell him you wanted more than $75,000 for your property?
A. I did not, sir.
Q. Did you tell him you wanted any sum of money for the property?
A. I didn't tell him anything, sir.

Q. Did you discuss the property at that time?

A. No, sir, there was no discussion of the property at all, sir. The purpose of the meeting was, sir—

1150 Q. I didn't ask you a question.

I will ask the questions.

A. Pardon me. I am sorry.

Q. Now, you said in your statement to the Government that Mr. Cain didn't seem anxious to have you leave the country, didn't you?

A. I don't recall saying that—anything in my statement about Mr. Cain not seeming anxious for me to leave the country. What statement are you talking about?

Q. Did you say that?

A. I don't recall saying that, sir.

Q. Well, was it the fact that he wasn't anxious to have you leave the country at that time?

A. When, sir?

Q. At that meeting in Mr. Grace's office?

A. Mr. Cain wasn't in Mr. Grace's office.

1151 Q. He wasn't there?

A. No, sir. I told you it was only Mr. Grace, Mr. Davidson and myself.

Q. So that if you had that in your statement to the Government, it wasn't true?

A. I don't think you will find that in my statement for the government.

Q. It wasn't true that he was there. Will you go that far with me?

A. I didn't say he was there.

Q. You didn't say it in the government statement?

A. I don't think you can show me a government statement where it shows Mr. Cain was there, sir.

Q. You don't recall whether you said it or not?

A. Well, sir, I couldn't have said it, because it wasn't true.

Q. It wasn't true?

A. Sir?

Q. It wasn't true?

A. I can't see that you can show me a statement where I told the government Mr. Cain was in Mr. Grace's office.

Q. Well, was there any discussion at that time about whether or not Mr. Cain was anxious for you to leave 1152 the country?

A. No, sir; there was no discussion about that whatsoever, sir.

Q. Was the subject even mentioned?
A. No, sir, it was entirely different, sir.
Q. You don't recall any discussion of that topic?
A. No, sir.
Q. And yet you told him—told Mr. Grace you had gotten a passport?
A. I didn't say I had gotten it.
Q. You told him you had applied for it?
A. That's right.
Q. What was the occasion of telling him that?
A. Because the last time, sir, that I had met Mr. Cain and Mr. Grace at the Riviera night club, both of them, sir, were very insistent that I leave the country, and not stay around here to embarrass my friends by being in a position to put the finger on them. And also that I was up to my neck in trouble with the government, as far as the Eatsum Food Products was concerned, for paying black market overages, and so forth.
Q. All right. Now, because of that you told Mr. Grace that you had gone out and gotten a passport, is that 1153 right?
A. Yes, sir. They told me to think it over, sir. I think my testimony states that the last words of Mr. Grace at that time was to think it over—or Mr. Cain may have said it—was to think it over, and don't be too hasty in saying no, and to get in touch with Mr. Grace at a later date, and he was going to find out some more information from the government office downtown.
Q. And you thought it over and got the passport?
By the Court: He said he applied for it.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. I mean, applied for the passport.
A. Yes, sir; I did.
Q. Well, did Mr. Grace offer you any money?
A. No, sir; Mr. Grace did not offer me any money, sir.
Q. And you never raised any purchase price, did you, of the farm and of the other property?
A. Well, sir, it was not a purchase price.
1154 Q. Well, did he raise the offer then? Let's put it that way.
A. There was no discussion about raising the offer, sir.

Q. Then he didn't.

A. Sir?

Q. Then he didn't raise it, did he?

A. If he didn't discuss it, he didn't raise it or he didn't lower it.

Q. Was there any discussion there of a disclosure by the Shotwell Company?

A. Yes, sir; there was.

Q. And what was your comment on that, if you remember?

A. Well, he said that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company had decided to make a voluntary disclosure covering the money that I had given them. And my comment, sir, was, "Where does The Shotwell Manufacturing Company come into this? I gave the money to Mr. Huebner, and Mr. Cain, and Mr. Sullivan." And he says, "Well, I don't know about that." But that's all. And goodbye, and so forth, and so on.

Q. And that was the end of that, was it?

1155 A. Yes, sir. I was very happy they had made the voluntary disclosure, sir.

Q. Now, after that you went up to Boston and saw Mr. Morley Kramer, didn't you?

A. I don't think it was after that, sir. I think it was prior to that, sir.

Q. Well, will you go along with me this far, that you did go up to Boston to see a Mr. Morley Kramer?

A. I have gone up to Boston many times.

Q. Well, just about this time.

A. I think shortly between the time, sir,—and as I stated in my testimony to the Government, I think shortly between the time Mr. Kramer—the meeting in the Riviera and the meeting in Mr. Grace's office, I had gone to Boston.

Q. And who was with you at that time?

A. I think Mr. Cary was, sir.

Q. Mr. Cary is the fellow with the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?

A. He was a factor at that time. I don't know if he was interested in the Blue Ribbon any more or not.

Q. Well, he was a trucker.

1156 A. I didn't say he was a trucker at that time.

Q. I think you said so this morning, that he was a trucker, or in the trucking business.

A. He was in the trucking business, sir.

Q. Well, anyway, he went up with you. And who else went with you?

A. On that trip, sir, I only think it was Mr. Cary, sir.

Q. How about Mr. Davidson, didn't he go?

A. I think another time Mr. Davidson went, sir.

Q. You don't recall him being there this time?

A. At this time, no. It's one time or the other, but I can't specifically place Mr. Davidson. I know he went with me one time, but whether it was this time or another time, I don't recall.

Q. At this time you went to Mr. Kramer and you asked him—

By Mr. Lockley: I object. I don't see that there is any relevancy to this whole line of questioning.

By the Court: You haven't let him complete his question, yet. Go ahead.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. At this conference with Mr. Morley Kramer
1157 in Boston you asked him for money, didn't you?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Didn't you ask him to buy your business for $135,000.00?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you discuss the sale of your business at all at that time?

A. Sir, if I remember correctly, that what I discussed up there was a message—what Byron Cain had told me at the Riviera, was to go up and have Mr. Morley Kramer contact him, and to go into further discussion of forming a syndicate. And I went up there and I told him, sir, that the Government had taken the Shotwell Company's records, and that—about the meeting in the Riviera, and there was going to be a syndicate formed, and I was going to leave the country, or to leave the country to not be in a position to testify, because if I was not there there would be no case, or words of that effect, sir.

Q. Well, now, did you ask him to participate in the syndicate in any way?

A. I didn't ask him, sir. I just told him the discussion, what Mr. Kramer—what Mr. Byron Cain had told me. I told him to contact him.

1158 Q. Did you tell him what the syndicate was to pay for your property?

A. I did tell him, sir, that Mr. Cain had said that they were to put up $75,000.

And they weren't going to give me all of that money right away, sir. They were going to pay my income tax, because there was some discussion—"They can bring you back if you don't pay your income tax." And they were going to pay my income tax. I am speaking of the '46 tax, that I mentioned this morning.

And they were going to pay the balance on the First Federal Savings and Loan. And then out of this syndicate they were not going to charge me anything for any sale of the property. They were going to take back their money, $75,000, and if the property brought more than that they would send me the money. And if it brought less than that, they would absorb the loss.

Q. Now, you told that to Mr. Kramer, did you?

A. That's exactly the way I heard it from Mr. Cain.

Q. And you wanted him to participate in the syndicate, is that it?

1159 A. Sir?

Q. Did you ask him to participate in the syndicate?

A. I told him the syndicate was being formed, sir. And at that time I felt that it would certainly be better for all concerned if I wasn't here to testify.

Q. And did you ask him to participate in the syndicate?

A. I believe I asked him—I know I asked him to call Mr. Byron Cain in Chicago. And I am almost sure—I think he did at that time.

Q. He did call Mr. Cain in your presence, did he?

A. I don't recall whether it was in my presence, but I think he did, sir.

I can't say for true. But I think he just called Mr. Cain to see what the story was.

Q. Didn't he tell you he wouldn't put any money in any syndicate, or wouldn't pay you any money?

A. No, sir; he didn't.

Q. Didn't he tell you he didn't he tell you he didn't have any money?

A. No, sir; he didn't tell me that.

1160 Q. He had already paid you $15,000.00, hadn't he?

A. He never paid me any $15,000.00, sir.

Q. Well, some company of yours, was it?
A. Mr. Kramer never gave me any $15,000.00, sir.
Q. Did he give one of your companies $15,000.00?
A. Mr. Kramer never gave me any $15,000.00.
By Mr. Lockley: I object. I fail to see the relevance of what Mr. Kramer did with Mr. Lubben.
By the Court: He has answered it.
By Mr. McConnell: All right.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. He called Mr. Cain, did he, in your presence?
A. I didn't say it, sir. I think he did. I can't specifically say he did or didn't. I am of the opinion he did. But I don't know whether it was in my presence or not. I told him to call in my presence. I had no reason to tell him not to call.
Q. Well, after he called, you didn't get any money, did you?
A. I didn't go for any money, sir.
Q. Well, you didn't get any sale of your property, either, did you?
A. I didn't go to sell my property, sir.
1161 Q. Did you get a sale of your property?
A. From whom, sir?
Q. From anybody.
A. When?
Q. Mr. Cain, or the syndicate that you are talking about.
A. I didn't sell my property, sir, till sometime in 1951. I believe it was '51.
Q. Well, the syndicate didn't offer you any proposition after that for your property, did it?
A. After that, sir?
Q. Yes. After your talk with Mr. Kramer?
A. Oh, no, sir.
Q. Now, at the time you talked with Mr. Kramer had you gotten the passport, or applied for the passport?
A. I wouldn't know, sir. I think it was applied for, sir.
Q. And you didn't sell the property to the syndicate, did you?
A. No, sir.
Q. And you didn't go to South America, either, did you?
A. No, sir.

Q. And you never used the passport?

1162 A. No, sir. I am very thankful I didn't, too, sir.

Q. Now, you talked about some investigation of income tax of Mr. Giglio at that conference. Was there some?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see what Mr. Giglio's income taxes have to do with this issue.

By the Court: You don't identify the time or place.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, he went into it on the conference in the Riviera, about Mr. Giglio.

By the Court: Dickey?

By Mr. McConnell: Giglio, his partner. He said he was in income tax trouble. That was his direct examination. I want to cross examine him on it.

By the Court: Frame your question again, please.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. At the meeting at the Riviera was there some talk about Mr. Giglio's income tax problem?

By the Court: He may answer.

1163 By the Witness:

A. I don't think it concerned his income tax problem, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Didn't you say on your direct examination that Giglio was in difficulty over income tax?

A. Well, sir, I don't recall saying that in those words. But would you like to know what was said?

Q. No. I didn't ask you that. I asked you if you didn't say that on your direct examination.

A. No, sir. I think that the conversation came from Mr. Cain, who told me about Mr. Giglio being in a lot of hot water, and a lot of trouble. and I was in hot water up to my neck on account of Giglio's black market activities.

Q. Did you know anything about Mr. Giglio being in trouble about income taxes?

A. I think, sir, that I had heard the government was working on the case.

Q. And that involved the transactions of the Eatsum partnership, didn't it?

A. Not necessarily, sir.

Q. You don't know whether it did or not?

A. Well, it seems that—no, sir; I don't know.
1164 It certainly could have involved Eatsum Food Products.

Q. Didn't the government call you in to go over books and records of Eatsum in an income tax investigation of Mr. Giglio?

A. When, sir?

Q. At any time.

A. What has that got to do with the meeting in the Riviera in 1948, at any time?

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. You did, sir.

Q. I asked you whether or not you weren't called in.

A. When, sir?

Q. At any time.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Witness:

A. I would like the date, sir.

By the Court: You may answer that either yes or no.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, the question before was in regard to the Riviera.

By the Court: He has left the Riviera. Now he has asked you a general question.

1165 By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir; the government has had me into their offices and they have been asking me questions, sir, about my connection with Mr. Giglio, on the Giglio records, and so on and so forth, what I had done, and what-not, and if I had the records.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And they were asking you about transactions with Mr. Giglio, when you were a partner with Mr. Giglio, were they not?

A. The government?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, yes, sir. But this is much later than after the meeting at the Riviera, sir.

1166 Q. Mr. Giglio got indicted, didn't he?

A. I read that in the newspaper.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see what relevance Mr. Giglio's indictment has to the case.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. After that conference that you had down in Boston with Mr. Morley Kramer, did that end the syndicate deal, the so-called syndicate deal?

A. I believe it did, sir. I don't know whether I came out to Chicago, sir, to see the Urbans—whether I was asked to or whether I was not. I believe, sir, that Byron Cain told me that he would see the Urbans when they got back. That is my recollection. But on that particular phase, sir, I could be wrong. I don't know whether I came out or whether I didn't come out.

Q. For all intents and purposes that deal ended there?

A. It was never consummated, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all the questions I
1167 have to ask. Mr. Kirby has some questions.

By Mr. Kirby: I am sure we will move a little faster if I could have the indulgence of the Court for about a five-minute recess to put my papers in order. It will save much more than five minutes, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By the Court: We will take a five-minute recess.

(Short recess.)

By the Court: I wonder if we might just clarify my own records, and perhaps for the information of the jury as well.

Now, Mr. McConnell, in his examination of the witness, has been examining the witness on behalf of—

By Mr. McConnell: Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Kirby: My name is Kirby and I represent Harold Sullivan.

1168 By the Court: There has been a little confusion in my mind because some of the motions heretofore haven't been entirely clear.

You are now examining the witness on behalf of Harold Sullivan?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, and my name is Kirby.

Cross Examination By Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Lubben, am I correct in believing that at least one of the earlier transactions that you had with Shotwell related to your procuring some chocolate for them, sir?

A. Yes, sir. I sold them some chocolate, sir.

Q. All right. And am I reading correctly from your transcript, at page 421, where you say:

"I told Mr. Huebner that I can buy this chocolate and I can sell it to somebody else and I can make a profit, and it would probably be ten cents a pound and maybe a little more, but I will sell it to you for as near my cost as possible, or my cost, if you can arrange that I get the Shotwell line."

1169 Now, I don't read the whole quotation, but you remember that testimony in substance, do you, sir?

A. I do, sir.

1170 Q. And, Mr. Lubben, was chocolate a short item at that time?

A. Yes, sir; it was.

Q. And I think it is true that it remained short under the whole period under discussion—or at least to the '45 and '46 era, didn't it?

A. Yes, sir; it did.

Q. But in any event, this was a transaction where you were going to make some chocolate available at your cost to Shotwell?

A. Well, no, sir, the thought was that I could either do two things: I could sell them the chocolate, I could go and buy some chocolate and sell it to them and make a profit; or I could sell it to them and get the Shotwell line. And the Shotwell line is what I wanted to sell.

Q. And it was agreeable to them and it was agreeable to you that you not make a profit on the chocolate, but that you do get at least some candy?

A. Sir, I believe we made a couple of pennies on it. But—and that is only a guess, sir.

Q. Yes. Well, I don't mean to argue about pennies.

1171 A. But I wasn't to get any candy. I was to receive an allotment of candy, which I could sell to the trade in New York City.

1172 Q. But you were not to be charged any—above ceiling price for it?

A. No, this was never sold to me, sir. This was sold directly to the customers who were the customers of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. I took the order and received a commission, or a bonus—I mean a commission of five per cent.

Q. And nothing other than that?

A. No, sir. Those transactions were all perfect.

Q. And nothing was paid to Shotwell for that candy other than the regular invoice price?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So Shotwell got the candy and—or Shotwell got the chocolate and you were able to sell the candy, and that was a perfectly legitimate transaction, is that right?

A. I was made the Shotwell broker in the New York territory, New York City.

Q. But that transaction did not involve overage?

A. No, sir; it did not.

Q. Now, when you denied—when Mr. Cain told you he was trying to adjust his taxes, and he wanted to know if there hadn't been some trade deals, you 1173 didn't deny that that had been a trade deal to him, did you?

A. Well, that wasn't a trade deal, sir. That was an outright sale.

Q. Well, there was no overage involved in it?

A. No, sir; there wasn't. He knew it, and I knew it, and I told it to him.

Q. You didn't deny it when he asked you to tell the truth to the Government men. There had never been any dispute about that?

A. What?

Q. About the transaction I recounted about the chocolate.

A. Mr. Cain didn't tell me to tell the truth to the Government.

Q. I am happy to have you say that.

A. You said Mr. Cain told me to tell the truth to the Government men and Cain didn't tell me to say that.

Q. He asked you about this transaction.

A. He told me there were going to be two Government men come to see me and I should tell them we had loans and exchanges. And I said, "Mr. Cain what do you mean by loans and exchanges, or exchanges and so forth?" And he said, "Well, whereby you 1174 would give us merchandise—or you would give us raw materials and we would ship you candy."

1175 Q. Excuse me. This is an instance of raw material chocolate, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir; that's raw material.

Q. And they shipped you candy, didn't they; Shotwell did; isn't that true?

A. For that particular one?

Q. Yes, sir. I will only take these one at a time, sir.

A. Well, sir, they didn't ship me any candy for that chocolate, sir. That was shipped to the customers and I received an allotment of 10,000 boxes of Hi-Mac bars, which they sold to their customers at 68 cents, and one carload of marshmallows every month. Sometime they would give me an extra carload of marshmallows.

Q. Now, in the light of your last answer, I read to you your testimony on page 422, that you sold—well, I won't read that part of it, because that just gives the poundage of the chocolate, 50,000 pounds, which would be a carload, and maybe two or three other shipments, 30 or 20 thousand pounds. You remember that you sent that chocolate to Shotwell?

A. I remember that; yes, sir.

1176 Q. With no overage on either the marshmallows or the Hi-Mac bars?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right.

A. And I was never billed for it, sir, in any way, shape or form.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. And I say I was never billed for the Hi-Mac bars or marshmallows in any way, shape or form. It was sold directly to the customers.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And completely proper transactions, I assume, of course?

A. Yes, sir; perfect.

1177 Q. Yes. Now, then. You have testified that there was a time when you did pay overages, is that correct?

By the Court: To whom? Your question is too general.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. To Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir; there was a time.

Q. And you also testified about the Eatsum proprietorship, how they kept records with respect to that, is that true?

A. Well, records with respect to what, sir?

Q. Your overages?
A. Overages to whom?
Q. That you were paying on the Shotwell products?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you testified about what your bookkeeper would do with respect to keeping track of it, is that right?
A. This is during the sole proprietorship?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And it is from the records that you have testified here, in the last few days, is it?
1178 A. Yes, it is from records. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, do you recall your testimony at page 428 and 429 as follows:

"Never mind—"

This is Mr. Lockley.

"Never mind what you instructed your bookkeeper to do. What was done?

"Answer: On the face of the invoice we would add in pencil the amount of the per pound of the overage, and as far as I was concerned that was the cost of the merchandise."

Do you remember that question and that answer?
A. Yes, sir; I do.
Q. And then do you remember Mr. Lockley asking you further, at page 480:

"Question: Generally what was your practice?

"Answer: When we got the invoice from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company it was entered in the book as a purchase and on the face of the invoice—that is during the sole proprietorship—we would enter the amount of the overage."

Do you recall that that question was asked of 1179 you, and you gave that answer?
A. Is this in regard to the sole proprietorship, sir?
1180 Q. Yes, sir.
A. Yes, sir; we added the 10 cents—the overage on the face of the invoice, and would draw a line, and as far as I was concerned, that was what I paid for the merchandise.
Q. Now, did that practice, Mr. Lubben—I will withdraw that question.

Do you recall that on the deposition that you earlier gave in these proceedings you were asked this question and you made this answer, at page 98:

"But actually Miss Feldman said that at page 84 of the transcript. She said: 'The amount of the overage would be added to each individual bill and entered in the accounts payable ledger.' Is that the record you mean?

"A. Words to that effect. Could I read that now?

"Q. I am telling you.

"A. I don't know if you are reading the right words.

"Q. Let me amplify that."

Then reading again from what Miss Feldman had said:

"'If the invoice for candy called for 10 cents
1181 a pound, and we were paying 10 cents overage or premium for it, the amount of the invoice would be entered as 20 cents a pound, except of 10 cents a pound.'

"A. That's correct, sir."

One word "except" appears to be mistaken, but do you remember being asked those questions and making those answers?

A. You just got through saying Miss Feldman said that, sir.

1182 Q. You were having your deposition taken and these questions, which incorporated things Miss Feldman had said, were read to you. And did you make the answers to these questions on your deposition which I have read?

A. Well, sir, you have the deposition. If I have answered it, then it is my answer. There may have been a bookkeeping procedure that maybe I have answered wrong, but I am not familiar with bookkeeping. But all I know—

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to have the volunteered response of the witness stricken and the jury instructed that it should be disregarded.

By the Court: The answer may be stricken. There was no question to the witness.

By the Witness: I am sorry, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, is that the policy that you followed in the business called the proprietorship and the business called General Confections?

A. What policy, sir?

Q. Of marking up the invoices?

A. Well, sir, to the best of my knowledge, during 1183 the proprietorship the amount of the overage was added on the face of the invoice. During the—

Q. Was the same thing done in the period of General Confections?

A. No, sir; I don't think it was.

Q. What, if any, notation was made in that time?

A. Well, the notations were where we had some— during the period of the partnership, where we had some cards, or some sheets of paper, but I think it was cards, whereby we would put the invoice number, and the amount of the candy, and the amount of the overage, and the total. And I don't think it appeared, sir, on the face of the invoice.

Q. During the period of General Confections?

A. That's correct, sir. It may have, though, sir, but I don't think so.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you have that statement the government gave us that Miss Feldman made up about how she kept the books? I think it is right there.

Here it is.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Would Miss Feldman be in a position to know, Mr. Lubben, better than yourself as to whether the 1184 invoices were marked up in the period of the General Confections just as they had been in the sole proprietorship, or don't you—

A. I don't know whether she would know any better than I, sir. I don't know that. Miss Feldman was the office manager in charge of keeping the books. She could know more about books than I would, or methods of bookkeeping.

Q. Was she the one, if anybody, that marked that up on the face of the invoice?

A. What face of what invoice, sir?

Q. Well, you say that you marked it up on the face of the invoice during the proprietorship. That we are plain on, is that true?

A. Well, sir, maybe I marked it up sometimes and maybe Miss Feldman marked it up sometimes. But it was no secret in our office, sir.

Q. Did that practice of marking up on the face of the invoice continue during the period of General Confections?

Now, I asked you that question before, and I don't mean to prolong it. Do I understand your answer is that you are not sure, but that you don't think it was, or that it was?

1185 A. Well, sir, if I remember correctly, we had some cards—there was a little bit of a card box on Miss Feldman's desk, and there used to be some cards there, and she would take the invoice and mark the number down. I am saying—this is during the time that Miss Feldman—you know, Miss Feldman didn't come with me right away. She came with me in August. She stayed with the old partnership, but during the time that Miss Strum was in charge of the books there for several months, I don't know what procedure she had, other than making it on some pieces of paper. I have seen notations around there, and perhaps it was marked on, perhaps it wasn't. I don't know.

But I know during the time Miss Feldman was there, there were some cards on her desk. Whether she had additional records beyond that, sir, I don't know.

Q. But the invoices were the documents which were posted to your books; am I correct in that?

A. What about them?

Q. Am I correct in that?

A. Correct in what, sir?

Q. Did you post to the books of your proprietor-
1186 ship, and did you post to the books of your General Confections, the invoices you received from Shotwell?

A. We did whatever the accountants—or whatever was the accepted bookkeeper practice. Whether I use the word "post"—maybe I don't know what I am talking about, but whatever was good bookkeeping, that's what we did. Whatever the accountant told us. If I use the word "post" wrong—if you mean post, write it down, it was written. But it was there.

1187 Q. Neither one of us could agree on the use of terms. I would hardly know what you would think was good bookkeeping practice. I am trying to keep myself specific, sir. I am asking you about the invoices from Shotwell.

Now, when you got an invoice from Shotwell, did you post it in a book somehow, enter it in a book?

A. I would assume so. We had—it had to be posted some place.

Q. Do you know whether you did or didn't?

A. Well, we had to write it in some book, sir. You had to write it in a couple pages where you took it in and paid it out.

Q. And when you entered it in the book, how much did you enter in the book, if there was an overage involved on the item?

A. Well, I wouldn't know about the mechanics of putting it on the books. All I know is this, if I paid 12 cents on an invoice, and I paid 10 cents in cash, that was 22 cents, and as far as I was concerned, the merchandise cost 22 cents.

Q. Thank you.

A. And the mechanics of making books, I don't 1188 know.

Q. Excuse me, sir. I am inquiring about what might exist to substantiate the story that you have told, and I don't mean to be rude to you. I am only inquiring whether we could find some place in a book these things posted, these invoices, plus the overage. Now, do you know where I could go and look for Shotwell invoices posted to the higher amount or to the lower amount; could you help me either way?

A. Why don't you ask the Government men here, sir? They have got the books.

Q. Excuse me, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object. The books are not yet in evidence.

By the Court: Well, I think counsel has a right to interrogate him as to what bookkeeping system was followed. That is what he is attempting to do.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I don't mean to abuse you, nor to bore the jury, or the Court. And we can drop the subject, Mr. Lubben, if I may just have an expression from you as to whether you can tell me—maybe others can, but can you,
1189 sir, tell me, how these Shotwell overage transactions that you have testified to, can be located in the books—the bound books of the company? Can they be?

A. Well, I wouldn't know, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

Now, if the Government would be good enough to let me see the original invoices that were sent down to Mr. Lubben from Shotwell on which they contend there were overages—these are some photostats you let us have.

By Mr. Krane: Specifically, which ones do you want?

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to see every single one of them that is marked up.

These are the General Confections ones.

If he doesn't know, then without being offensive to him, I will—

By the Court: I am sorry, I didn't follow you.

By Mr. Kirby: The objection made by Mr. Lockley was that this witness had already said he didn't 1190 know whether the invoices of the General Confections were marked up. And I said that in the absence of the witness knowing, the next thing to do was to show the witness that the invoice—show it to him, so we would clear up that point, and move to something else.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. While they are looking for the originals, Mr. Lubben, would you just thumb through that little packet of General Confection invoices from Shotwell, and tell me if any place you see an overage marked up on them?

By Mr. Kirby: While he is looking at those, George, do you have those affidavits of M. Lubben that the Government was required to give us by the Court order?

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: Do I have the invoices?

By Mr. Lockley: They are not in evidence, Mr. Kirby. So far as we know you have photostatic copies of them.

1191 By Mr. Kirby: I will proceed then. I had hoped the Government would be courteous enough to let me have the originals.

By Mr. Lockley: You can have them, Mr. Kirby. It is not a matter of courtesy.

By Mr. Kirby: Should I couch my request in some more formal language, sir? I would like to have the original invoices.

By Mr. Krane: Of what?

By Mr. Kirby: Of General Confections from Shotwell Manufacturing Company, on which you contend the overages were paid.

By Mr. Lockley: May I approach the bench, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes.

(Whereupon the following discussion was had beyond the hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. Lockley: We have no objection to giving them the originals, but they have the photostatic copies which are the same thing—

By the Court: You have no objection to having them use the photostats.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

1192 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had within the hearing of the jury:)

By the Court: Counsel has no objetcion that you may use the photostats.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. Then I will go right along. Thank you, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I might explain, your Honor, that the only reason the Government doesn't want to tear the originals out is that the Government has them organized for an orderly presentation of its case and it would require a considerable length of time to put them back together again. We are perfectly agreeable to him using the photostats.

By the Court: All right.

Apparently the witness has looked through the group of papers.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Have you looked through the group of all of the invoices from Shotwell to General Confections, and have you found any one of them upon which an overage is marked up?

1193 A. No, sir; but I never said they were on it.

Q. Thank you. During the period of the partnership was there an accountant by the name of Roth that had something to do with the papers?

A. What papers, sir?

Q. The papers of the partnership.

A. What do you mean by papers, sir?

Q. I will withdraw the question. Do you know a man by the name of Roth?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. He is an accountant?

A. Well, that is what he called himself, sir.

Q. Did he attend to any of the paper work, or the auditing of any of the paper work of the Eatsum partnership?

A. Not for me he didn't, sir.

Q. He did for somebody else?

A. For Giglio.

Q. Was he also a partner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Roth, I think you testified, didn't want to have the black market transactions entered in the books, is that right?

A. No, I didn't think I said that, sir.

1194 Q. You said that one of the items of dispute during the period of the partnership was that they wanted to handle things through a cash box rather than putting it on the books, is that correct?

A. I don't think it was all those words, sir.

1195 Q. No, but such a dispute eixsted, did it?

A. Well, I would like to explain in my own words the dispute, so there can be no misinterpretation of the jury what the dispute was about, sir, because you are not exactly relating it correctly.

Q. Well, in any event, after you had General Confections, you had no problem with respect to Roth. He didn't have anything to do with the business, did he?

A. I had a problem, sir, but he had nothing to do with it.

Q. And the question of the marking up of the invoices during General Confections was not being in any way affected by Mr. Roth?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the invoices were not marked up while Roth was there, were they?

A. Well, sir, you would know that better than me.

Q. Excuse me. If you are unable to answer it, I would be happy to have such a statement. Do you know if they were marked up or not, during the period Roth was connected with Giglio? Do you know, sir?

A. I don't know that, sir.

1196 Q. In any event, however, you do know now that they were not marked up during the period of General Confections, isn't that true?

A. I think I testified to that already here in court, sir.

Q. Well, sometimes we might argue about that by referring to the testimony, but I don't think the proper thing is for you and I to argue it. If you will excuse me.

Now, then, when you were to pay out money for overages in respect to candy, am I correct in believing that you, at least, in the proprietorship period, would draw a check payable in the amount of the invoice, and then a check to cash in the amount of the overage?

A. This is during the sole proprietorship?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir; I'd say that was true.

Q. And am I correct in thinking that during the period of the partnership when Giglio and Roth were concerned, that that practice was dropped?

A. No, you are wrong in assuming that, sir.

Q. Let me ask you if the practice of drawing a check for the invoice and a check for the overage payable 1197 to cash continued in your General Confections?

A. In many—most cases, yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I wonder if I could have the checks which the Government claims—were delivered—or cashed in overages, in the General Confections period.

By Mr. Krane: You will have to give me the exhibit.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you want me again to refer to my own photostats?

By Mr. Lockley: If you had given us a little notice on this, we could have had them ready for you. You catch us somewhat unawares.

1198 By Mr. Kirby: I apologize to the Court and to the jury, and state that I don't mean to delay it at all. Have you our photostats of the checks?

By the Court: Do you mean the exhibits introduced in evidence?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: I take it that Mr. Lockley will make those available.

By Mr. Lockley: Certainly we will make those available.

By Mr. Kirby: I don't like to be bawled out for the—

By Mr. Lockley: I am merely apologizing because we don't have them ready, because we have not previously been given any notice. And there are a lot of papers. You just want them for the General Confections period, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: That is the one as to which he just replied, and as to which I would like to test his answer.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: These two are reserved.

1199 Excuse me while I try to get these in some order, Judge.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to explain, your Honor, that our next witness is going to be an accountant, or a bookkeeper, and that we had these—

By Mr. Kirby: He will be a great improvement on me, I will tell you that.

How about that $14,000 check to cash that he said he paid?

By Mr. Lockley: Do you know which exhibit? If you can give us the exhibit number it will facilitate it somewhat.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. For example, now, the top one of the ones they hand me, is Exhibit 153, which is a check in the amount of $27,000, even. Now, on the books of the corporation, I suppose that that check is somehow shown as having been cashed against the account, sir?

A. What account, sir?

Q. The account of General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

1200 Q. Now, can you tell me what invoice for overage from Shotwell that check represents?

A. Sir, yesterday we had some other papers here. Just to stand here and say what invoice, or what overage—I mean, I believe this, sir, pertained to something about a car of chocolate.

Q. Now, I will show you one which is marked Exhibit 122, for $12,235, endorsed by yourself, and Ed Urban, and does that relate to a specific invoice?

A. I wouldn't say it relates to a specific invoice, sir. I think it relates to a specific payoff.

Q. I show you a check marked Government Exhibit 126, and ask if that check, endorsed by yourself, and Eddie Urban, relates to a specific invoice?

A. Well, sir, I had my records here yesterday, and—

Q. I appreciate you did. But you said a few minutes ago that the practice was, at General Confections, to issue a check for the invoice, and then a check for the overage, and that it keyed to an invoice in most cases.

A. I don't know—I didn't say any such thing like that,

sir. And if you read what you said back here, if I
1201 said it—I didn't say keyed to any invoice. I have told you—

Q. The word may have been "related".

A. Well, sir, just be specific. But I have told this Court, sir, that the method we paid The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was to take a recap of the sheets, and sometimes we paid two or three invoices, and sometimes we paid two or three invoices, legitimate invoices, on one check.

Then I also have testified here, sir, for days that the practice was to list each invoice, and the number of pounds of candy, the amount of pounds, and so forth, down on the sheet, and that came to a certain figure. And that was the sheet I compared with Mr. Huebner.

Now, it is possible, sir, that there has been a few individual checks that were paid in individual shipments, billed or unbilled, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company. That's what I said, sir.

Q. Well, I know what you said. But what I was trying to get at, and I don't mean to offend you—

A. Thank you.

1202 Q. —is whether we could go to some books where we could tie it on those books to an invoice, where you said there was an overage.

I know what you said. Now, you said that the invoices weren't marked up, so that wouldn't show on the books.

Now, I want to know when you paid it out, is there any place that is marked on the books, keyed to an invoice?

1203 A. You mean is there any place where this is marked with the money that was paid out?

Q. Is related to any invoice of Shotwell's, and that you can show me that on your books, any place on your books.

A. Well, sir, I don't know anything about any books.

Q. Can you show me—

A. Well, do you see any books up here, sir? I know one place where it is written, sir.

Q. Excuse me. Can you show me any books—

A. Well, sir—

Q. —where that is keyed to any invoice of Shotwell?

A. Sir, I don't want to be flippant, but where do you see any books here?

By Mr. Lockley: I object. The witness has already answered the question.

By the Court: He wants to know if he is aware of any books that will reflect the contents of the—

By the Witness: I had certified public accountants. We kept the books—

By Mr. Kirby: I call the Court's attention to the 1204 fact that he is being just as rude to you as he is to me.

By the Witness: I am not being rude. Sorry, sir. I apologize to both, if I have been rude.

By the Court: I don't know that anybody has been rude.

By Mr. Kirby: I thought he interrupted you.

By the Court: I am interrupted by lawyers every day.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I will say I am not surprised that he gets the appellation.

By the Witness: I don't know what he just said to me then, sir.

By the Court: Let's go ahead.

Q. Mr. Lubben, let me now ask you further with respect to what records there might be we can check about when you would sell the goods you bought from Shotwell. And let me read what you said at page 415 about your business.

"Q. You manufactured some, and you sold some,
1205 more or less as a broker, is that the idea?

"A. No, sir; we bought and sold the candy. We would pay for it, and then turn around and sell it on an invoice.

"Q. You were a jobber, then?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What was the nature of the business of General Confections; did that change any?

"A. No, very much the same, sir."

Now, did you make those responses to those questions?

A. I did, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I wonder if I could have Government's Exhibits 95, 96, 97 and 98.

By the Court: They haven't been offered in evidence, if that is of any concern. 95, 96, 97, 98 are not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: 95, 96, 97, 98.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Would you look at Exhibits for identification Nos.

95, 96, 97 and 98, and tell me, sir, whether you now
1206 will concede that it is true that Shotwell candy that you bought you sold to others on an invoice plus an overage of cash not on the invoice?

A. Well, sir, I think I testified to the fact that I did do that, sir, during General Confections. If you read all the books, sir, I think you will find that. I have never denied that, I have shown—you have seen testimony here where Mr. Heitmann has gone to Youngstown, Ohio, to pick up money from the Imperial Candy Company. It is written right—

Q. I asked you a very simple question, and I read from your own testimony. You appreciate that I didn't say those words, I only read them from you.

A. You are tying this up to what?

Q. My question—

A. Read all the questions back again, a couple of lines before, sir. I think the man was talking—Mr. Lockley was talking about General Confections, and so forth—I mean the sole proprietorship.

By the Court: Well, just the last question. That is the only question before you now.

(Question read.)

1207 By the Witness:

A. Sir, I think if you will go along further in the testimony—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Excuse me. Is that correct, Mr. Lubben, please?

1208 A. Where I will concede it?

By the Court: He just asked you whether or not that is correct.

By the Witness:

A. That I sold merchandise for—Shotwell merchandise during the period of General Confections for invoice and cash?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir; that is correct.

Q. Thank you very much. So that the cash overage from Shotwell you cannot point out—excuse me. I will withdraw that question and frame it correctly.

The cash overage which you say Shotwell charged you, you cannot locate for me on an invoice in either the proprietorship—excuse me, in either the partnership or the General Confections period, is that true?

A. Well, sir, taking the partnership, you would be in a better position to answer it than me.

By the Court: Answer the question.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Excuse me. Let's just take the General Confections.

1209 A. Yes, sir.

Q. I showed those to you, and are we in agreement, Mr. Lubben, that you can't point to any mark up or any overage on the invoices?

A. I didn't say there was any in—

Q. Whether you did under other circumstances will be a question of remaining proof. Now, then, I asked you whether you could show me on books of General Confections, or the others, for that matter, where that overage is posted in the book, and I think you said no, isn't that right?

A. I didn't say no, sir. I don't see any books.

By Mr. Kirby: By the way, have you got a book, Mr. Mammel, that you could let him take that he could point to that?

By Mr. Mammel: The purchase record, the accounts payable records are all gone. We have never seen them. That is where the original would be.

By Mr. Kirby: The answer then is that you cannot give him a book?

By Mr. Mammel: No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: And he is free to run as far and as fast as he can.

1210 I will ask the jury to disregard that remark. It was improper of me. I apologize to the witness. Excuse me.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, then, I wonder if we can also agree, Mr. Lubben, that when you sold this candy that you got from Shotwell that you got—at least on some of it—some cash which did not go on the invoice to your customer, is that true?

A. Yes, sir; that's true.

Q. Am I correct in thinking that these memoranda that you had here when you were first testifying are the only pieces of paper of any kind that we can look at with respect to these invoices from Shotwell?

A. You mean do I have anything else?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I haven't got anything, sir.

Q. And those are the memoranda which you discussed with Mr. Huebner on the sun porch, and then photostated, is that right?

A. There were some memoranda; yes, sir.

Q. There had been a receivership and the receiver had taken the books, but he didn't get those?

A. Well, now, sir, when the reeciver came to me,
1211 and he gave me a court order, he took all of the books and the records that were on the premises, sir, and he posted the sign on the door.

Q. But these pieces of paper the receiver did not get?

A. Well, no, sir, because this transaction took place in February and the receiver came in March.

Q. Yes, sir. However the papers were the papers the existence of which and the disposition of which you discussed with Mr. Huebner on your sun porch, is that true?

A. What papers are you talking about?

Q. These papers that, when we come down to it, are the only papers about these overages?

A. Oh, no, sir. There is other—there was copies of bills of lading, sir, and your office over there got copies, sir.

1212 Q. I showed you invoices—

A. The railroad has copies. You can pull it off your track, sir. It was on your siding.

Q. Yes, that's right. I am talking about the overages, sir. Are these the papers, sir, that you discussed with Mr. Huebner on that sun porch?

A. These papers we are just—yes, those are the papers we discussed about.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me have those memoranda, will you please?

By Mr. Krane: Which ones?

By Mr. Kirby: The ones that are supposedly the recap sheets.

Do you have them, Jack?

These are photostats that you supplied us in advance. Why don't you just put the exhibits here some place where I can get at them? What I really want are those recap sheets.

By Mr. Lockley: For any period in particular?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I would like to have all that you have. Give me all you have.

By the Court: Well, why don't you make available
1213 to counsel all of the exhibits that have been received?

Those photostats, I told you once, have not been received in evidence.

By Mr. Krane: Here are all the exhibits.

By Mr. Lockley: That is everything that has been received?

By Mr. Krane: Just check them and see.

By the Court: I think it might be convenient for counsel to arrange for a table here where the Clerk may have—at least during the court sessions—access to the exhibits, so that the plaintiff's exhibits will be in one place, and kept chronologically, and the defendants' exhibits in another place.

It will expedite matters if that practice can be followed.

By Mr. Lockley: That would be satisfactory to the Government, your Honor.

1214 By Mr. Kirby: I am going to hand back to the government all of these Manufacturers Trust Company photostats, because I think we stipulated that they all went on the books. Nobody owes a dime of tax or anything on that. That was all all right.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do I understand you correctly that a Miss Feldman worked for you keeping books through much of the period in question?

A. You mean, sir, 1945, '46, '44?

Q. Yes, sir. Well, yes, '45 and '46 particularly.

A. Yes, sir, she did much of it.

Q. And your testimony was that she made up certain memoranda which you identified on the stand, is that correct?

A. The papers that I believe Miss Feldman made up I identified, and which was not made up by Miss Feldman I didn't identify that she made it up.

Q. Well, who did make up the memoranda?

A. For what period of time, sir?

By the Court: You will have to refer the witness to certain memoranda.

1215 By Mr. Kirby: I think you are right. Of course, you are right, Judge.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. This one of 63-A, did Miss Feldman make that up?

A. Well, this was under the time Miss Feldman was in charge of the office and—whether she specifically typed it, or whether or not, I couldn't say, but it was made up under her direction.

Q. How about 55-B?

A. No, I don't think she made this one up, sir.

Q. Who did?

A. I believe this particular one, sir, was made by Miss Strum.

Q. How about 55-A?

A. No, sir; I believe this one was made up by Miss Strum, too, sir.

Q. How about 14-C?

A. February 6, 1946, sir. This would be made up by Miss Feldman, sir.

Q. How about 102?

A. Well, this was made up, sir, during the time Miss Feldman was—let's see now. No, I think this was made up by Miss Strum, sir.

1216 Q. How about 27-A?

A. I would say this is Miss Feldman's sir, made under her direction.

Q. I forgot your answer on 63-A, Mr. Lubben.

A. The answer on 63-A, sir, this was dated 11-27-45, during the period of the partnership, Miss Feldman was the office manager, sir, and—

Q. You think she made that up?

A. If she didn't type it, it was made when she was the office manager, sir, under her direction.

Q. Then am I correct in believing that the only memorandums that you have produced which are recapitulations, at least prepared by Miss Feldman, or under her supervision, are 14-C—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. —27-A, and 63-A, is that correct?

A. Well, sir, I don't know what the Government has produced, or anything else, sir. I just know that is what the papers are.

Q. And these are the only three produced by her?

By Mr. Lockley: It is not a question of production.

1217 By Mr. Kirby: Miss Feldman produced under her supervision, or by her.

By the Court: You mean made up, not produced.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: It is not a question of production. It is all that he has had offered to him for identification.

By the Witness: That is correct, sir.

By the Court: I don't know, Mr. Kirby, whether there have been other exhibits, of similar import.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I most certainly don't think so, and if I am in error, I think they should tell me I am in error I don't want to mislead the witness.

By Mr. Lockley: Then I will tell you you are in error.

By Mr. Kirby: Then you be good enough to show me, Mr. Lockley, which ones I have overlooked. I did ask for them from your table, and I thought you gave them all to me.

By Mr. Lockley: So far as I know, I have given 1218 them all to you. But my point was that this is all the witness has identified. It is not all that he has produced. The Government has additional ones, and has additional witnesses who will identify and produce those.

By Mr. Kirby: Other summary memoranda like this?

By Mr. Lockley: Correct.

By Mr. Kirby: Originals?

By Mr. Lockley: I think so. I am not sure.

By Mr. Kirby: This is a criminal trial. You want to do some terrible things to some fine people, and I know—

By the Court: Wait a minute, Mr. Kirby. That remark—

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I will apologize.

By the Court: That remark was entirely uncalled for. The Government can try their case in their own way. And I assume they have other witnesses. If they have other witnesses that can identify other documents, they have that right. You know that.

1219 By Mr. Kirby: Well, excuse me, sir. When I was—

By the Court: Proceed now with your examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, sir, of the papers that you and I have just looked at there now, the three, 27-A, 14-C and 63-A are the ones prepared under the supervision of Miss Feldman, is that correct?

A. Whatever I stated to the Government, sir, is true. I don't know anything about these numbers.

By Mr. Kirby: May that answer be stricken as not responsive.

By the Court: Very well, it may be stricken.

By the Witness: Let me go over and see the papers. You are talking numbers. I don't associate papers with numbers.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I hand them to you.

By the Court: I think he said some were prepared by Miss Strum, and some by Miss Feldman, or under her supervision.

By the Witness:

1220 A. I have identified all these, and told you who made them, to you and to the counsel yesterday. But I do know another place where this is written, about these cash payments.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, may that answer be stricken.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: As not responsive.

By the Court: It may be stricken as not responsive.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The question, sir, is: Are those three the only three you and I have looked at just now that were prepared under Miss Feldman's supervision?

1221 A. I wouldn't say that. You have shuffled a lot of papers around here and I don't know what you hand me.

By the Court: Those are the three that you exhibited to him and that he identified. Now, that is fairly clear.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And for how long a period was Miss Feldman with you?

A. Oh, sir, from the very early—I think it was early in '44, during '44, rather, and all '45, and until I left the partnership, and at my request she remained for several months, and then when she finished there she came and joined me.

Q. So of the period covered by the indictment, 1945 and 1946, she was with you in charge of the office continuously except for a few months in 1946, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it correct that the two memoranda, Nos. 101 and No. 22-E are in your own handwriting?

A. This one is dated December 19, 1944. Sir, that is in my own handwriting. And the other one covers a period from March 25 until May 6 for shipments received from Shotwell.

1222 By Mr. Kirby: I ask the Court to strike the answer on the ground that it is not responsive. I merely asked if they are in his handwriting.

By the Witness: And they are in my handwriting. I like to know what is in my handwriting.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you Exhibits 102, which I think you said was prepared by Miss Strum. Am I correct in that?

A. Yes, sir; I believe that is my—it is either by Miss Strum or under her direction.

Q. And it is true that Exhibit 101, which is in your handwriting, is the same as Exhibit 102, which Miss Strum typed, except for the addition of some material with reference to payment at the bottom?

A. No, sir; I don't think you will find that is correct. I think that is another shipment on the one over there that is typed.

Q. I notice that the total to the right on the one you wrote up is 19,518, sub total, plus another sub total of 14,049, and I notice 19,518 on the one that is No. 102, 1223 and 14,049 as the other total. Now, at least they agree to that extent?

A. Yes, sir, they do.

Q. All right. Now, was 55-A made by Miss Strum, and 55-B by Miss Strum? I think we agreed on that before.

By the Court: If you have already asked him that, why go over that again?

1224 By the Witness: I have already answered this, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Thank you. Now, then, those are the only two pieces of paper by Miss Strum that we have seen here, other than the one which was a copy of the one you wrote, isn't that true?

A. Well, I don't know—seen when, sir?

Q. Just now.

A. I don't count them, sir. If you will lay them out I will count them and I will tell you. But I didn't see your—you were fooling with papers, sir. You have one over there. You say those are the only two, and here is one over here, so that makes three.

Q. You hand me the one I didn't show you, sir, will you, please?

A. That you didn't show me.

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. This one right here, sir (Indicating).

Q. And is that the one where the sub-total on the right-hand side is $19,518.00?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the next one $14,049.00?

1225 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is that the same one as in your hand-writing, $19,518.00 and $14,049.00, about which you and I talked a minute ago?

A. The totals; yes, sir. The totals are the same.

Q. All right. Then having shown it to you, and you having looked to see if I am lying to you, I will now pose the question again to you. Are there any memoranda that Miss Strum prepared other than these two, and other than that one which is a copy of what you wrote?

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know that.

Q. Have you seen here any more than these two?

A. I don't—I have to go back and look at these, sir.

1226 Q. You look and see if I have mistaken any of them?

A. No, sir. I think these others were prepared by or under the direction of Miss Feldman. She was the one that has written in longhand, by me, or the two.

Q. So we have two by Miss Feldman, two by you and two by Miss Strum, is that right?

A. Yes, sir. I don't know what you call—

Q. Did you, in the whole period of the indictment—do we have more in front of us, as your testimony nears its conclusion?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Do we have more in front of us now?

A. I don't know. Ask the men over there if they have more.

By the Court: Mr. Kirby—

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Apparently those are the only ones he has identified.

By Mr. Kirby: That is right, that is right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I hand all of them to you and ask you to tell
1227 me whether there is any advance payments to Shotwell shown on them?

A. Yes, sir. Here is one (indicating).

Q. Give the exhibit number, in each case, will you, please?

A. Thank you, sir.

This is number—Government's Exhibit 55-A, as an advance of $20,000. Government's Exhibit No. 55-B is the—well, 55-A, is more complete, sir. 55-B, there was other shipments added on to it.

No. 55-B only calls for a short—shows for an advance, but later is picked up on 55-A. During the period of the partnership, there was an advance of $30,000.

Q. What is the number on that?

A. That, sir, is Government's Exhibit 63-A, and Government's Exhibit 27-A, January the 19th, during a period of the sole proprietorship calls for an $8,000 advance, and this No. 102, sir. I wouldn't know how to call that, an advance, or payment on account, sir.

Q. What is the amount?

A. Well, sir, the total is $25,388.00, and it is paid
1228 several ways, sir. Like, for instance, paid to Frank on the way to farm, $1,488.00.

Q. Was that an advance or was that a payment of—

A. Well, it could be tied up with a specific invoice, sir. He may have gotten the invoice before the merchandise was shipped.

Q. Is it denominated as an advance, Mr. Lubben?

A. No, sir. It doesn't say advance. I remember this one, though, sir, very well. (Indicating.)

Q. Well, on this Exhibit 63-A, after allowing for the advance of $30,000, you say you still owed $36,000, is that right?

A. Yes, sir, if that is what it says there. If that is what is there, that is what it says.

Q. And then on this 27-A, after allowing for the advance of $8,000, you still owed $6,253.00, is that right?

A. If that is what it says on that paper.

1229 Q. 55-B, however, that purports to show a genuine advance, that is $11,267.00, is that right?

A. Well, sir, they were all genuine advances.

Q. Well, I didn't choose my word with nicety. What I mean, Mr. Lubben, is: After allowing credit for the advance, you were still ahead, is that right?

A. No, sir, I wasn't ahead. Shotwell was ahead. You see, they overpaid on the black market and I had a credit.

Q. Excuse me.

By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, may that be stricken? We are talking about books, pure and simple entries.

By the Court: Perhaps he didn't understand. That may be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby;

Q. On these first two, 27-A and 63-A, Mr. Lubben, there is a balance due from you to Shotwell, is that true?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. But on this other one, Mr. Lubben, 55-B, that $11,267.00, who owes that to whom?

A. Well, sir, excuse me. 55-A, we would pick it up and I told you that.

1230 Q. Well, at the moment of 55-B, who owes what to whom?

A. On the face of this invoice, at the moment, Shotwell—I had a black market credit. They had the money for the black market premiums and they owed me $11,267.00.

Q. Now they owed that to you. You didn't owe that to them, is that correct?

A. They didn't owe that to me, sir. They owed it to the company.

Q. All right. Did you ever take $11,267.00 out of the cash box at about that time and say that you were using it to pay what you owed Shotwell, in the amount of $11,267.00? Did you or didn't you?

A. Sir, I couldn't have said it because it is not true.

Q. That is what is known in philosophy as a non Sequitor, sir.

A. A non who, sir?

Q. May I inquire, Mr. Lubben, if at any time you had advanced to Shotwell and were ahead of Shotwell by as much as $83,000.00?

A. Well, sir, I know where you are getting your 1231 story, sir, but you ought to—

Q. Excuse me.

By the Court: Just answer the question.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. The answer is no?
A. That is correct, sir.
Q. Thank you, sir. That is a matter you have had knowledge of in connection with your own income tax transactions, sir?
By Mr. Lockley: I object.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir, but now it proves one thing, that you know where the books of the partnership are because you have been talking to the people, the ones who know it and nobody else knew it, and now you know it and you knew it.
I am as anxious to have the books of the partnership come up here as anyone else is.
By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I don't think my conduct has been one designed to hide evidence. I ask that that statement of the witness be stricken and 1232 the jury be instructed to disregard it.
By the Court: It may be stricken and the jury is instructed to disregard it.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Now Mr. Lubben, is it true that these payments that you say were made to Huebner were always cash for the overages?
A. Yes, sir, for the overages. That was all he ever got, was cash.
Q. Is it true that the cash in every case was in your hands, in your pocket at least for a time?
A. No, sir, not in every case, but the greatest percentage of it, sir.
Q. You may have me there. I don't know in a case where somebody else—
A. Oh, I testified and you were in court, sir. You heard when I said Mr. Heitmann brought money, you heard me mention Mr. Moran brought money and Mr. Hankermyer brought money. I testified, sir, that the greatest percentage of the time I brought the cash and I had it in my pocket, in my suitcase, or wherever I had it, whatever was necessary, and I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

I am not denying that.

1233 Q. Yes, sir. Now, were the checks to cash which you cashed and have identified here the only checks to cash you cashed and put in your pocket, at least momentarily, during the indictment years of 1945 and 1946?

A. No, no, sir.

Q. And could you be good enough to tell us how many checks to cash you cashed and had in your pocket during the indictment years of 1945 and 1946, either in numbers or in dollar amounts?

By Mr. Lockley: Objection.

By the Court: Well, if he knows, he may answer.

By the Witness: A. No, sir, but—I don't know the number and I don't know the dollars, but I don't deny that I had checks that I cashed and had money in my pocket.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well—

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that those checks be supplied. I ask that the Government supply us with those checks to cash. Do we have them?

1234 By Mr. Lockley: You asked us to give you 486 checks at 3:30 yesterday afternoon. He had seven special agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue working over them last night, and we have come up with—how many, Mr. Krane?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, that is pretty good, seven agents.

By Mr. Lockley: 148 of them have been turned over, and we have been unable to locate the balance. We have not had them in our possession and do not know where they are at the moment.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, would it be something then that I could take up Monday, Mr. Lockley, to save time?

By Mr. Lockley: You have all that we have, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: Oh! Did you run a total on them by any chance?

By Mr. Lockley: No, we didn't, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: Are these exclusive of the checks charged to Shotwell, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't know what you mean by 1235 that statement.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, they are exclusive of the ones already in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: Whatever checks are in evidence which you asked for, we have also included. If they are not in there, they are on the table.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you Check No. 3664. Did you get that cash of $4,420.00?

A. Well, sir, if you will show me some—did I get the cash?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, it cleared the bank sir.

Q. Did you get the cash? Did you get the cash of Check 3667 for $3,642.00?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is immaterial as to whether he got the cash or not. He has already testified that he did.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I think it is material in the highest and if I were to denominate its purpose, I think it would be improper.

1236 The Court sees what I am driving at.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you answer me, sir, on that last check?

A. I have answered you on everything, sir.

Q. On 3736, did you get that cash of $4,788.00?

A. Do you mean I personally ended up with it?

Q. Well, that would be a long argument. No.

A. No, it wouldn't be a long argument, sir.

Q. You would say no.

A. I am under oath.

Q. Did you handle it?

A. Sir, if you will give me the copies of my cash disbursement slips, I will identify each one of these checks, who got the money, how the money was gotten, and where it went.

Q. Excuse me, sir. Did you handle that $4,788.00?

A. This one, I wouldn't remember whether I did or not, sir. It is signed by Miss Feldman.

Q. How about this May 9th one for $4,922.00? Did you get that cashed?

A. Well, I cashed it and paid it out to somebody.

Q. Did you get this cash of 3736, for $1,923.00?

A. No. This check says, "Cashed by Miss Feldman." I may have gotten the money, but it was paid

1237 out to somebody in overages, or—

Q. This thirty dollar check we don't need to go into.

This one, 3751, for $1,050.00, did you get that cash?

Well, this particular check is endorsed by Miss Feldman, but, sir, if you will show me the cash disbursement slip, I will tell you if I got the money and where the money went. Without that, I can't identify what the story is, sir.

1238 Q. Would we have that same answer with respect to all these checks to cash, Mr. Lubben?

A. That is the only answer I can give you, sir.

Q. Let me see if there are any of those bigger ones here that you might recall.

A. I think the biggest one, Shotwell got that, sir.

Q. Well, I am sure that is your story.

A. No, sir. I am being very—

By the Court: Don't argue with the witness.

By the Witness: He is getting sarcastic with me and I am trying to be polite.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You refer us, Mr. Lubben, to these cash authorization sheets in order to learn who got the cash, is that right?

A. Well, sir—

Q. Is that what you told me I should get for you?

A. Sir, I will tell you what you can get for me, sir.

Q. Wait a minute, now. Did you tell me that I should get the cash authorizations or am I mistaken?

A. If you will just stop long enough to let me
1239 answer a question and stop interrupting me, sir, I will answer you.

Q. I would like you to answer that question, sir.

A. That isn't specific. You keep interrupting me, sir. Sir, let me say this: A cash authorization slip was drawn for the cash and it is on the books of the company. The books of the company will tell where the money went to and the cash authorization slip will tell it and it will have my initial on there. There is no mystery about those cash checks. They can be explained to you perfectly, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: George, will you give me a study of the unexplained cash checks? It is in these work sheets here.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you mean that at the time those checks to cash were made out that there were cash authorization slips made up in each case telling just exactly who got the money?

A. Or what the money was for. To the best of my knowledge, sir, there was one for each one. It was the bookkeeping procedure, sir, that our accountant 1240 wanted.

Q. And who was your accountant?

A. During what period of time, sir? You handed me a batch of checks there and—

By the Court: Just answer the question.

By the Witness: I am sorry.

By the Court: You asked him during what period of time. That was a fair response to your question. You should indicate what period of time you refer to.

By the Witness: He hasn't told me what period of time, sir.

By the Court: Mr. Kirby, he asked you what period of time you refer to.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes; I was going to look at some records than try to answer you from memory.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In the period from March 1, 1946, to June 30, 1946, were there checks to cash drawn by your company in the total of $323,663.23?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: Wait a minute.

By Mr. Kirby:

1241 Q. Or approximately that amount?

A. Sir, if they were reflected on the books of the company I have no knowledge of the amount, but we did a substantial business.

Q. And were they reflected on the books of the company as to what the cash went for at the time they were made up?

A. Well, to the best of my knowledge, sir, they were charged to certain accounts or they went for the payment of certain merchandise of certain things. I don't know, sir.

Q. At the time they were made out, my sir?

A. No, I think, sir—

Q. Later?

A. Now wait a minute. Don't be putting words in my mouth.

Q. When?

A. Sir, there were times that we may have had a check for cash and had drawn it out the next day or two and told where it went the next day or two but not very long after, sir. I mean, I didn't specifically—

Q. Not weeks, anyway?

A. There may have been one or two times in that, sir. I don't know.

1242 Q. Not months, surely?

A. Sooner or later, sir.

Q. Sooner or later? Just how long?

A. Just when the accountant would come around for his monthly audit and he would have to know where his money went.

1243 Q. Isn't it true, sir, that from the period of March 1, 1946, to the period of June 30, 1946, that there were cash checks in the amount of $323,663.23 and there was no explanation when the accountant came as to what had happened to the $150,599.13? Isn't that true?

A. That is the very first I heard of it, sir.

Q. May I inquire of the following period, from July 1, 1946, to October 31, 1946, were there checks to cash in the amount of $286,506.13 issued?

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know. I don't have the books in front of me.

Q. If they were issued, was an explanation of who got the money put in the books or was it available in the books?

A. To the best of my knowledge, it would be, sir.

Q. And would you say that it is not true that there was in that period $84,620.00 in checks to cash as to which you had no explanation? Is that true? Is that true or false?

A. Sir, I have never heard of that before.

Q. You have never heard of that before?

A. No.

Q. Were the accountants at the time Sproul & Scholz?

1244 A. At what time?

Q. The time I asked you about, March 1, 1946, through June 30th, 1946, and the second period was July 1, 1946, to October 31, 1946.

A. I think Mr. Bercu was the accountant at the beginning, sir, of January.

Q. When did Sproul & Scholz become the accountants?

A. I don't have the specific sheets in front of me.

Q. Do you deny they did the work sheets and checked the cash checks in the period I am talking about or do you say you don't know?

A. No, sir. I hired them at the suggestion of Mr. Morley Kramer of the Gum Products.

Q. Well, were they your accountants during the period of November 1, 1946, to February 28, 1947?

A. I believe so, sir.

Q. And in that period there was $145,875.91 in checks to cash. Do you know that?

A. I don't know, sir. I haven't got any statement and I don't know anything about the books.

Q. There were some half of those checks, $71,725.77 unexplained on the books?

A. Sir, I have never heard of any of that until 1245 just at this moment.

Q. Having in mind, sir, that the proof does go to the question of your handling cash and accepting for the moment your statement that you never heard of it, is it true that there were those unexplained totals of checks in those periods? Is it true or false?

A. Well, sir, I have never heard of it and I don't know anything about it.

Q. It could be true?

A. Well, sir, no, sir, it could not be true or it couldn't be true. I don't know. We would have to—the people rendered me a statement and at no time in any of those statements I received from Sproul & Scholz do I remember seeing where there was unexplained checks in the amount of any dollars.

Q. Would I be given to understand then that you deny that in the period I have outlined there were in excess of $200,000.00 in checks to cash which when the accountants came were unexplained? Do you deny that, sir?

A. Sir, I have never heard of it. I will say this, I have never seen a statement from these people that ever said that there was any checks unaccounted for be-1246 cause they were—Mr. Sproul—Mr. Scholz would come up there and he would send his people up there and I know, sir, if there was anything unaccounted for.

before he left he would run it down.

1247 Q. Mr. Lubben, is it true that in your operation you did handle as we have just covered, a large amount of cash?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And is it true, as you have testified before the Kefauver Committee at page 1069, that one of things that you had to do was to go out and pay cash to buy dextrose?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. And is it true that you would take some cash and go out and buy for cash sugar rationing certificates?

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby.

Q. (Continuing) —in connection with your business?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, what Mr. Lubben's business practice was is entirely beside the point.

By the Court: Wait until Mr. Lockley states his objection.

By Mr. Lockley: It is immaterial to the case at issue. It has no relationship to the issues.

1248 By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Will you read the question, please.

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Court: I think you refer to a certain period.

By Mr. Kirby: I refer to during the indictment period of 1945 and 1946. While this questioning of cash going to them or who is immaterial to the dispute—

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. I never took any cash and went out and bought dextrose and those things, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The question was whether you ever bought sugar certificates for cash?

A. Whether I ever went out and bought sugar certificates?

Q. Yes.

A. I think, sir, I never went out and bought any certificates, no, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay for any that were brought in to you?

A. I think once, sir.

1249 Q. Well, this exhibit here, which is Defendants' Exhibit 1-D, only covers a short period but I see here that—

By Mr. Lockley: What number?

By Mr. Kirby: It is Defendants' Exhibit 1-D but I see here an item on June 6th, certificate for 500 bags, $2,500.00 cash.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You paid that out. Do you remember that?

A. Yes, sir, I remember. I didn't deny it.

Q. This is in your handwriting?

A. Yes. I didn't deny it.

Q. Well, you said you did it once. That is once.

A. I may have done it several times, sir, but specifically, I can't give you the exact number.

Q. Let me call to your attention at least a second time from the limited papers that I have. On June 18th, did you buy a certificate for a thousand bags for $4,500.00?

A. Oh, I wouldn't know whether I did, sir. You are reading a paper. I don't see it. I don't see where you saw that, sir. Could you tell me?

Q. June 6th and June 18th.

A. Oh, money paid out. Yes, sir, on June 6th,
1250 sir, I bought a certificate for 2,500 bags, and on June 18th, there was a certificate for 4,000 bags.

Q. And how much a bag were you paying for the certificates?

A. Well, let's see. At five hundred—at $2,500.00, that would be $5.00 a bag.

Q. That is for the certificate, I take it, and not for the sugar?

A. Yes, sir. That was for the certificate. And for June 18th, I got it a little cheaper, sir.

Q. Am I correct in believing, Mr. Lubben, that that purchasing of sugar certificates was the subject of OPA inquiry about which you testified before the Kefauver Committee?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see the materiality.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

1251 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Another product that you paid cash to get in the raw material field was cocoa. Wasn't that right, sir?

A. Oh, on occasion, sir, I bought some cocoa, I believe. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And you have got a man on there whose name is Brogan, who is in Chicago, and you bought cocoa from him for cash, didn't you?

A. That is what it says.

Q. There is a man on there whose name is Ed Urban. He is from Chicago and you bought from him for cash raw materials?

A. I don't see where it says Ed Urban. I don't want to just jump to conclusions.

Q. Is that the same Ed Urban you say endorsed checks that went to Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir. They did go to Shotwell.

Q. Do you find Mr. Urban's name there in your handwriting?

A. So far, I haven't. Oh, yes, sir, I see on June 20th Ed Urban's name, here (Indicating).

Q. Thank you. Is it also true you were most extensively engaged in the use of cash in the indict-1252 ment years of 1945 and 1946 for the purchase of corn? Isn't that true?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I don't see that that has any materiality to the issues here.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I forget the question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir, that is true.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you answers these questions by Rudolph Halley at page 1108 and give these answers:

"Mr. Halley: You sold it at the ceiling price of corn syrup and got an invoice for that?

"Mr. Lubben: It could have been sold as a blend and gotten the cash price and the invoice price put together. You could have put it together and sold it as a blend of syrup and you would have been perfectly all right and legal in doing it.

1253 "Mr. Halley: But you wouldn't have gotten the large sums of cash that you could put in the cash box, isn't that right?

"Mr. Lubben: The cash that you had to have, you had in turn to pay out to the people that got you the corn."

Did Mr. Halley ask you that and did you say that?

A. Yes, sir, he did, and that is my answer.

By Mr. Kirby: Can we have those corn box sheets? I guess I have them here.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The government gave us some copies of corn box sheets and may I inquire of you, sir, whether your transactions in corn would run as much in one month as $307,169.97 cash?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I believe I am right in stating that that is not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I am asking this witness whether he knows if he handled that much in cash in the corn market.

By the Court: He may answer.

1254 By the Witness:

A. I don't recall, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Any month in which you handled $182,334.00 in cash?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any month in which you handled $272,768.18 in cash?

A. No, but those records, sir, were kept at my request.

Q. Well, the problem we have is whether you handled that much cash in the corn market in some of those months, Mr. Lubben.

A. Who? I personally?

Q. Well, your company, sir.

A. The company?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, the company handled it, sir.

1255 Q. Now, do you know a fellow by the name of Red Bowman from Minneapolis?

A. I know him, sir.

Q. Do you know a fellow by the name of Major Harris?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay, and specifically in October of 1945, cash to Red Bowman of Minneapolis in the amount of $79,000.00 or thereabouts?

A. Well, sir—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to individual transactions unless they have some bearing.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, if it is on those records, it was paid to him.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. May I inquire if you ever paid to Major Harris, Lieutenant Harris, or whatever it was—I may be in error about his rank—$53,000.00 in cash on that same day?

A. I personally?

Q. Was it paid by you personally?

1256 A. No, not by me personally.

Q. Was it paid for these cash corn transactions?

A. Well, if he was paid that much money, it would appear on those records which I requested be kept. Who paid it or how it was paid or if it was paid in cash, I don't know who paid it.

Q. But if it says that Red Bowman got $59,000.00 and Harris got $53,000.00, they did get it, is that your position?

A. Well, sir, if it is on the books, it is true.

Q. It is precisely as to the test of the books that we make the inquiry.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. Now, did you have some fellows out buying corn and sending it to Shotwell?

By the Court: How was that again?

By Mr. Kirby: I asked if he had some fellows out buying corn and sending it to the credit, I should say, at the refineries of Shotwell.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Can you tell me the names of the persons who 1257 were working for the partnership in the securing of corn in either 1945 or 1946 in addition to Bowman and Harris?

A. Well, sir, they weren't working for the partnership. They were just people that you paid them money to get the corn released. They weren't working for us. They were just people that paid them the money.

Q. Well, were you engaged in paying other persons that you can name to secure corn for you for cash?

A. No, sir. At the moment, I can't, sir.

Q. May I ask you, sir, whether one of the companies to which you sent corn was the Hubbinger Refinery of Keokuk, Iowa?

A. Oh, yes, sir, certainly it was.

Q. May I ask whether you supplied to the Hubbinger Refinery in Keokuk, Iowa, a total, to March 11, 1946, of 136,873 bushels of corn?

A. Yes, sir, and that ended in a lawsuit.

Q. And am I correct in believing that with your agreement with Hubbinger, that would have entitled you to get roughly two million pounds of corn syrup at ceiling price?

A. I don't recall the number of pounds, sir. The 1258 total number of pounds I don't recall, but I know very well I had to sue Hubbinger later on to get some money back from him because they didn't go through the deal. They went through partly and then tried to put a halo on their head.

Q. We wouldn't want anybody to do that now.

A. I realize that.

Q. At least they were still shipping you corn syrup in 1946 and the early part of 1947, weren't they?

A. I don't recall in 1947, sir, and I only recall four cars in 1946, sir.

1259 Q. Do you remember they shipped you a car on August 8, 1946, of 95,080 pounds of corn syrup? Do you remember that?

A. That is an ordinary tank car, sir.

Q. Do you recall you got it from them?

A. I had to go up there, sir, because that was one of the—

Q. Did you get it from them?

A. Well, do you have a record that says I got it? I am sitting here, and—

Q. I am under the impression this record is reliable. I would like to have your confirmation.

A. Sir, I am sitting here and trying to remember eight years later whether on August 25th I received a car of corn syrup.

Q. Well, in the fall of 1946, then?

A. Let me see the record and I will tell you.

Q. Independently of the record, could you tell me?

A. I said, sir, I believe in 1946 we received about four cars of corn syrup from the Hubbinger Company.

Q. Did you receive any in 1947?

1260 A. I don't recall, sir.

By the Court: What was it that was in 1947?

By Mr. Kirby: It is quite an interesting question, Judge.

By the Witness: I think I had to pay $8,000 a carload, or something like that. I had to pay a lot of money out for those four cars.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Excuse me.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I want to call to the Court's attention so that you may appreciate I am not being light about it, but there is a question as to whether in the fall of 1946—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: (Continuing) —this man paid a premium.

By the Court: I let you go into these transactions. I don't think we will go into the delivery of corn made in 1947.

By Mr. Kirby: May I ask a further question on that?

1261 By the Court: No. We are going to adjourn now.

By Mr. Kirby: This will only take me a second.

By the Court: We will adjourn now. We will be in recess now, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, until ten o'clock Monday morning.

I trust you will bear in mind the admonition I have heretofore given you regarding the fact that you shouldn't talk with anybody about this case, or permit anyone to talk to you about it. In the event anyone should talk to you about it, you should tell that you are a juror in case, and are not permitted to talk about it. If anyone persists in talking to you about it, I want you to refer the matter to the Court.

I trust you will all have a pleasant week end.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause until Monday, September 21, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

Chicago, Illinois
Monday, September 21, 1953
10:00 o'clock a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby,

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the jury:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America versus Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

By the Court: I may say to the jury that I
1263 regret to report that Mr. Schmitt, one of the alternate jurors, is ill, and unable to report today. But we will proceed with the twelve jurors and the one alternate.

You may proceed.

DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Continued) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall testifying with respect to a check to cash in the amount of $20,000, which is Government Exhibit 55, and which I now hand you?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. And in connection with that check, did you also refer to Exhibit 55-A, and call the attention of the Court and jury to the shipment of Cardinals which is at the top of that memorandum?

A. What do you mean, call the attention to the shipment of Cardinals, sir?

Q. Well, are the two connected in any way, the check, 55, and the exhibit, 55-A, with reference to the ship-
1264 ment of Cardinals?

A. Well, 55 is the check, and 55-A, is a recap sheet, sir, showing Cardinal chocolates, spice buttons, gum drops, and special citrus drops, for a total premium of $24,111.00 and advance of $20,000, and balance due $4,111, and another shipment dated June 28 of spice buttons, of $14,130—14130 pounds, came to $1,413.

Q. And the $20,000, that Exhibit 55, was an advance?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall testifying at page 569 in these proceedings, with respect to this $20,000 advance and saying:

"All right. This time, sir, Mr. Huebner called me on the telephone, and he told me, 'Dave, I can get you some Cardinal chocolates.'

"Now, I don't have my records, sir, but I believe this was one of the first shipments of Cardinal chocolates which was a very good item to get to sell, and he told me if I could get him a substantial payment, a big amount of money as an advance, that I could 1265 get a lot of candy, and I asked him how much, and he said, '$20,000', and I drew the check and got it, and he got the money."

Do you remember answering in that fashion in these proceedings?

A. I don't know if it has anything to do with this exhibit, sir.

1266 Q. Excuse me, sir. Do you remember answering in that fashion in these proceedings?

A. Yes, sir; but I don't recall—

By the Court: Just answer the question, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. I answered that way sir. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will back up then and read a little more, Mr. Lubben, at page 567—I will go back to 566:

"Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibit 55 and ask you if that is the $20,000.00 advance payment?

"A. I would like to correct my last answer. It was the amount—it was the advance I gave to Mr. Huebner.

"Q. All right.—"

This, incidentally, is the questioning by Mr. Lockley.

"Is that the check which you have in your hand, a $20,000.00 one?

"A. Yes, sir; it was.

"Q. Who endorsed the check?

"A. Freda Seider.

1267 "Q. Did she give the money to you?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What did you do with it?

"A. Paid it to Mr. Huebner.

"Q. Do you know where?

"A. I don't remember correctly whether it was in New York or Chicago, sir.

"Q. It was one or the other?

"A. Yes, sir. If it was in New York, he received the money May 25th. If it was in Chicago, it was a day or two later.

"Q. Do you have any specific knowledge of that particular transaction at the moment?

"A. I think, if I recall, sir, to the best of my ability, it was one of the first advances that I had given Shotwell. Mr. Huebner called me on the phone—

"Q. When?

"A. Oh, probably that recap sheet would tell me.

"Q. Is that Exhibit 55-B? 55-A?

"A. Well, sir, the first shipment of Cardinal chocolates on this for $32,400.00 was on May 25th, and 1268 this check was drawn on May 25th and I remember a number of times, but specificallly this one, I remember."

Then is the answer which I read to you before, and I will read it to you again:

"All right. This time, sir, Mr. Huebner called me on the telephone and he told me, 'Dave, I can get you some Cardinal chocolates.'

"Now, I don't have my records, sir, but I believe this was one of the first shipments of Cardinal chocolates, which was a very good item to get to sell, and he told me if I could get him a substantial payment, a big amount of money as an advance, that I could get a lot of candy and I asked him how much, and he said, '$20,000.00,' and I drew the check and got it and he got the money."

Now, did you make those answers to those questions on your direct examination?

A. I did, sir.

1269 Q. Would you be kind enough, Mr. Lubben, to tell me whether or not it is true that before what you say was this payment in order to induce the shipment of Cardinal chocolates, a good item to get to sell, isn't that true, Mr. Lubben, that in that period prior to that you had already had more than 60 tons of Cardinal chocolates from the Shotwell Company to sell; isn't that true?

A. I don't know that that is true.

Q. Well, would you be courteous enough to look at an invoice for 5400 gross weight pounds of Cardinal chocolates shipped to you on April 5th, 1945, and gross weight of 20,282 pounds of chocolates and citrus drops—4728 being the chocolates—on April 6th, 1945, 1824—

By the Court: You can ask him a question about it, if that isn't true, but I don't think you should just read it into the record. That is a matter we brought up the other day. We had some little misunderstanding about it. I think you have a right to ask him whether that is correct, and whether or not that doesn't properly reflect what took place.

1270 By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let me ask you with respect to the invoices I have already handed you, don't those correctly represent shipments of chocolates to you, sir?

A. Yes, sir; but not both of them. One was called Kraft, and I think that was their own—the name of their own box. But, however, sir, I don't believe—

Q. Excuse me. The question is—the question that was put to you was whether those shipments were made to you; and were they, sir?

A. But you asked me—

Q. Excuse me.

By the Court: Just answer the question.

By the Witness:

A. I never received 60 tons of chocolates during this period.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you now recall that on April 7th, 1945, you received another shipment of 1824 pounds of Cardinal chocolates?

A. Well, sir, if you add them all up I don't think 1271 you are going to get 120,000 pounds. And you said 60 tons.

Q. I will tell you what let's do. I may be mistaken. I will give you an adding machine tape, and these invoices, and you just run down that tape and see whether they total 120,744 pounds. And wherever mistakes exist we will agree with you.

1272 A. Yes, sir. It appears to be correct.

Q. And is the total 120,744 pounds?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All shipped prior to the fifth of May—

A. This was a sole—

Q. —1945, is that true?

A. During the sole proprietorship, yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: 1946?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, you testified that there was a man with the Warfield Chocolate Company that received $10,000.00 in connection with the Haberkorn purchase. Do you recall that?

A. I do, sir.

Q. What was his name?

A. Paul Hershey.

Q. And what was the quantity of chocolate being secured, do you recall?

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Having in mind you said you checked into the chocolate candy of Haberkorn, what was it, do you remember?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

1273 There is no materiality to what the chocolate candy of the Haberkorn Candy Company was and counsel has yet to connect it up. The Haberkorn candy deal has yet to be connected up with any of the issues on trial here.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I don't recall what the quantity was, sir, at the moment. I remember being with Mr. Urban when Mr.— when Mr. Kupfer of Walgreen told us the number of pounds of chocolate that was in the quota and the number of pounds of sugar.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But you don't recall the amount?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you know a chocolate refining company called the United Chocolate Refiners?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Are they located in Massachusetts?

A. Yes, sir, they are.

Q. And is a man by the name of Horton president of the company?

A. I wouldn't know that, sir.

Q. Do you know Mr. Horton?

A. I believe I met a Mr. Horton when I met somebody else from that company, sir.

Q. And the man you met other than Horton, his name is August Nelson?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Nelson.

Q. Was August Nelson the sales manager of that company in 1945?

A. Well, I wouldn't know that, sir.

Q. Do you know whether August Nelson was connected in any way with the United Chocolate Refiners in the early part of 1945?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to this line of questioning. It is immaterial. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I suppose it is preliminary. I am not advised of what the materiality may be, but I assume the question is preliminary to something counsel expects to connect up.

By the Witness:

A. I believe he was some official. Whether he was an official—whether he was a sales manager or assistant sales manager or what office he had, I don't know, but I know he worked there.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did he have any authority or control over the persons to whom chocolate might be shipped by that company in early 1945?

A. Well, sir, whether he had the absolute control, I don't know, but he was an official of the company, whether it was his final say or whether it was somebody else's. I wouldn't know that, sir.

Q. He had some part, at least, in the administration of their chocolate shipment policy, is that generally true?

A. Yes, sir, that is true.

Q. Did you so advise Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner, that is to say that Mr. Nelson at the United Chocolate Refinery might have some influence in getting, possibly getting chocolate shipped to Shotwell Manufacturing Company in early 1945?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I still fail to see the materiality.

By the Court: Well, I think it is preliminary and I must give counsel a certain latitude in asking questions that may lead to something material.

1276 By the Witness:

A. It is very possible I did, sir.

By Mr. Kurby:

Q. Did you, as a matter of fact, meet with Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner in Boston in early 1945 so that you might introduce them to Mr. August Nelson of the United Chocolate Refiners?

A. I believe I did, sir.

1277 Q. As a result of that meeting you know it to be a fact, sir, don't you, that United Chocolate Refiners shipped two carloads of chocolate to Shotwell in April, or in March and April of 1945?

A. I don't know that, sir. I know that I talked to Mr. Nelson and Mr. Cain was present. I don't recall Mr. Huebner, but if you say he was there, I will go along with that.

Q. Well, excuse me now. We want to be courteous to one another, but we don't want to lump each other's testimony together. You say what you remember, and that is what you have to give the jury. You shouldn't mix it up with me, sir.

A. I cannot specifically remember Mr. Huebner being there, but I can remember Mr. Cain being there.

Q. Yes, with you when you talked to Nelson?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, then, don't you know, as your memory goes back to the event now, that the United Chocolate Refiners had never shipped chocolate to Shotwell Manufacturing Company? Do you remember that?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, unless he has 1278 some knowledge. It is hearsay. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. If I recall the conversation—do you want to hear the conversation?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. There is a pending question, and I would be so happy if you would answer it.

Miss Reporter, will you please read the question to the witness?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. I don't know whether they had never, or had, or anything else.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know that in March of 1945, the United Chocolate Refiners did ship a carload, 55,000 pounds roughly, of chocolate to Shotwell, and then again in the two weeks later, shipped another carload totaling 55,000 pounds directly? Do you know that, Mr. Lubben?

1279 A. No, sir, I don't know that.

Q. Now immediately after that shipment from the United Chocolate Refiners, Mr. Lubben, I notice that the shipment of chocolate candy that I have just questioned you about, that 60 tons started. Do you connect the two events, your interceding to get chocolate, and their shipping you chocolate candy, or is there no connection?

A. Well, I can't see any connection as to the chocolate. All I can see on the face of those invoices there, you get 18 3/4 premium. That is the only connection I see.

Q. Will you please listen to the question?

By Mr. Kirby: Would the reporter read the question again?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will the Court be good enough to strike the answer as not responsive?

By the Court: Yes, it is not responsive. Read the question.

(Whereupon the question was reread as above recorded.)

1280 By the Witness:

A. Sir, there is no connection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Thank you. Do you recall testifying, to stick to the question of chocolates for the minute, although this is not too important a matter, this particular inquiry, I admit—you remember you testified this $319.50 check which is Government Exhibit 124 was issued in November of 1946, again as a premium on chocolates? Do you remember that?

A. I don't recall saying this specific check was a premium on chocolates, sir.

Q. Well, do you deny that it was?

A. Well, sir, if you have some other recap sheets, sir, it tells where the money went for.

1281 Q. Well, by recap sheet, do you mean this cash authorization which is Government's Exhibit 142-A?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. May I have the check?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, is that the type of an authorization slip that would be issued, as I understand it, concurrently with the issuance of the check to cash?

A. What do you mean by concurrently, sir?

Q. Well, was it issued concurrently?

A. I asked you, what do you mean by concurrently, sir?

Q. At about the same time.

A. Thank you. Yes, sir, I would say it was about the same time.

Q. And this check in the amount of $319.50 and that check-authorization which is Exhibit 142-A are connected together?

A. Well, it says "$319.50" and it says "Cash for Shotwell" and I can't read this writing here (Indicating). It says—I think it says, "We had already paid $2,004.00 and there was a $319.50 balance." And it says, "P77-13" I think that is some kind of a bookkeeping number.

1282 Q. When does it show you paid the $319.50 balance.

A. About 11-23, sir.

Q. That is November 23, 1946?

A. It says "Paid 11/7/46, $2,004.00, and 11/23/46, $319.50."

Q. And does it give the check number?

A. I can't read it very well, sir.

Q. Now, this check that you identified in evidence is dated November 8th, 1946, Mr. Lubben, could you, I suppose, give us a ready explanation for why they don't jibe?

A. What do you mean, why they don't jibe, sir?

Q. The cash authorization slip says you paid it on the 23rd. You are producing a check showing you paid it on the 8th.

A. Well, sir, the figures down here are not in my handwriting, sir. They appear to be in the handwriting of Miss Feldman.

Q. Thank you.

A. If I cashed the check, they got the money, sir.

Q. That is the net of it. When we have to fall away from the documents, we fall back on your statement that they got the money.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

1283 By the Court: Well, you are arguing with the witness now.

By Mr. Kirby: I think that is true.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall that you also testified that in the fall of 1946, in the late fall of 1946 you paid an overage on some Cardinal chocolates by cash—there is no check here to look at. Do you remember that?

A. Well, sir, I paid the Shotwell—

Q. Excuse me, now. I am asking about a particular payment.

By the Court: Can you direct his attention more specifically to the matter which you have in mind?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it was never specifically—

By the Court: Isn't there some testimony about it, perhaps?

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I don't have the reference to the testimony on that $9,882.00. Do you have that, Jack?

By the Court: Well, if he can remember, good and 1284 well. I was under the impression, apparently, that he didn't have it in mind and I thought you could make it more specific.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, for some reason which is surprising to me, I don't have the notation here but I did intend to read the witness his words each time. The invoice was

No. C213233. You might get the exhibit number off of that.

By the Court: Well, perhaps you can proceed with something else.

1285 By Mr. Kirby: I will see if he has any memory of it at all. I am embarrassed that I didn't make a note on that. I read it and then I forgot to write the page number down.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But, having in mind it was your testimony, Mr. Lubben, do you remember testifying that there was a payment which you said you made in cash in the amount of $9,882.00 in connection with the shipment in November of 1946 of Cardinal chocolates? Do you remember that, sir?

A. Sir, I had so many payments to Shotwell, sir, I can't just come out without you giving me anything to substantiate what you are talking about, sir.

I would like to have you refresh my memory with some of the evidence that has been introduced, sir.

Q. All right. Now let me go ahead, though, for a minute, and ask you whether it is true that at this time, that is to say in November of 1946 when you say you were paying an overage on a chocolate product to Shotwell, is it not true that in September and October of 1946

1286 you in your business, had purchased 581 tons of chocolate and cocoa beans and you had that quantity at the time you say you were paying an overage to Shotwell to get chocolate? Now, isn't that true about that?

A. Now, sir—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. Counsel is continuously assuming in his questions facts which are not in evidence.

By the Court: Yes, I think the objection is well taken.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Can you tell me, Mr. Lubben, how much chocolate and cocoa bean you had purchased from outside sources in September and October of 1946?

A. Whatever is on the books of my company, sir, because—

Q. Does 581 tons sound right?

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, but I purchased box chocolates from Shotwell and not chocolate—just bulk bar chocolate. I purchased a finished product from them, sir, box chocolates, and 1287 what is more, sir that—

Q. Excuse me, now.

By Mr. Kirby: Will the Court be good enough to instruct the witness he has answered the question?

By the Witness: Pardon me. He is trying to confuse the people with the chocolate, sir. It is—

By Mr. Kirby: Would the Court be good enough to instruct the witness the answer is not responsive.

By the Court: It may be stricken as not responsive.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall this testimony that you gave at page 588 with respect to an alleged payment of $30,000.00 cash:

"Q. Do you know where you got the $30,000.00?

"A. Yes, sir, I do.

"Q. Where?

"A. I got it out of the box in our office that was called the corn box. This was during the partnership. I remember this instance specifically, sir, be-1288 cause we were selling corn syrup for an invoice.

Do you recall being asked those questions and giving those answers?

A. I do, sir.

Q. Would you be good enough to look at these sheets which purport to be summaries of the corn box or some of the transactions of the corn box and tell me whether you can find any $30,000.00 taken out of these by you to pay Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me, Mr. Kirby. Are those in evidence, and if so, what exhibit number are they?
1289 By Mr. Kirby: Exhibit 15-A, John, Exhibit 15-B, 15-C, 15-D, 15-E, 15-F, G, H, I, and J.

By Mr. Lockley: They are not in evidence.

By the Court: You are referring to it as if it is in evidence. I am sure you can ask some questions about it that will go to the foundation. The document is not in evidence, and you shouldn't refer to it as if it is.

If you want to lay further foundation, you have that right.

By Mr. Kirby: I am in error. I thought this particular document was admitted. I guess I am mistaken.

By the Court: Apparently so.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

1290 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you some sheets which have been marked for identification with the numbers in the 15 series that I have already given and I will ask you whether you have ever seen those sheets before?

A. Yes, sir; I believe I did, sir. In fact, I know I did. I gave these sheets—it is the best of my recollection—to the government.

Q. Now, then, I am not asking you to read from them, but could you point to me some place on them where this thirty thousand payment out of the corn box is shown?

A. I wouldn't know where to look for it, sir, where to find—where to look for that, what kind of sheets these purport to be.

Q. All right. Thank you.

A. But I remember the incident.

By the Court: You have answered the question.

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that the remark about remembering the incident be stricken.

By the Court: Well, he just said, "I remember." I suppose there is no particular purpose in striking it 1291 out.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I would like to ask you some questions now about your testimony in connection with the time when you were getting ready to leave the partnership, and ask you whether you recall these questions and these answers at 598:

"Q. And what was the conversation at that time?

"A. I told Mr. Huebner that we owed him fourteen thousand—by me, I mean the partnership, the Eatsum Food partnership—owed him $41,682.10, and that was overages that we owed him, and I told him I was getting ready to leave the partnership, and I could no longer have any access to the cash box to take money out to pay them. I also told him I was forbidden to draw any checks to cash for Shotwell, or for anybody else, for that matter, and that I had to pay these people, and I said these—"

Do you recall that that question was asked and that you made that answer?

1292 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall also saying this, at page 600:

"A. Yes, sir. To m[illegible]ledge, Byron Cain was there."

That was changed later on, but we will stick to that.

"And I explained that I was getting ready to leave the partnership, and I had to pay this bill, and I had no way of paying the money, and it was the only way I could pay the money, and so forth."

Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

1293 Q. Now, then, the next day when you testified you talked about making some payments in advance to Shotwell; do you recall that?

A. I made a number of advance payments, sir.

Q. Speaking specifically now of an invoice on Cardinal chocolates, which is Exhibit 147, do you recall being asked about when you paid for that and saying, at 799:

"Q. And when?

"A. Almost about the same time as I paid for the other merchandise. I would say it was early in March. I mean, somewhere right in that neighborhood.

"Q. How did you pay it?

"A. In cash, sir."

Do you remember that statement?

A. Well, I would like to refresh—if it is in the book, I no doubt said it. But let we see some papers, or something, sir, some of the Government exhibits and we will be glad to answer specifically for you.

Q. Thank you. Early in March—when did the partnership start?

A. Start?

1294 Q. Yes.

A. The partnership started?

Q. Yes, when.

A. In June of 1945.

Q. And you have said—as I read to you a little earlier—that in February you told Huebner that you couldn't get at the cash box in the partnership.

A. That was the February following the June, 1946.

Q. That you didn't have that money?

A. I didn't say I didn't have the money.

1295 Q. Couldn't get at it?

A. I just said, sir, that was the way—the business—the best way to pay it.

Q. Well, what I am wondering about is—am I mistaken about the time when this cash was supposedly paid for these Cardinal chocolates; wasn't that about the time you were leaving the partnership?

A. What Cardinal chocolates?

Q. That shipment you are talking about at 799, which was Exhibit 147?

A. Sir, I don't know anything about exhibit numbers. I can't say Exhibit 799. Let me see the invoice.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right. You should look at it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. 147 is a bill of lading on March 5, 1946. And is that about when you were getting ready to leave the partnership?

A. Yes, sir; it is.

Q. And was it at about the time you were going to leave the partnership that you said you couldn't get the cash?

A. Yes, sir; I believe it was the latter part of 1296 February, some time in February there, sir.

Q. And then it was at that time that you testified, at page 799, you did get the cash, and paid it to Huebner for this merchandise that you have in your hand, is that right?

A. He got paid for it, sir. Yes, sir. I believe at this time there was something—we also—he sold me about ninety thousand pounds of these spice buttons, a bulk candy item, in addition to this, which went out previously, I believe, before the chocolate went out.

Q. And you paid nineteen thousand for that, I guess?

A. It was nineteen thousand or nineteen thousand some figures. But he got paid for it.

Q. That was about the time you were leaving the partnership, too, wasn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And couldn't get at the cash?

A. Well, sir, I told you where I got the money for the nineteen thousand. It is in the record. Why don't you read it, sir?

Q. The nineteen thousand you said you borrowed, and you couldn't remember—at least at that time—or did you tell from whom you borrowed it?

1297 A. I don't think I said I didn't remember. I think you will find I said that money was borrowed from Mr. Urban.

Q. Eddie Urban?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the fellow whose name is endorsed on some of this money that went to Shotwell?

A. I said the money went to Shotwell. It did go, and that man admitted it last December, Mr. Byron Cain admitted he got all the money.

By the Court: You just answer the question.

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that that may be stricken and the jury instructed to disregard it.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: I wouldn't quite know how to advise a jury, if I were a judge, about outbursts like that on the part of a witness, but I can't help but feel it has an effect which I, as counsel, must ask the Court to be quite rigorous with this witness and make it quite plain to the jury that those types of things are not evidence, and that they

1298 must not be—

By the Court: The jury will understand that when I strike testimony the jury are to disregard it.

By the Witness: I am sorry, sir.

By the Court: The answer was not responsive to any question and the jury will erase from their minds any inferences or any deductions from the statement just made by the witness.

By Mr. Kirby: And not to press the point unduly, but isn't it a fact that it is improper for a witness to so make voluntary statements?

By the Witness: I apologize to you.

By the Court: Yes, it was improper for Mr. Lubben to make the statement and the jury will disregard it. And you just answer the questions, Mr. Lubben.

1299 By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: And nothing more when you are being examined by counsel.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, the point at which we were last calmly engaged was you said that you got nineteen thousand from this Eddie Urban. And I asked you if that is the Eddie Urban, the same Eddie Urban whose name is on some of these cash checks that we have had in evidence here. And is it the same one?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben, we have had a good deal of testimony from you about how you kept a record of these transactions. And, of course, we won't go over every single one of them, but certain of them I do want to ask you about because they are, shall I say, a little more plain than others. And I want to read this part of your transcript at page 542 and 543.

Mr. Lockely had handed you Government's Exhibit 40-D, which is a check in the amount of $22,124.13, and as you were sitting in the jury box with that in your hand Mr. Lockley asked you these questions:

1300 "And what did you do with it after you signed it?

"A. After I signed it Miss Freda Seider took it to the bank and cashed it and brought the cash back.

"Q. What did you do with the cash?

"A. I gave it to Mr. Huebner.

"Q. Now, I call you attention to the fact that those checks both bear date of May 3, 1946. Do you have any recollection as to why two checks were drawn at that time?"

The second check referred to being Government's Exhibit 43, dated May 3rd, in the amount of $2,403.00. And you answered:

"Yes, sir. My recollection is that we had already prepared the recap which showed the $22,124.13 and that another shipment came along and I went ahead and paid the overcharge on that, as long as I was going to pay the other one and I got even Stephen, I got evened up."

Do you remember being asked those questions and giving those answers?

A. Well, sir, that was the—that is the best of my 1301 recollection, sir. And I believe that is what happened.

Q. Now, to take your answer in its two parts, "we had already prepared the recap which showed the $22,-124.13 • • •"

Now, do you have a recap in the amount of $22,124.13?

A. I don't have it in my hand, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you know the number of one, counsel, for the Government? I want to know if there is such a recap for $22,124.13.

By Mr. Lockley: It is not in evidence, if there is one. I don't know if there is.

By Mr. Kirby: I will accept Mr. Lockley's statement that it is not in evidence.

Wasn't that your statement?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Is there any in existence?

By Mr. Lockley: At least I have no recollection of it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, let me ask you, Mr. Lubben—we will take Mr. Lockley's statement that he has none—do you
1302 have any knowledge, independently of Mr. Lockley or the Government group here, of any such recap as you testified to, in the amount of $22,124.13?

A. Well, sir, if it is not a recap it is a cash authorization showing what the money was for, sir.

Q. Well, a recap and a cash authorization are two different things, aren't they?

A. They pertain very much to the same thing, sir.

Q. But no recap, that you know of, is that true?

A. I don't remember, sir, at the moment.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley: It is not in evidence yet.

1303 By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lockley has handed me 40-E, which is a yellow sheet which,—has it been even identified?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: —not heretofore produce or identified.

By Mr. Lockley: Correct.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, of course, with that type of material I must wait at least until they get somebody to identify it.

By Mr. Lockley: You asked for it, and I am trying to accommodate you.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, and then the second part of your answer is, "another shipment came along and I went ahead and paid the overcharge on that, as long as I was going to pay the other one, and I got even Steven, I got evened up."

Now, I don't suppose we have any particular shipment that you can identify for us that that relates to?

A. Well, sir, this is what happened, and that is the very best of my recollection.

1304 Q. Well, do you remember what the shipment was at all, Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, it would be candy. But what kind, I couldn't tell you.

Q. Now, does the Government have any next shipment that came along about May 3rd, upon which an overage would total the total of that exhibit—$2403?

A. Yes, sir; $2,403.00.

By Mr. Kirby: $2,403.00.

By Mr. Lockley: If counsel wants me to testify, I am glad to. That is the amount on two invoices, No. C72933, and C81505, which are Exhibits 41-A and 42-A, original invoices which are not yet in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me see those, will you?

By Mr. Lockley: Here is 41-A and 42-A.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Lockley has handed me two not yet identified—

By Mr. Lockley: Correct. I have no objection if you want to introduce them.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, they aren't in evidence at 1305 this time, and it is not an appropriate time, as I conceive it, for me to introduce them.

1306 By the Court: Then you shouldn't ask for them, Counsel.

By Mr. Kirby: I want to identify these matters in the record. It is not pointless.

By the Court: They aren't in evidence yet.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to identify what they have tendered me.

By the Court: That's all right.

By Mr. Kirby: The first is invoice C—

By the Court: You mean to identify it for what, to have the witness identify it?

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By the Court: It isn't in evidence yet. If you want to lay a foundation by this witness, you may. Otherwise there is no purpose in reading it into the record.

By Mr. Kirby: Just the numbers of the invoice.

By the Court: Oh, all right.

By Mr. Kirby: The first one is numbered—

By the Court: Can't you give the exhibit number?

1307 By Mr. Kirby: -C72993 and the second one is C81505, being respectively Exhibits 41-A and 42-A. The number C81505 bears an added number of 72994A. Have I covered those?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. We have no objection if you want to introduce them in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, there was a discussion during the course of your testimony about some unbilled shipments. Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And one of them was a shipment which is identified as Exhibit 154. Do you remember that?

By Mr. Kirby: Have you got the page number at which there was reference to that?

This is Exhibit 154. Do you have the testimony page of that?

By Mr. O'Brien: Around 845.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I indeed want three page references to this, and it will take us a couple of 1308 minutes to get it, and it may be an appropriate time to take our morning recess, because I do need three references and it will take us a couple of minutes to get them.

Or I will go right ahead, if you will bear with me.

1309 By the Court: I would prefer to let you go forward with something else. Let's go on for about fifteen minutes yet.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I will withdraw the question with respect to the unbilled shipments, and during the recess I will find those page references because, indeed, it is much more courteous to call the witness' attention to his testimony before I interrogate him about it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, I want to talk to you about the corn syrup deal that you testified to, with Shotwell.

Do you remember some testimony about that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was in September and October of 1946, is that right?

A. If I remember correctly, sir, it was around September, October, 1946.

Q. Do you recall testifying to that same effect at page 776 of the record, as follows:

"Question: Now, did you have a conversation
1310 with any of the defendants prior to entering into this transaction of corn syrup?

"Answer: Yes, sir, Mr. Huebner.

"Question: Do you know when that was?

"Answer: I believe it was around September or October, sir, of 1946.

"Question: And was that in person, by telephone, or how?

"Answer: No, sir, it was on one of my trips to Chicago, I believe.

"Question: What was said at that time?

"Answer: He said he had a lot of corn syrup on hand."

Do you recall being asked those questions and making those answers?

A. Yes, sir.

1311 Q. Now, these first three checks, 157-A, 157-B and 157-C, those are the ones which I think you testified went directly on the invoice.

By Mr. Kirby: Isn't that right, Mr. Lockley? So we don't need to inquire about those.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But am I correct in believing that you identified a check as 158 and a check as 158-A as having been cashed by you?

A. Yes, sir; they were—this is written by me, sir, and whether I specifically went to the bank and got the money, I don't remember, but I am very sure I did, sir, on this one here.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. This check for $25,929.00, sir—yes, sir, I am sure I went to the bank and got that money.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. How about that other check?

A. October 12th. Yes, sir. Yes, sir; I was at the bank when this was cashed.

Q. And you got that money?

A. Yes, sir.

1312 Q. Now, then, another check, 160, for $13,146.70; did you cash that check and get that money?

A. Yes, sir; the check was cashed and I got the money, sir.

Q. And that is the money, the total of those three checks, which you testified you gave to Stanley Graflund?

A. Well, sir, I remember on several occasions that I—

Q. Excuse me, sir. Are these the three checks that you have heretofore testified you cashed, went out there, and at Huebner's instructions gave the money to Stanley Graflund; is that what you testified about these checks?

A. I don't think you can find that, where I testified that, sir. I said when I paid out there with the corn syrup money I remember Mr. Huebner told me to take the money down to Stanley Graflund for the corn syrup and to keep my mouth shut about the candy and just give him the corn syrup money.

Q. And is this the money that we are talking about, this Exhibit 160, and this Exhibit 158 and this Exhibit 158-A?

A. I would say it was, sir.

1313 Q. Now, on your cross examinatioin by me at the conclusion of our last session here, do you recall these questions and these answers, at page 1257:

"Q. May I ask whether you supplied to the Hubbinger Refinery in Keokuk, Iowa, a total, to March 11, 1946, of 136,873 bushels of corn?

1314 "A. Yes, sir, and that ended in a lawsuit."

Then at page 1259, still asking about shipments that you received from Hubbinger of corn syrup, I asked you this question:

"Q. Independently of the record, could you tell me?

"A. I said, sir, I believe in 1946 we received about four cars of corn syrup from the Hubbinger Company.

"Q. Did you receive any in 1947?

"A. I don't recall, sir."

Now, you remember those questions being asked and those answers being given?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, in addition to the Hubbinger Company as a supplier of corn syrup, am I correct in believing that a supplier of corn syrup to you in the fall of 1946, at about the time this corn syrup was purchased from Shotwell, was Penick & Ford?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the grounds that he is assuming facts in the question which are not in evidence. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

1315 By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: Immaterial.

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I don't know whether it is the latter part of 1946, sir, but there was some time in 1946 I think General Confections did get some corn syrup from Penick & Ford. We got it from Penick & Ford—or Reserve Trading Company got it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will ask you whether in the months of August and September you were purchasing corn syrup from Penick & Ford for a price of four and two—or three-tenths cents a pound?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to counsel's continuously testifying during the course of his examination. There is nothing of that sort in evidence.

By the Court: Well, he is cross examining the witness.

By Mr. Lockley: He is assuming facts which are not in evidence.

By the Court: No, he is asking him a question whether or not he didn't do that. That is a perfectly fair question.

1316 A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know what the exact price was. Whatever it showed on their invoice.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes, sir, but your testimony with respect to Shotwell is that you paid Shotwell six cents on an invoice, and seven cents on an overage, or a total of 13 cents. Is that right?

A. That is true, and it is correct.

Q. And I will show you some invoices from—well, let me first ask you, Mr. Lubben, isn't it true that in August and September of 1946, you purchased from Penick and Ford alone for 4.295 cents a pound, 2,360,388 pounds of corn syrup. Now, isn't that true, or approximately true?

A. Whatever is reflected on the books of my company is correct. If that is the figure, it is correct.

Q. I will ask you to refresh your memory by looking at a series of invoices from Penick and Ford to you in August and September, and I have appended an adding machine tape thereto, and ask you now whether it isn't a fact that you got 2,360,388 pounds of corn syrup from them for a little over four cents in the two months prior 1317 to the time you said you paid Shotwell 13 cents? Isn't that true?

A. Sir, the inference—you say—I did pay Shotwell, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: We have got to have freedom of the Court to bring in these matters.

By the Court: Will you please answer the question?

By the Witness: This figure here on the top of these invoices—it says, "Corn barter deal"—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I am asking you about the figure, sir.

A. The figure, sir,—I am not going to check them all down. I assume it is correct.

Q. Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object to the material that the witness is holding in his hand at the present time. There has been no foundation laid for them and it is not in evidence. If there is some discrepancy—

By the Court: He is attempting to show it to him.
1318 It is perfectly proper for him to show the witness the document, and ask him if it isn't correct.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben in October of 1946, when you say you paid this money—

By the Court: Paid what money?

By Mr. Kirby: The 13 cents a pound for this corn syrup from Shotwell when he was buying corn syrup from these other people before—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Weren't you having financial trouble? Weren't you having trouble raising money at all?

A. In 1946, sir?

Q. Yes, the fall of 1946.

A. Sir, we didn't have any trouble with corn syrup.

Q. Well, I will ask you a question, or rather, I will read to you a part of your testimony from your direct examination, at page 756. You had volunteered that you wanted to correct some testimony and after some statement that you had made that you had given some 1319 thought to the matters, we got to this question and this answer:

"Question: Has anything transpired since you were on the stand yesterday that more nearly refreshes your recollection as to what the time of those meetings was?

"Answer: Yes, sir. To the best of my recollection, it was some time around September or October of 1946, and I believe—I remember, sir, that it was—there was a time when we were having a little difficulty getting up the payment, the cash payments in time, and that is the time, to the best of my recollection that I talked to Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan."

Do you remember being asked that question, and making that answer?

A. I do, sir.

By the Court: I think we will take our morning recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes, ladies and gentlemen of the jury.

(Whereupon a short recess was taken during which

1320 By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: You may proceed. I don't know where Mr. Calihan is.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, based upon Mr. Lubben's statement in the presence of the jury that these payments were admitted last December, or whatever the precise context is, we make a motion for a mistrial.

By Mr. McConnell: I join in that motion.

By the Court: I deny your motion.

Of course, if counsel have in mind that there is anything further that I should say to the jury with reference to that volunteered statement in addition to what I have done, I will be glad to do so.

My own thought was that if I emphasized it too much, it would be more detrimental than helpful. But, if counsel have in mind that there is anything in addition I should say with reference to that volunteered statement so that the jury will understand that it must not be—that it
1321 must be disregarded by them, I will be happy to do so.

By Mr. McConnell: May I say for the record that time the following proceedings were had in Chambers outside the presence and hearing of the jury, to-wit:—)

I think the statement is so prejudicial that there is nothing that can be said by the Court to remedy it. It is prejudicial, the whole length of it.

By Mr. O'Brien: For that reason, we make this motion for a mistrial.

By Mr. Lockley: I think with respect to the Government, it may have been an improper statement. I doubt that it was prejudicial in any way whatsoever, but if by way of explanation, if not perhaps in defense of Mr. Lubben, it should be borne in mind that he has been on the stand for four days and at least half of that time he has been under considerable amount of pressure under two very experienced cross examiners.

The outburst was not because of a desire on his part to do damage. It was just more of a reaction, I think, to the stress that he has been under than anything else.

By the Court: Be that as it may. May I say to 1322 counsel now, while you are here that I have reflected somewhat upon the statement that I made to Mr. O'Brien last Friday with reference to the scope of cross examination as to exhibits not in evidence, and I have been somewhat concerned over the week end that either I didn't understand Mr. O'Brien or I did not express myself too clearly, and of course, you have got to have, on cross examination, a right to cross examine on exhibits not in evidence for the purpose of laying grounds for impeachment, for the purpose of interrogating the witness to ascertain whether or not the statement contained in the piece of paper isn't true.

If I have left an impression, and I am afraid I did when I responded to you that that wasn't proper cross examination, I hasten to correct it. Just as took place this morning when Mr. Kirby assumed to read something from a piece of paper without asking the witness a question about it, that was improper, but he had a right to 1323 ask the witness whether or not the statement contained in the paper wasn't true. He can do that for the purpose of laying a foundation for impeachment or he can ask that question in so far as it can lay the foundation for its ultimate reception. He is not obliged to offer it at the time he is asking those questions. As I say, I reflected upon the statements I made here Friday noon and I was quite worried that I left the wrong impression and I now make this statement so that anything that I may have said to the contrary will be mollified.

By Mr. O'Brien: Off the record.

(Off the record.)

1324 By Mr. McConnell: If your Honor please, while we are here speaking on this, in my cross examination of Mr. Lubben, the government objected to a whole branch of the cross examination which was sustained on the ground that it was not material.

Before the witness leaves the stand, I want to say this: That there was a line of cross examination which was tendered to show or which does show by documents that the witness Lubben received moneys at the inception of this Eatsum business which was not reflected on the books and with which he purchased from Mr. Burry, the business which he later sold to the partnership.

Now, I was trying to examine the witness on the income tax and not with the idea of trying to show the income tax wasn't paid or that it was false, but I was trying to lay a foundation for admission of just what assets the man had at the inception of the matter and showing by later documents what assets he must have had to have paid

1325 George Burry $163,000.00 for the business, none of which could have been on the books because everything shown on there was what he received. The materiality of that is: Here is a witness, Judge, who is charged with large sums of cash and he is assigning it here and he is assigning a lot of it to the Shotwell people and the question ultimately to be resolved by this jury, it seems to me, is whether or not these three individuals got this money or whether Mr. Lubben got the money.

It seems to me that that whole line of cross examination was very relevant and very material to the question of whether Mr. Lubben did get it.

By Mr. Lockley: The question as to whether he got the money is a practical matter, if not a legal one.

In the second place I would like to point out, if your Honor please, the transactions which Mr. McConnell refers to occurred back in the early part of 1944, if I understand him correctly, because Mr. Lubben purchased 1326 the Eatsum Food Products Company from Burry in either 1943 or 1944, I am not sure. What he did back in those days has absolutely no bearing whatsoever on what his connection with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and their people was in 1946 and 1945.

Where Mr. Lubben got the money from to buy out the business has no bearing on what he subsequently did. He could have stolen the money. He could have inherited it. We don't know how he got it.

By the Court: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

1327 By the Court: If these were any exhibits you wanted to examine Mr. Lubben about and if my rulings were contrary to the statements I made this morning, of course I would permit the offer of such testimony.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to do that.

By the Court: We heard a lot of testimony on cross examination about the Haberkorn matter. I thought a lot of it was wholly irrelevant. Of course, I understand what you had in mind. You contended there were certain alleged blackmail threats made by Lubben when the Haberkorn Company ultimately was sold, but there is another matter. The question as to how much money he had there and in some of his early dealings are wholly irrelevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think the materiality—speaking not of the specific items, but generally, there is about a million and a half dollars of cash checks, that are involved in the three periods. That all represents cash taken out of those companies going to Lubben, which he says he spent in 1328 certain ways, including this part to Shotwell.

Our position is we never got the amount of cash he talked about.

What is relevant on that and material, is the question as to whether he had other moneys to deal with. If he laid off all of these moneys as he says and he had such and such income and none other and at the same time he was spending the kind of money which we intend to show he was spending, then it is pertinent on the question as to whether some of that money stayed in his hands or whether it went out as he says. That is all it has to do with, really.

By the Court: All right.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By Mr. Kirby: Sam, where is Exhibit 154? I had it out earlier and the witness looked at it. It was an invoice.

There it is. Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

1329 Q. Mr. Lubben, you hold in your hand document which has been marked Government's Exhibit 154. Isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you asked me to locate what you had said about it and I have it and I read it to you from page 827:

"Mr. Lubben, I offer you Government's Exhibit 154 and ask you to determine that document."

This is Mr. Lockley asking you these questions. And you say:

"A. Yes, sir. This is a uniform straight bill of lading. It is dated on August 9; 1946, at Chicago, Illinois. It is consigned to McDonald Candy Company, Medford, Oregon."

And you say it is box chocolates, and you say it originated at The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and then this question starts at page 828:

"Q. Did you get an invoice for it?

"A. No, sir, I didn't."

1330 Now, that is one of the so-called unbilled shipments, is it, sir?

A. Not so-called, sir. It is one of the unbilled shipments.

Q. By that you mean you received, as you earlier testified, no invoice in connection with that shipment at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. And by that you mean, do you, that you paid for that in cash in its entirety, and that you also paid an overage in cash, is that right?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Do you recall with respect to that shipment being asked these questions and making these answers:

"Q. And did you pay for that shipment?

"A. Yes, sir; I did.

"Q. How?

"A. In cash, sir.

"Q. You mean currency, is that it?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And to whom?

"A. Well, this shipment, sir, if I recall correctly, was paid not in one lump. I mean, we didn't have the 1331 money, and if —"

But, in any event, you testified it was all paid, is that right?

A. Yes, sir. If that is the testimony that pertains to the car, sir, and you are reading it. I don't know whether you are referring to this exhibit. I remember saying that, but whether you are tying my conversation to this exhibit, sir, I have no way of knowing."

1332 Q. Let us stop worrying for the minute about whether you can believe me and how about that shipment—did you pay for that shipment in cash, and I am only asking you.

A. Did I pay for this shipment in cash?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. If I recall correctly, sir, I paid part of it and employees of mine paid the rest of it.

Q. And you were not given a bill for that shipment by Shotwell?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. And you did not pay to Shotwell's bookkeeping department for that shipment, is that true?

A. What do you mean paid on an invoice?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't ever recall seeing an invoice on this shipment, sir.

Q. Or any part of it?

A. On any part of it?

Q. Or any part of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you take a look at these invoices to you—General Confections, that is, the accounting copy, the shipping ticket, and a memorandum of the shipment which 1333 I will ask the Reporter to mark Defendants' Exhibit 17-A, B and C.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 17-A, B and C for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, you have seen those invoices?

A. I haven't seen those, sir.

Q. I hand them up to you now.

Now that you see those, do you still persist in your answer that those chocolates were not, nor was any part of them, invoiced to your company?

A. Sir, we never saw an invoice from the Shotwell

Manufacturing Company for this—for this particular shipment and these papers here, sir, to my knowledge, sir, do not pertain to it.

These things appear to be records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company but we never received it.

Q. Look at the records which you say are the records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. I read a shipping number, No. A189561 and ask you whether that number appears on the document which you hold in your hand?

1334 A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Looking at the documents which you say represent the Shotwell invoices, does the shipment date appear to be August 9, 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And looking at the government's exhibit which you have in your hand, is the car number and the railroad over which it was shipped apparent?

A. The car number?

Q. Yes.

A. Why—yes, sir, it is.

Q. Do you recall in connection with that document, while you hold it in your hand, that you were asked this question and you made this response—this is at page 838:

"Sir, I know this came from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company because it says the route, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, and the Shotwell factory in Chicago is on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul tracks."

Do you recall making that response?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. And looking at the Shotwell papers, it looks

1335 like this went out over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad and is that the same thing it shows on that exhibit?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Looking at the Shotwell papers I see the car number is WFEX 67722?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does that number appear on that document?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Looking at the Shotwell papers, I see it is for a part or for less than the entire shipment but it is for 935 cases of Cardinal chocolates. Now, is Cardinal chocolate what is involved in the invoice which you hold, or the bill of lading which you hold in your hand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I show you the government's Exhibit 200 and ask you whether that is not the statement of your account on the books of Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Well, sir, I haven't—I don't believe I have seen this before or I wouldn't know whether it is my statement or not.

Q. All right. That is in evidence and I will ask
1336 you to take a look and see whether there is a charge on the 9th of August, 1946, against you or against your company of $8,377.60?

A. Where would I find all this, sir?

Q. I have turned to a page which in my opinion gives the August charges and I will repeat the question. Does it show a charge on the books against your company of $8,377.60?

A. Yes, sir, it does.

Q. Now, I believe your testimony was that the amounts that you owed on the books of the Shotwell Company, you paid them and you paid them by check to their order, is that true?

A. Yes, sir, I did, toward the end there I did give them some machinery and some peanuts and I believe—I believe a chocolate quota which they invoiced them for, sir.

1337 Q. Mr. Lubben, I would like to go to another so-called unbilled shipment and ask you whether you didn't tell the Government that you had paid in cash, plus overage, for a shipment of Cardinal chocolates to the Cambridge Supply Company, in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

A. I don't recall saying that specifically in regard to the Cambridge Supply Company, sir, that it was an unbilled shipment, sir.

Q. Do you deny giving an affidavit to the Government that there was an unbilled shipment of Cardinal chocolates to the Cambridge Supply Company?

A. No, I don't recall giving the affidavit. It might be in it, but since then I have had time to refresh my memory and the shipment to the Cambridge Supply Company, if I recall correctly, was not an unbilled shipment, sir.

Q. And indeed the shipment to the Cambridge Supply

Company is represented by documents which I will show you as soon as the young lady has marked them Defendants' Exhibit 18-A and 18-B.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 18-A and 18-B for identification.)

1338 Q. Do those documents, Mr. Lubben, represent a shipment of Cardinal chocolates to the Cambridge Supply Company, as you now recall the matter?

A. Well, no, sir, it doesn't say Cambridge Supply any place.

Q. My question is do you recall that those were chocolates which were shipped by you to the Cambridge Supply Company?

A. Well, sir, I would only be able—I would look at the routing here and the final routing says, "New York Central B & A" and that would be up in the Boston area which was the Albany Railroad, so I am only making a guess, but to me this would appear to be the car of chocolates that did go to the Cambridge Supply.

Q. And isn't it true that when you gave the affidavit to the Government, you said that that car or shipment was unbilled, uninvoiced, and that you paid for it entirely by cash? Isn't that what you said?

A. Yes, but since then—

Q. Wait a minute now. My dear sir, is that what you told the Government in an affidavit?

A. And I also told them—

1339 Q. Wait a minute. Did you tell them that?

A. I did, sir, to the best of my recollection at that time that is what I said, sir, and I also corrected it.

Q. Mr. Lubben, at the time that you were engaged in business, in the indictment years of 1945 and 1946, I think you have said you were in the black market and there is not much question about that, is there?

A. Whose indictment, sir?

Q. In the indictment years of 1945 and 1946, which is now on trial.

By the Court: He is referring to this indictment.

By the Witness:

A. Oh, okay.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I think you have said that you were in the black market, is that true?

A. In 1945 and 1946?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir. I certainly was, and I am not very proud of it, sir.

Q. And Mr. Lubben, the black market and the pos-
1340 sible prosecution or penalties that could flow from having been in it was one of the things which you discussed with Mr. Cain at the Riviera meeting, is that true?

A. The black market?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, we didn't discuss the black market, sir. You have my testimony, sir, and what I testified there. I would be glad to repeat it for you.

Q. And you say that you did not discuss the black market or the possible penalty for having been in it at that Riviera meeting?

A. I certainly didn't discuss the possible penalties for having been in it, sir.

I was told, sir,—I told you what the conversation was. and it is on the record and I would be glad to repeat my conversation at the Riviera if you so want it.

Q. The black market, however, was discussed, and it is a fairly simple question. It was discussed at that meeting. Am I correct in that?

A. I can't say. You mean, the furture of the black market? You mean the present of the black market?

Q. The possible penalty or prosecution for having 1341 been in the black market.

A. I think the specific reference to the black market, sir, was on that Riviera—it was at the Gotham Hotel when Byron Cain came and said, "I am not sure about this, Dave." He says—

Q. Excuse me.

A. Well, I am telling you about the black market.

Q. I am not asking you to recount the whole long conversation. I am asking you if the subject came up and that, surely you can answer me.

A. Well, sir, we discussed—you have the conversation. It is on the record and I would be glad to repeat the question.

By the Court: The question is whether or not it was discussed at the Riviera meeting.

1342 By the Witness:

A. When you come up and say the word "Black market" and say it was mentioned, your Honor, I can't specifically say that, sir, but we talked about the visits and I told you what Mr. Grace had said. I told you about the trip to South America and I told you about those things, sir.

It would appear to be an aftermath of the black market, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And there were, I am sure you will concede, both civil and criminal penalties under the OPA, isn't that right?

A. By "civil" you mean what, sir?

Q. I mean, under the OPA law, a person who was in the black market could have been sued for triple damages or he could have been and that would be a civil liability or he could have been prosecuted criminally. Isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir, but I don't think that applied in 1948, sir.

Q. But wasn't it true that during the time of the indictment years, 1945 and 1946 that was the fact?

1343 A. Well, sir, they had a lot of OPA laws. Whether it was in or out of that particular time, I wouldn't know.

Q. You mean you don't know whether there was any penalty?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. In 1945 and 1946, Mr. Lubben?

A. But I can't specifically say whether it was absolutely in 1946. It went out sometime in there. I know there was a penalty at that time if you sold over the ceiling price or something and you got triple damages, or the government got triple damages.

Q. And certainly that period, Mr. Lubben, included 1945 and 1946, isn't that true?

A. Well, I don't know whether it included all of 1946, sir. I mean, if you can refresh my recollection, sir, as to when the law went out—I don't know—but in 1945 I would say definitely. But when it expired, or if it expired in 1946, I don't recollect the specific month.

Q. It went out on corn on June 30, 1946, but it stayed on everything else.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. Does that seem to jibe with your memory of 1344 it, Mr. Lubben, that is to say, that the ceiling and penalties last through 1945 and 1946 except for corn in the last half of 1946? Is that about it?

A. I wouldn't know. As you say, except for corn, I wouldn't know, sir.

By the Court: Well, you have answered now.

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, by 1948, however, am I correct in believing that you say that you think that the PAO penalties both for triple damages and criminally had expired?

A. Well, I don't think they were in effect at that time, sir. I said I believe they expired sometime in 1946.

Q. And in early 1948, I think you testified that the Shotwell people had made a disclosure to the tax authorities of their black market dealings? Isn't that what you said?

A. Oh, no, sir, I didn't say that.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He didn't so testify.

By the Witness: I said no such thing as that, sir. You know I didn't.

1345 By the Court: Well, you have answered it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, was it at the Riviera meeting in August of 1948 that you first learned of the disclosure or was it in Attorney Grace's office in the fall of 1948 that you first learned of the disclosure?

A. It was in Attorney Grace's office in something—a week or two weeks sometime—it was after the meeting in the Riviera.

Q. But in 1948, Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir, in 1948.

Q. After the OPA penalties and things like that were dead?

A. Well, I don't know whether they were dead or not, sir.

Q. Now, you, Mr. Lubben, had had the income tax people in to your barn as early, I think you testied, as May of 1946, isn't that correct?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He didn't say that he had had the income tax people in at any time.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I didn't mean that he had invited them particularly.

1346 By Mr. Lockley: Well, that was the inference in your question, Counsel.

By the Court: Well, I don't remember—

By Mr. Lockley: The statement was incorrect.

By the Court: —the state to which counsel refers.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Does the witness have memory on the matter?

A. Yes, sir. Whether it was in 1948 or 1949—but I know they went to my barn and I know that the income tax people—

Q. I will read you your testimony at page 626—oh, the specific date it appears on—it appears on page 627 and 628.

1347 "Question: When were you and the agents looking for these checks?

"Answer: As I say—"

Your answer is: "As I say, I don't know whether we were looking for the checks. I know they were looking for papers and things.

"Question: Whatever it was that you were looking for, when was it?

"Answer: I think it was May, 1948.

"Question: And you were looking in the barn?

"Answer: Yes, looking through those same records that you are going to get."

Now, do you recall that the income tax people were there in your place in May of 1948?

A. Yes, sir, but it was not in my barn at that time. They came in May and they came to my house. It was at a later date, sir, that we went in the barn.

Q. Did you make, on your prior testimony, the responses that I have read to you to the questions that were put to you then?

1348 A. I did, and I am correcting it now, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall these questions being put to you, and these answers being made on my cross examination of you at page 1222:

"Question: Now, Mr. Lubben, is it true that these payments that you say were made to Huebner were always cash for the overages?

"Answer: Yes, sir, for the overages. That was all he ever got was cash.

"Question: Is it true that the cash in every case was in your hands, in your pocket at least for a time?

"Answer: No, sir, not in every case, but the greatest percentage of it, sir."

Now, did you make those responses to those questions?

A. I did, and that is true.

Q. Mr. Lubben, I would like to now ask you about cash that you handled and I ask you if it is correct that you and I have already discussed some checks to cash which I secured from the Government. Do you recall my having some checks to cash in here?

1349 A. You showed me a few checks, sir.

Q. Do you know that a list of those cash disbursements which we submitted to the Government showing checks to cash was for the period involved in the list, $608,166.07, in checks to cash?

By the Court: It is not clear to me what you are referring to.

By Mr. Kirby: We had some discussion back and forth here where we had given the Government a list of some checks to cash and asked that they produce such as they could find.

By the Court: During what period?

By Mr. Kirby: During the period—the list was during the period 1944 when he said he first started to deal with the Shotwell people in overages, and that particular list was to the end of May, 1945, those being the proprietorship years, Judge.

By the Court: You mean that covered all of the cash checks?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: Not necessarily proceeds which went to Shotwell?

1350 By Mr. Kirby: Indeed not. I want to illustrate—I would like to inquire as to how much cash he had to account for.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that the evidence is not in that there was any such amount of checks.

By the Court: I don't remember what the testimony was.

By Mr. Lockley: There was no testimony. There were a few checks handed to Mr. Lubben and he was asked whether or not he would testify as to the balance of them, the same as he testified to the few. There was no testimony as to the total amount of those checks. I don't know how much it was. Mr. Kirby asked me if I had run a tape on them, and I told him that I had not.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the checks total that, Judge.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, are we to take his word for that? It is not in evidence, is it, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: My mother would tell you and you don't have to take my word. But maybe you won't 1351 accept my mother's word for it.

By Mr. Lockley: I am not your mother.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let me inquire of this witness whether he would say quite frankly to us that during that proprietorship period, there were approximately $600,000 in checks to cash.

A. But what do you mean by proprietorship, sir? What period?

Q. The particular list was from April, 1944 through May 31, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley: Now, your Honor, I object to anything with respect to the period from 1944 until the first of January, 1945, in any event.

By the Court: Yes, I think so. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the balance of it, on the ground it is immaterial, and it is beyond the scope of the direct examination. No foundation has been laid for it.

By the Court: Let us find out the period in question here.

1352 By Mr. Kirby: I have in mind, your Honor, that in the Government's direct case—

By the Court: Yes, I understand.

By Mr. Kirby: (Continuing)—they ask leave to go into the 1944 dealings to show a pattern.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: And I have precisely the same object in view, the pattern of this man's handling of the cash.

By the Court: You are going back to 1945 or 1946.

1353 By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In any event, do you recall this exchange of conversation back and forth between Mr. Lockley and myself at page 1234:

"By Mr. Lockley: You asked us to give you 480—"

By the Court: Mr. Kirby, I am wondering if we are not—you can ask him what his recollection is as to the amount of cash checks that he may have cashed during the period of 1945 and 1946, during the proprietorship. Is that what you had in mind?

Reading from colloquy between you and Mr. Lockley, I don't think is going to be very helpful.

By Mr. Kirby: If your Honor please, Mr. Lockley indicated the number of checks to cash which were missing and I wanted to inquire about it.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Lockley was testifying entirely from hearsay. I had not counted them. I took the 1354 word of the agents.

By the Court: Ask him what he knows about it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you know that there were checks to cash in the period of the proprietorship, limiting it now to 1945, which you cashed?

A. Oh, yes, sir, there were checks.

Q. Could you give me the amount?

A. No. I would think it would be substantial though, sir.

Q. Well, would it be as much as $300,000.00, sir?

A. I wouldn't want to hazard a guess, sir, but it would be on the books and the records when—when we gave any cash, we would say who got the money, sir.

Q. Would the amount as to which we would need to figure out as to who got the money be about $300,000.00 for that 1945 proprietorship?

A. Sir, I said—now you are talking about from January 1st to June—May 31, 1945?

Q. Yes.

A. I wouldn't want to hazard a guess, sir, but I would say it was substantial.

1355 Q. Perhaps as substantial as I have indicated or perhaps a thousand up or down?

A. I wouldn't answer that question, sir. You are trying to put the answer in my mouth.

Q. And you recall, sir, that Mr. Lockley indicated that of the 486 checks we had asked him for—some of them I conceded because we asked for a long list—they could only find—

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. (Continuing)—that they could only find 148. Do you know where the 338 checks to cash, the missing checks, are?

A. Well, sir, I think you might have them.

Q. Mr. Lubben, would you be good enough to tell me with respect to the proprietorship period, do you know where the missing checks to cash in the proprietorship period are?

A. I didn't know there was any missing, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben, sir, in the General Confections period would you be good enough to tell me, if you can, where the missing checks to cash are?

A. I would think you have them, sir.

Q. In the General Confections period.

1356 A. Yes, sir. You were working with the accountants, sir, do you remember, sir, Mr. Sproul and Scholz?

1357 Q. Yes, sir. Now, Sproul & Scholz gave me some figures and not the checks, if that will allay your mind at all, sir

A. It doesn ., sir.

Q. Well, then, I will address myself to the figures in the period of the Sproul & Scholz audit of General Confections, from 3-1-46 to 6-1-46. They tell me, as you have indicated they have, that there were checks to cash totaling $323,663.23. Does that sound like about the amount of cash that you got from that source in that period, sir?

By Mr. Lockley: Now I object on the ground that what Sproul & Scholz told Mr. Kirby is not evidence.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Furthermore, this is immaterial. You went over it completely the other day, as I recollect, and we are just going back over the same ground and it is immaterial. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will ask you from your own memory whether in the period from 3-1-46 to 6-1-46 you did or did not 1358 cash checks totaling roughly $323,000.00?

A. Well, sir, you would have to change it from 3-1-46 down to about—

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Witness: (Continuing)—3-9-46. That was when General Confections started.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will accept your amendment. What is your response?

A. When did it stop, sir?

Q. The first of June, 1946.

A. You say from 3-1-46 to June 1, 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. I wouldn't know, sir, but whatever was reflected on my books was the amount of cash that we drew out of the business.

Q. Now, does that $323,000.00 in cash checks for that three-month period, does that seem to be about the amount that it was, as nearly as you recall?

A. Sir, I don't have any papers or any books or anything else. Why should I guess the figure you are giving me, sir?

Q. I will ask you about the period to the end
1359 of the year in 1946 and did you then cash checks to cash in the amount of approximately $286,506.00?

A. Well, sir, whatever is reflected on my books is the amount we cashed.

Q. And if that amount is reflected on your books, it would about jibe with your present memory?

A. That amount, whatever amount the books say, that is the amount.

Q. Now in the period of the partnership, can you tell us from your own memory how much in checks to cash were issued and handled by you, do you know?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. In the period when you were handling currency in a cash box, after the so-called corn box or the so-called candy box, how much currency did you handle?

A. I don't recall the amount, sir.

Q. Well, would a figure of around $400,000.00 in cash in those transactions seem to be about right, according to your present memory?

A. Well, sir, if I remember correctly—and when I testified before the Kefauver Committee, sir, I was proud to testify before the Kefauver Committee—

Q. Excuse me. The question of your pride in 1360 testifying will be the subject of argument, but I would like to have you answer my question and I would like the Court to strike the portion of the answer he already gave.

By the Court: I will strike it as not responsive.

Pay attention to the question now and answer it.

By the Witness:

A. Did I recall, sir, how much was handled by me, specifically?

Q. From these boxes?

A. That I actually had my hands on?

Q. Yes.

A. I can't recall, sir.

Q. Would it be as much as $400,000.00?

A. No, I don't think so, sir.

Q. Well, how much would it be?

A. I wouldn't want to make a guess, sir. I don't know.

Q. Now, in Reserve Trading, that was a wholly owned subsidiary of General Confections, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were the checks to cash that you handled
1361 in Reserve Trading—did they total as much as a hundred thousand dollars?

A. Sir, whatever is reflected on my books, that is the amount of cash I handled and that is the amount I handled or gave to somebody and that is the amount that is on the books, sir.

1362 Q. You are referring me to the books. Summarizing what I have gone through with you, I have a total of one million—

By Mr. Lockley: I am not interested in your totals.

By the Court: He said he doesn't know. It is idle to talk about a total.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me inquire of this witness then:

Q. Is it true or is it false that in the period of 1945 and 1946, you handled cash in an amount of approximately $1,700,000? Is that true or false?

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know, but I believe of that amount, about $450,000 went to Shotwell.

By Mr. Krby: Would the Court be good enough to strike that?

By the Court: The latter portion may be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby: And I ask that the jury be instructed to disregard it.

By the Court: The jury may disregard the amount he claimed was paid to Shotwell.

By Mr. Kirby: Does the answer now stand that he doesn't know?

1363 By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall giving this testimony on your cross examination, speaking of the time of the wind up of the partnership,—

By Mr. Lockley: What page, counsel?

By Mr. Kirby: Page 1007,—page 1071.

"—the condition of the sale was that the partnership was going to continue in existence after I left, which it did, and they would pay the income tax, as set forth on the books of the company, as drawn out by me.

"And when the time to pay the income tax came around, sir, they wouldn't pay the income tax, and so I wrote them letters and asked them, and everything else, and they weren't interested in paying my income tax, sir.

"So it came time to file my report. I attached a copy of the dissolution agreement to my income tax form, also some copies to show the registered—where I sent letters 'Return Receipt Requestd,' and I sent it to the income tax man. And I sent them in a 1364 partial payment.

"And that is the money, sir, that I owe the Government. And some day, with the grace of God, I hope to be able to pay it back."

Do you recall stating that in your examination in this case?

A. I do, sir.

Q. And the income tax that you were talking about was an income tax return for the year of 1946, which included—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any discussion of Mr. Lubben's income tax return for the year 1946. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination, and it is immaterial to the issues. Mr. Lubben is not on trial for income tax evasion. He is here as a witness, doing his duty.

By the Court: Well, he may answer. Don't make any statements which preclude him from answering. Ask him about the fact.

1365 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes. I will rephrase the question.

Isn't it a fact, Mr. Lubben, that the income tax return which you were referring to reported your income from June of 1945 through to the end of 1946, insofar as you had the figures; isn't that the period covered?

A. I don't know what the period covered, sir. The accountant prepared the papers for me, and that is all I know about it, sir. I signed it.

Q. Well, the partnership started about June of '45?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it ended its fiscal year in '46, didn't it?

A. I think so. I don't know whether the fiscal year ended there or not, but the accountant can explain all those things, sir.

Q. And isn't it a fact that the return, the '46 return, included from June of '45 until the end of '46 because of the fact that the partnership didn't end its fiscal year until in '46; isn't that the truth?

A. I wouldn't know that, sir.

Whatever my accountant prepared. I had a certi-1366 fied public accountant, and he prepared it, and that is what he was getting paid for, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Would you mark these Defendants' Exhibits serially?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 19 and 20-A, 20-B, 20-C and 20-D for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, in your income tax report—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a minute, Mr. Kirby. If you are going to read from it, may I ask that it be identified so that I may make proper objection to it.

By Mr. Kirby: I was going to ask him a question independently of it, and I will not state an amount in the question.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, sir, could you tell me how much income you reported to the Government from General Confections for 1946?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is immaterial what Mr. Lubben reported.

By the Court: Well, what is the materiality of it?

By Mr. Kirby: The witness had in his hands an enormous amount of cash.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the argument at this time, your Honor.

Please, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: He said we must accept his word.

By Mr. Lockley: Please, let's not make an argument.

By the Court: He is answering my question.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor. Go ahead, Mr. Kirby, if it is proper to do so.

By Mr. Kirby: I think we would have a right to show whether there was any motivation in the witness for saying the cash went to us, rather than, for example, to himself. And the motivation, I think, will appear as we progress with this inquiry.

1368 By Mr. Lockley: Well, the witness has stated that he had a large amount of cash in his hands, to be sure. But he also paid out large amounts of cash. What his net income tax return shows is not going to prove anything one way or the other, your Honor. This is entirely immaterial.

He has also testified that he doesn't know what his income for 1946 was because he didn't get to see the partnership records. The partnership didn't end until—

By Mr. Kirby: I am asking about General Confections.

By the Court: I will hear you on it. It is about adjournment time.

We will be in recess until 2:00 o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had outside the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By the Court: I can hear you now.

You may amplify your statement now, Mr. Kirby, as to your position with reference to the materiality of 1369 this proffered testimony.

1370 By Mr. Kirby: One of the questions in the case, of course, is the credibility of Lubben. While it is always true that the principal witness is a person whose credibility is important, you will recall that the Government has urged upon you in earlier hearings that without his testimony as to what he did with the cash, they felt that their case was perilous, and they couldn't go ahead.

And I said to the Court that it is what he did with the cash that is the key—

By the Court: I understand that.

By Mr. Kirby: —as to whether he is to be believed or not.

Now, the question, of course, of what he did with the cash, I don't—and I am sure the Court doesn't—feel should be allowed to rest on no test other than merely his statement. We would have the right to go into whatever might throw light upon whether he could be believed.

By the Court: Get to the question before me.

1371 By Mr. Kirby: Now then, in the General Confections period it is alleged under the indictment that he gave us—

What is the total in General Confections, Jack? I will get it.

—roughly, if you include its subsidiary Reserve Trading, $350,000.

And Mr. Lubben said that he did handle these large amounts of cash. Not only that that he says went to Shotwell but a lot of other cash, far more than just three hundred thousand in cash.

But he reports his total income from General Confections at $10,500. That is all he got. He didn't keep a dime of the money, other than $10,500, from General Confections.

There isn't any doubt, no argument about: Did somebody also have the books, or didn't they? That has nothing to do with the partnership. That return shows that he flatly states that his income in 1946 from General Confections was $10,500.

And I suggest to the Court that it does—quote—1372 quite materially go to the question of whether the man is telling the truth when he says that out of the hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars that he handled, he kept not one penny of it. Not a penny of it. He got supposedly nothing but salary. Not a penny of the cash.

He said, "All the cash I am chargeable for on the books"—and he is chargeable for it—he said went to somebody else; "I didn't keep it."

Now, then, for the partnership period he does say that he doesn't have all of the information that he needs. But the return states it was prepared by his accountants from the bank records of the Manufacturers Trust Company, showing the receipt of monies by him.

1373 And he says that the total amount of money that he got from the partnership—we supposedly got some $150,000, roughly, from the partnership; I may be in error about the figure, but it is a large figure; in that period they handled hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash—and he said the total he received and kept for himself was $37,000.

In the indictment two years, exclusively of the first five months, in the indictment two years, he says, as we stand here now, that he didn't keep a penny of this money for himself. In the General Confections period he turned it all over to these people.

By the Court: How does this throw any light on whether or not he is telling the truth when he says he turned this cash money over to the Shotwell people?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it points out that he would have a good reason for saying that; that is to say, if he were not to say that he gave the money to Shotwell, he would certainly be subject to prosecution himself.

1374 By the Court: Well, it may have gone to others besides Shotwell, I suppose.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the pattern, I think would be much the same with them. The same feelings would impel him.

By the Court: Well, you presume to argue that there is some inconsistency between his statement that he turned over this amount of cash to Shotwell as premium payments during the time he was the head of General Confections, when he makes an income tax statement that he only received from General Confections $10,500, is that it?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I don't know that I would urge the word "inconsistency" your Honor. I would say that it makes the story he gave it all to Shotwell unbelievable.

By the Court: Why?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, considering the man, the nature of the man—

By the Court: Well, I don't know that we get anywhere simply arguing about such matters. I have a question here before me as to whether or not this 1375 is relevant evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, you have in mind, Judge, that the quantum of the payments to Shotwell is a key question in the case because we have credits against it.

By the Court: I understand it. You needn't emphasize that. I am fully aware of that.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir. And therefore, it could be entirely possible that an acquittal would be required here if the jury believed that payments were made, but that Lubben is exaggerating the payments that were made. And we would like to show that he had every good reason to exaggerate the payments that were made. And this is one of the reasons. The motivation of a witness is of the highest order of cross examination evidence.

1376 By the Court: Yes, if you can indicate that the motivation is based upon a sound premise. I am running through my mind now just what support there is for your claim of some motivation.

Your position is that a man who handled this amount of cash in alleged premium payments, because he reflected an income of $10,500—well, put it this way. Supposing he reflected an income of a hundred thousand dollars from General Confections? What would you say then?

By Mr. Kirby: It would weaken our position, but it wouldn't wipe it out.

By the Court: Well, $300,000.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if there was $300,000 in checks to cash, and he says he got it, and he put it on his income tax return, we wouldn't even have the question.

By the Court: Then I gather you feel that the $10,500 is such a low figure that one must be suspiicous of it, is that it?

By Mr. Kirby: That is one thing. There is another point.

1377 By the Court: Maybe he didn't earn more than $10,500. Maybe he wasn't entitled to more than $10,500.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me go a little further. You will recall the testimony of the Gotham Hotel meeting at which Mr. Cain said—according to the witness—that there were questions of entries on Lubben's books, and that he wanted to know from Lubben, and he wanted Lubben to talk with the Internal Revenue agents about the nature of the transactions and loans, and exchanges back and forth between them, and Lubben says, "There are no such things as loans and exchanges. None of that. Whatever I have said you got to bear—"

I am arguing it now. He didn't say it exactly that way. But the question of whether he was laying all of this off and at the time of the investigation when being asked to be frank about some of these transactions, and refused to do so, that adds even greater materiality to this situation of a man who says, "I got the money, but I 1378 didn't keep it. And you got it."

He has got a good reason to say that and to persist in it. It was a question of his being indicted, or our being indicted.

1379 By the Court: Well, merely because he reflected $10,500.00 in his income tax statement as the total receipts from General Confections, standing alone, doesn't seem to me to give rise to any ground for suspicion or inconsistency, or the argument that he must have earned more, and the money that he says went to Shotwell Company instead went into his own pocket, and therefore he is reflecting a very low income.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, may I make one statement that may tend to establish the complete invalidity of the defendants' position in this case.

What he reported on his personal income tax return for 1946, as income from the General Confections Corporation, was merely his salary from that corporation. The corporation was a separate taxable entity. It filed a separate income tax return.

By Mr. Kirby: I made that point myself. He said he got a salary and salary only and no cash.

1380 By Mr. Lockley: All right. So—

By Mr. Kirby: That is the point.

By Mr. Lockley: So the corporation doesn't have a distribution of dividends during that period.

By Mr. Kirby: He said he had it.

By Mr. Lockley: He owned the corporation. It doesn't mean he received any income from the corporation other than the salary that he had.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't the size of the amount, your Honor, that we are talking about, that it is ten thousand rather than a hundred thousand. It is its nature. The ten thousand is from salary.

Now, if it should appear—or if the Government or someone else should believe that Lubben had income aside from salary, such as these cash withdrawals, which surely were not salary, his motive for taking the position which he takes here, to the extent to which he takes it, would be very clear.

The point of the income tax return is that the income

1381 is solely from salary.

By the Court: Well, if there was evidence here to establish that the ten thousand five hundred is grossly inadequate that, in fact, he received—

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't mean that.

By the Court: I think, standing alone, that $10,500.00, as far as the evidence shows, may be a very complete salary for the president of General Confections.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.

By the Court: Federal judges didn't get more than $10,000.00 a year until a few years ago.

By Mr. O'Brien: That isn't my point about it.

By the Court: What is the ground for suspicion?

By Mr. O'Brien: The basis is this, that if Lubben—on the basis of this return, if Lubben retained any of the proceeds of these cash checks drawn on the company, he would have a false return and would be subject to indictment.

1382 This return reflects no such receipts. Therefore his motivation is in question in the giving of this testimony and that is established by the—

By the Court: I will sustain the objection. I don't see that it has any relevancy.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is one further basis, your Honor, which would be connected, I am sure, through the evidence. And that is the man's expenditures during the period.

This is not the only link of evidence. We started in with the man as a $125.00 a week clerk or salesman. We offered his return for the year '43, and I think '44. And those were identified in part—your Honor reserved a ruling—but starting with the $125.00 a week, and with the income from these various sources, as against the expenditures which we have in mind, we think that it is competent for the jury to know of these amounts in order to help them in determining whether he did or did not retain part of this money.

1383 In other words—

By the Court: You mean his individual return?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, certainly.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, may I make a statement, your Honor? This is cross examination on an immaterial issue for the purpose of attacking his credibilty, in the first place.

Secondly, whatever is the accuracy of that income tax return will have no connection whatsoever with the amounts of over premium payments and over premium receipts which were paid and received by the General Confections.

Now, counsel is constantly confusing what the General Confections Corporation did in paying, in buying merchandise and in selling merchandise, and what Mr. Lubben did, as the president and employe of General Confections. He only received a salary. All the rest of the transactions were carried on in the corporate name by the 1384 corporate entity. They should be properly shown on the corporate income tax return. And the fact that he may have gotten ten thousand, or any other amount, of money is entirely immaterial. Even the corporate return wouldn't be conclusive in that regard because if we are to believe what defense counsel says, that there had to be payments made in order to get such merchandise, then certainly Mr. Lubben and the General Confections is entitled to the same inference that he had to make such payments, too.

So that the amount, the net amount of taxes paid, in the final analysis, isn't going to be at all dispositive of the situation.

By the Court: I don't see any relevancy at this time.

Before Nordbye, J. and J.

Monday, September 21, 1953,
Chicago, Illinois,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:

DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

1386 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, you testified that Mr. Cain talked to you in the Gotham Hotel in 1951, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir. You mean the time I met him at the airport?

Q. Yes. And then you went over and had lunch at the Gotham Hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Davidson was with you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Cain, amongst other things, mentioned that Mr. Mammel, who sits at the table, and Mr. Krane, who sits at the table, were going to come down to New York in connection with income tax matters. He said other things, but he did say that, didn't he?

A. They were going to come down and talk to me.

Q. Yes. And do you recall that you testified to this at page 867 and 868 of this record here:

"He says, 'These fellows are going to come up and ask you questions, and you are going to be here next 1387 week.' He said, 'You are going to be asked questions about loans and exchanges.'

"I said, 'What do you mean by loans and exchanges, Mr. Krane—I mean Mr. Cain?'

"He says, 'By that I mean where you gave us merchandise and we exchanged merchandise for you, or where you paid money to people to ship merchandise to us which was used in our factory and which we gave you merchandise.'

"I said, 'Mr. Cain, we didn't have any of those loans and exchanges.'

"And he says, 'Well, what difference does it make, Dave? I am trying to settle this case. I am pushing it. I am trying to get it over with.'

"He said, 'I want to get it settled.' He says, 'It is—it doesn't mean anything to you.' He said, 'You are liable.' He says, 'It just reduces my tax liability.'

"So I said, 'Mr. Cain, we didn't have any. I mean, if we did, I would tell you.' I said, 'I can't remember of any loans or exchanges.'"

1388 Did you so testify in these proceedings?

A. I did, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you have the check for $36,148.35?

By Mr. Lockley: Thirty-six how much?

By Mr. Kirby: $36,148.35.

By Mr. Lockley: Here is the ledger sheet on which that check appears. We do not have the check.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall in your testimony that you identified on a bank statement, which was given the number of Government Exhibit 63, a check cashed in the amount of $36,148.35, which appears to be clearing the bank on November 27, 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And am I correct in believing that you said that you cashed that check and you got that money and then you gave it to Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Would the Reporter mark these sheets?

1389 (Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 21-A, 21-B, 21-C, 21-D and 21-E for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, there was such a thing in your company in November of 1945, as a loans and exchanges account, wasn't there?

A. I don't think there was, sir. I wouldn't know whether there was or wasn't.

1390 Q. I show you a document marked 21-A and ask, after you have looked at that, whether you now recall that there was such an account audited by Bernard Berku & Company.

A. Well, I don't know whose figures these are, sir, and I don't know what the figures pertain to.

Q. The question is: Now that you have looked at that sheet can you tell us whether there was a loans and exchanges account in your company?

A. Among, who, sir, the employes?

Q. Was there a loans and exchanges account of any kind in your company, sir?

A. Well, I couldn't answer that, sir.

Q. Even after looking at that document?

A. No, sir; I don't know whose figures these are, sir. And I don't know—they are certainly not mine, and they are not Miss Feldman's, sir, and I wouldn't know whose figures these are.

Q. Do you notice down there in November—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He has stated that he doesn't know what is on the document.

By the Court: He doesn't know anything about it.

1391 If you can't lay any further identification, you can't, of course, read from the document. You may proceed further, if you want, to lay a foundation.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. May I inquire whether the $36,148.35 item, now that you have looked at that document, you are not aware was charged to loans and exchanges?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He has stated he doesn't even know what the document is.

By the Court: Well, if anything refreshes his recollection, from looking at that piece of paper, he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I don't know anything about any loans and exchanges.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I now show you a document—let me ask you, do you notice that this $36,148.35 item appears on that sheet which is 21-A?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. There has been no foundation laid for the introduction of that.

1392 By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I don't see it anywhere here, sir, yet.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Look at 11-27, November 27.

A. Yes, sir; there is $36,148.35.

1393 Q. On November 27, 1945?

By Mr. Lockley: I object. That document is not in evidence, and he is reading from it.

By the Court: He is trying to lay a foundation for it. I suppose he has a right to ask such questions as may be pertinent to that purpose.

By Mr. Kirby: What is the pending question?

(Whereupon the record was read.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And does that appear in a group of four entries in succession following your name?

By Mr. Lockley: The same objection.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection. You are now not simply asking him to testify to the contents of a document that he can't identify.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. After having looked at it, Mr. Lubben, do you recall that that item of $36,148.38 was charged on the loans and exchanges and charged against you personally?

1394 A. Well, sir, I don't know whether that is true or not. All I know, sir, is that the money went to Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Kirby: May the answer beyond where he says, "I do not know whether that is true or not" be stricken?

By the Court: Very well. The balance may be stricken.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I now show you a document marked 21-B for identification, and ask you if you know in whose handwriting that document is?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Does that document refresh your memory at all about the fact that there was a loans and exchange account at your company?

A. No, It does not.

Q. Does that document again—does it in any way refresh your recollection that $36,148.35 was charged on that account on November 27, 1945, or do you still not recall it?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to counsel testifying.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

1395 By Mr. Lockley: He has already stated he has no recollection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I now show you a document which is marked Exhibit 21-C, and a document which is marked 21-D, and ask you if you can tell me in whose handwriting those two documents appear?

A. I don't know whose writing it is, sir.

Q. Do you recall, or does that document, if you will examine it carefully, in any way help you to recall that on the loans and exchanges account of your company in November of 1945, there was charged against you, $65,570.49 in total, of which one of the items was a check of November 27, 1945, in the amount of $36,148.35; do you now recall that?

A. No, sir; I don't see all that you are telling me on this piece of paper, either.

Q. Would you be good enough to look on the first piece of paper where it gives the amount of your account?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He hasn't yet identified the sheet of paper. He said he doesn't know whose handwriting it is.

1396 By the Court: You are saying "your account". There is no testimony that it is his account.

1397 By Mr. Kirby: If you will excuse me, he said he didn't see anything I was referring to and I was trying to help him.

By the Court: But you refer to his account. I say there is no testimony it is his account.

By Mr. Kirby: I think you are correct. It is Eatsum Food Products which at that time—

By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony of that, even.

By the Court: You reframe your question.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, to assist you in locating the item I would like you to pay attention to, please, would you look on the first one of those two and see whether there is a total charge against you of $65,570.49; do you see that?

By Mr. Lockley: I object again to counsel reading from these documents.

By the Court: Yes. I sustain that objection. I don't think that is proper cross examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

1398 Q. Mr. Lubben, if I can help you find what I would like you to refer to, would you note that on the second page of the documents there is a breakdown of that larger figure, or purports to be a breakdown.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I have to object again, your Honor. There has been no foundation laid.

By the Court: He can direct his attention to any parts of that paper. He can't incorporate his own conclusions of what the paper discloses.

1399 By the Court: Is there a question before the witness now?

By Mr. Kirby: I thought there was. I may have been daydreaming.

By the Court: Perhaps you better reframe it.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I will.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I was directing your attention, Mr. Lubben, to the breakdown on the second one of those two sheets of the D. G. L., David G. Lubben account. Do you notice that there is such a breakdown, just expressing it generally?

A. Well, I see something here which says "D. G. L."

Q. Now, my inquiry, sir, is: Now that you have looked at that is it not the fact that this $36,148.35 which you identified on Government's Exhibit 63 likewise appears in the general breakdown of charges against you on the second one of those two documents?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He hasn't identified it as yet.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection. I don't think that that is the proper way to lay a 1400 foundation for an exhibit, if that is what you are trying to do, or to ask him whether or not it refreshed his recollection on that. I don't think that you are putting it properly.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall the testimony which I read to you and which was read from pages 867 and 868 in which Mr. Cain said in part:

"You are going to be asked questions about loans and exchanges."

And you said:

"What do you mean by loans and exchanges?"

And then later:

"I can't remember any loans and exchanges."

Do you remember that testimony, sir?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Well, now, now that you have looked at these papers, aren't you ready to concede that that $36,148.35 item was in a loans and exchanges account, Eatsum?

1401 A. Sir, if you will read a little further in the testimony that I—

By the Court: Just answer the question.

By the Witness:

A. Well, he wasn't talking about any loans and exchanges. He was talking about loans—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Excuse me. Is it in a loans and exchanges account?

A. Is it in it?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I don't know these papers.

Q. You don't know whether any such item was charged against you?

A. I don't know who wrote them, what they are.

Q. How about this $36,148.35 item? Was that ever charged against you?

A. I wouldn't know why it would be because I didn't get it.

Q. The question was, was it ever charged against you?

A. Sir, I wouldn't know why it would be.

Q. Do you know if it ever was charged against you on a loans and exchanges account?

1402 A. I wouldn't even know that there was such a thing as a loans and exchanges account.

Q. And did you take the same attitude, sir, with respect to the loans and exchanges account when Mr. Cain was discussing the matter with you at the Gotham Hotel?

A. What attitude was that, sir?

1403 Q. The attitude that you now take that you know nothing of it?

A. Well, sir, we were talking about a lot of exchanges between Shotwell and the Eatsum Food Products, or General Confections whereby we had gone into that further, sir, where I was to give him boxes of this, and he was to give me finished products, or I was supposed to go and pay X dollars to some supplier of his who was shipping merchandise, and we had none of that, sir.

Q. I will show you another document which has been marked 21-E, and ask you if you know whose handwriting appears on that analysis?

A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. Now that you have looked at that document, do you recall that as late as March, 1946, the $36,148.35 was still charged against you personally?

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. (Continuing) —on the loans and exchanges account?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He has stated that he doesn't know what the document is. There has 1404 been no proper foundation laid. He is trying to refresh his recollection. He is going about it the wrong way.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Sir, I don't know anything about—I have never seen the paper before, and I don't know anything about loans or exchanges, or whose paper this was—whose paper this would supposedly be, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And am I correct in believing that when you told this story about the Gotham Hotel meeting to the Government Agent Krane under oath, you added another thing that you had said at that meeting, and that was that in connection with your personal income tax at that time, you were being put through the third degree. Do you recall telling him that?

A. Well, sir, I had been—

Q. Excuse me. Do you recall telling him that?

A. I may have used the words "third degree", but I—

Q. Now, sir, was one of the questions—

By the Court: Counsel, will you stand back?

1405 By Mr. Kirby: I beg your pardon.

Q. Was one of the questions that was being posed to you by Mr. Mammel and Mr. Krane, or whoever else was investigating your matters, whether you did get this $36,148.35 from the loans and exchanges account—do you ever remember that being asked you?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I don't ever recall ever—I don't ever recall the Government or anybody else asking me anything about loans and exchanges on these pieces of paper, or anything about the thirty-six thousand dollars.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But did I read to you your question and your answer correctly when at the Gotham Hotel Mr. Cain was asking you to check some of these items so that the income tax liability could be ascertained, you said: "No," I said, "Mr. Cain, we didn't have any. I mean, if we did, I would tell you." I said, "I can't remember of any loans and exchanges."

1406 A. Well, sir—

Q. Did you say that?

A. Well, sir, the conversation was between—any loans and exchanges like I stated, was between the Shotwell Manaufacturing Company and myself, or the companies that I was connected with, and the line of merchandise—and certainly had nothing to do with any money.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you please mark this Defendants' Exhibit 22 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 22 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall—

By the Court: If the reporter would announce the exhibits when she marks them, I could keep track of them in my record.

By the Reporter: Defendants' Exhibit No. 22.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall that on your cross examination you discussed such advances by you to Huebner for some over invoice, or unbilled items. Do you recall generally that we talked about that?

1407 A. Yes, sir, we did.

Q. Do you recall my asking you this question on page 1230:

"Question: May I inquire, Mr. Lubben, if at any time you had advanced to Shotwell and were ahead of Shotwell by as much as $83,000.00?"

And your response:

"Answer: Well, sir, I know where you are getting your story, sir, but you ought to—"

And then I said, "Excuse me."
And the Court said, "Just answer the question."
And you answered: "No, sir."
And then I said: "The answer is no?"
And you said, "That is correct, sir."
Do you remember my asking you about that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you made those answers?
A. Yes, sir.

1408 Q. Would you now look at this exhibit which is identified as Defendant's Exhibit 22 for identification and I will ask you if you know in whose handwriting that is?

A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting the reference to advances on the righthand side appears to be in?

A. No, sir, I don't know.

Q. And as you now look at that, is your memory at all refreshed that your books, or at least some of your memorandum did claim that you had advanced over $83,000.00 to Shotwell? Have you no memory of it?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, if your Honor please.

By the Witness: You know, sir, I think—

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Excuse me. The question is—

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I have never seen this sheet before, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. All right. Thank you.

1409 A. I think it is in the handwriting—I know now.

Q. You know in whose handwriting it is?

A. I have a very good guess, sir.

Q. What is your best thought as to the name of the person?

A. Mr. Roth.

Q. Thank you. These other exhibits, 21-A, which appear to be on the stationery of Bernard Bercu & Company, certified public accountants, do you know which of the Bercu people—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know whose handwriting that is?

By the Court: He may answer.
By Mr. Lockley: That is not in evidence.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir, I don't know whose handwriting this is.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. That is number what for identification?
A. 21-A.
1410 By Mr. Kirby: These are the only questions I have of this witness.
By Mr. O'Brien: If your Honor will excuse me, I will get out my books.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Lubben, on October 24, 1951—
By the Court: I think, Mr. O'Brien, if I might remind you sometimes your voice drops and if you will bear in mind that fact, so the jury won't have any difficulty in following your questions—
By Mr. O'Brien: All right.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. On October 24, 1951, you gave an affidavit to the government concerning the subject-matter of your testimony in this case.
A. I don't recall if that is the date, sir, but somewhere thereabouts.
Q. And do you recall substantially the scope and context of that affidavit?
A. Pretty much, yes, sir.
Q. And it is true, is it not, that your testimony
1411 here has been substantially the same as what you had told the government at that time?
A. Well, it would be—I just told them the truth, sir, as best I can remember.
Q. And was that substantially the same according to your best recollection?
A. I would say the sum and substance, yes, sir.
Q. And then the day before or on October 23, 1951, you gave a separate affidavit to the government, did you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. At the time of that statement on October 23, 1951, did you state—I better put on my glasses—that the first overage was about five or ten cents a pound? Do you recall stating that?

A. You mean, the amount per pound on the merchandise?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir, to the best of my recollection at the time that is what it was.

1412 Q. Did you say that they would sell you one hundred thousand pounds at a clip and two hundred thousand at a clip and they raised the price I believe from five to eight cents a pound?

A. Yes, but I—in checking the records, sir, I found that that was an error. I did buy merchandise at one hundred thousand pounds at a clip and I do think, sir, somewhere on the invoice price there was an increase in the cost of the merchandise as I originally bought it and later on they raised the price a little bit.

Q. Well, did you say that it was raised from five to eight cents?

A. If that is my statement, sir—I mean, I signed it. That is what I said. However, in refreshing myself, I have clarified that, as later on when I saw the records.

Q. Well, is it fact, regardless of what you say that there was at one time a five-cent overage applicable to some items?

A. I though there was, sir, but I was in error.

Q. Is it your recollection that such overages as were applicable remained constant and unchanged?

1413 A. Well, sir, such overages? Yes, sir.

By the Court: Speak up a little louder.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir. The overages were the same, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Who is Miss Feldman?

A. She was my office manager, sir, and accountant. I mean, she was the office manager and head bookkeeper.

Q. Did she have some familiarity with the overage rate?

A. Yes, sir. I would say she did, sir.

Q. And if Miss Feldman testified on her deposition in this case that the overages were changed from time to time, would you say that she was mistaken?

A. Well, if she said that sir, she might have referred that the overages changed with the item, I mean, there was different overages.

Q. I mean as to the same items.

A. Well, if she said it pertaining to the same items, sir, I am sure Miss Feldman was in error.

Q. All right. Now in your conversation with the agents of October 23, 1951, did you say that a record of 1414 the transactions during the proprietorship was kept on cards?

A. Yes, sir, but I was in error. It was kept in 1946.

Q. I notice in the same statement of October 31, 1951, that you said that you had a conversation with Stanley Graflund and that he told you that there were only a few corn syrup shipments and that you told him that this had been going on for years and it was candy.

By the Court: It was what?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And it was candy and Graflund said he was very surprised.

Do you recall making that statement to the agents?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

Q. Was that statement incorrect?

A. No, sir. It was—

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. In February of 1948, Stanley Graflund—I was at the plant, I believe, at that time, and he said, "What is all the—what is all this talk about over-1415 ages here and all the excitement about?"

I says, "I don't know."

He says, "After all, it is only a few of these corn syrup shipments." And I said, "What do you mean a few corn syrup shipments?"

He says, "Well, those few shipments where you gave me the money." I said, "Stanley, that is not so. This goes almost to the very beginning of the business I did with Shotwell."

He says to me, "Oh," he says, "you are kidding."

I says, "No; this goes back. I don't think I had very many clean deals with them." And he says, "Son of a—so and so." He says, "Now I understand it. Now I understand why everybody was out of town when it came time to sign the income tax statement."

He says, "Huh. I had an idea." He says, "Now," he says, "I know it."

1416 Q. So Graflund told you that he knew nothing up until that time, except that there were these corn syrup items late in 1946?

A. Yes, sir, referring to the few times that I gave him the money.

Q. And did you in the conversations with Graflund in February of 1948 intimate to him or state in any way to him that you had thought he was receiving part of the money?

A. No, sir. I—

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Or any such conversation?

A. No. He asked me, sir, to call him at his home that evening and that I did, sir, and we went over very much in substance what we talked about—

Q. I just wanted to know if you recall.

A. I don't sir.

Q. I just want to know if you recall saying that to him or he saying that to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. That he received part of the money?

A. Well, he referred to, sir,—the money he referred to was, "What is this all about?"

1417 Q. No. I mean the money you say was split up among these individuals.

A. No, sir. He never said he got it.

Q. Did you tell him at that time that the money was split up among these individuals?

A. I believe I did, sir.

Q. And did you not suggest to him that part had been given to him?

A. No, sir.

Q. Still speaking of your statement of October 23, 1951, did you tell the agent at that time that on several occasions you had attempted to pay the overages with checks, divide it equally in three payments, but that they wouldn't take them?

A. Well, sir, I don't recall the word "several". It could have been several. I did, sir.

Q. Several occasions are the words.

A. No, sir. It should have been one occasion, sir.

Q. There were not several occasions?

A. Only one, sir.

Q. At the time you were talking to the agents, two years ago, could you recall more than one?

A. No, sir. But several—

1418 Q. Did you tell them several?

A. Well, sir, I spoke to several individuals. I believe I spoke to Mr. Huebner and I think when he brought the money back I again tried to do it, so if the word "several" was used there, it was an error there.

Q. Well, let me read you the sentence, for the record:

"This happened several times when we would try to take them into it."

A. "Take them," well, sir, I think you will find, sir, on the original copy there were some corrections that I made.

Q. I don't see any correction on this, Mr. Lubben.

A. Well, it was only one time that I can very specifically remember.

Q. All right. You do claim you have a good memory, do you not?

A. No, sir, not as good as it should be.

Q. Wouldn't you say that you had an exceptional memory?

A. No, sir.

Q. I took your deposition in this case, did I not?

A. Yes, sir.

1419 Q. At Puerto Rico?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at page 100 of that deposition did you not by your answer to a propounded question state:

"I have a good memory, sir. You bet your life. A wonderful memory."

A. Well, sir—

Q. Did you say that?

A. If it is in that, sir, I said it, but you just make a play on words.

Q. I am not making a play on words. I am just reading you what you said.

A. I also stated, sir—

Q. You were under oath at that time?

A. Yes, sir, and I am under oath now too. But I also stated that my memory is not as good as it should be.

Q. Still speaking of the statement of October 23, 1951, did you tell the agents on that occasion that Cain told you that a man named Tobias had been in to see Cain and had told him about the investigations?

A. Yes, sir, he did.

Q. And that Cain seemed to think that Tobias and 1420 you were working together and that you said no, he was just your auditor and so forth and you didn't know what he was doing. Did you make that statement?

A. Yes, sir. I made additional—I made more conversation on that. Now that you refer my memory to it, I know all about Mr. Tobias.

1421 Q. Now, you didn't tell us about that conversation in your direct testimony, that part of it, did you?

A. I don't remember whether I did or not, sir. It has been several days ago, and I have had a lot of conversations. I don't think I did, sir.

Q. And does the fact that that statement is omitted from your statement of Otcober 24th, indicate that it was in any way in error?

By Mr. Lockley: Objection, your Honor. It is immaterial.

By the Witness: No, sir. But—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, then, is the statement true?

A. Yes, sir. We did have a conversation about Mr. Tobias.

Q. All right. That is all I want to know.

You had a participation of some sort in four different companies which are involved here, did you not, the proprietorship, Eatsum Food Products, the partnership of the same name, General Confections, Inc., a corporation, and Reserve Trading Company, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. During the proprietorship period, you were 1422 the sole owner of that company, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had a secretary named Norman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Miss Norman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose first name I have forgotten.

A. Abigail.

Q. That is right. And your bookkeeper and office manager was Beatrice Feldman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she continued as such during—down until the time that the partnership was formed? She continued so to function for the proprietorship?

A. Who, sir?

Q. Miss Feldman?

A. She continued to function.

Q. Until the partnership came into being?

A. As the office manager.

Q. As the office manager?

A. Yes, sir, and my bookkeeper.

Q. And the bookkeeper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she had an assistant named Frieda Seider?

1423 A. Yes, sir, or Strum.

Q. Whose present name, or married name is Strum?

A. I think it is the reverse, sir. You are right, sir; it is Strum.

Q. She was the direct assistant of Miss Feldman? I mean, she was her lieutenant, or directly under her?

A. Well, Miss Feldman was the boss in the office, and I would say she worked for Miss Feldman, under Miss Feldman, yes.

Q. Now during the proprietorship era, you had only one firm of accountants, did you not?

A. The same firm, sir, Mr. Bernard Bercu, but we also had Mr. Louie Roth.

Q. I am speaking of the proprietorship.

A. Oh, you said a partnership, sir, I think.

Q. I am sorry. If I said it, I didn't mean it.

1424 Q. Now, during the proprietorship era you had only one firm of accountants, did you not?

A. The same firm, sir, Mr. Bernard Bercu. But we also had Mr. Louis Roth.

Q. I am speaking of the proprietorship.

A. Oh. You said the partnership, sir, I think.

Q. I am sorry. I didn't mean it. And Mr. Bercu's firm rendered a full auditing service?

A. During the proprietorship?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that included the usual things that outside accountants do, and ending up in the preparation and rendition of the annual report, and balance sheet, and all of that, right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Bercu was thoroughly familiar with the books which the proprietorship maintained, and with the records, and the way of maintaining them, was he not?

A. Well, sir, I would say he would have to be. He made the statements.

Q. Well, I wasn't arguing, Mr. Lubben.

A. I didn't mean to.

1425 Q. I mean that you, yourself, would not have the intimate familiarity with the details of the bookkeeping itself that Mr. Bercu would?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And then when the partnership was set up, Mr. Bercu, or his firm—when I say Mr. Bercu I mean his firm, too—he continued the auditing work right down to the time of the dissolution of the partnership. In that case, or in that era, there were also auditors who worked on the books, were there not?

A. Yes. But to correct you in your question, I think Bercu didn't stay all the way through the partnership. I think he quit about one month or so before I did. I think it was around January, sir, perhaps that he quit.

Q. There might have been a gap, although I don't recall his telling me that. But if there was he immediately resumed with you when you set up General Confections, did he not?

A. And I am not too right on that point, sir.

Q. I just want your best recollection.

A. No, sir, I don't for the moment say whether he did or didn't. I think he did and then again I think 1426 he didn't.

Q. Well, at the time of your deposition your recollection on that was better. I think you said that Mr. Bercu continued for General Confections for some three months, approximately, down to the time at which you hired Sproul & Scholz?

A. That's the way I figure it, sir. That's the way I think it happened.

1427 Q. And there were some—I don't know that it is material—for some reason or another, Mr. Bercu left after the first few months of the General Confections operation and you retained Sproul and Scholz who continued as your accountants with that company, all the way through the year 1946, at least; is that right?

A. Yes, sir. And I think part of '47.

Q. Right.

A. But, sir—

Q. We are not interested in the '47 part here.

A. Sir, you asked me one question, and before I had a chance to answer you asked me another. And you asked me during the period of the partnership—I think it says here—whether any other firms of accountants—

Q. I am just coming to that.

A. You asked it already, and I didn't get a chance to answer you.

Q. Yes. There was an accountant named Roth, was there not, during the partnership era?

A. Well, sir, he called himself an accountant.

Q. Well, I won't quarrel with you about that. But you understood him to be an accountant; you don't 1428 think that he was misrepresenting that he had a license, do you?

A. Yes, sir; he certainly did.

Q. Was he working for you?

A. He never worked for me a day in his life.

Q. But he did have access to the books?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was by authority of whom?

A. Mr. Giglio.

Q. And Mr. Roth had an assistant, a fellow accountant, who worked for him, did he not?

A. I think he had several people, sir.

Q. Undoubtedly. But do you remember this one in particular, Mr. Hausman?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Hausman. I remember him.

Q. And Mr. Hausman was on the premises from time to time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the Government, did you know, has submitted us sheets here, many sheets, prepared by Mr. Hausman from the books and records of the company?

A. I do now, sir. I didn't know it before.

Q. Did you know it for the first time when I told you, or did you know it before that?

1429 A. Just now, sir. I don't even know what the Government has given you.

Q. All right. But you do know Mr. Hausman?

A. Yes, sir; I do.

Q. And at the instance of Mr. Giglio, both those gentlemen, Roth and Hausman, had the authority to examine the books and to check the accounts; isn't that so?

A. Yes, sir; they could look anywhere they wanted. I had no objection.

1430 Q. And they were there to check the books, records, accounts of the partnership, from the standpoint of your major partner, Giglio?

A. Well, the real reason they were there, sir—I mean—

Q. What were they doing?

A. Roth was always trying to get me to fire Mr. Bercu.

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike it.

By the Witness: That's what he was there doing.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is immaterial.

By the Court: It is not even responsive to the question. It may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I just want to know if they were doing this from the standpoint of the Giglio partner.

A. Well, sir, they weren't doing it for me.

Q. Bercu was doing it for you?

A. He was doing it for the company, Eatsum Food Products Company.

Q. That's right.

A. And we paid him a bill for it and we paid him his fee. Eatsum Food Products Company, to my knowl-

1431 edge, never paid Louis Roth a dime, although several times he tried to make me pay him money and I wouldn't do it.

Q. I didn't ask you that, Mr. Lubben.

A. Pardon me. I am sorry.

Q. All I want to know you answered me, that he had access to the books.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. From that source?

A. Yes.

Q. And so did Mr. Hausman.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, was there anyone else that you can think of who had to do with the books and records of the proprietorship, partnership, or General Confections?

A. What do you mean, sir, who had to do with them?

Q. Who worked on the books?

A. I can't think of any, sir. There might be some men—

By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. I don't think of any, sir. There might be some men who worked for Mr. Bercu. I don't remember their names.

1432 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Of course, out of the accounting firm, or firms, the field auditors and the men would come, but that all stemmed back to Mr. Bercu?

A. Yes.

Q. And is included in his employment?

A. O. K.

Q. The same with Sproul & Scholz. He had other men, too, did he not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was one of those men Myer; do you remember Myer?

A. I think it was Winert.

Q. Winert was Bercu's partner, was he not?

A. Yes, sir, he worked for Mr. Bercu.

1433 Q. And working with Sproul & Scholz was Joseph Myer?

A. The only ones I can ever remember, sir, that worked for Sproul & Scholz was, I think, some redheaded fellow. I can't remember his name.

Q. Now, in the proprietorship—

Withdraw that.

In the partnership you said that there were two cash boxes maintained, box No. 1 and box No. 2, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you have a cash box in the proprietorship?

A. Yes, sir; in the—now, to take the proprietorship, there was a period, sir—well, Eatsum Food Products, the partnership was not formed until June 1, I believe, 1945. That is when they signed the papers. They had negotiated with me some time in April, and the papers always was being stalled off. They were going to go ahead with the papers tomorrow. So by the time June 1st came around, sir, we had already made, I believe, about five or six weeks profit under the sole ownership. So, in reality, sir, I was paid back with my own money.

1434 Q. Well, it is not quite that complicated, Mr. Lubben. I just want to know if the proprietorship did maintain a cash box.

A. Now, during that time, sir, from April, when Mr. Roth came in, he wanted us to stop the issuing of cash checks and to sell some merchandise for cash and buy it for cash.

1435 Q. You are ahead of me.

A. Well, that was in the—you see—

Q. I just want to know if you kept the box.

A. Yes, but you see, it was a sole proprietorship, sir, but it wasn't the sole proprietorship, if I can explain. As I stated before, we talked, I believe, in the middle of April, and they promised they were going ahead and buy 50 per cent of the company, as per the books. But then they kept stalling off as to the day they were going to pay it, and it really wasn't paid until June. And yet when we got paid in June they picked up that portion of the profits, or something, that were—I don't know—the accountant can tell you, but, sir, I got gypped.

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike it.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, there was something there was wrong. I don't know what it was.

By the Court: That portion may be stricken as not responsive.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did the proprietorship maintain a box?

A. Well, during that period of time, sir, I remember.

1436 Q. What was that period of time?

A. To the best of my recollection, sir, it was around—it was in April till about—to June, April to June, somewhere in that period, when we were going to become partners. I can't recall.

Q. Now, outside of that, going back before that time, April to June, did the proprietorship maintain a box?

A. Sir, I was asked that.

Q. Do you know?

A. I can't think of any, sir. There might have been some money in an envelope, but I can't remember any box.

1437 Q. Do you recall who made or maintained the record on the cash box that was kept at the proprietorship?

A. Well, now, when I said the proprietorship, sir, it is the period, sir, I believe, from around April until June.

Q. Whatever it was?

A. Yes.

Q. Before the partnership started to function?

A. That was a partnership then, sir, because they took the profits and put it back, so it was a partnership, even though the papers were signed several months later.

Q. I want to know who maintained the record.

A. I think I did, sir, some of them. And some, I think were in the handwriting of Mr. Loperfido. I am not sure, or Hankermyer. But I kept some track of it, sir.

Q. You are not mixing this up now, with the boxes which were kept after the partnership started?

A. No, sir; I think—I don't know—I have seen so many papers, but I think you will find some papers somewhere, sir, where I kept track of some stuff.

1438 Q. Well, the reason I say that, Mr. Lubben, on your deposition you testified—moving to the partnership now—that you had custody of the cash box in the partnership for a few days, and you kept the account of the ins and outs that was maintained on that box, and that then you passed the box to Loperfido, who thereafter kept the account, and kept custody of the box. Isn't that true?

A. Well, sir,—

Q. Do you remember telling me that?

A. Yes. But, sir, I think we were talking about the corn box. That pertained to the corn box, sir.

Q. All right, the corn box.

A. And I think at that particular time, that the candy box didn't amount to too much. I mean, we were never able to sell, sir, enough candy to—

Q. I am interested—

A. Pardon me, sir.

Q. —interested at the moment in the corn box of the partnership, and in your recollection as to the truth of what you told me.

A. Yes, sir.

1439 Q. You said that you maintained the box and kept the record for a very short time after the partnership started to operate and then that work was done by Loperfido, to whom you passed the box, is that true?

A. Well, sir, the box that I was referring to at that particular time, sir, was the corn box.

Q. That's right.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. And the corn box didn't come into being, I don't think, until sometime around August of 1945. Maybe I was wrong in the date.

Q. But I am correctly stating what you told me on the deposition in speaking of the corn box, that you maintained it only for a short time and then passed it on to Loperfido?

A. Yes, sir; but I got it back again.

Q. You didn't tell me that on the deposition, did you?

A. I don't think you asked me.

Q. Oh, yes, I did.

A. Well, I think there was a time there when Loperfido quit, sir, and that the box came back to me, or 1440 the records came back to me. The box never came back to me, but the records came back to me for a short space of time.

Q. Is that shown by the exhibit in evidence as Defendants' 14-B?

A. Yes, sir; this is the paper, sir, that I was referring to.

Q. That is the corn box, isn't it?

A. It says corn box at the top, sir.

Q. Yes. And you took it over from Frankie, as you call him?

A. That was Frank Loperfido, sir.

Q. I see. And then you made the entries and maintained it from there on, as far as this record shows?

A. Till around January 1st, I think it says there, sir.

By the Court: I think we will take our afternoon recess.

Mr. Marshal, I think for the convenience of the jury, the jury should be permitted to pass out first before the audience does. They don't have much time to recess.
1441 If you tell the audience to remain seated until the jury have time to get out in the hall that will cause less confusion.

By the Marshal: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: We will take a recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Still speaking of the corn box, Mr. Lubben, did you go to Cuba along in December and get back about January 1st?

A. I think, sir, it was in—I think it was after Christmas that I went to Cuba. You are talking about the year 1946. January—

Q. No. When was it that the partnership terminated?

A. In March, sir.

Q. Of '46?

A. Yes, sir. And I had been to Cuba prior.

Q. Was it while you were away that you gave the box to Loperfido?

A. No, sir. Oh, many, many months before that. But I said in December, sir—I said I didn't have custody of the box, I kept some records in December.

1442 Q. Well, let's take the records. Did you turn any of the records over to Loperfido when you went to Cuba?

A. I think he was gone, sir.

Q. He was gone?

A. I think he went sometime around the latter part of November, early in December.

Q. But you ceased keeping the records about January 1st.

A. I personally?

By Mr. Lockley: What year?

By Mr. Lockley: What year?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, 1946.

By the Witness:

A. No, you mean 1945. I ceased keeping records around—I think there was a period of about one month in there, sir, where I kept records of a corn box and that would be in 1945. Then Mr. Hankermyer kept track of the records, sir, I believe, in 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When did you turn it over to Hankermyer?

A. Oh, I think the latter part of December or shortly before I went to Cuba. I think I went to Cuba, sir, if I am not incorrect, I think about the 28th day of December. I went down to Cuba to buy some Cuban candy.

1443 Q. I forgot one of the accountants, Mr. Lubben. Was there another accountant associated with Roth whose name was Starr?

A. Well, I said he had two fellows there, sir. Mr. Hausman was a good man, and I don't know much about Starr, but I know Roth was a loss.

Q. You do remember there was such a person?

A. I don't know what his name was, sir.

Q. There were two and Hausman was one of the two?

A. Yes, sir. Mr. Roth, sir, was indicted eleven times after that.

By the Court: Well, that is not responsive to any question, Mr. Lubben. It may be stricken.

By the Witness: Okay, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of course, it will be stricken, your Honor, but I don't see that the—

By the Witness: I am sorry sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: —that the admonitions pay off.

By the Court: You just answer the questions, Mr. Lubben. Don't volunteer anything.

1444 By the Witness: All right, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Starr's handwriting?

A No, sir.

Q. Would you know it, if you saw it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, coming back to the proprietorship, and the method of keeping track of the overages, as I understand it, when proprietorship received an invoice, or a bill, you, or someone working under you, would add the dollar amount of the overage to that invoice as the first step, is that correct?

A. Well, sir, I think we added the amount per pound and the dollar amount at the same time.

Q. Well, it is true that the dollar amount was added?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I didn't say that was everything that was added necessarily, but you did add the dollar amount. Did you do that by striking out the typed amount and putting the total in instead?

A. No, sir.

Q. How was it done?

A. Well, to the best of my recollection, sir, the 1445 invoice would come from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company calling for a certain number of pounds of candy at a certain amount per pound, total. Then below that I believe we used to take—we used to put the premium per pound and then take the total number of pounds and multiply it by the premium and add that below. And I believe a line was drawn, getting the total. I also believe—I am sure, sir, that somewhere in those figures we took the two per cent off the invoice price, the actual amount of money we paid on the invoice.

1446 Q. But when you got through you had a piece of paper called an invoice on which the amount had been changed?

A. You mean the Shotwell's amount?

Q. Well, whoever it was.

A. I don't think we ever disturbed their figures, sir. We just added something more on the bottom.

Q. You didn't draw a line through the figure and substitute a new figure?

A. I don't ever remember saying that, sir.

Q. I just want to know—

A. Yes.

Q. —what you recall about it.

A. That's right.

Q. And then would you afterwards pay to the supplier, by check, the amount of the invoice as rendered?

A. We would pay the supplier the amount that he had on the invoice, by check; yes, sir.

Q. And then before that payment could there be any entry or posting of the invoice to any account?

A. Before, sir?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, when the—I don't know whether you
1447 posted it before or after, but I know we posted it some place.

Q. Well, if Mr. Bercu said that it would be entered as a total amount in the accounts payable record, would you agree with that?

A. Well, I wouldn't know enough to agree or disagree.

Q. You just don't know about that, is that it?

A. That's correct. I don't know what mechanical procedure was necessary for putting it on the books.

Q. And when you would draw the check for the amount of the invoice as originally rendered where would you make or post the transaction showing the drawing of that check?

A. I wouldn't know where they put it in the books.

Q. You are not familiar with what was done on that?

A. No, sir.

Q. And do you know whether during the proprietorship in any situation in which an average was involved whether there would be drawn right at the same time a check to cash for the amount of the overage; was that a practice?

A. You better read that one to me again, sir. I
1448 don't seem to digest it very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read it?

(Question read.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. That's a rather cumbersome question. Let me say it this way, Mr. Lubben. Mr. Berch testified that another check, in addition to the one for the original amount in the invoice, another check would be drawn simultaneously, as he puts it, to cash, for the balance of the invoice, as raised, and it would be posted to accounts payable. Do you have any knowledge or recollection of that?

A. Well, sir, it may have been drawn simultaneously.

1449 Q. I know it might have been, but, I mean, do you know?

A. I don't know that, sir.

Q. Do you know what was done about it; do you claim personally to know just how that was handled?

A. Well, the only thing I know, sir, is that at certain periods we would take a—

Q. I am not asking all the things you know.

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. I just want to know about that.

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Or we would be here too long.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge, as a matter of fact, whether there were or were not such simultaneous checks drawn to cash in respect of certain suppliers of goods to the proprietorship which were entered in just the way that Mr. Bercu stated?

By Mr. Lockley: Are you referring to Shotwell?

By Mr. O'Brien: I made no reference to Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: Well. I object, your Honor, unless 1450 he rephrases his question to indicate the Shotwell Company, specifying exactly—

By the Court: Referring to Bercu, he hasn't given any testimony. I think it is confusing when you include reference to a document that is not before the witness.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. All right: Forget Mr. Bercu, Mr. Lubben. From your knowledge, or your examination of the records of the proprietorship, are you able to say whether there were instances in which overages were involved in which there was a check for cash for the precise amount of the overage on a given invoice that was posted to the books to the debit of the account payable?

A. No, sir; I don't know anything about that.

By the Court: Raise your voice, Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I don't know anything about that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You don't know one way or the other whether that is so or not, sir?

1451 A. Well, sir, all I know, it is possible.

Q. I mean, on that subject, do you know or don't you?

A. You get me mixed up on the subject, now, sir. I don't know. I don't know, sir.

Q. Maybe I can state it a little more clearly. Suppose an invoice came in for a thousand dollars to the Eatsum proprietorship on which there was an overage of ten cents, amounting, also to a thousand dollars. As I understand it, you, in some way, increased the amount of that invoice to $2,000.00, is that right?

A. Well, no, we didn't increase the amount of the invoice to $2,000.00. We just took the amount of the invoice and added the overage and drew the line.

Q. All right. Then you put the two together that gave a full invoice price that included what had been originally stated and what was figured for the overage, right?

A. To me, sir, it gave me the cost of the merchandise.

Q. But, as a matter of bookkeeping, it was intended to put the invoice in that form into the books and 1452 records of the company, was it not?

A. Well, I don't know what they did with it after that.

1453 Q. You don't know that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You would pay the thousand dollars by check, correct?

A. You are talking about this hypothetical invoice for a thousand dollars?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. We would pay it by check; yes, sir.

Q. Now, my question was: Do you know of any instances in which right at this point you would write a separate check for cash for a thousand dollars?

A. At that very moment that we wrote one?

Q. Well, about the same time.

A. You mean we would write one check for the invoice and then the very next check, or within a few minutes write a check for cash?

Q. Right.

A. That's possible. It could have happened sometime, sir. But specifically I can't remember it, sir.

1454 Q. And then both of those checks would be posted to the book record at the appropriate places where they occurred?

A. Well, sir, I paid the accountant to keep them books, and what he did, sir—

Q. Well. I am not interested in demanding that, you know, Mr. Lubben.

I just want you to tell me what you do know. Do you know if it had occurred or not?

A. I don't know. I don't know what occurred, sir.

Q. Not only what he did, but you haven't examined into the books and records enough to be able to tell us what really happened, is that it?

A. Well, sir, I am not very good on books. In fact, I know very little.

Q. You haven't done it, and you can't tell us what happened, so we have to look at the books.

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Now, why did you terminate the partnership?

By Mr. Lockley: I think that is objectionable, your Honor, why he terminated the partnership. Why he terminated it is immaterial here. It is beyond the scope
1455 of the direct examination.

By the Court: Well, tell us briefly.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Go ahead and answer.

A. Why did I terminate it, sir?

Q. Yes.

A. I just wanted to get out, sir, from almost the day I got in.

Q. Well, I just want to know why. I think you have made it clear that you wanted to get out, but I want the reason. I am not so sure I understand the reason.

A. Well, sir, for one reason, Mr. Roth wanted to—he wanted this cash box kept, and he got other ideas, sir, of taking books, and doing—of keeping books his own way, and then I found out who the people really were, and I just wanted to get away from them, sir, and I did.

Q. Well, I think you said before that there was a long standing dispute?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With Roth and with Giglio?

A. Yes, sir.

1456 Q. As to the mode of handling these overage items, isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Bercu thought it ought to be done in the way that was described a while ago, in the proprietorship, and they thought it ought to be done by maintaining a cash box, clearing only the original invoice price through the books, and handling the rest of the transaction through that box separately audited, is that right?

A. Sir, you are going to have to break that up a little smaller for me, sir. You are stating too many questions at one time for me.

Q. Well, Roth and Giglio did not agree with you and Mr. Bercu, that the overages could be handled in the way that you say they were handled during the proprietorship?

A. No. They wanted to keep some crooked books.

Q. Were they crooked because the posting did not go through to the books, but were reflected only in the separate cash box?

A. No. They had—they had visions of a big empire where they were going to be in this business and that business, and this business and that business, and 1457 they were going to form a lot of corporations and take the money from those corporations and put it in that corporation, and put it in this corporation, and put it in that corporation, and they were going to gyp the Government.

1458 Q. Well, as far as these transactions are concerned, if I understood your direct testimony, the difference was that they had a box and all they put through their books was the original invoice amount, and the overages were handled through the box without being reflected on the books in any way?

A. Well, sir, I don't know whether Mr. Bercu ever picked that up or not. For instance, let me give you an example: Where I would take an overage out of the box for Shotwell—

Q. I didn't ask you for an explanation.

A. I am trying to tell you—

Q. I didn't ask you for examples, Mr. Lubben. I am just trying to see if that wasn't the subject matter of your dispute?

A. Well, sir, I don't know what you are talking about.

Q. You don't have to go into great detail. You wanted to get out. You didn't like the way they were handling overages. You had a long-standing disagreeemnt between yourself and Bercu on the one hand, and Roth and Giglio on the other, is that right?

1459 A. Yes, sir, because we never had to keep that corn box, for one thing.

Q. All right. And I think you said that Blumberg recommended that you get out?

A. No, sir. I didn't say that, but—

Q. Well, that you get out at any price?

A. Well, I went to Mr. Blumberg for advice.

Q. Well, did he advise you to get out?

A. No. I told him I wanted to get out and they wouldn't split the thing down, 50-50.

Q. Did he agree you should get out?

A. Oh, he agreed I shouldn't have gone in.

Q. But you did get out? You did get out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you started General Confections, Inc.?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You had no partners in that?
A. No, sir.
Q. I meant to ask you a question, that I forgot. While you were in that partnership with Giglio and the others, who ran the affairs of the partnership? Who carried on the business, you or Giglio?
A. Well, sir, I looked after the candy business,
1460 and I would say I ran the affairs, but anything that had to be cleared with Mr. Giglio—I mean, anything that was major, or that we wanted to do something, I would check with Mr. Giglio or Mr. Roth, and Mr. Roth would be in my office very often, sir, but if it was something that required—something I thought important, I would go talk to Mr. Giglio about it.
Q. Well, you had full responsibility for the conduct of the business, didn't you, in the partnership?
A. Well, within limitations, that a partnership imposed.
Q. I mean, Giglio wasn't even around there very much, was he?
A. Oh, yes, sir.
Q. If you wanted to draw checks for cash, you would draw them for cash; you didn't have to ask him about it?
A. Well, no. We continued the same way we had before, but when Louis Roth would pick up these cash checks, he would come in and start yelling at me for drawing them, and Mr. Giglio said I should do what Mr. Roth said about not drawing these cash checks.
1461 It wasn't very happy, sir.
Q. But you still drew them? I mean, you had the power to do it, and you did it, did you?
A. I did, sir.
Q. And you also were the one who carried on the candy and the corn syrup operations, weren't you?
A. Well, sir, the corn syrup operation, yes, sir. I looked after the corn syrup, but they brought some friends of theirs there, this Mr. Bowman who was mentioned the other day.
Q. Well, yes, once in a while they would have somebody of that kind, but in general, you had the contacts, and you carried on the operations?

A. Well, they would tell me—like once they told me not to sell to Mike Cohen. In fact, a number of times they told me not to sell to Mike Cohen, and I had to sell to Ewald like they told me.

Finally, I said, "What is the sense of selling to Ewald when he is just adding it on, and selling it to Cohen, and so you might as well sell Mike Cohen."

Q. Yes, but you did sell to Mike Cohen?

A. Yes, sir. He is a very fine man.

1462 Q. I was just going through your transcript, Mr. Lubben, and I wanted to get it clear just what your connection was down there.

You testified in the Southern District of New York in the case of College Town Candy versus Bettencourt, didn't you?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, your Honor. There is no materiality.

By Mr. O'Brien: That remains to be seen.

By Mr. Lockley: There was nothing said about College Town Candy.

By the Court: I didn't hear it. I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor. This is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: You say it is immaterial? It might be. I don't know what the questions are that counsel is going to propound to the witness, or what the answers will be. Until I hear the questions, I can't determine whether or not they are material.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, sir,—

1463 By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I just asked you if you testified there?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And were you asked this question:

"Now, about Eatsum Food Products Company, do you know what your partners did in that particular business?"

And did you make this answer:

"To help you along a little, if there was anything wrong with Eatsum, I did it. I offered yesterday to tell you how I ran Eatsum."

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry, sir.

"If there was anything wrong with Eatsum, I did it. I offered to tell you yesterday how I ran Eatsum Food Products. Mr. Giglio did stick his nose in too much, but I was the guy running it, sir, distinctly."

Did you say that?

A. Yes, sir, but that referred to corn syrup transactions, because here I was defending myself in a case,
1464 sir, that only when I am on the stand the third day I realize that it happened after I left the partnership.

1465 Q. I am not trying to pin you down to any particular transaction, Mr. Lubben, but I just want it to be reasonably clear to the Court and the jury that you are not exactly a retiring violet even among those partners. You were running the show. Isn't that right?

A. No, that isn't right.

Q. You ran it on corn syrup.

A. On these transactions of corn syrup I wanted to expedite the situation because here was the deal, a court case where I am in there, subpoenaed in there defending myself and only after several days did I see an invoice that is presented to me and hear the transaction involved happened in June and I left in March and I had been subpoenaed down there to defend myself and Mr Giglio and everybody walked out and I had to pay the lawyer.

Q. And you did say that you had the responsibility for the operation of the business?

A. I have never denied it here.

Q. It wasn't just a question of the item, just that item?

A. No, sir.

1466 Q. The corn transactions were the one in connection with this big cash box which was maintained, were they not?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now coming to General Confections which you organized promptly upon your withdrawing from the partnership—I was observing you had no partners; you ran that alone except in the corporate form, is that right?

A. Yes, sir. I had some stockholders.

Q. Now General Confections engaged either directly or through its wholly owned subsidiary, Reserve Trading Corporation, in the same type of black market operations, did it not?

A. No, sir. Their—I think you will find in the Reserve Trading Company, sir, that we billed the corn syrup.

Q. Well, but you were dealing in corn, corn syrup, dextrose and other materials in short supply?

A. Well, I think I bought that dextrose—the dextrose which I bought was on the black market and I think you will find I bought sugar in the black market, sir, but that was used in the manufacture of candy which we sold to our customers.

1467 Q. But you had a great deal which was not used in your own operation but was bought and sold in the black market, did you not?

A. Sir, we sold corn syrup, sir, but I don't think you can say it was sold on the black market—

Q. Well—

A. See, it was sold on an invoice, sir, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Well, if it was sold over ceiling, whatever the purchase here may show that to have been, if it was sold over the ceiling, it was in the black market, wasn't it?

A. But I don't think it was over the ceiling, sir.

Q. Well, time will tell on that. But, you did have a cash box in General Confections, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those transactions were handled, those and certain other transactions were handled through that cash box?

A. Well, I would like you to be specific about those transactions, sir. Which transactions?

Q. In corn syrup.

A. No, sir. I don't think you will find anything 1468 like that in the corn syrup whatsoever. I may be wrong, sir, but I can't recall. You have some records? I would like to have you refresh my memory.

Q. When you first started to operate the General Confections, as I understand it, Miss Feldman was not with you?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. She remained with the partnership to help them with the liquidation or for some purpose?

A. Well, I asked her to stay there, sir.

Q. But she did remain for a while?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And she didn't come over or back to General Confections until when?

A. I believe it was in August, sir, in 1946.

Q. Now during the time that she was away with the partnership, who took care of your bookkeeping and your office at General Confections?

A. Well, I believe Miss Strum did, sir, and—

Q. That is Freda Seider?

A. That is right, and I think that Mr. Hausman did some work for us for a while.

Q. Now, as a matter of fact, you hired Mr. Haus-
1469 man and put him on the payroll of General Confections, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Up to that time, he had been working for and he had been paid by Louis Roth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I notice—well, never mind that. You said during your prior testimony here that if there was a cash box maintained by General Confections that the profit from that box was carried into the books and records of General Confections so that it would be reflected in some way in its tax return, did you not?

A. Yes, sir. I can remember several instances where I would have some money left over and I would give that to the bookkeeper to make deposits.

1470 Q. Well, you say the profit was carried in—I think you said it was carried in as cash sales?

A. Well, sir, if we sold some merchandise and we had certain payments to be taken out, we would deduct the payments and so forth and what was left, sir, that was profit and we put that in the company.

Q. Yes. What did you put it into, cash sales?

A. I'd just say, "Put it in the bank." Where it went, I don't know.

Q. That was the bookkeeper's problem, where to put it?

A. Well, I imagine she put it in the bank, first.

Q. During Mr. Hausman's regime, you would tell him that, would you not?

A. Well, I can only remember, sir, of two or three occasions or four occasions where—

Q. Well, did you tell Mr. Hausman to do that?

A. Just to keep the books, that was all, sir.

Q. And would you have him report to you the profit from the box so that you could tell him to get it on the books?

A. I can't remember, sir.

Q. He did audit the box, did he not?

A. Whether he specifically did or Miss Strum or 1471 who did it, it didn't make any difference. It was certainly no secret in the office.

Q. I don't mean that it was a secret.

A. I don't know whether he audited it or what he did with it.

Q. He kept track of the ins and outs of the box, didn't he?

A. All I can remember, sir, was I got a book and I wrote in it certain things, in the book that—what happened to certain sales that Mr. Hankermyer did the same thing. Now, whether Mr. Hausman audited it or checked it, I can't say whether he did or didn't, but he was certainly paid to do something, sir.

Q. Well, I just wanted your best recollection of it. I didn't want to dwell on it particularly because Mr. Hausman is here under subpoena.

You were shown a group of invoices from Shotwell to General Confections and you were asked to state whether those invoices had been marked up and you testified they had not been. They are in evidence here. I am not sure they are in evidence. They were exhibited to you.

Do you remember looking at them during Mr. Kir-1472 by's examination?

A. Well, sir, I recall looking at two batches of invoices.

Q. They were black photostats?

A. Yes, sir. One bunch of photostats had 18¾ cents and one didn't have it. Which is which, I don't recall.

Q. Well, you said that you looked at them and they were not marked up.

A. Well, sir, if that is what I said—

Q. Yes. The record will tell.

A. Yes.

Q. Why was it that you did not resume at General Confections, the practice you say had been in effect in the proprietorship, of marking up these invoices where there was an overage?

A. Well, I wouldn't know why we didn't, sir.
Q. Did you tell Mr. Hausman not to mark them up?
A. No, sir. I don't know whether I did or not but I will tell you something, sir.
Q. I just want to know whether you told him that or not?
A. I can't recall whether I did or whether I didn't.
Q. Well, did you tell Miss Feldman when she re-
1473 turned in August of 1946 not to mark them up?
A. I don't ever recall such a conversation, sir.
Q. Well, do you think that you could produce here any invoice to General Confections from any of the suppliers which would show that they were in fact marked up?
A. From who, sir?
Q. I don't understand.
A. From any supplier?
Q. Yes.
A. I don't know, sir, but if I recall, the reason the practice was dropped—
Q. Yes.
A. Well, I don't know this for a fact. It is only something that I—this happened many years ago but I think the reason the practice was dropped of not putting the amount of the overage on the invoice was that if the OPA man would come around there, he would look at the invoice and he would actually see in a moment that there was a black market payment to someone. I can think of no other reason, sir.
1474 Q. Wasn't that equally true during the time that you and Mr. Bercu on the one hand, and Mr. Roth and Mr. Giglio on the other, were having this dispute?
A. No. I don't think it was about putting it on the face of the invoice, or anything like that. I think it was the method of not drawing checks, sir. I can't remember.
Q. Well, Mr. Lubben, if you marked up the invoice in General Confections, I think you drew the simultaneous checks, one for the original amount of the invoice, and one for the amount of the overage, and you posted those on the books, that would be a permanent record of the transaction, would it not?
A. You are talking of what time, sir?
Q. Any time.
A. You just got through—

Q. 1945 and 1946?

A. You just got through saying General Confections, sir.

Q. Yes. You didn't do this in General Confections, did you?

A. Sir, I don't know what they did.

1475 Q. You just don't know what they did?

A. All I know, sir—look—

Q. Mr. Lubben, didn't you run General Confections just exactly the same way, as far as the books and records are concerned, as you did the partnership?

A. Well, I don't know whether we did or not, sir. Whatever—

Q. You just don't know that?

A. No, sir.

Q. But you got out because of this basic disagreement, and you didn't take the trouble to find out if that had anything to do with it or not?

A. That was one disagreement, sir, and I told you before that I found out who these people were, and I wanted no part of them.

Q. You found out who they were—I don't know what you mean by that. They were your partners. You had these claimed dealings with Shotwell, didn't you?

A. I had what?

Q. You had these transactions with Shotwell that you testified to, whatever they are, and they had them with you, didn't they?

1476 A. Prior to becoming a partner, yes, sir.

Q. Yes, prior to becoming a partner, and after becoming a partner?

A. During the partnership, yes, sir.

Q. Giglio was your associate, wasn't he?

A. He was, but I left him.

Q. All right. You left him, and you picked up with him, and you left him.

Now, when you did leave him, it didn't do anything to change this practice which was one of the things you had been complaining about, did you?

A. I don't know whether it changed or—

Q. All right.

A. —or whether it didn't, sir.

Q. All right. You just don't know that. But, do you know whether you told Mr. Hausman or Miss Feldman positively to do nothing to change it; whether you told them not to go back to the old practice of the proprietorship, do you remember that?

A. Sir, I cannot remember that conversation.

1477 Q. Well, all right. I just want to know. Now, many of your invoices on the resale of goods and many of your inventory transactions were factored through General Commercial Acceptance Corporation, were they not?

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't say many of my invoice transactions. I would say about ninety-nine per cent of my invoice transactions were factored through the General Commercial Acceptance.

Q. Well, I am glad to have your estimate, Mr. Lubben, although it isn't particularly material to me.

A. Well, sir, it was practically everything.

Q. I have, for your information, a list of unassigned accounts which is not substantial.

A. Well, sir—

Q. But I am not interested. You did have a great many transactions. Make it ninety-nine per cent if you will, which were factored through that company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now that was the company—that is the company with which Mr. Milton Blumberg is connected?

A. Yes, sir.

1478 Q. And originally in the early days you had handled your financing on such items through the Manufacturers Trust Company, had you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But after a short time, you sold to Mr. Blumberg's company and from there on they did the factoring down to some time in 1947 or 1948 when Budget Factors took it over, as you have said?

A. Yes.

Q. And while I am on names, Budget Factors, were you introduced to them by the accountants Kaplan and Glassman?

By Mr. Lockley: I object. Did I understand counsel to say that this was something that happened in 1947 and 1948?

By the Court: What has that to do in connection with this period with which we are concerned?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am aware of this period, your Honor, but anything that happened with respect to these books and records or the memorandum and sheets that we have here which are not part of those books and records and anything that happened at the time they were claimed 1479 to be made, right down to date, is going to be of interest to me.

By the Court: Well, not who introduced him to the factoring company.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't care to argue it at this time.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Going back to Mr. Blumberg's company, items such as those sold to your companies by Shotwell would come under the category of inventory loans, would they not, in your dealings with Mr. Blumberg?

A. Well, sir, you have to be more specific on certain shipments because—

Q. I don't mean any particular shipment.

A. The only thing I know of inventory loans is when I would buy a large amount of almonds, I would have to go and put up twenty per cent so I would have an equity and Mr. Blumberg would pay the eighty per cent.

Q. He would pay the supplier?

A. The supplier, yes, and he would have the papers. He would ascertain I wanted to get some almonds. I would have to go and pay Mr. Blumberg.

Q. Sure. Would he sometimes give the money to 1480 you so that you could pay the supplier?

A. I don't recall. I think he gave that money to me, sir.

Q. And sometimes he paid the money direct, I mean his company did?

A. I don't remember the mechanics, sir, but that is how it was.

Q. You had to put up twenty per cent and he was lending eighty per cent?

A. Yes, sir.

1481 Q. Well, in determining the amount during, let us say, the General Confections period, in determining the amount against which he would lend 80 per cent, did he do it on the basis of the original invoice price or did he do it on the basis of the raised price or full price as you call it?

A. Well, sir, I can only remember, and that is vaguely—I can't really put my finger on a specific instance where he would do—take any inventory on Shotwell merchandise. I think on one or two occasions—and this is only a guess—that I got property loans when I wanted to give money to Shotwell and I didn't have it.

Q. Well, now, have you finished?

A. No, sir.

Q. Go ahead.

A. I don't have those records and I am sure Mr. Blumberg kept records.

Q. We don't have the records, Mr. Lubben, but we may not have you back for cross. You will be through and I just want to find out while you are on here what you remember about it. I have got the records.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. And there is a great volume of them. Now, do
1482 you remember that when you did borrow the money to factor these items, you would turn in the papers to Mr. Blumberg and then get them back and a trust receipt?

A. Well, sir, if you have the papers and everything, couldn't I just look at them?

Q. I just want to know what you remember. I am not interested in proving the facts at this moment.

A. Sir, I don't remember the mechanics of a loan to Shotwell, sir, but if you have the papers, sir, I would like to refresh my memory, sir. It has been a number of years.

Q. I would like to know what you can tell me about it without doing that and I want to know if you are able to tell me whether Blumberg was lending you the money at 80 per cent, let us say, or whatever the percentage was, against the full price or against the original invoice or invoice prices?

A. Well, sir, when we would ship, we would invoice a car of chocolates and we would take this 37⅓ against the 18¾ and we would get so much a dozen and I added the profit. We would invoice that to the customer.

I would take that full complete invoice of the 1483 customer to Miltie Blumberg and we would go through the regular manner as on the other shipments and he would loan us 80 per cent and withhold shipment. That is the way I recall, sir.

Q. If you were borrowing on some goods that were coming in, some goods coming in from Shotwell or goods going from Shotwell to you and Blumberg wanted the value in determining the 80 per cent, did he take the Shotwell invoice price or did he take your full price?

A. Well, sir, I wouldn't know. I mean—

Q. All right. Now, going back just for one question, to that corn box in the partnership, or rather, in the proprietorship, the currency box—

Will you look at this instrument which I ask to be marked Defendants' Exhibit 23 for identification—

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 23 for identification.)

Tell me if you recognize the handwriting. Do you know that handwriting?

A. No, sir, I don't know the handwriting, sir.

Q. Do you recognize or do you know Mr. Hausman's handwriting? Do you or don't you?

1484 A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. After you had made some arrangement with Giglio and others about starting up the partnership during these months that you were waiting for those to be fulfilled and carried out, during that period, I understand that the proprietorship maintained a cash box?

A. Well, sir, as I stated before, it was a proprietorship but it wasn't a proprietorship.

1485 Q. Well, call it what you will, but as far as the proprietorship is concerned, the only cash box that you know about is the one that was set up while the matter was pending, until the partnership could be fully organized and put into operation?

A. Yes, but I testified. I believe, prior to that there was an envelope that we had some money in, and I can't remember any box.

Q. But do you remember that when you started this practice, this temporary practice that you are talking of, which was made necessary because the partnership thing hadn't been carried out yet, when you started that practice you had a balance in the cash box in the proprietorship, didn't you?

A. Well, I wouldn't know, sir, whether we had—

Q. You just don't know?

A. No. If we did, sir,—I mean, the accountants or bookkeepers would know about it.

Q. Now, going to the books and records, the proprietorship books and records at or after the time of the formation of the partnership, what was done with them? Where were they kept?

A. What do you mean, sir?

Q. Well, you had a proprietorship and it had 1486 these books and records that Miss Feldman and Mr. Bercu told us about on the deposition—you told us about?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When the partnership got under way, what did you do with the books and records of the proprietorship?

A. Well, some time later, sir, I don't recall when, I took the books and record of the proprietorship down to a firm of accountants called Sproul and Scholz.

Q. And did you leave them there?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And then in September of 1948, did you and Mr. Davidson go up there to get them, to get them back?

A. In September of 1948?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I think I went up there once, sir. I don't know who went with me to get the books, but I owed the man $1200.

Q. And you didn't get them that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. And then did you come back with one or more
1487 of the agents of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to get them?

A. Well, sir, I think there was a lapse of time, and I believe the Government asked me, well, where are the books and records for the partnership, and I said, "They are at the firm of Sproul and Scholz."

By the Court: The proprietorship or the partnership?

By the Witness: Proprietorship, sir. And the firm of Sproul and Scholz—he said, "Go and get them."

I said, "I can't get them. I owe the man twelve hundred dollars and he won't give them to me."

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am not interested in the dispute, Mr. Lubben, but I just want to find out where the books are. Did the agent go and get them, to your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir. They went to get the books, sir.

Q. And since that time, as far as you know, the Government has had the custody of the proprietorship books and records?

A. Well, the Government took them, sir, and what they have done with them, I don't know.

1488 Q. Well, it is fair to say, isn't it, Mr. Lubben, that since that time off and on you have worked over at the office of the Bureau in New York and in the office of the Department of Justice in New York and some here and on those occasions you have seen the proprietorship records there, haven't you?

A. No, sir. I saw books there but I don't know whose books they were. They had a lot of books. Well, sir—

Q. Well, all right.

A. Well—

Q. But then, I take it the last thing you know about is that they took the records, and that is it?

A. Yes, sir. I have seen papers since then but no books that I can remember about.

Q. Now on the records of the partnership, were those records turned over to Giglio at or about the time of the dissolution of the partnership?

A. Sir, they weren't turned over to him. They were just left there, right in his possession. They never left his possession.

1489 Q. I see. So that as far as you are concerned, while there may have been an official or legal dissolution of the partnership, you were in effect withdrawing from it and you left the books and records with Giglio and others who, as I understand it, continued to carry on the partnership business?

A. Well, sir, I don't know what they intended to do with the business. I got out and I left the books and records in the office at 19—

Q. Didn't you testify that Miss Feldman stayed over there and that they did function for some time after the time that you got out?

A. Yes, sir. I asked her to stay.

Q. And the books and records were not taken by you but were left with them?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. All right. Now on General Confections, that was a corporation and it was doing business over there in

New Jersey during the year 1946 and thereafter until March of 1948, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in March of 1948, a receiver was appointed?

1490 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the receiver, I take it, came to the premises and took possession and among other things, took whatever books and records you had there in the office?

A. Well, sir, it wasn't the receiver. It was two accountants for the receiver.

Q. All right. Well, the receiver or the receiver's representatives. Do you remember who the accountants were?

A. No. I think one of them had his name—I think one of them, his name was Maclusky. I am not sure. It was Mac something.

Q. All right. Now do you know whether there was turned over to that receiver the books which Mr. Mammel said were missing? I am looking for the term here. Well, it is, I think, the cash disbursement book and the purchase book. You mentioned here the other day—somebody asked Mr. Mammel if he had them.

By Mr. Mammel: They—

By Mr. O'Brien: Sir?

By the Witness:

A. Sir, the accountants for the receiver came

1491 and they told me they wanted the books and records of General Confections. They went back in the candy factory. They stayed about an hour or an hour and a half and they took this book and that book. I don't know what books they took, but they took a lot of books, sir, and then they went away.

Q. Did you personally inventory the books as they were turned over to them?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: We will be in recess, members of the jury, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing until the jury files out?

This honorable court will recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Tuesday, September 2, 1953,
10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

1493 DAVID G. LUBBEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you recall that at the time of the deposition you were of the impression that the method of handling the overages on the books of the partnership and of General Confections was the same as had been used during the proprietorship; do you recall that?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. And whether such a statement was made in the depositions of Bercu and Feldman you do not know?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, I think that you identified Government's Exhibit 63-B—if I can find that here—

By Mr. O'Brien: It is the same as the photostat, Judge, but this is in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. As I understand you, Mr. Lubben, 63-B is an instrument which was left with you, or left at a hotel room, or some place, by Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir; that's correct.

1494 Q. Did you say that that was a recap sheet which Huebner had with him at the time?

A. Well, sir, Mr. Huebner always had a sheet of paper on which—

Q. I didn't ask you that.

A. All right.

Q. I just asked you if you said that this was a recap sheet?

A. Well, I don't recall whether this particular recap sheet pertained to that certain transaction but I know that when Mr.—when we left the room—

Q. Mr. Lubben, all I want to know is: Did you say that this sheet which you hold in your hand was a recap sheet of the same kind as those you were talking of before?

A. Well, we had one, and, sir, Mr. Huebner had one, and this is one that he had.

Q. I know this is one that he had, but did you say that it was a recap sheet of the kind which he ordinarily brought, let's put it that way.

A. Well, he would bring a sheet of paper.

Q. I want to know if this is of the same kind, that is all.

A. This same size paper?

1495 Q. No, this same type of data, and information?

A. Very similar, yes. He would show the shipments, and so forth, and the dates and so on.

Q. And in whose handwriting is it?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. Is it the same handwriting as the others you saw?

A. I never paid that much attention, so I could tell whether it was or wasn't, sir.

Q. Were there any other sheets which Mr. Huebner left on the occasion of these visits that you have described?

A. No, sir; there were not.

Q. I meant to add, that you took the sheet, made the pencil endorsement which appears on it, and gave it to Miss Feldman?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you got back to the office?

A. I don't know whether I specifically handed it to her, or else I just put it in the basket that she picked up during the day.

Q. Yes.

Now speaking of the unbilled shipments, do you recall during your deposition at Puerto Rico, being 1496 asked:

"Did you ever make out and give to Shotwell bills of lading directed to David G. Lubben and Associates?"

And answering: "I don't remember."

By Mr. Lockley: What page, counsel?

By Mr. O'Brien: Page 113.

By the Witness: I don't ever recall such a situation, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, I am not asking you about a situation, but were you asked that question, and did you make that answer?

A. Well, sir, if it is in the book, I must have been asked it.

Q. All right. And were you asked, in the same connection:

"Or to David G. Lubben and Company?"

And did you answer:

"I don't remember that."

A. That's right. That's true, sir.

Q. And were you asked:

"Did you ever prepare bills of lading so directed?"

1497 And you answered:

"I don't remember, sir. I don't ever remember, sir. I don't remember giving any bills of lading."

Do you recall that?

A. That's true. Yes, sir. I gave some shipping instructions, though, sir.

Q. I will ask you about those.

Now, what is your present recollection as to who made out the bills of lading which are in evidence here?

A. Well, in that 90,000 pounds of baby spice drops, or that candy that went to various people in New England, to the best of my recollection, sir, I gave Mr. Huebner a piece of paper on which I said, "Send so many cases to this man, and so many cases to this person, and that person."

On the chocolates, sir, that were shipped to William Barron, and places like that, I gave him—gave them shipping instructions to ship it, otherwise they couldn't ship it direct to our trade. I don't recall any bill of lading.

1498 Q. I see.

A. On that corn syrup, sir, that I bought from Shotwell—

Q. That's much later, is it not?

A. Well, it's a shipment. But there was something, sir, that went to the V. Seng warehouse—if I recall correctly, by the name of Seng—and I gave the man shipping instructions, where to ship the different lots to.

Q. Yes, but I am interested now in the unbilled shipments. You understand that. Were your conversations always with Huebner?

By the Court: Well, regarding what?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. About the unbilled shipments and the shipping insfructions, anything else relating to them.

A. Yes, sir. I said they were always with Mr. Huebner.

Q. Did you have any conversations with Mr. Erickson?

By the Court: Mr. who?

By Mr. O'Brien: Erickson.

By the Witness:

A. I don't recall, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

1499 Q. You can't remember whether you did or not?

A. The only time—I passed the time of day with him a number of times, and the only time I can remember any big conversation with Mr. Erickson is when he came to New York.

Q. Did you, at the Shotwell plant, have some conversations with him?

A. Conversations about what, sir?

Q. About these unbilled shipments, their routing, preparation of the bills of lading, and any other details that you could think of?

A. I can't recall Mr. Erickson, sir, having—I can't recall having any conversations with Mr. Erickson about it.

Q. Do you know whether he prepared the bills of lading?

A. No, sir; I don't.

Q. Do you know whether it was he who received the shipping instructions from you?

A. To the best of my recollection, sir, I wrote the shipping instructions on paper and gave it to Mr. Huebner. That's the best of my—

Q. Didn't you visit with Erickson at the plant about these matters of the unbilled shipments?

1500 A. I don't recall any specific incidents where I discussed unbilled shipments with Erickson. I believe at one time I discussed a shipment of merchandise where they were using one trucking company and it took too long to get there and I recommended somebody else, to give us better service.

Q. Now, this exhibit, 63-B, as a matter of fact, didn't you procure that from Mr. Erickson during one of your visits to the plant?

A. No, sir.

Q. All right. You don't know whether it is in Mr. Erickson's handwriting?

A. I don't know whose handwriting it is, sir.

Q. You didn't see him make it out?

A. No, sir.

Q. Don't you remember visiting the plant and inquiring of Erickson as to what items you had coming on this lot of candy?

A. No, sir.

Q. And don't you remember Erickson preparing this memorandum at the time for your information?

A. No, sir.

1501 Q. Now, you say Erickson was down to New York to see you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. Well, I believe it was—I think it was around the winter of 1945, sir, or it might have been 1946. I don't remember. He came with his wife.

Q. Did he come on business?

A. No, sir. He came on a vacation.

Q. And did you visit with him?

A. Yes, sir. I was told, sir, to take him around and show him a good time.

Q. Did you do that?

A. To the best of my ability, sir.

Q. You didn't have any conversation at that time about unbilled shipments?

A. No, sir. I was told to take Mr. Erickson—

Q. I didn't ask you what you were told to do. I just asked you about your talks with him.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You understand, Mr. Lubben, don't you, by this time that you are simply to answer the question that is asked? You understand as a witness that you are to answer only the question which is asked, do you 1502 not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, do you have some partisan interest in the matter which causes you to volunteer—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. (Continuing) —these statements at different times?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just want to know his interest.

By the Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. O'Brien: I take an exception to that, if the Court please, because the Court has admonished—

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I say, I take an exception to that because the Court has admonished the witness, but he constantly does it.

By the Court: You are arguing with the witness rather than asking him questions now.

By Mr. O'Brien:

1503 Q. Now, I understand you to say, Mr. Lubben, that the books of the proprietorship were taken from Sproul & Scholz' office in September of 1948?

A. I don't think I said September, sir.

Q. Well, when did you say it was?

A. Well, I think sometime in the fall of 1948. I don't remember exactly the date.

Q. That is close enough.

A. That is only a guess, sir.

Q. When did the government first start to investigate you or your companies?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I doubt if that is something within the knowledge of the witness.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. I mean as far as you know, of course.
By Mr. Lockley: That is a conclusion on his part. He doesn't know what the government was doing.
By the Court: Well, he may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I think that the first time that the government ever came to see me, sir, would be in April or May of 1948, shortly after the candy factory closed.
1504 By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Was it an agent who came to see you?
A. It was Mr. Twohig and a man, a very high man in the organization. I think his name was Cordes.
Q. Cordez?
A. Cordes or something, C-o-r-d-e-s.
Q. And Mr. Twohig is the gentleman facing you at the end of the table?
A. Yes, sir, that is true.
By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please mark these sheets Defendants' Exhibits 24 and 24-A for identification.
(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 24 and 24-A for identification.)
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Will you look at the instruments just marked, Mr. Lubben? Try looking at Defendants' Exhibit 24-B. Do you recognize the handwriting?
By the Court: 24-B?
By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry. It is 24-A.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir. I do not recognize the handwriting.
1505 By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Now, the proprietorship books and records were kept by Mr. Beren and I think that you said that you are not familiar with the pattern in which they were kept. You just don't know, is that correct?
A. Well, sir, I don't know any of the different types of books. He was an accountant and I—he kept them in the approved manner, or the recognized manner. That's all I know.
1506 Q. Well, now, you testified during the time that these various exhibits were being identified and offered, almost in each instance, that the entries were true and correct, and that they are all part of the books and records of the company, didn't you?

A. Well, the canceled checks were a part of the records of the company. A cash disbursement slip is a part of the records of the company. Each individual pieces of paper, sir—

Q. Yes, sir. Now, that is your opinion, is that right? In your opinion, those are part of the books and records of the company?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: He said so, and I just want to know his opinion.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: I know, sir, that you are supposed to keep your records, and keep files, and that is records of the company.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. But you know that these are part of the records, but you can't tell us anything about the books and the sheets, the entry sheets themselves?

1507 A. How—where you post this person and that person, I don't know, sir. I don't know a cash book from any other kind of a book.

Q. And neither do you know, I take it, whether the books and records themselves were kept according to sound accounting principles and practice?

A. Would you repeat that, sir?

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read the question to the witness?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. What books are you talking about, sir?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Any of them, so far as proprietorship, General Confections, partnership?

A. Sir, Mr. Bercu was a very reputable accountant.

Q. I know all about that. But do you know yourself whether the books and records of each of those entries were kept according to sound accounting principles and practice?

A. Well, I had the accountant, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He is ask-
1508 ing for an expert opinion, and the witness doesn't know anything about books and records. How can he express an expert opinion?

By the Court: Well, I think he has answered the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. During the proprietorship era, Mr. Lubben, do you recall that you had some transactions with Two Star Confections, Two Star Confectionary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is it your recollection that there were overages on those transactions?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object on the ground that it is irrelevant and immaterial, what he did with the Two Star Confections.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Would you repeat the question?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, it is.

1509 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were those overages paid in cash?

A. Yes, sir. I paid them overages in cash, sir.

Q. And did you pay them the amount of the invoices as rendered, by check?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you also recall some transactions between the proprietorship and Joseph Eiger?

A. Yes, sir. I believe I remember, sir.

Q. And with National Process Foods?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with Michael Cohen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with each of those, were there likewise—

A. During the proprietorship, sir?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall at the moment with Eiger. I think there may have been, sir. I think he sold me raisins and dextrose. With Michael Cohen, I remember there were some overages, yes, sir.

Q. How about—have you finished?
A. No, sir, I haven't.
Q. Go ahead.
A. And National Process Foods, I think during 1510 the proprietorship they sold us something, some sort of a sugar with flour in it, and I think there was overages on that, too, sir.
Q. All right. How about Gertz Distributing Company?
By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I wish to state another objection. I still fail to see the relevancy or materiality of what Mr. Lubben's businesses were with other companies.
1511 By Mr. O'Brien: I am not going to delve into them. It is pertinent, I can assure.
By the Witnes:
A. I don't recall in 1945 during the proprietorship with Gertz Distributing Company, but it is very possible, sir. I know I had cash dealings with them, where I gave them overages, sir.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Now would you say that the mode of handling those items on the records of the company, that is, the payment of the invoice by check and the drawing of a check to cash to cover the overage, was the practice which was followed in each of those instances that I have mentioned?
A. Well, sir, I wouldn't want to say in each of them, but—
Q. Well, was there any exception?
A. No, but I don't know whether it was each or whether there was an exception, so I couldn't very well pin it down either way.
Q. Do you recall any kind of an exception which may have existed?
A. You are talking about who, sir?
Q. I am talking about those I mentioned, Two-1512 Star, Eiger, National Process Foods, Michael Cohen and Gertz Distributing Company.
A. Well, I think, sir, I don't know whether it was the single proprietorship or whether it was the—
Q. I am talking about in the proprietorship.
A. Well, I am trying to answer, sir, if you will just let me, sir.

Q. I am sorry. Go ahead.

A. Well, I think that there was some time that I had some with Morley Kramer. That was Gum Products and Two-Star, which are the same thing, the same companies, and he has another one, Cocklan Cough Drops and one or two other ones.

I think there was times, sir, where I would get dextrose or sugar or something in New York and send it up to Mr. Kramer in Boston, and I would apply that on my overage account, sir.

I can remember some instances but the exact years I cannot, unless I refresh myself with some records. But I would say in the rest of them that we did draw checks for cash in the greatest percentage of the instances, in the times you mention.

Q. Well, I will agree with that too, Mr. Lubben, 1513 that you drew checks for cash. Now, did you pay them in cash?

A. Well, if I drew a check for a man for cash, well, either he got the money or his agent.

Q. And you didn't put the money into your cash box, did you, the proceeds of those cash checks?

A. You mean for just—to draw the money out and not give the man the money?

Q. That is right.

A. No, sir, we didn't do that. I mean, if the man had some money coming to him, he insisted that he got the money.

Q. That's all I want to know. So you drew checks for the invoices, you drew checks for cash, the girls cashed the checks in the regular way at the Manufacturers Trust, brought the money back to you and you paid these people the overages?

A. Not always the girls cashed the checks.

Q. I don't care who did. It was procured from the bank and given to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't take the cash and put it in the cash box tied there to any such transaction?

A. I can't recall, sir.

1514 Q. Now on the partnership record of overages, Mr. Lubben, can you tell us whether the cash checks that you have mentioned here which you say were for overages during the partnership era were reflected in any way on the regular books and records of the partnership?

A. Well, sir, I couldn't answer that.

Q. You don't know, do you?

A. I don't know, no sir.

Q. Do you have or were there made—let me ask you whether there were made memoranda or cash authorization slips pertaining to the checks which have been offered in evidence here, during the partnership era?

A. I would say yes, sir.

Q. Have you produced any of those here?

A. Well, sir, how can I produce them? I haven't got the records.

Q. Let me shade that somewhat. Have they been presented to you for identification in evidence here?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Now in the case of General Confections, the re-
1515 ceiver obtained the records in March of 1948, as you told us?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But I notice that you have memoranda and cash authorization slips or photostats of them which you have identified in evidence in this case, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen a receipt which the agents gave to the receiver for the books and records which they received from him?

A. It seems to me, sir, about a year or so ago, maybe two years, the agent told me a receipt—whether I had seen the receipt or he told me about it, I don't remember.

Q. Do you know whether in February of 1945 Mr. Twohig obtained the books and records in the receiver's possession?

A. Well, I don' know that he got it in February of 1949, no, sir.

Q. I just want to know about it. I was just asking you.

1516 Q. Were you familiar with the fact that in the fall of 1945 Hausman audited the cash boxes 1 and 2 of the partnership?

A. Well, sir, I know he was in the office in 1945 and he was doing some work in there, sir, and I—no question he probably was auditing the cash boxes, books and everything else.

Q. Did you at that time see any of the Hausman reports?

A. I can't remember, sir.

Q. The plaintiff here, that is, the government, has furnished us, Mr. Lubben, a copy, photostatic copy, of certain of such work sheets of Hausman's, and in looking through those I observe—

By Mr. O'Brien: Withdraw that. We mark this sheet Defendants' Exhibit No. 25 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 25 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I call your attention to the instrument marked Defendants' Exhibit 25 for identification and ask you to 1517 state if you can identify the handwriting on that sheet?

A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. You are not familiar with Mr. Hausman's handwriting?

A. I don't even know if it is Hausman's handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. O'Brien: I know.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, one of the checks which you identified here is Government's Exhibit 73, which is in the form of a photostat of the face of the check, but not of the reverse side, and that item is for $35,536.00, is it not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said that you took the proceeds of that check and paid them to Huebner?

A. Yes, sir. That's the best of my recollection.

Q. Yes, sir. As a matter of fact, were not the proceeds of that check—withdraw that.

This check, Government's Exhibit 73, was drawn by General Confections on Manufacturers Trust Company, was it not?

A. Yes, sir.

1518 Q. As a matter of fact, were not the proceeds of that check applied on account of the purchase of the inventory of the partnership?

A. No, sir; that is not so.

Q. You remember that that is not so?

A. Well, sir, if I recall correctly—pardon me.

Q. I just want to know whether they were or were not.

A. Whether they were?

Q. Whether the proceeds were applied towards the purchase price of the inventory.

A. Well, sir, that check is dated March 29th and, as I recall, the first check that I ever gave to Mr. Giglio was for a hundred thousand dollars—I think a hundred thousand—and one I think for $75,000.00. And that was borrowed from the General Commercial Acceptance.

1519 Q. I know that, but I asked you whether the proceeds of this check were not applied on the purchase price of the inventory.

Just tell me yes or no.

A. No, sir; I am sure they weren't.

By the Court: Do your records indicate that 73-B is received in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: I believe so, your Honor.

By the Court: My record didn't show, and I wanted to know.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is in. I had the notation, your Honor, 149, but I notice that 149 is the number of the check.

By the Court: It may be in. I just overlooked it.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 627 of Volume 6 of the transcript, your Honor.

By the Court: It has been received?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, you did pay for the inventory—that is, General Confections did, did it not?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

1520 Q. And from time to time you would receive bills for the payment due for the inventory, these various installments, isn't that so?

A. No, sir; that is not so.

Q. All right. It was fully paid?

A. Sir, I believe the inventory was—would you like—I could explain it to you, if you want me to.

Q. It is simple just to say whether it was paid for, Mr. Lubben, isn't it? I mean, did you pay it, or did you have some money due on it?

A. I believe, sir, that we stopped paying when the notes got down to around $12,000, and I wouldn't pay it because the condition of the contract was that Giglio was to pay the income tax, because the money was left in the company for that.

Q. I am not criticizing any failure to pay it, I just want to know whether it was paid or not. You said it was paid down to about $12,000.

A. About. I am only answering your question, sir.

Q. All right.

The payments that were made, were they made out of the funds of General Confections?

By the Court: What payments?

1521 By Mr. O'Brien: The payments made on account of the inventory.

By the Witness:

A. Well, sir, we borrowed a great deal of the money.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Who is we?

A. The company, sir.

1522 Q. Yes, sir. If you borrowed it, the money went on your books, didn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then General Confections would pay it out?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right.

A. I signed some notes, General Confections notes, in the amount of $2,500.00 weekly on the balance. They got a lot of money in the beginning and then I paid $2,500.00 each week.

Q. Right. And that is all shown by the books of General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It wasn't a personal transaction, was it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben, I sent you down a couple of subpoenaes to bring here certain papers, including copies of your Federal income tax returns for the years 1943 through 1946. Did you bring any with you?

A. No, sir, I don't have any.

Q. I take it it is true, as you told our people there, that you had turned any copies you had over to the Government?

1523 A. Well, sir, I don't remember—recall saying—your people there; where do you mean?

Q. I mean the lawyers in Puerto Rico who attended to the service of the subpoenaes.

A. I don't recall ever saying that to them, sir.

Q. All right. Then what is the fact; I mean, did you have copies?

A. Well, I must have had a copy, sir, but—

Q. Do you know where they are?

A. The papers. I don't know where they are at today.

Q. Do you remember giving the Government any such copies?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you authorize anyone else to give them to them?

A. If I did, I gave them to them, and maybe they are in these papers coming from Hillsdale. I don't know, sir.

Q. Let me ask you this: In the years 1944, 1945, and 1946, did you have any source of income other than these companies?

1524 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I think that is a very broad question.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: Can't he be a little more specific?

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am trying to be proper about it.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I don't recall, sir. I received my—my mother passed away in 1945 and I got some money from that estate. I can't think at the moment if I had any more money at that time. That's many years ago, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. About how much did that amount to?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I don't see that it is material how much money he got from his mother's estate.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: Irrelevant.

By the Witness:

A. I think sir,—it is only a guess—I think it was about fifteen or sixteen thousand dollars.

1525 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, in your returns, Federal tax returns for the year 1945 did you include any of the proceeds of the checks in evidence here as income?

A. Well, sir, how could I? I paid that money out to people.

Q. Well, I appreciate that. But I am just asking you the question for the record. Did you include any of it as income?

A. It wasn't any income, sir. How could I pay it when it wasn't income?

Q. I just want an answer, Mr. Lubben.

A. Well, sir, that is an answer. And I am being very polite to you.

1526 By Mr. O'Brien: If your Honor please, may I have a direct answer?

By the Court: The question is whether or not you did. If you didn't, just answer no.

By the Witness: No.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. All right. And is the same true for the year 1946?

A. No, I didn't include any of it, sir.

Q. Okay.

A. Unless—when a check was written for cash, and on our books tells who got the money, and if I—I don't say, but if anything was written to me, sir, it was on my books.

Q. Well, that is not my question. My question is very simple, and I think you have answered it.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. At that time, when the receiver or his accountants, or representatives, came over to Hillsdale to take possession of General Confections, do you know whether you gave them the purchase record and accounts payable record of General Confections?

1527 A. I wouldn't know what they got, sir. They just were in the office, and they got a lot of books.

Q. Did you retain the purchase record and accounts payable record of General Confections?

A. I retained no books, sir.

Q. Did you retain memoranda and cash authorization slips?

A. Well, sir, these men were in the place and they took all the books and the papers.

Q. I understand that, but I want to know: Did you retain those items?

A. Well, if I retained them, they were in the files, and they are in the files that are coming down, sir. I don't know.

Q. All right.

You didn't separately or consciously retain them, is that it?

A. I didn't separate them consciously or unconsciously, sir.

Q. Now, going back to the termination of the partnership with Giglio, I will ask you to tell us whether Mr. Giglio did not terminate that partnership?

A. No, sir.

1528 Q. All right. Isn't it true that Giglio found out that you were not proceeding according to either accounting method, either the one that you had followed in the proprietorship or the one that was established for the box?

A. Well, you are just telling me conversation. What is the question, sir?

Q. I am not telling you any conversations. I say, didn't Giglio say to you that that was the case?

A. Mr.—I terminated the partnership. Mr. Giglio had nothing to do with it.

Q. Did you have as much as $50,000 of I.O.U.'s in that corn box at any one time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have any separate dealings with outside people which were not recorded in either corn box #2 or the candy box #1?

A. No, sir; Mr. Giglio had those, sir.

Q. I want to know whether you did.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have some transactions with Bert Rock?

A. Personally?

Q. Or Herbert Company?

A. Personally?

1529 Q. Your company, through you?

A. The company did, yes sir.

Q. Yes. And did you receive invoices from Bert Rock's company which you caused to be paid?

A. Did I receive invoices that I caused to be paid?

Q. Yes, sir.
A. Invoices for what?
Q. For merchandise.
A. Yes, I think he had some.
Q. Did he deliver the merchandise?
A. Well, if you let me answer, sir. Won't you, please?
Q. Well, you said yes. That's what I asked you.
A. I didn't say yes. You jump the gun all the time on me, sir.

Sir, I have stated, and there shall be—should be an affidavit someplace about it, somewhere around in here, but Mr. Louie Roth came in—

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I am—you say I jumped the gun, but I simply want an answer to my question. And I don't want a long explanation. If you have any to make here, your counsel can bring it out. But I want to know whether Bert Rock, or his company, sent your com-1530 pany invoices for goods that they did not ship?

By the Court: Did not ship?

By Mr. O'Brien: That they did not ship.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And whether you caused those invoices to be paid?
A. Well, sir, I didn't cause them to be paid.
Q. Were they paid?
A. Mr. Louie Roth caused them to be paid.
Q. Were they paid?
A. I think there was one or two instances; yes sir.
Q. Just one or two?
A. That's right, sir.
Q. And did Bert Rock retain any of the money?
A. A portion of it, sir.
Q. What did he get, two per cent, for his services in making the cash available to you?
A. I don't recall the percentage.
Q. Wasn't it two per cent?
A. I don't—well, sir, won't you let me answer?
Q. Well, wasn't it?
A. I don't recall the percentage.
Q. All right.
1531 A. I think it was five.
Q. And the rest of the cash you got back?
A. The company got back, sir.
Q. All right. That was one of the transactions.

A. I think there was two.
Q. There were a lot more than two.
A. Oh, no, there was not, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I object to counsel arguing with the witness.
By the Court: Yes, counsel's statement will be stricken.
By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. And did you not have the same kind of transactions with Mike Cohen?
A. No, sir; I did not.
Q. And Mike Cohen did not kick back to you any of the moneys that you were having the company pay?
A. Say that—if you break it up a little smaller, sir—
By Mr. O'Brien: Read it.
(Question read.)
By the Witness:
A. That don't kind of make sense to me, sir. Will 1532 you explain it a little more?
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You had some corn—by you I mean Eatsum Food Products Company partnership—you had some corn transactions with Cohen, didn't you?
A. We sold him some corn; yes, sir,—some corn syrup.
Q. And corn syrup?
A. Not corn; corn syrup.
Q. That's right. And you and Cohen were also engaged at one time in procuring corn, were you not?
A. When, sir?
Q. At one time.
A. Well, that was—
Q. It doesn't matter when.
A. You are talking about Eatsum Food Products, then you say one time. Do you mean before or after?
Q. It doesn't matter.
A. Well, sir, I would like to be a little more specific.
Q. I just want to know whether you were ever engaged with Mike Cohen in procuring corn?
A. No, I was never engaged with Mike Cohen in procuring corn.
1533 Q. In any of the corn syrup transactions that you had with Mike Cohen, where did you procure the corn syrup, or he procured it, did you or your company lay out the money for the corn, for the premium?

A. Well, sir, during the Reserve Trading Company, when Mr. Kirby was showing me those invoices for four and two-tenths cents yesterday, the top of each of those invoices says, "Corn Deal." This was during the time of General Confections and Mike Cohen came to me and he told me that he was in some trouble, and I says, "What do you mean, Mike?" He says, "Well—"

Q. Mr. Lubben, I don't mean the General Confections period.

A. I am trying to explain. I didn't pay out the money for the corn, but I am going to show—

Q. Mr. Lubben, do you not have charged on the books substantial amounts of money which you say you advanced to Harris and Ryan to procure corn?

A. What books, sir?

Q. On the books of either the proprietorship or the partnership?

1534 A. Well, you would know—

Q. It doesn't make any difference which books.

A. The proprietorship—we didn't have any corn deal, and during the partnership, sir, you might know it better than me.

Q. Let's say the partnership. Did you have some dealings with Harris and Ryan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you give them money to procure corn?

A. I did, sir.

Q. I presume it would be on your books, would it not?

A. I don't presume anything, sir.

Q. Well, I must presume that, Mr. Lubben, that if you paid out money out of the company to give to Harris and Ryan, you had it entered someway on your books?

A. I would say it was entered some place on the books.

Q. All right.

A. You are talking about General Confections, now? I mean, you are talking about the proprietorship? You kind of muddle them up a little, sir.

Q. I am not talking about anything except Ryan 1535 and Harris.

A. Mr. Ryan and Mr. Harris did business with the proprietorship—no, with the partnership, sir. You are getting me like it, too.

1536 Q. Now, in your cash box at General Confections, to add a little variety to it, did the auditors, that is, Bercu or Sproul & Scholz audit that box?

A. I don't know whether they did or whether they didn't, sir.

Q. But the boxes over at the partnership were audited, were they not?

A. Well, I really don't know whether they audited them or whether they didn't audit them.

Q. Well, didn't it get to a point to which Giglio and Roth protested about the number of cash checks that you were drawing?

A. Well, sir, Mr. Roth, and I said here at the time, Mr. Giglio didn't want me to draw these checks. They wanted merchandise to be sold for cash and the money to be given back to it and then when I paid out—we took money out of the corn box and we paid out candy invoices—I mean overages on candy, Mr. Giglio raised a lot of rumpus and Mr. Roth was continually at it because he said, "Look, I didn't get into this corn deal just to have you take all this cash and put it back in the company so we can pay income tax. I don't want 1537 you to take any more of that money out of that corn box to pay these candy invoices, these overages." Because, you see, sir, if I did take money out of the corn box and pay an overage or a candy kick-back, I mean, a premium on candy, then it would come back—then we sold the merchandise for an invoice—that cash would then come back in the books of the company. They didn't like that because then they said we got to pay an income tax.

Q. So they wanted to maintain a box just like you did at General Confections when you got loose?

A. No. It was a little different.

Q. It all depends on whether the profits from the box were carried in your books, Mr. Lubben.

A. Well, sir—

Q. But let us skip that. Didn't they object to the cash checks because they had no way of procuring an accounting from you?

A. Oh, no, sir.

Q. What accounting did they ever get from you except your statement as to what you had done with it?

A. Listen. Mr. Roth lived in that office. He was 1538 around there behind the files and everything else. He was there all the time. You couldn't—

Q. Just a minute. What record, what accounting could he have from you with what you did with the proceeds of the $30,000.00 check?

A. He knew where it went, sir.

Q. Did he accompany you to Huebner?

A. Did he accompany me to Huebner?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir, but he used to go to the bathroom with me. He followed me there, and I will tell you that, sir.

Q. He didn't accompany you to any of the pay-outs to which you testified, did he?

A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't that what Roth was complaining about?

A. Listen, Mr. Roth, sir—

Q. Did Roth complain of that?

By the Court: Complain of what?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Of the fact that he had no accounting as to what had become of the proceeds of those checks.

A. Oh, no. He never complained of that, sir.

Q. All right. He didn't complain about it. Now, you also took cash from the box, too, at times, did you not?

1539 A. I took cash from the box. What else would I take out of a cash box?

Q. I don't know. But regardless of what else you might have taken, you did take cash out of the box and on occasion you left your I.O.U., did you not?

A. I think, sir, there were a number of occasions. I don't recall the incident.

Q. I just want to know whether you did or not.

A. Well, sir, they were then carried over and charged to me on my account. If I took anything from the company, sir—you couldn't get a five-cent piece out—

By the Court: Just answer the question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now at the time that that corn box was closed out, how much of your I.O.U.'s were in it, at the partnership?

A. Well, sir, I don't think there was any at the time because an I.O.U., if there was an I.O.U. in it, it would be transferred to the books of the company, like, for instance, if it was during this week I would take five hundred dollars or several hundred dollars, or whatever it happened to be, and the following week, the following 1540 working day would be a Monday or a Tuesday, and that would be transferred to my account as a drawing account.

1541 Q. Mr. Lubben, you don't mean to say that the transactions in the corn box were carried into and reflected upon the books of the company during the partnership, do you?

A. Oh, I am only telling you, sir, about any monies that I got. They were reflected on the books of the company, cash checks or otherwise.

Q. Well ,you know that now in the case of the partnership books, is that correct?

A. I know it?

Q. You know that much about the books, that you think that it must have been recorded on the books of the partnership, if you got money?

A. Sir, I wanted the condition when I was leaving these people where they would pay the amount of money I drew out of the company as set forth on the books of the company.

Q. Referring to your visit to Boston in 1948 to see Mr. Kramer, you were accompanied by Mr. Carry, were you not?

A. Sir, I believe I made two visits to Boston in 1948.

Q. Well, you told us about one of them. I am talking about the one that you told us about.

1542 A. Well, which one was that, sir?

Q. It was after the so-called Riviera meeting.

A. Well, I don't think we testified to that meeting, sir. I can't recall it. I think it was in reference—when Mr. Kirby was stating about a meeting that I was up there, and Mr. Kramer gave me $15,000.

Q. That is, I will concede, a different meeting, sir.

A. Thank you, sir.

Q. But prior—

By Mr. Kirby: I didn't ask him anything about going up to see Kramer.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is immaterial. We will get it straightened out.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You had gone to Boston some time prior to August of 1948, and in connection with that visit, I think you told Mr. Kirby and the jury that you did not get any money from Mr. Kramer?

A. Yes, sir, but let me correct a few dates. You are getting them muddled up there, sir.

Sir, the first time that I went up to Boston, in referring to what the question was that Mr. Kirby asked me,
1543 and I believe you will find it in the book some place—well, sir, I believe it was around November of 1947.

Q. Well, all right, Mr. Lubben.

A. But, he said two meetings in 1948.

Q. Just a minute. Didn't I just say it was before your visit of August, 1948, some time before August, 1948 that you had gone up to see Mr. Kramer?

A. But you said two times in 1948, sir.

Q. We will straighten it up. It doesn't make any difference whether it was late in 1947 or early in 1948, but you were there twice, and the first time you think was late in 1947, November or December?

A. Yes.

Q. On that occasion, did you get $15,000 from Mr. Kramer?

A. On what occasion, sir?

Q. On the occasion of that visit?

A. In 1947?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir, I did not get $15,000 from Mr. Kramer.

Q. Did you get any amount from Mr. Kramer?

A. I did not get any money from Mr. Kramer.

1544 Q. Did you get any money from Mr. Hart?

A. In New York, Mr. Hart loaned me $15,000, and I signed a note for it.

Q. Who is Mr. Hart?

A. Mr. Hart was—he was an associate of Mr. Kramer's.

Q. Had you talked to Mr. Kramer before Mr. Hart gave you the money?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object. I don't see the materiality. I have been listening.

By Mr. O'Brien: The materiality is what the man has testified before this jury. He resorts to the technicality that Kramer didn't give him the money; that his associate did give it to him.

By the Court: If Mr. Kramer did give him $15,000, what has that to do with this law suit?

1545 By Mr. O'Brien: It remains to be seen, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: I am still waiting to see what Haberkorn had to do with it, for that matter.

By the Court: How is that?

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know that I have to disclose the relevancy.

By the Court: I think that unless counsel connects it up with something that is relevant, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may assume I will and I give you the assurance I will connect it up.

By the Court: You may proceed. Connect it up with something relevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not interested in anything that is surplusage or irrelevant.

By the Court: I will assume counsel will connect it up with a showing that makes it relevant.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the question?

1546 (Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You say that was a loan?

A. Well, sir, I signed a note for the money.

Q. Yes, sir, I understand. Did you repay it?

A. No, sir, I haven't.

Q. Following that, you went up there in August of 1948, is that true?

A. If that is what I testified, sir, to the best of my recollection, it was shortly after the meeting at the Riviera.

Q. And Mr. Carry went with you?

A. To my recollection, he did, sir.

Q. And did anyone else go with you?

A. I don't think so, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Davidson go with you?

A. I think that was in the visit of 1947, sir.

Q. So your best recollection is that you and Mr. Carry went.

Now, during that visit, you did see Mr. Kramer?

A. Yes, sir.

1547 Q. And you talked to him alone?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who else was present?

A. I believe Mr. Carry was present at the time. I wouldn't swear to it, but—

Q. That is right.

A. But, I think he was, sir.

Q. And you were sitting on a divan in his office at the time, weren't you?

A. Well, I don't know whether—

Q. Both of you?

A. Sir?

Q. Both of you?

A. I don't know about sitting on a divan in an office, sir.

Q. You don't know that?

A. No.

Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Lubben, that you told Mr. Kramer at that time that—I will withdraw that.

Carry was the same chap who had been connected with Blue Ribbon Trucking Company, was he not?

A. You mean I told Mr. Kramer—

Q. No.

1548 A. You said that, sir.

Q. I say, Carry was the same chap that had been connected up with Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?

A. He owned it, yes, sir.

Q. And when you told us a while ago that you sent some sugar up to Gum Products in Boston, isn't it a fact that Mr. Carry hauled that sugar?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I fail to see the materiality of who hauled the sugar, your Honor.

By the Court: Unless you connect it up, I will entertain a motion to strike.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I don't recall whether Carry hauled it all the time or whether he hired another truck.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did he haul it some of the time?

A. I think there has been several instances that I can remember, sir, that he hauled up sugar or chocolate or something.

Q. And on some of those occasions, did he bring back cash payments made by Kramer?

A. I don't recall that, sir, no, sir.

1549 Q. You don't recall that?

A. No, sir.

Q. And was Carry present with you during the time you talked to some of the other—some of the suppliers other than Kramer following the Riviera meeting?

A. What other suppliers?

Q. Any others.

By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony that he did talk to any others.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you have a conservation with some of the other suppliers, people other than Kramer?

A. With Mr. Carry?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't recall any, sir.

Q. Did you have any with them alone?

A. You mean in regard to this Riviera meeting?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Well, sir, as I stated here—

Q. I just want to know whether you did or did not have conversations with other suppliers besides Mr. Kramer.

A. I said conversations about what?

1550 Q. About the same subject-matter as was involved in the Riviera discussion.

A. Well, what was the subject-matter that I had with Mr. Kramer in Boston at this meeting?

Q. I am not interested.

A. Sir, I don't recall that it has been brought out.

1551 Q. Your recollection is correct. Now will you answer the question.

A. Did I have a conversation with other suppliers?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Along the same conversation that I had with Mr. Kramer after the Riviera?

Q. I didn't say that. I wanted to know if in addition to talking to Mr. Kramer you also talked to other suppliers.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, it seems to me that that is very general. That wasn't brought out, that he talked to any suppliers, any other suppliers yet.

By the Court: We will take our morning recess.

By the Marshal: This honorable court will recess for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now resume its session.

By the Witness: I am sorry I was late, your Honor.

1552 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, when you went to Boston around about August of 1948 with Mr. Carry to see Mr. Kramer, you had a conversation?

A. Yes, sir, I had a conversation.

Q. And in that conversation did you tell Mr. Kramer that you wanted $125,000.00 from your suppliers?

A. For what, sir?

Q. For leaving the country.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell him you had a prepared memoranda of this sort of your dealings with the suppliers and that unless you were furnished $125,000.00 you were going into the Revenue?

A. Sir, that is all bunk.

Q. Did you tell him that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Kramer tell you that he had no money with which to make any such payment or any part of it?

A. Well, he wasn't going to make any payment.

Q. Did he tell you that?

A. I don't recall him saying he didn't have any money.

Q. All right. Did you, in Mr. Kramer's presence,

1553 say that you would telephone Byron Cain?

A. I think, sir, that—

Q. Did you say that?

A. I don't recall. If you would just let me—

Q. No. I just asked you, Mr. Lubben, if you said that.

A. I was told to tell him to call Byron Cain.

Q. I didn't ask you what you were told. I asked you—I want to get it exactly now—did you tell Kramer that you would call Byron Cain?

A. I don't recall whether I said "I will call Byron Cain," or whether I said, "You call Byron Cain."

Q. All right.

A. But the subject was to call Byron Cain.

Q. Correct. Now, did you tell Kramer that if there were any suppliers who did not contribute to that fund, you would lay off the proceeds of any of these cash checks on them?

A. Sir, no, sir.

Q. Now, did you, in Mr. Kramer's presence, pick up the telephone and call Byron Cain at Chicago?

A. I can't recall, sir, whether I picked up the 1554 telephone or whether he picked up the telephone or whether we called Byron Cain.

Q. You don't even know whether you called him at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Didn't you testify on direct that he was called while you were present with Mr. Kramer?

A. No, sir. I think I said—I said—I don't know whether we called him or whether we didn't call him.

Q. Didn't you say that you thought Mr. Kramer called him while you were there?

A. I said I thought he called him while I was there.

Q. You thought so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you can't now remember whether there was such a call and what, if anything, was said?

A. No, sir, I can't.

Q. You don't remember picking up Kramer's phone and putting through a call to Chicago and talking to Byron Cain yourself right then and there?

A. Well, sir, as I said, I don't remember picking up the phone. Whether Mr. Kramer picked up the phone or whether we called Byron Cain or whether we didn't 1555 call Byron Cain—but I know I told Mr. Kramer what the message was, that I was supposed to leave the country.

Q. I didn't ask you that, Mr. Lubben. I just asked you about that telephone call.

A. No, sir. I don't remember. I just answered you, sir.

1556 Q. Yes, sir. Refreshing your recollection, did you not make that phone call, and did you not hang up the phone and say that Cain had told you that he was not interested, that they themselves had been in to see the Government?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't remember that?

A. No, sir.

Q. That doesn't refresh your recollection in any way?

A. Well, I don't think it ever happened.

Q. All right.

Now, during the years 1945 and 1946, did you make any cash premium payments to Kurtz?

A. I think I made a lot of them in 1945, sir. I bought a lot of dextrose from him.

Q. All right. Very good.

And that was during the partnership, was it, if you recall?

A. No. I think, sir, that it started in the sole proprietorship, and it continued for a while in the partnership.

Q. And would the same be true of National Process Foods, Louie Cohen?

1557 A. You have already asked me that, sir.

Q. Well, I did in a specific incident, but I am asking you generally now?

A. Generally what?

Q. Whether you made cash payments, premium payments to National Process Foods?

A. When, sir? What year?

Q. In the year 1945 or 1946?

A. Well, sir, I testified that—I said that I believe in 1945 I bought some kind of a sugar mix, or doughnut, from National Process Foods in 1945, and I think we bought some in 1946, but I know I gave him a lot of cash in 1946 for re-barreling that corn, sir.

Q. Premium cash?

A. Yes, sir, premium cash, over and above the billing.

Q. And how about Millstein?

A. Sir, if I recall correctly, Mr. Millstein was—

Q. Mr. Lubben, I am just asking you if you paid the man.

A. Well, I am trying to think, sir. Will you please just let me? I am trying to be cooperative.

1558 Q. Yes, but it costs us money.

A. Sir? I am getting $9.00 a day, so I am doing the best I can.

Mr. Millstein, I think, sir, I had some transactions with him in 1945, whereby I gave him some cash.

Q. All right.

A. That was during—to the best of my recollection it was during the sole proprietorship.

Q. Excuse me just one minute.

How about Druckerman?

A. I think Mr. Kirby asked me about Mr. Druckerman, sir, whether I gave him cash.

Q. I don't remember, Mr. Lubben. What is the fact?

A. I remember it was about an incident of cocoa.

Q. Just one incident of this kind?

A. I think he asked me about one incident, or about a specific shipment of cocoa.

Q. Was it more than one occasion on which you gave Mr. Druckerman cash premiums?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Quite a number?

A. I don't know, sir, but certainly nowhere nearly as many as I gave Shotwell.

1559 Q. There were quite a number?

A. I didn't say quite a number. I just said a number. What do you call quite a number?

Q. What do you mean by a number?

A. Oh, I don't know. Probably maybe ten or fifteen times, or maybe more or maybe less.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike the statement about Shotwell.

By the Court: Well, Mr. O'Brien is examining the witness. I assume it is for him to determine whether it should be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: He said it once, your Honor.

By the Court: What is that?

By Mr. O'Brien: He said it once. I don't care if he says it again.

By the Court: It is orderly procedure that you should govern the motion to strike when you are examining the witness, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. How about Gertz?

A. What about him, sir?

1560 Q. Were there cash overages paid to him during those years?

A. Yes, sir, there were some in 1945, or I believe it was 1945, or whether—I think on a couple of occasions he gave me some, and—but there was—some were in there, sir.

Q. What did he pay you, about $20,000?

A. I wouldn't know.

Q. Do you remember?

A. No, sir.

Q. But I am interested in whether you gave him some?

A. Yes, sir, I gave him some cash.

Q. Now in each of these instances—

A. I didn't give it to him—I mean, when I say I gave it to him, I gave it to him as part of a payment of an invoice, sir.

Q. Yes.

A. On part of a payment on something he sold me.

1561 Q. I am not interested in the details but just in the fact that you did pay him.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, were those payments recorded on the books of the company?

A. To the best of my knowledge, sir, they were.

Q. And if they appear on the books of the company then would you say that the payments that you have described are according to the books?

A. What do you say, sir?

Q. I mean the number and amount of such payments would appear on the books of the company someplace?

By Mr. Lockley: Whose company are you talking about?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Whatever company was making the payments. You didn't make them personally, did you, Mr. Lubben?

A. No, sir.

Q. And would it appear on the books?

A. To the best of my knowledge, it would, sir. I think Mr. Gertz got into some trouble once, sir. Well, he came up—

Q. I haven't asked any question about that. I just asked you about the books.

1562 A. I mean, because he checked the books.

Q. Now, during or at the time of the inception of the proprietorship, didn't you have a partner?

A. At the time of the proprietorship did I have a partner?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there no one who put up $10,000.00 at the time and who was given a half interest in the partnership?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: In the partnership? What are you driving at?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am sorry. In the proprietorship.

A. No, sir.

Q. In the so-called proprietorship.

A. What do you mean, so-called?

Q. Well, if you had a partner, it would then become a partnership.

A. Please, sir, don't call it that.

Q. We call a sole entity a proprietorship.

A. That is what it was, sir.

Q. Didn't you have a $10,000.00 advance with Mr. Burry in exchange for a half interest in that entity?

1563 A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Would you say that if the accountant's papers reflect such a thing that they are in error, Mr. Bercu's papers?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. In the first place, as I understand it, this is 1945 and 1944 and it is assuming something not in evidence.

By the Court: You are assuming something in your question.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Before the visit of Mrs. Cordez and Twohig, had you and Miss Feldman or others been working on these overage items in an effort to recap them and to support them with memoranda?

A. No, sir. I think Miss Feldman—Miss Feldman left, sir. I believe it was in about August, I believe, of 1947, and—

Q. When she left, someone took her place.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you remember who that someone was?

By Mr. Lockley: Oh, I object to that, your Honor. This is something that is going into 1947, as I now 1564 understand it.

By the Court: He may ask him.

By the Witness:

A. I think Mr. Sweeney took her place, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And Sweeney didn't stay very long, did he?

A. No, sir. He wasn't—

Q. And who took his place?

A. A Mr. Tobias, sir.

Q. And was Tobias there at the time the company went into receivership?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Miss Feldman come back after she had left?

A. Come back for what, sir?

Q. Come back to help you go over the books?

A. I don't recall, sir. She came back, I believe, for a visit or something.

Q. Yes.

A. And whether she did anything on the books or not, at the moment I can't remember.

Q. You just can't remember that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, after Messrs. Cordez and Twohig came—

A. His name—

1565 Q. (Continuing) —to see you, thereafter did you go into the Department or the Bureau of Internal Revenue for the purpose of working on the books?

A. Sir, I have never worked on the books. I never worked on the books for the companies I was connected with or the government.

Q. All right. Did you go in there for any purpose, for any extended length of time?

A. Well, several times, sir, I was told to come down to the office and I went, sir.

1566 Q. And did Miss Feldman and Tobias also do that?

A. I think on several occasions Miss Feldman came down.

Q. And Mr. Heitman?

A. I don't recall about Mr. Heitman.

Q. This was prior to October of 1951, was it not?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Quite a bit prior. Would you say it was 1948?

A. No. I don't think Miss Feldman was ever down there in 1948, to my knowledge. She may have and she may have not, I don't know.

Q. Were you there in 1948?

A. I was down there at the time they asked me for my books, once on the proprietorship, and I think that was in 1948 when they went over the Sproul and Scholz, and we got the books.

Q. Yes.

A. I can't remember being down there again after that in 1948. I said there was a number of times in 1949 that I was there.

Q. Yes, sir.

1567 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

If the Court will indulge me a moment.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. On the syrup, invoices of 1946 that you testified about, Mr. Lubben, the total price of thirteen cents the syrup sold for.

A. Six cents on an invoice and seven cents in cash, sir.

Q. Yes, that's thirteen cents.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, back at the time that you were having Ryan and Harris procure corn, so that you could get syrup, can you tell us what the price was on syrup?

A. Whose price, sir?

Q. The market.

A. What market, sir?

Q. There is only one market.

By Mr. Lockley: There is retail, wholesale and several other types.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think not.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I am talking, of course, of the kind of deals you were having. You were selling it by the tank car 1568 generally, were you not?

A. No, sir; we brought the corn syrup in and re-barreled it during the partnership.

Q. Yes, I know, but you also handled some tank car lots, didn't you?

A. Well, sir, you bought it in a tank car.

Q. Yes, but you barreled it only when you wanted to sell it in barrel quantities.

A. No, sir.

Q. Or use it.

A. Sir, I think that during the partnership that it was all barreled.

Q. Well, in the proprietorship was that true?

A. When we got it in tank cars?

By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony of corn syrup dealings in the proprietorship.

By the Witness:

A. In the proprietorship there was no corn syrup dealings.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. There were some big dealings during General Confections—under Reserve Trading, were there not?

1569 A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the corn syrup bringing in the market, what were you getting for it at that time?

A. I believe fifteen cents, sixteen cents, maybe more, maybe less. It is all reflected in my books, sir.

Q. Right. And you also testified about that on your deposition, didn't you?

A. What deposition?

Q. The deposition you gave in Puerto Rico?

A. I don't recall that specific question you asked me, sir.

Q. Just let me ask you—and before the Kefauver Committee, too, didn't you? Remember that?

A. Yes, sir; I testified there.

Q. All right. Were the resale transactions that you mentioned—did you mention resale transactions at six and a half cents a pound, invoice price plus five and a half cents a pound cash premium?

A. To whom, sir; who did I mention that to?

1570 Q. Whoever you were talking to, before the Kefauver Committee and on your deposition.

A. I think that was about right, sir. I may be a half cent off one way or the other, something like that.

Q. It varied some at that time, did it not, Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, the price went up, sir, in 1946, and I understand, sir—while I hadn't sold any, I understand it sold as high as a quarter.

Q. And the raw corn itself, the premium started at 25 cents a bushel and went as high as 75 cents a bushel, didn't it?

A. When, sir?

Q. Over the period of the corn shortage?

A. Well, sir, let's be specific and tie it in with the company. Then I can give you—

Q. I am not interested in the company.
A. I will only answer, sir, during the time of the partnership, sir.
Q. Yes, sir.
A. Which is when I had—when we bought corn. We didn't buy any corn during General Confections.
Q. Yes.
1571 A. And I don't want you to get that impression.
Q. You dealt in corn syrup then?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Right.
A. During the time of General Confections I believe it started out—the premium to the elevator, or the farmer, was about 25 cents a bushel, and went as high as 75 cents that we were told to pay.
Q. And the poundage of syrup to bushel varied from 8 to 16?
A. I don't understand your question, sir. What do you mean?
Q. I am sorry; you testified to that on direct, too, so I assumed you knew what I meant.
By Mr. Lockley: What page, Mr. O'Brien?
By Mr. O'Brien: I don't have the page.
By Mr. Lockley: I thought you were reading from something.
By Mr. O'Brien: No, right here, in your direct.
By the Witness:
A. Well, sir, you are framing your question wrong, sir. You want a yes and no answer from me, sir, and 1572 in order to put you straight, what you are trying to get at, I will have to go into a little detail and then you will say I am out of order. So what am I going to say, sir?
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Suppose you answer this one in your own way.
1573 A. Thank you, sir. A bushel of corn syrup, sir,—a bushel of corn weighed 64 pounds. It made 32 pounds of corn syrup, plus a lot of by-products, oils, starch, and what have you. And then the corn refineries that you went out and got this corn from which would give you a portion—they would sell you on an invoice at their ceiling price—not all of the corn syrup that this bushel of corn made, but a portion of it.

And I believe, sir, in the case of Penick and Ford, they sold the partnership twelve pounds and they would keep the rest of it for themselves, which they sold to the customers who had quotas with them.

See, the man with the quota, sir, had no problem. And they sold that to the man with the quota. And then they would sell you the balance.

Now, some corn companies, sir, were not quite as generous as Penick and Ford. Hubbinger, sir, only gave you eight pounds. They would not give you—they sold you eight pounds on an invoice, and the rest of it they sold to their regular customers.

Does that answer the question, sir?

1574 Q. Yes. I don't think it is entirely fair to Hubbinger, because I think you were getting fifteen pounds from Hubbinger.

A. I don't think so, from Hubbinger, sir. No, sir. I think it was eight pounds.

Q. But do recall at one point it was as low as eight?

A. And I have heard instances—I mean, it is not connected with this case—that it was as low as six.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to this hearsay. Unless you know, Mr. Lubben—

By the Court: Yes. I don't think it is advisable to spend too much time on that.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't intend to, Judge.

Subject to the reservation which we spoke about, your Honor, that concludes the cross.

By the Court: I am not clear as to any reservation.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think—

By the Court: Well, you take that up with me later. I haven't made any definite ruling on any reservation. I merely indicated that if you thought there was any 1575 ruling that you wanted to—if you thought I had made any rulings that you wanted to take up with me, I will be glad to hear you on it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't mean that, Judge. And I think Mr. Lockley agrees, this is a matter which was arranged in Minneapolis with you, and I have a reservation.

By the Court: I am sorry. I had forgotten.

By Mr. O'Brien: In other words, I am through with the witness, except for that arrangement that was made there, and within the limits of that.

By the Court: Yes. I am sorry. I remember now. Very good.

1576 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at this time I move to strike all the testimony relating to the Haberkorn transaction, all of the testimony relating to the conversation in the Morley Kramer office, and all the testimony relating to Mr. Hart and the $15,000.00 loan on the grounds that counsel has failed to tie it up in any way with the issues here at trial.

By the Court: Well, I think the testimony as to the visit to Kramer in 1947 hasn't been connected up and it may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge—

By the Court: Sorry?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am sorry. I didn't mean to interrupt.

When we speak of connecting up, sometimes that would clear through the witness and sometimes it would be hooked into rebuttal or answering testimony.

By the Court: If counsel contends he is going to introduce other testimony which will make that relevant, 1577 very well, I will reserve my ruling.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at this time I would like to offer the balance of Government's Exhibit 94 in evidence. The defense has offered the June 17th entry.

By the Court: Wait now.

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me, sir.

By the Court: My records show, as to Exhibit 94, I received a portion of it.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir; the June 17th entry, which is the bottom entry.

By Mr. O'Brien: That was read into the record, was it not?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: And now you want to offer the balance of it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: Any objection?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think there is.

By Mr. Lockley: I hardly see how one can stand, because they agreed that they would waive the requirement that a foundation be laid for the absence of the original in order to put in that portion of it.

1578 By the Court: That is my recollection.

By Mr. Lockley: I hardly see how a portion of it can be evidentiary without the balance of it being likewise admitted in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: If I may suggest, the lower portion is the portion which purports to have been written by Mr. Lubben, and he testified that was a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business.

By Mr. Lockley: That is a different subject, your Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is why our offer was supported by that testimony, and it was read in. But we know of no such support or foundation at the present for the remainder of that record.

1579 By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, their objection was that we had failed to produce the original.

By the Court: That is my recollection.

By Mr. Lockley: If that objection is valid as to a portion—

By the Court: Yes. When you offered the entry of June 17, you waived any foundation to the exhibit, and I asked expressly whether or not he waived the foundation to the exhibit, it being a photostat, and he said yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have no objection on the ground that it is a photostat, but we do not recall that there is any foundation to support the entries, except those which are in Mr. Lubben's handwriting.

By the Court: Am I correct in assuming, Mr. Lockley, that the witness stated this was a true and correct copy of his books and records?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Kept in the ordinary course of 1580 business, and it was the ordinary course of business to keep such a record?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, he so testified.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was so received in evidence by the court and marked Government's Exhibit No. 94.)

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, the Government has no further redirect examination, but I beg your Honor's indulgence for the purpose of having Mr. Lubben identify several more documents, which were, I believe, among those which were photostated, and on his porch.

I had not offered them to him earlier for identification, because, in the orderly presentation of the case I expected to do it through other witnesses.

But if I may do so now, I would just like to have him identify these records as a portion of those records, just for idehtification purposes only, and not to offer them in evidence at this time. I know that is out of the ordinary order, and that is why I ask the indulgence of the 1581 Court.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is going to be available during the hearing, isn't he, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Oh, yes, but I would like to have him identify these documents now while he is on the stand.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, sir.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben, I show you Government Exhibit for Identification No. 73-A, and ask you if you have seen that document before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And do you know whose handwriting appears on the bottom?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Is that a document which was prepared in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know what business—in connection with what business it was prepared?

A. In the business of—during the time of General Confections, sir.

1582 Q. And was that a true and correct record at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where the original of that document is at the present time?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Is that a true and correct copy of the original?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was the last time you saw the original?

A. On the sun porch of my home in February, early in February, 1948.

Q. That is the best of your recollection?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you searched for the original since that time?
A. I have.
Q. Have you found it?
A. No, sir.

By the Court: My recollection is that you have identified 73-A before.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, sir, if I was going over something again. I have a number of these. Exhibit 112, then.

1583 By the Court: Which one?

By Mr. Lockley: 112.

By the Court: Well, I gather from my notes that you have shown 112 to the witness.

By Mr. Lockley: Your notes are better than mine, your Honor. If I have already identified it, that's fine. I was afraid I had overlooked something.

No. 120.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Good. No. 153-A.

By the Court: Well, 53-A?

By Mr. Lockley: A; yes, sir.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Lubben, I show you Governent's Exhibit for identification 122-A.

I don't believe that one has been shown to him before, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, you have shown that to the witness before.

By Mr. Lockley: Somone else is keeping these 1584 records for me, your Honor. I am sorry.

By the Court: Why don't you check them? Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley: 122-C.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: 126-A and B.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Then thank you. That is all, Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: You better check up with your records and see that my notes are right. You have a transcript.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: But I think you will find that you covered these exhibits with Mr. Lubben during his direct examination.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir. Thank you very much. I am sorry to have taken up the time of the Court on that.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I want to ask one question on this last exhibit, if I may.

By the Court: Go ahead.

1585 Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Lubben, you said the last time you saw these documents was on the sun porch?

By the Court: Which documents, the ones just referred to?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. On the sun porch of your home at Hillsdale.

A. I said, sir, that was the last time, to the best of my recollection, that I have seen the originals of those documents.

Q. Didn't you testify here previously that you had turned over the originals to Mr. Davidson to be photostated and that was the last time you saw them?

A. Well, sir, I believe I turned them over the same day.

Q. Well, which was the last time you saw them, when you turned them over to Mr. Davidson—

I withdraw that.

By the Court: Counsel, I think he stated that Mr. Davidson was there on the sun porch and he says that 1586 he turned these documents over to Mr. Davidson to have them photostated and that is the last time that he saw the originals.

1587 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Is that the fact?

A. Yes, sir; to the best of my recollection, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: That is all.

By the Witness: You mean I can leave?

By the Court: You are through for the time being.

By the Witness: Thank you, sir.

(Witness excused.)

MARY KRASNE, called as a witness on behlf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You are Mrs. Mary Krasne?
A. Correct.
Q. K-r-a-s-n-e?
A. Right.
Q. Where do you live?
1588 By the Court: You are going to have to speak up.
By the Witness:
A. 115 Central Park West, New York City.
By the Court: You may remain seated but please raise your voice, because these jurors have to hear what you say.
By the Witness:
A. 115 Central Park West, New York City.
By Mr. Locyley:
Q. And you are married?
A. Married.
Q. What does your husband do?
A. In the food line.
Q. He buys and sells food, is that it?
A. Food, correct.
Q. Do you know the defendant, Byron Cain?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you see him over there?
A. Yes, I do.
By Mr. Lockley: Let the record show that she has identified the defendant, Mr. Cain.
By Mr. Lockley:
1589 Q. Now, Mrs. Krasne, directing your attention to the early part of 1946, did you receive a telephone call at that time from Mr. Cain?
A. To the best of my recollections, I did.
Q. And what was the subject of the conversation, of that telephone call?
A. At the time he asked me if I wouldn't pick up a piece of jewelry on my way to Chicago.
Q. Were you at that time planning to come through Chicago?

A. Correct. I was packing to leave for the coast.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I object to that as not binding on the corporation. The corporation is not engaged in the jewelry business.

By Mr. Lockley: I will connect it up, your Honor, if I am permitted to go on with the testimony.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You say you received a telephone call from Mr. Cain and he asked you to pick up some jewelry?

A. I believe so, to the best of my recollections.

1590 Q. Did he state how you were to pay for it?

A. I don't recall exactly. I believe he said—

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection. What Mr. Cain told her about paying for the jewelry is not binding upon the corporation.

By Mr. Lockley: It is the conversation of one of the defendants.

By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I believe he said it would be taken care of.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, was he any more specific than that?

1591 A. Well, to the best of my recollection, I believe he said he would have the money up, and take care of it, someone would, from Mr. Lubben's office.

Q. He said someone would come up from Mr. Lubben's office?

A. Mr. Lubben's office, correct.

Q. Did someone subsequently come up from Mr. Lubben's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who it was?

A. I believe it was Mr. Lubben himself.

Q. And what happened?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to all of this transaction. I would like to have my objection stand, if I may.

By the Court: Overruled.

By Mr. McConnell: May I have the objection stand?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What happened when Mr. Lubben came up?

A. Well, I believe he gave me the money, and I went down and picked up the piece of jewelry.

Q. And how much money was it?

1592 A. I believe it was $1,400.

Q. And was that in check, or currency, or how was it?

A. It was in currency.

Q. In currency.

A. Yes.

Q. And you picked up the jewelry?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you do with the jewelry?

A. I dropped it in Chicago on my way to the Coast.

Q. Well, can you be a little more specific; what do you mean you dropped it?

A. I gave it to Mr. Cain on my way to the Coast.

Q. To Mr. Byron Cain, the defendant?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Where did you give it to Mr. Cain?

A. I believe I gave it to him at the station. I don't recall exactly.

Q. At the train station?

A. Yes, I think he met us.

Q. On the way through?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at that time?

A. I might have, I don't remember.

1593 Q. Now, was this series of events, the giving of the money to you by Mr. Lubben, your picking up the jewelry, and your delivery of it to Mr. Cain, all as a result of the telephone call you received from Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all. Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a moment, Mrs. Krasne, please.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike her testimony. There is no connection with the corporation.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I would like to call your attention to the fact that Mr. Lubben connected this up some time ago in his testimony that on one of the sheets—

By the Court: Yes, I will deny the motion.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mrs. Krasne, what kind of an article was it?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Was it in a box?
A. Yes, sir.
1594 Q. In the talk you had with Mr. Cain, he didn't describe it in any way?
A. He said it was a gift to his wife.
By the Court: A little louder, please.
By the Witness: He said it was a gift to his wife.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. You don't know what it was; you had no talk about that?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you have a talk with Mr. Krasne about it before you picked up the jewelry?
A. I might have. I don't remember; I might have. I don't remember. It might have been.
By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.
By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.
By the Court: That is all. You may be excused.
(Witness excused.)

1595 JAMES F. MORAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Your name is James F. Moran?
A. That's right.
Q. And where do you live?
A. 1707 North 77th Court.
Q. And where are you employed?
A. Coca Cola Bottling Company.
Q. Do you know Mr. David Lubben?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you related to him in any way?
A. He is my brother-in-law.
Q. You are married to his sister?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know the defendants, or any of them, Mr. Huebner, Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Which ones?

A. I know Mr. Huebner, and I have met Mr. Sullivan, and I believe I met Mr. Cain once.

1596 By Mr. O'Brien: We can't hear you, Mr. Witness. Will you talk up a little louder, please?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. During the years 1945 and 1946 did you have any occasion to receive any checks from Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. All right. Now, when was the first occasion that you remember?

A. The first occasion—

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Moran.

By the Witness:

A. The first occasion must have been in the summer or early fall of '46.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That was the first occasion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall how many checks you got at that time?

A. At that particular instant, Mr. Lubben gave me four checks for $5,000.00 each.

Q. And do you recall to whom these checks were made out?

1597 A. I believe they were made out to cash.

Q. What did you do with the checks?

A. I cashed them.

Q. Were you able to cash $20,000.00 worth of checks yourself?

A. They had Mr. Edward T. Urban's endorsement on them.

Q. Did you procure that endorsement?

A. Mr. Lubben procured it.

Q. And you took the checks to the bank, did you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you do when you got to the bank; you got the money?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. In what form?

A. In bills of 20 and 50 and a few hundred dollar denominations.

Q. And what did you do with it?
A. I delivered it to Mr. Huebner.
Q. When was this?
A. This was in the early part of '46, in the summer or fall.
Q. The summer or fall of '46. How do you determine it was the summor or fall?
1598 A. Well, I recall the fact that I had no coat on. And I remember the particular neighborhood, why, to walk to my car I slipped the package inside my shirt.
Q. That's the package of money?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Where did you deliver it to Mr. Huebner?
A. I delivered it to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Any particular place in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. Well, Mr. Huebner came downstairs. I announced myself, and he got me, and we walked upstairs. I believe it was the laboratory.
Q. In a laboratory?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was anyone else present?
A. I believe there was one girl, and he asked her to step out for a few minutes, he wanted to use it.
Q. When you were in the laboratory what transpired then?
A. Well, I handed the package to Mr. Huebner and he had been expecting it.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that.
1599 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you know he had been expecting it?
By the Court: I didn't hear you.
By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike the statement.
By the Court: Well, the statement that he had been expecting it may be stricken as a conclusion. He may state what conversation took place.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you have a conversation with him?
A. Prior to—
Q. Well, all right. Let's take them one at a time. When was your first conversation?
A. Well, Mr. Huebner called me for several days prior to it, telling me he was expecting the package.

Q. He referred to it as a package?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. All right. How many times did he call you?
A. Oh, it might have averaged four or five times a day for maybe three or four days prior.
Q. Well, why were you so long in getting the $20,000.00 over to him?
1600 A. Well, I had instructions from Mr. Lubben not to—
By Mr. O'Connell: I object to what he heard from Mr. Lubben. Any conversation he had with him outside of our presence is not binding on us.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you cash the checks on the same day that you received them?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Do you know how long you waited?
A. It might have been four days.
Q. And was it in that interval that Mr. Huebner was calling you?
A. Yes, sir.
1601 What was the nature of his conversation on the telephone?
A. He wanted to know if I had gotten the package from Mr. Lubben.
Q. All right. Now, let's go back to the laboratory. Will you state what happened in there after you gave Mr. Lubben the money—Mr. Huebner the money, I mean?
A. Well, he walked in and—I mean it is just general—
By the Court: Keep your voice up, sir.
By the Witness:
A. Just general conversation with Mr. Huebner. I told him I had the package for him. And he opened the package, and he saw the bank wrappers on the bundle, and he asked me where I got the money.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What did you tell him?
A. I told him it was money I had gotten from Mr. Lubben.
Q. Was there any more conversation that you can recall?

A. No.

1602 Q. What did he do with the money, after you handed it to him?

A. After I handed it to him he broke the wrappers and proceeded to count the bills.

Q. Did anything happen at that time?

A. No, not that I recall.

Q. How many times did he count it?

A. To my recollection just one.

Q. All right. Now, did you subsequently get another check from Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 133, in evidence, a check for $17,190.00, dated December 4, 1946, and ask you if that is the check.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now when did you receive that check?

A. About December 4th.

Q. All right. And you turned it over. And tell me when it was cashed at the bank.

By Mr. McConnell: December 4, what year?

By the Witness: '46, sir.

By the Witness:

A. The bank stamp is December 20th.

1603 By Mr. Lockley: All right.

Q. Now, will you also turn it on its reverse and tell me who endorsed it.

A. It is endorsed by David Lubben and also Mr. Edward T. Urban.

Q. And did you see either Mr. Lubben or Mr. Urban place those endorsements thereon?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Were they both placed on at the same time or different times?

A. At the same time.

Q. And when was that?

A. At the time he wrote the check.

Q. All right. Now after you had the check endorsed, what did you do with it?

1604 By the Court: Let's see. Does this have an exhibit number?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, it does. No. 133, I believe. I intended to call it out. 133, yes.

By the Court: This is another occasion, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. The first one was $20,000. This one is seventeen. This is the second occasion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, Mr. Moran.

A. Now, what was the question, sir?

By Mr. Lockley: Will you read the question?

(Whereupon the question was read as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. After the check was endorsed, I had it as per Mr. Lubben's instructions.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out Mr. Lubben's instructions as not binding on us.

By the Court: No, I will deny the motion.

1605 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you receive any telephone calls from Mr. Huebner during that interval?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. What was the subject of those telephone calls?

A. Again he wanted to know when—or when I was going to deliver the package that Mr. Lubben had promised him.

Q. Where was Mr. Huebner calling you, at your home or at your office?

A. Most of the time at the office. Once or twice we received—I received a phone call at home.

Q. All right.

Now, you took the check to the bank, and you got it cashed on December 20th, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then what did you do with the money?

A. Well, that particular day, I happened to be on my way home for lunch, and I did take it home with me.

Q. You took it home at lunch time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have it in any sort of a container?

A. I had it wrapped in a bundle of newspaper.

1606 Q. Did you do anything with it after you got home?

A. Well, I showed my wife what $17,000 looked like.

Q. You mean you had never seen $17,000 in one place before?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. All right. Then what happened after you left—I presume you left your home after lunch; what happened then?

A. I called Mr. Huebner, telling him that I was on my way, and I had the package.

Q. All right.

A. And I went over to Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and I announced myself, and Mr. Huebner brought me—or brought me upstairs again to the same room.

Q. And what happened then?

A. And I handed him the package, and he opened it, and counted the bills. And I guess he figured it was okay.

1607 By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out what he figured.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By the Witness: I said the figure was okay.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You mean it counted out correctly?

A. Correctly, to $17,190.25. And Mr. Huebner thanked me, and asked me if I wanted to take some marshmallows home for the children.

Q. He offered you a bag of marshmallows?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there any conversation at that time that you can recall?

A. No, sir; outside of the fact that I thanked him for the offer of the marshmallows, but I didn't care for any.

By the Court: We will take our noon recess now. We will be in recess until two o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the jury files out, please.

This honorable court will be in recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

1608 (Whereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock P.M. of the same day, being Tuesday, September 22, 1953.)

1619 Chicago, Illinois, Wednesday, September 23, 1953, 10:00 o'clock a. m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein:—

By the Clerk: 52 C 143, United States of America versus Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

1620 JAMES F. MORAN, a witness called herein in behalf of the Government having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued) By Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Moran, I believe I neglected to ask you whether you saw the defendant, Mr. Huebner, to whom you paid these two deliveries of money. Do you recall seeing him, or do you now see him in the courtroom?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Will you point him out?
A. Yes. Mr. Huebner is sitting in the back of the room with the glasses on.
By Mr. Lockley: The record will show the defendant was identified.
You may cross examine.

Cross Examination By Mr. McConnell.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Moran?
A. 1707 No. 7th Court, Elmwood Park.
Q. How long have you lived there?
A. How long have I lived there? Approximately—
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Moran.
By the Witness. About seven years.
1621 By Mr. McConnell:
Q. You had been living there at the time of the transaction you testified to?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is your wife Janet Moran?
A. That is correct.
Q. And she is a sister of David Lubben?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How long have you been married?
A. Thirteen years.
Q. Now, Mr. Ed Urban that you testified about, what is his business?
A. He is in the candy manufacturing business.
Q. Was he with the Close Candy Company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you ever with that company?
A. No, sir.
Q. By whom were you employed at the time of 1946, in the summer and fall of 1946?
A. The Haberkorn Candy Company.
Q. And what did they do?
A. Manufactured candy.
Q. Mr. Urban also had an interest in that company, did he not?
A. Yes, sir.
1622 Q. And your wife had some interest in it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And in what capacity were you employed in it?
A. As general production manager.
Q. Now can you fix the date of your first transaction at the bank?
A. The exact date, no, sir, I can't.
Q. As I understood your testimony, there were four checks involved, is that correct?
A. That is correct, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Have we those checks?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Did anybody go to the bank with you?
A. No, sir.
Q. You went alone?
A. Yes, sir.
1623 Q. Well, how did you fix the time?
A. Well, I recall the fact that I didn't have a coat on because I recall cashing this money and being in the neighborhood of Halsted and Madison Street. I carried the money from the bank to my car. I slipped the package inside my shirt.

Q. That is the only way you can fix the time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It was a hot day, was it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you had $20,000.00 in all?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. In what denominations?
A. 20's, 50's and a few hundreds.
Q. Did you have anybody identify you at the bank at that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. What was the name of the bank again?
A. Mid-City Bank.
Q. Where is that located?
A. At Halsted and Madison Street.
Q. Who did you deal with there at the bank at that time?
A. I don't recall the man's name. I was told who 1624 to see by Mr. Edward Urban.
Q. Well, was he an officer of the bank?
A. No, sir. I don't believe so.
Q. A teller?
A. A teller.
Q. You can't remember his name?
A. No, sir.
Q. Is he still there?
A. That I don't know.
Q. Do you still do business with that bank?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: Now, on the second check—I think we do have that here, do we not?
1625 By Mr. Krane: It is on the table there. It is a December 4 check.
By Mr. Calihan: It is 94.
By Mr. Lockley: 94, is it?
(Document handed to counsel.)
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. On the check under date of December 4, 1946, did anybody go to the bank with you at that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. You went alone?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did I understand you to say on your direct examination that you saw this check drawn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was it drawn?

A. I believe it was the Haberkorn Candy Company.

Q. Mr. Lubben was there at the Haberkorn Candy Company when he drew it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he made this out in your presence?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On December 4th?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And endorsed it?

1626 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And turned it over to you I take it?

A. After he had Mr. Urban endorse it.

Q. Then did he go away somewhere?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Back to New York?

A. I believe so, sir.

Q. Now, who did you deal with at the bank when this check was cashed?

A. That particular check, I had a little difficulty cashing it.

Q. I didn't ask you that. I asked you who you dealt with.

A. The first time I went to the bank, it was one of the officers. Mr. Urban had told me to see the same man, and I went to his window, and evidently the man had been out to lunch, so one of the officers was filling in. And he gave me a little hard time about cashing it. He wanted to know why we needed that much cash.

Q. You don't know who this man was?

A. I don't recall; no, sir. Not by name, no.

Q. I show you a notation on the check, Close & Co. on the back of the check. Who put that on there?

1627 A. The man at the window.

Q. What did Close and Company have to do with this transaction?

A. Well, they were evidently guaranteeing the check, to my knowledge.

Q. Close and Company pleaded guilty to income tax evasion because of receiving black market over ceiling prices, did they not, here in the District Court?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, what were the denominations of those bills?
A. Speaking about this check, sir?
Q. Yes.
A. The same denominations, twenties, fifties, and a few hundreds.
Q. And what date was it?
A. That we cashed it?
Q. Yes.
A. It was on or about the 20th.
Q. Of December?
A. Of December, yes.
1628 Q. How do you fix that date?
A. Well, it was getting close to Christmas time, and I do recall that.
Q. Is that the only way you fix it, is getting close to Christmas?
A. Yes, sir; it was close to Christmas week.
Q. And what did you do with that money, did you put it in a wallet, or in your trousers, or where did you put it?
A. No, sir; it was put in an envelope.
Q. Now, on the first transaction I understood you to say that you went home to lunch with the money.
A. Not the first one, sir. This one.
Q. Oh, this one. So you must have been in there in the morning to get the money at the bank?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you went home with the money in an envelope, is that it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you showed it to your wife?
A. That's correct.
Q. Now, that wasn't the first time your wife had seen cash moneys from Mr. Lubben, was it?
1629 A. In that large amount; yes, sir.
Q. Yes.
A. The first time.
Q. Isn't it a fact, Mr. Moran, that Mr. Lubben was sending your wife cash moneys—
By Mr. Lockley: I object.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. —on numerous occasions?
By Mr. Lockley: I object.
By the Court: Sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: I am laying the basis of impeachment. It is material to the case.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Do you know of any transactions, of your knowledge between Ronald Stone and your wife involving cash moneys?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: The same ruling.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. When you were out at the Haberkorn Candy Company did you keep a cash box—

1630 By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Or ins and outs of cash receipts?

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Do you recall a time when the Shotwell Company purchased the Haberkorn Candy Company?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to show that the witness is prejudiced by something that occurred after he became—

I want to make an offer of proof on that.

By the Court: Make your offer of proof.

By Mr. McConnell: Shall I make it right now?

By the Court: Yes, you can make it out of the hearing of the jury.

By Mr. McConnell: Out of the hearing of the witness, too.

1631 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had beyond the hearing of the jury and the witness:)

By Mr. McConnell: I want to prove that this man, when he came to the Haberkorn Candy Company, after Shotwell purchased it, was discharged by Mr. Huebner.

By the Court: He was discharged by whom?

By Mr. McConnell: By Mr. Huebner.

By the Court: All right, go ahead and prove it, if that is what you have in mind.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You were working for Haberkorn Candy Company at the time Shotwell took it over, were you not?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not?

A. No, sir.

Q. When did you leave the Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. In March—I believe it was '48.

Q. March of 1948?

A. I believe that's correct.

1632 Q. Isn't it a fact that you were working there and that Mr. Huebner discharged you as an employee?

By Mr. Lockley: I object. He has already answered.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: I may answer?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. As far as Shotwell taking over Haberkorn Candy Company, I knew they were in there, they were coming in. Whether this transaction had been completed, I did not know.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. But Mr. Huebner discharged you as an employee of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Lubben, your wife's brother, bought that company back and then gave you a job back there again?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. That is not in evidence.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: It is beyond the scope.

By the Witness: I don't know what you mean by 1633 buying it back.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, did he get it back, the company, from Shotwell?

A. No, sir; not that I know of.

Q. Did you go back to work for it at any time?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never did?
A. Not after I left it, no.
Q. What are you doing now?
A. I am a sales supervisor for the Coca Cola Bottling Company.
Q. Now, I think you said you made the package up of the $20,000 in newspapers. Where did you do that?
A. The teller at the bank wrapped it for me.
Q. Wrapped it in a newspaper?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you put the newspaper package inside your shirt?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How big a package was it?
A. Oh, it might have been a package about—(indicating)—maybe two inches by (indicating). So gross.
1634 Q. Just two inches?
A. Approximately.
Q. You don't know whether that man is still there?
A. No, sir.
Q. At the bank. Have you ever seen him since; when is the last time you ever saw him?
A. The last time was in cashing that particular check that you have in evidence there.
Q. Did you have to sign any receipt of any kind down at the bank when you got this money?
A. No, sir.
Q. They let you come in and cash the check without endorsing it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. That is true of the other checks; you didn't have to endorse them to get the money?
A. No, sir.
Q. And yet they questioned the amount of the money, didn't they?
A. The officer.
Q. At the amount, and refused to cash that particular check.

Did you give a statement to the Government on this 1635 transaction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When?
A. I gave it to Mr. Krane at my home.
Q. Well, when?

A. When? It was several months ago.

1636 Q. Did you give that statement about the time of the Close prosecution, Close & Company?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see what relevancy there is to that.

By the Court: Well, fix the time.

By the Witness:

A. I was not involved in the Close & Company prosecution.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I didn't ask you that. I asked you about the time of the Close & Company prosecution. You know when that was, don't you?

A. Not too—not offhand, no, sir. Just from reading in the newspapers.

Q. Well, Mr. Urban also pleaded guilty to that indictment, did he not?

A. So I read.

Q. Did you make a signed statement of this transaction to the Government?

A. For this particular case?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now did Mr. Lubben come to Chicago from time

1637 to time to visit your wife, his sister?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. He did that pretty often, didn't he?

A. You might say frequently.

Q. Would he come to your home at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you would visit with him when he made these trips?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you talked to Mr. Lubben about this transaction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When is the last time you talked to him about it?

A. Now, I don't understand whether you mean at the time of making it out—

Q. No. I mean since the transaction happened. Did you refresh your recollection as to your testimony in this case?

A. Oh, in the past week.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all I have.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Where are the four $5,000.00 checks?

1638 A. I don't know, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have them, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: No, we do not have them, Mr. O'Brien, or I would certainly have them here.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, in the absence of a foundation for the—in the absence of those checks, your Honor, I move to strike out the witness's testimony concerning the four checks.

By the Court: I will deny the motion.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Moran, isn't it a fact that you were in to see Mr. Huebner at the Shotwell plant only once?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you have occasion to visit at the plant for any purpose other than the two times which you mentioned yesterday?

A. I believe I had been there once or twice before, sir.

Q. For what purpose?

A. Well, at one time, Haberkorn Candy was completing purchase of a piece of machinery that they had.

1639 Q. And at that time did you go through the plant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the laboratory?

A. I don't recall. I don't believe so, sir.

Q. Do you remember where the laboratory was?

By the Court: Keep your voice up, Mr. Moran.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you remember where the laboratory is?

A. All I can remember is that it was upstairs.

Q. Do you know where upstairs?

A. No, sir. I couldn't describe it, the location.

Q. Well, now, think a minute. Weren't you out there to see Mr. Huebner in the month of June of 1946?

A. It might have been, sir.

Q. And do you remember that on that occasion as you were leaving, you turned to the phone operator and told her to give you these marshmallows which you talked about?

A. No, sir, I don't recall that because I never got any—I never accepted any.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have the check.

1640 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Referring to the check, Exhibit 133, do you recall whether one of the officers approved the check or okayed it?

A. Of the bank?

Q. Yes.

A. The man at the window okayed it.

Q. The teller?

A. Or he made the notation.

Q. The teller himself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he not send you to one of the officers?

A. No, sir.

Q. And if there is any aproval on this check, it is your recollection that that was put on by the teller?

A. That is my recollection, sir.

Q. That is the man at the window?

A. At the window.

Q. The same window at which you got the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You had no familiarity with the state of the account of General Confections, Inc.—I withdraw that.

1641 Do you know whether General Confections, Inc., had an account at the bank?

A. At Mid-City?

Q. Yes.

A. I doubt that very much, sir.

Q. Did Haberkorn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any officer at that bank with whom you had customarily had dealings for Haberkorn?

A. No, sir. I visited the bank very, very seldom.

Q. Was it Mr. Urban's job to visit the bank in connection with such dealings for Haberkorn?

A. In connection with Haberkorn?

Q. Yes.

A. Most of our banking was done by mail, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

1642 Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Moran, on the back of the check the name of Urban appears, isn't that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did the name of Urban also appear on the back of the four checks which we don't have, but which you say you cashed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was Urban in the bank when you got the money?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, the check we have was dated December 4th, isn't that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't cash it for a couple of weeks, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. So it was two weeks late at the time you cashed it, is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And Urban wasn't there?

A. No, sir.

Q. And you didn't know the people at the bank?

A. No, sir.

1643 Q. And they didn't know you?

A. No, sir.

Q. They didn't deposit it and hold it for collection, did they?

A. I don't understand that, sir.

Q. Well, they just up and gave you seventeen thousand dollars in cash, right bang at the noon hour, is that what you said?

A. Well, the officers—at first—

Q. Wait a minute. Is that when you got the money, when you went in there at the noon hour?

A. Yes.

Q. And the check was already two weeks late?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you didn't endorse it?

A. No, sir.

Q. So now you are telling us that Urban didn't get the money, but you got it just like that, one noon hour, with no identification, two weeks late, and you walked out and gave it to Huebner, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Wait a minute. And was it about like that with the four checks of five thousand dollars each?

1644 A. I had no trouble with those at all.

Q. Well, from my experience, you had an unbelievable small amount of trouble on this check for $17,000.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: It isn't for you to make that kind of a comment, counsel. You are not testifying.

By Mr. Kirby: I have a bank account.

By the Court: That doesn't make any difference. If you are going to testify, you will have to take the witness stand.

By Mr. Kirby: Let me inquire—I apologize to the Court, but let me inquire about those four checks for $5,000.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you sign those?

A. No, sir.

Q. Urban had?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Mr. Lubben testified here that he had to leave those in town because his account was kind of low. Did you hold those too for a while before you presented them?

1645 A. For a short while, yes, sir.

Q. And they were late, or stale checks, when you went to the bank? Is that right?

A. If you call a week or two, stale, yes, sir.

Q. And Urban wasn't there now?

A. At the bank?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Urban didn't get the money?

A. No, sir.

Q. He just gave it to you but didn't ask you to sign it, the check?

A. That is correct, sir.

1646 Q. Did they ask you to sign anything else that would indicate that you are the one that got the money?

A. No, sir.

Q. And they never saw you before?

A. We offered to have him call Mr. Urban, to have him verify it.

Q. They didn't want to bother with that?

A. Well, whether they did, I don't know.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Moran, maybe you can help clear up how you were able to cash $20,000.00 in checks in a bank where you weren't known.

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. He cashed $37,195.25.

By Mr. Lockley: I am asking the witness about the first transaction, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell me about the first transaction involving $20,000.00? Do you know of any arrangement that would have been made that would have eased 1647 your path?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the arrangements that were made.

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. The four $5,000.00 checks cleared all right. That is the first time I had seen an endorsement of that nature.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What sort of an endorsement was it?

A. Mr. Lubben signed the check.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the contents of these checks. The best evidence is the check itself.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have a recollection? Do you have an independent recollection of what that endorsement was?

A. Yes, sir. The endorsement was "These checks are cashed or endorsed as a courtesy only, not for payment to Mr. Urban." And Mr. Urban signed underneath that.

Q. When you went to the bank with these four 1648 $20,000.00 checks, did you know to whom to go?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you been given a name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Or a number of a window or anything of that sort?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the leading questions. This is redirect examination.

By the Court: He may tell us if he was instructed to go to a certain person at the bank.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Urban told me the man to see.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you remember his name?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you remember about where his window was located?

A. The bank, as I recall, is laid out on Halsted Street running north and south. It would be north and south. As I recall, it was at the south end of the bank. The teller's cage would be about the east window.

Q. Now, when you got there did you introduce 1649 yourself or did you have any letter of introduction?

A. I had.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the leading questions. I submit that counsel should merely ask him what he did.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, what did you do when you got there?

By the Court: He may state what he did, if anything, when he got there.

1650 By the Witness:

A. I went to the window and I told the man I was from Close & Company, and I wanted the cash for these checks. I told him the denomination of bills I wanted.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And he just handed you the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now you said in December when you cashed this $17,000.00 check that when you first went to the window an officer of the bank was there. Do you know who that was?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know what position he had in the bank?

A. I believe he was a vice president. I am not sure.

Q. Well, did you cash the check at that time?

A. At that moment, no, sir.

Q. Well, what did you do?

A. Well, the officer, I started to say, questioned the amount of money, why we needed so much cash. He didn't like the account of General Confections. He looked it up in Dun & Bradstreet. As I recall his conversation he just said he couldn't give me that kind of cash.

1651 Q. Then where was the check this time?

A. Well, I retained the check.

Q. He gave it back to you, is that it?

A. He gave it back to me, yes, sir.

Q. Then what did you do after that, after he refused to cash it?

A. I went back to Haberkorn Candy and I had a five-pound box of candy made up and I went back to the bank and waited for the other teller, the man I was supposed to have seen. He happened to be still out at lunch.

I can recall waiting behind the post for this other man to leave his duty or his cage and the one I was supposed to see, have him come back on duty.

Q. You waited inside the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Until the teller came back from lunch?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Do you know who the teller was; were you able to recognize him by sight?

A. At that time, yes, sir.

Q. Well, what did you do when he came back?

A. When he came back, I gave him the box of 1652 candy and told him Mr. Urban okayed a check for me to cash and handed it to him and he cashed it.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask him one question.

Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

What is our next number, do you know?

Will you please mark this Defendants' Exhibit 26 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 26 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Mr. Moran, I show you a document which is marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 26, and ask you to examine that and state whether or not that is your signature.

A. Yes, sir, that is my signature.

Q. Now will you look at those minutes.

I asked you on cross examination what your employment was with the Haberkorn Candy Company. You told us you were a plant manager.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were actually president of the company, 1653 were you not?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is not within the direct.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You were president of the company, were you not, at that time?

By Mr. Lockley: It is beyond the scope of the redirect examination.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: May I answer?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir. I carried the title of president.

By Mr. McConnell: That's all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Moran, what brand was that five pound box of candy?

A. It was without name, sir.

Q. Is it something that I could buy on the market now?

A. No, sir, at no time. It was a sample box, sir.

Q. Was it something to do with financial transac- 1654 tions?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: I didn't hear the question.

By Mr. Kirby: I will withdraw it. He said it is off the market.

By the Court: Is that all?

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, I would like to ask him another question.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You say you showed this money to your wife because she had never seen that much money?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is Janet Moran?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Did she have a bank account?

A. She has a joint one with myself.

Q. And didn't she ever have as much as $17,000.00 in that bank account?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. What she had in a bank account, and what she saw in cash are two different things. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

1655 By the Court: The question is whether she had seen actual currency in that amount and not whether she had a bank account or not.

By Mr. Kirby: The question is material if I can be indulged in it.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Was her bank account ever greater than $17,000.00?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes.

A. I think it might have been, sir, for a few months.

Q. When?

A. Probably about, oh, it might have been back about in 1944 or 1945.

Q. But not around 1948?

A. Oh, no, sir. I wish it were.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified about your sister buying a $67,500.00 mortgage.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, do you know anything about that?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

1656 By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Moran.

(Witness excused.)

SAMUEL J. DAVIDSON, a witness called on behalf of the Government having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Mr. Davidson, what is your full name?

A. Samuel J. Davidson.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am an attorney.

Q. An attorney. Where do you practice?

A. The state of New Jersey.

Q. Where do you live?
A. Hillsdale, New Jersey.
Q. During the year 1948, did you know a Mr. David Lubben?
A. I did.
Q. And in what connection?
A. I represented him as an attorney.
1657 Q. He is a client of yours?
A. He is a client of mine.
Q. Did you also know him in any other capacity besides professionally?
A. Well, with the passing of time, we became good—
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Davidson.
By the Witness:
A. I say, with the passing of time, we became friends and I visited with him socially.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, during the month of February, 1948, do you have any recollection of any visit at Mr. Lubben's home?
A. Well, I visited him quite often and I am sure that I visited with him during the month of February, 1948.
Q. And have you ever met any of the defendants in the case on trial, Mr. Frank Huebner, Mr. Harold Sullivan, or Mr. Byron Cain?
A. I have met them all.
Q. Will you point them out?
A. Mr. Frank Huebner is the gentleman with the gray suit sitting with his arms folded at the counsel table next to Mr. Byron Cain who is sitting there with the 1658 gray suit—or a blue suit, rather. Mr. Harold Sullivan is the gentleman with the gray hair and gray suit—with the tan suit.
By Mr. Lockley: May the record show that the defendants were identified.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, were you ever present during the month of February, 1948, or about that time in Mr. Lubben's home when any one of the defendants was present?
A. Yes, I was there when Mr. Frank Huebner was there.
Q. About when was that?
A. It was the early part of February.
Q. Did you see certain records at that time?

A. Well, I overheard that Mr. Lubben was to give some records or was about to give some records to Mr. Huebner, so I called Mr. Lubben out.

Q. Well, now, wait a minute. You overheard—was this in the presence of Mr. Huebner?

A. Well, Mr. Huebner and Mr. Lubben were on the—were in the sun parlor, sun porch, and I was in the living room. I wasn't particularly concerned with what was happening there, but the conversation became a little loud so I couldn't help overhear it.

1659 Q. Well, proceed. What was the conversation?

A. Mr. Huebner wanted to borrow some of Mr. Lubben's records so that he could take them back to Chicago with him to compare them with the Shotwell books.

And it was then that I got a hold of Mr. Lubben. I don't know whether I walked in the back and called him out or whether I sent the maid in to get him out.

1660 Q. Now, as a result of that, was Mr. Huebner given the records?

A. No, sir, he was not.

Q. What was done with them?

A. The records were put in a light manila envelope, and sealed, and Mr. Huebner put some penciled notations on the flap of the envelope where it was sealed.

Q. Do you know what happened to that envelope subsequently?

A. Well, I know that the envelope subsequently was delivered to Mr. Huebner.

Q. And before that time?

A. Before that time, Mr. Huebner opened the envelope in my presence, and he gave me the records and I had them photostated.

1661 Q. Well, now, I show you Government's Exhibits for Identification Numbers 13, 73-A, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 100, 112, 120, 122-A, 122-C, 126-A, 126-B, and 153-A, and I ask you if you have seen these photostats before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And in what connection did you see them?

A. When I delivered them to Mr. Lubben.

Q. Have you seen the originals of those photostats before?

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. And where?

A. When I delivered them to Mr. Lubben prior to his inserting them back into this envelope that I have mentioned previously.

Q. Well, when did you first see the originals of those documents?

A. The first time I saw the originals of those documents was in the evening that this—or the afternoon that this conversation took place at Mr. Lubben's home with Mr. Huebner.

Q. And were those the documents that were placed in the envelope?

A. They appear to be, sir.

1662 Q. And are those the documents which you subsequently had photostated?

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that be stricken, the response that they appear to be, as too indefinite to be of weight, as evidence.

By the Court: Overruled. The answer may stand.

1663 By the Witness: Is there a question pending?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You had those originals photostated, I understood?

A. Yes, sir; I did.

Q. Then what did you do with the photostats?

A. I delivered them to Mr. Lubben.

Q. Are those the photostats?

A. Yes, sir; they are. I recognize Mr. Lubben's handwriting on them, and I recognize that this writing was on the originals when I gave them out to be photostated.

Q. And what did you do with the originals?

A. I returned them to Mr. Lubben.

Q. And do you know what he did with them?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: Unless he was there, present, I object to what Lubben did with them.

By Mr. Lockley: That is what we are trying to develop.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know what he did with them?

A. Yes, sir.

1664 Q. Were you present at the time?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What did he do?

A. Mr. Lubben gave the envelope to Mr. Frank Huebner, when we visited here in Chicago at the Shotwell plant.

Q. And when was that?

A. It was in the early part of February. I am trying to place a time—I was in Palm Springs, California, on February 11.

Now, this was either a day or two before that.

Q. And in what year?

A. 1948.

Q. Were you able to identify the envelope in question by any particular—

A. Yes, sir; the envelope had the same pencil marks on it, and Mr. Huebner opened it in our presence, and he pulled the papers out and looked at them. And there was no objection from him, so he must have recognized them.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at this time I wish to offer the photostatic copies of those exhibits into evidence.

1665 They have previously been identified by Mr. Lubben, and I believe we have now laid a foundation for the absence of the originals, since they are unavailable and in the hands of the defendants.

By Mr. McConnell: I object.

By Mr. O'Brien: Do you have the exhibits at hand?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to them as no proper foundation having been laid to bind the corporation in that transaction.

By Mr. Kirby: On behalf of the defendant, Harold Sullivan, I make the objection that they are not shown to have been connected with him, and that the jury should be instructed that in no event should they be considered with respect to him.

By the Court: Well, of course, insofar as these exhibits are concerned, the Court will have to determine their competency as to the respective defendants, or the jury will have to, in light of all the evidence.

1666 If the originals were given to Mr. Huebner, as the witness states,—of course, he was an officer of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Whether or not they are competent as to the other defendant will, I suppose, depend upon the testimony that connects up the other defendants with the offense set forth in the indictment.

And I will receive the exhibits in evidence, and we will have to determine later on, in light of the entire record—or the jury will—as to their competency with respect to the various defendants.

1667 By Mr. Kirby: Well, if the Court please, Mr. Sullivan is a defendant, of course, as we know, as an individual.

By the Court: That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: And I am sure that it would be proper—

By the Court: Supposing we have this understanding—I realize the difficulty that counsel has in protecting the record—if they are not connected up as to the defendant Sullivan, or any of the defendants, of course, I will entertain a motion to strike.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I don't mean to prolong the discussion, except that while these things are so readily apparent to you, and, to a degree, fully apparent to me, I was wondering if it was completely plain to the jury, who haven't had the burden of the law that we have had over the years.

We can take that up by a motion to strike later on.

By the Court: Yes, I will entertain your motion
1668 to strike, if they are not connected up with the defendant, Sullivan.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Judge.

By the Court: And, of course, that same ruling will be for the benefit of any other defendant who desires to make a motion to strike any and all of these exhibits, if the defendant takes the position that they are not competent evidence as to such defendant.

At this time it is difficult for the Court to make a definitive ruling, or final ruling as to whom these exhibits will be competent. That will depend, I take it, on the entire record that is before the Court at the close of the case. And I will entertain, of course, motions to strike on behalf of every defendant who feels that any exhibits are not competent evidence as to him or as to it.

By Mr. McConnell: That protects the record all right, except I want to add—it was implicit in my previous objection, but to make it specific—while Mr. Huebner 1669 was an officer of the corporation, if it should appear from the evidence that his interest was adverse to that of the corporation, as a matter of law the corporation would not be bound, and I would want to raise that point.

1670 By the Court: Yes, if Mr. Huebner was acting solely in his individual capacity, and if these events—if they are sustained—indicate that he was not acting in the course of his employment, or in pursuance of his employment as vice president of the company, of course, they are competent only as to Huebner. I think we can clarify that after we have the entire picture, which as yet, I take it, the Court does not have.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 13, 73-A, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 100, 112, 120, 122-A, 122-C, 126-A, 126-B and 153-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Davidson do you have any knowledge, from your conversation in the sun porch, as to the purpose Mr. Huebner had for these records?

By the Court: Well, now, are you calling for conversation?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that.

1671 By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: If you are, then you direct your question to conversation rather than asking for a conclusion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What did Mr. Huebner say at that time?

A. I don't have any recollection of the conversation other than what I have given you.

Q. What is your best recollection?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Lubben was about to give these records to Mr. Huebner—

By the Court: He was what?

By the Witness:

A. Was about to give these records to Mr. Huebner, and I, as an attorney, felt that once those records were out of Mr. Lubben's hands, he would have no way—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, the feelings of Mr. Davidson, as an attorney on behalf—

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: —on behalf of Mr. Lubben are completely immaterial.

1672 By the Court: Yes. Not what you felt, Mr. Davidson. Just tell what the conversation was in the presence of Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think he has been over that.

By the Court: Sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: He has been over that.

By Mr. McConnell: He said he couldn't give any more.

By the Court: If he has been over it, if there isn't anything in addition, then you have completed it.

By Mr. Lockley: I am not sure I have asked him this question, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you hear Mr. Huebner state for what purpose he wanted these records?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that as leading.

By the Court: He may state any conversation, or any statement made by Mr. Huebner in this regard.

By the Witness: Yes. Mr. Huebner wanted the 1673 record so that he could conform or correct the books of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. Now, directing your attention—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it out as not conversation.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object. It stated a conclusion and doesn't purport to be a part of a conversation. He is just stating why. If you will read the answer to the last question—

By the Court: Can't you tell us what Mr. Huebner said, as close as you can, in that regard?

By the Witness: Well, Mr. Huebner asked Mr. Lubben for the—

By the Court: Keep your voice up.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Huebner asked Mr. Lubben for these records. He wanted the supporting records—I think he called them. Mr. Lubben, after he had talked with me, did not give him those records, because he told Mr. Huebner that 1674 he had received promises in the past—

By Mr. McConnell: This isn't conversation.

By the Court: Go ahead. He is answering, I think.

By the Witness:

A. He told Mr. Huebner that he had received promises in the past and that they were not lived up to. And therefore, he didn't feel that he wanted to give him the records at that time.

My recollection is that there was some sort of a transaction pending at that time in connection with the sale, or purchase of some stock in the Haberkorn—

By Mr. Lockley: You are still not responsive.

By the Court: Tell us what Huebner said. That is what we are after.

By the Witness:

A. I am afraid that I can't repeat the conversation at this late date.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Repeat it as best you can.

By Mr. O'Brien: I submit that it—

1675 By Mr. Lockley: Nobody expects him to repeat it word for word.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, Mr. Davidson is a lawyer.

By the Court: If he can't remember the exact conversation he can state the substance of it.

By the Witness:

A. The substance of the conversation was that Mr. Huebner wanted these records so he could take them back to Chicago with him to correct or conform the Shotwell books, because they had no—there were some entries missing on their books. And Mr. Lubben had told him—or told Mr. Huebner, in my presence, that all of these transactions appearing on these supporting documents, appeared in his—that is, Mr. Lubben's corporation's books.

And I guess that's about all there was to it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, sir. Now, directing your attention to a later time in 1948, did you have any further conversation with any one of the defendants?

A. Yes, some time in August.

1676 Q. Which defendant?

A. 1948. With Mr. Byron Cain.

1677 Q. And who was present at that time?

A. Mr. Lubben, myself, Mr. Byron Cain—

Q. And where?

A. —and a man by the name of—

Q. Go ahead.

A. Patrick Grace.

Q. Where was this conversation?

A. At Fort Lee, New Jersey, at a night club.

Q. What was the night club?

A. Known as the Club Riviera, or Riviera.

Q. The Club Riviera. All right. Now, will you please tell us what was said during the course of that conversation?

A. Well, Mr. Cain opened the conversation, and he addressed his language to Mr. Lubben, and he says, "You know the Internal Revenue—or someone from the Internal Revenue Department has walked into our office in Chicago. They talked with Stanley Graflund and Stanley Graflund gave them books and records. It looks like hell is going to break loose soon.

"Now, Mr. Grace, the gentleman who is here with me, is a friend of Bob Hannegan's, and he does his contact work for him here in the East, and Mr. Grace had been to the Internal Revenue office in New York, and as 1678 a result of what he found there I can tell you that hell will break loose.

"Dave, you don't want to be in a position where you are going to have to put your finger on people that you have been very friendly with, that you have done business with. It is going to be very embarrassing to you and I am sure that you don't want to do that."

Then they talked about Mr. Lubben going off somewhere to South America, so he would not be available when the case came on for trial, if there should be indictments.

They also talked about Lubben getting the Shotwell account. I think it was a syndicate store account that was mentioned at that time. And I remember quite distinctly Mr. Lubben telling Mr. Cain that, "I have had the Shotwell account once before, and when I needed it you took it away from me. I am not interested in that."

Then the conversation simmered down, or came down to Lubben's zoning problem that he had out in Hillsdale in connection with a factory that he had at Hillsdale,
New Jersey. And there was talk about a syndicate
1679 being formed between Mr. Kramer, and Mr. Cain, to purchase this factory and land at Hillsdale for something like $75,000.00.

And then it came back to the fact that if Lubben were not around, if he were in a country in South America, why—and his taxes were paid—there would be no way of his coming back here, or being compelled to come back to the country to testify.

It was at that point that I injected myself into the picture. And I told these gentlemen, "I can't see any reason why Mr. Lubben should go to South America, or any place else, because from what I know of his affairs he hasn't committed any crime, and there is no reason for him to run away. He may owe some money to the government. Whether it is ten thousand, or a hundred thousand, or even a million, is nothing—is no reason for a man to pick up and run. And if he did do that, the onus of this entire tax situation would be thrown on him. And it is quite possible that he never would be able to come back," because I felt that there might be a conspiracy angle to the thing, and the statute of limitations would not run.

1680 And I suggested that we leave. It was then that Mr. Grace injected himself into the picture, and he said, "Well, I don't know what you have to concern yourself about. If Lubben's taxes are paid there will be no—the government won't be looking for him. He will only be a witness. And, on top of that, you know Giglio—" who is a former partner of Mr. Lubben—"Giglio is involved in this matter. He has a lot of powerful friends, and Lubben is going to wind up in a lot of trouble."

1681 It was at that point that I said, "Well, if this is a threat, I think we better go now."

Then Mr. Grace handed us a card and he—from that card I saw he was an attorney, was a member of a law firm in Brooklyn. I think the firm was Grace and Grace, and he left word, or he stated to us—"When you want to make an appointment, call me. He said, "Call me in a few days. Come in and let's talk about this some more."

I did go to Mr. Grace's office with Mr. Lubben.

Q. Before that, do you have any recollection as to who opened the conversation with respect to the formation of the syndicate?

A. It was Byron Cain.

Q. Can you recall what he said?

A. Well, he said, "If you could get rid of your property you would have nothing to hold you here. If you could get rid of that factory, the acreage in Hillsdale, there would be nothing to hold you here. And I am sure that Kramer and myself will pay you $75,000 for the property."

1682 And it was then that Grace said the taxes will be deducted from that, "and you won't have to pay—there will be no problem as far as you are concerned, Lubben."

Q. Did Mr. Lubben state any satisfaction with the $75,000 figure?

A. Well, he just—he felt that the property was worth more than that, but there wasn't too much comment on his part.

Q. Now, you say you subsequently went to Pat Grace's office?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have another meeting at a later time with any one of the defendants?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one?

A. Byron Cain.

Q. And where was that?

A. Oh, that was at LaGuardia Airport, New York. And also at the Gotham Hotel in New York City.

Q. And when?

A. It was in 1951.

Q. In 1951. Are you able to place it any more definitely?

1683 A. Well, either the latter part of July, or the early part of August, as best I can remember.

Q. Now, do you know how that meeting came to be arranged?

A. Well, I was at Mr. Lubben's home, visiting with him, and a telephone call came in, and Mr. Lubben told me that, "It's Byron Cain on the phone. Take the extension, Sam."

So I did take the extension. I went upstairs in his bedroom where he had another outlet on the phone. And I listened. And Mr. Cain asked Mr. Lubben when he is coming to Chicago. And Lubben told him he didn't have any money, and "What do you want to see me about? And I don't know when I will be out to Chicago."

Cain said, "All right. I will see you in about a week."

1684 Now, subsequently, I did go with Mr. Lubben to LaGuardia Airport.

Q. How long after the telephone call was that?

A. Oh, within a day or so. This was on a Saturday, Saturday morning. We met—Mr. Lubben and I drove—

By the Court: Hours or days, or minutes after this conversation, that you say you went to the airport?

By the Witness:

A. It was a matter of a couple days.

By the Court: A couple days?

By the Witness: A couple days. I will say two days, because I subsequently learned there was another call on Friday, the day before we went. But I wasn't at Lubben's home. I don't recall being there when the call was received.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And you went to LaGuardia Airport with Mr. Lubben, and what happened then?

A. That's right. We saw Mr. Cain come off the plane, and he recognized us, and Mr. Cain said to Mr. Lubben, "Dave, can we go somewhere to talk?"

1685 And Lubben said, "Well, Byron, we have had some meetings at the Gotham Hotel, New York. Why can't we go there today?"

So Mr. Cain said all right. "Let's go."

So we got into Lubben's car, and we drove to the Gotham Hotel. We got there about—a little after twelve, possibly half past twelve, and we got a table at the rear of the dining room, where we were taken care of.

Now, at that—strike that. Mr. Cain then asked Lubben how he was getting along with his zoning problem. Mr. Lubben told him he had the same trouble that he has always had, maybe a little more. And then he wanted to know why he can't dispose of the farm that he had, that is, the factory, and the acreage.

And Lubben told him, "Well, we just can't get any buyers. I would like to get out of there tomorrow, if I could."

And then Byron said, to Lubben, "Now, Dave, look! There is going to be—"

By the Court: Speak up.

By the Witness:

A. "There is going to be someone from the In-1686 ternal Revenue Department getting in touch with you. It seems that Mr. Mammel from the Internal Revenue Department and a man by the name of Krane have been down to the Shotwell plant, and they have been raising a terrible commotion around the place. Everybody knows that we are under investigation right now, and it is rather embarrassing. It is embarrassing to me because of my connections that I have with various corporations."

He mentioned that he was a trustee of some University.

And, "Dave, on these figures, on these entries you have on your books, if they come to you, will you please tell them that they were exchanges of merchandise, that they are not cash payments?"

It was then that I got into the conversation. I said to Mr. Lubben, I said, "Dave, was that so, were they exchanges of merchandise?"

Mr. Lubben said, "No."

"Well, then, Dave, if it wasn't exchanges of merchandise, you cannot say anything that is not the truth, because you are going to get in trouble.".

Then some trivialities were exchanged, which to my mind at that time didn't register to be of any im-1687 portance.

And it was about three thirty, or about three o'clock, that we left the Gotham Hotel, and we left—we drove to the airport.

On the way to the airport, in the car, Mr. Cain again took up the conversation about Mr. Lubben stating to whoever will come from the Internal Revenue Department that they were exchanges of merchandise involved in his entries, and they weren't.

And then he said that he had to get back to Chicago today—for that night, he had an appointment, I think he said with the late Mayor Kelly's widow, who had some problem with her executor, and he wanted to be there at seven thirty or thereabouts.

That about took in the ride from the hotel to the airport.

And we got to the airport. Mr. Cain had to wait for the plane, At the airport, he again talked about these exchanges. And then he asked Mr. Lubben what he was going to do, and where he was going.

1688 So Mr. Lubben told him that he has been down to Puerto Rico, and that that is where he expects to settle. He has also been over to the Virgin Islands, which is close to Puerto Rico, and that there was a pier for sale, that was owned by the Danish West Indies Company. And Mr. Cain said he might have someone who was interested in buying that pier, and he would see Mr. Lubben in about two or three weeks.

In addition to that, Mr. Cain mentioned that he was the owner of some defunct oil well—I think it was in Oklahoma, I am not certain of the state—that was being dismantled, the pipes were being taken out, and that he would come down to Puerto Rico to look the land over, and that he would give Lubben the Shotwell account again.

And Mr. Lubben said, "I am not interested in the Shotwell account. I just don't want to be concerned with it."

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that exhaust your recollection?

A. That about exhausts my recollection.

Q. Was any reference made at that time to a settlement of the case, or an attempt to settle?

1689 A. Yes. Mr. Cain said that he had tried to settle the tax case—I am not certan whether he said he or the company—had tried to settle the case, that he wanted to do it when Bob Hannegan was alive, and he was talked out of it, he had advice against it.

In addition to that he wanted to hire some attorney here in Chicago who was supposed to be a tax expert—I think his name was Boyden, or Boden—or some such name, and Mr. Boden had died. And, as he put it, "He was now in one hell of a fix," because the Government was breathing down his back.

Q. During the course of the conversation, did Mr. Cain make any reference as to why he wanted Mr. Lubben to testify to the exchanges of merchandise?

A. Yes, he said that if there was some proof that there were merchandise exchanges for some of these entries, instead of cash payments, that it would raise an issue with the Government, and he might be able to compromise the tax case.

Q. Does that exhaust your recollection?

A. I think it does.

Q. Was any reference made to who was going to 1690 pay these taxes?

A. I think Mr. Cain said that he was going to pay it.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben say anything?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben said, "If you do, you are a fool, because you ought to get a hold of Frank Huebner, who got the money from me, and put them in piles,"—I think he said three piles—and when he would have the piles what was supposedly to be evenly divided, he would take some money from one pile and put it in his pocket, or put it on top of the other pile, with the comment that it was for the races, or some other purpose that he had.

By Mr. Lockley: May we have our morning recess?

By the Court: We will take our morning recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience kindly remain standing while the jury files out?

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

1691 By Mr. Lockley: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Davidson, how many times did you meet Mr. Sullivan?

A. Not very often, sir.

Q. How many, can you say?

A. Maybe three or four times, if I—if that many.

Q. Was that here in Chicago or in the East?

A. I don't recall ever having met Harold Sullivan in Chicago.

Q. And then I take it, it must have been in the East that you met him?

A. Yes, either at Lubben's home or at one of the hotels in New York.

Q. Now about how many times?

A. Oh, I can't tell you that, sir.

Q. Was he at Lubben's home in February of 1948?

A. He may have been.

Q. You don't remember?

A. I don't recall. I know he was there at least one time, that I saw him there.

By the Court: Are you speaking of Sullivan 1692 now?

By the Witness: Yes, Mr. Sullivan.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And was he at the Riviera meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or at the meeting at the airport and at the Gotham on the day that you mentioned?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Huebner present at the airport Gotham meeting?

A. No, sir. The only one that was present was Mr. Byron Cain, of the defendants.

Q. How many times did you meet Mr. Huebner?

A. Oh, possibly half a dozen times. Maybe it was a little more.

Q. Well, one time, I take it, was in February of 1948, at Mr. Lubben's home?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. What were the other occasions? Were those casual meetings or did they have to do with business?

A. Well, they had to do with business, but my meeting with Mr. Huebner was rather casual.

Q. You had no business to transact with Mr. 1693 Huebner as Lubben's lawyer?

A. No, sir. I transacted no business with Mr. Huebner.

Q. Yes. Now Byron Cain, you testified to two meetings with him, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And you said that you were out to Palm Springs February 11, 1946, was that?

A. 1948.

Q. Or 1948, I should say. Was that to meet Byron Cain?

A. Yes, that was to meet Mr. Cain at his home there.

Q. And the purpose of that meeting was to procure his signature to certain papers?

A. Yes, to an assignment of a real estate mortgage and a chattel mortgage.

Q. Those were papers which were in some way involved in the so-called Haberkorn deal?

A. No, sir. Those were papers that were involved in connection with the property in Hillsdale.

Q. I appreciate that, but was that the assignment 1694 made at or about the time of the Haberkorn deal?

A. Well, I imagine it was made—

Q. Or do you know?

A. My recollection is, you see, I did not represent the principals in the Haberkorn deal.

Q. Well, that comes back to me now. As a matter of fact, you came out to Chicago one time in connection with the Haberkorn deal but by that time there was some separate representation here?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you never got it?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So that your only connection with that matter was your visit to Palm Springs to get Mr. Cain's signature on the assignment of the mortgage which covered the Hillsdale farm property?

A. That is correct, and to take his acknowledgment.

Q. Yes, sir. And you did get that and you brought it back?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Now have you had any meetings of a business nature with Mr. Cain other than the three which you have described?

A. Well, I have sat with Mr. Cain and Mr. Lubben
1695 and Mr. Huebner at other times. Now, when you refer to business meetings—

Q. Well, yes. I am not interested in all the meetings you may have had.

A. Well, there were a number of meetings, yes.

Q. What other meetings?

A. Well, if you will tell me relative to what.

Q. You spoke of business meetings. I have tried to exclude mere social visits.

A. Lubben had zoning troubles.

Q. Yes, sir.

A. As a result of those zoning difficulties, Lubben's company, General Confections, and Saddle River Farms had spent quite a bit of money. Lubben's—strike that. General Confections was located in New York and Lubben had a chicken farm at this property in Hillsdale where the candy factory subsequently was installed and my recollection is that Mr. Huebner, Mr. Cain and another gentleman from the Shotwell Company, whose name I can't recall, advised Mr. Lubben to move his plant from New York to New Jersey and get rid of the chickens and be able to save a certain amount, be able to save quite a bit of money in connection 1696 with his labor, rent, and so on.

Q. Mr. Davidson, that is all right. I will accept it.

A. Now—

Q. I don't want to wander too far afield, but these other meetings, did they have anything to do with the subject matter of your testimony today?

A. Yes. You see, subsequently, Mr. O'Brien, Mr.— or General Confections and possibly Saddle River Farms joined in the transaction. A loan was obtained from the Sterling National Bank in New York City.

Q. Is that the one in connection with which that mortgage was given?

A. That is right.

Q. On which you went out to get the assignment?

A. That is right. Now, that loan was received by the company as the result of a guarantee executed by Mr. Byron Cain for $75,000.00 and the corporations gave back a real estate mortgage covering property in Hillsdale and covering property contiguous to the Hillsdale Whitecliff Lake, New Jersey, and also chattel mort-
1697 gages on the New Jersey plant and on the New York plant. Those were the documents which were the subject of the assignment which Mr. Cain executed at Palm Springs.

1698 Q. I so understand. Now, these other meetings were meetings which had to do in some way with that subject-matter, the matter of the Sterling Bank loan?

A. Yes. The reason for those other meetings was that, I believe, it was Mr. Huebner that told Mr. Lubben that it would cost, oh, $15,000.00 or eighteen thousand, or some nominal figure to move the plant from Bronx, New York, to New Jersey.

It developed that when the plant had moved from the Bronx, New York, to New Jersey, that practically the entire loan was used up and there wasn't any operative capital.

Q. Now—

A. I was told—

Q. Mr. Davidson.

A. Yes.

Q. You see, we have been all over that. I am just trying to find out if there were any other meetings which had to do with the subject-matter of your testimony here today.

A. Well, Mr. O'Brien, I am trying to tell you that.

Q. Well, if you will, please—

By the Court: It depends on what you mean by "subject-matter" I suppose.

1699 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, Mr. Davidson is a lawyer, your Honor, and he knows what the subject-matter of his conversation here, his testimony here today, was. Well, I will withdraw the question and get on to what I wanted to ask about.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, you gave a statement to the government October 24, 1951, did you not?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And on the same day, was Mr. Lubben with you?

A. Yes, sir, he was present when I gave a statement.

Q. And the statement was given to Messrs. Krane, Twohig and Mammel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Lubben testified in respect of this Riviera incident?

A. Did I know that he had testified?

Q. Yes, here in this court room.

A. Well, I assume that he had testified, but no one told me.

Q. In your testimony today, I believe you said that Mr. Cain suggested that Lubben leave the country.

1700 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you asked that when you made your statement on October 24th to the agents?

A. Well, I was asked to recall what transpired.

Q. Your statement to the agents was signed and sworn to, by you?

A. Yes, sometime later, at my office.

Q. November 15, 1951, as a matter of fact, wasn't it?

A. If that is the date on it, that is the correct date. It was signed sometime after I gave it.

Q. Now, in that, is it not true that you stated that Pat Grace at that time—that it was Pat Grace who suggested that if Lubben would go to South America for about two years and if his taxes were paid, the thing would blow over? Did you say that?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. And nowhere in this statement do you say or did you say that Mr. Cain said that?

A. Well, if you will look at the first part of the statement, you will find that it was Mr. Cain who was doing the talking.

Q. Yes. I do find that he was talking. That is, you are talking and you had been introduced and Mr. Cain has done some talking but he hasn't said a word about South America. 1701

A. May I see the statement, please?

Q. Yes, sir, you may.

(Handing document to the witness.)

A. It looks like you are right, Mr. O'Brien.

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By the Witness:

A. I say, it looks like you are right. I had read the whole—I have not read—will you strike. I had taken the conversation in its entirety and I was led to believe that it was Mr. Cain's desire that Lubben do just what I testified because you have at the beginning—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, I haven't asked you for an explanation.

A. It is all right.

Q. Mr. Davidson, it is one of the reasons I asked you whether you knew that Mr. Lubben had testified in this court room on that subject.

By Mr. Lockley: Did you answer, Mr. Davidson?

By the Witness: I know nothing about Mr. Lubben's testimony. 1702

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, he did answer.

By the Witness:

A. Except what I can surmise he must have testified.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. There is no question pending.

A. Well, you asked me a question.

Q. I didn't think so.

A. I am sorry.

Q. Your answer to my last question was you think I am right, after reading this statement.

Now, I notice that you did not give the jury this part of the conversation which appears also in this statement:

"Cain told me—he told me—"

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment. That statement is not in evidence. I don't believe you are permitted to read from it at this time.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.
1703 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When you were talking to the agents, Mr. Davidson—withdraw that.

In this conversation at the Riviera or at Mr. Grace's office, did Mr. Grace tell you that Cain had made a disclosure and that therefore Grace had nothing further to tell you?

A. No. What he did say was that Mr. Cain was thinking of making a disclosure or that he intended to make a disclosure and that therefore he had nothing more to talk to us about.

Q. Well, he did say that, did he not?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I didn't hear the question, counsel.

By the Witness: I wasn't asked that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read the question.

(Whereupon the question and answer were read as above recorded.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did Grace say that Cain had been in to see the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. No, sir. He never told me that.

1704 Q. Did he say that he was going in to see the Bureau of Internal Revenue?

A. No, sir. The language that he used was that Mr. Cain was thinking of making a disclosure or was about to make a disclosure. I recall that distinctly, because Mr. Lubben turned to me and said, "Sam, what is a disclosure?"

Q. And did you tell him?

A. So I told him—

Q. What did you tell him?

A. As best I could—

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, what did you tell him?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to conversations.

By the Court: Oh, I think I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. But you did say that at the Riviera meeting in August of 1948, Cain said that someone had come, some Revenue agent had come to the Shotwell plant and Graflund had given him some papers?

A. Yes.

1705 Q. Now was that the first time that you had ever heard that?

By the Court: I am sorry I didn't hear that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was that the first time that you had ever heard that that had occurred?

A. Yes, that was the first knowledge that I got of it.

Q. No one told you that before?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you yourself been to the Bureau of Internal Revenue in New York concerning the tax problems or tax matters of Mr. Lubben's companies?

A. When?

Q. Prior to August of 1948.

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you, in August of 1948, know that anyone had been to the Bureau of Internal Revenue for Mr. Lubben's companies?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. And if such a thing had occurred, Mr. Lubben had not mentioned it to you?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. He 1706 has answered that he didn't know.

By the Court: You are assuming something now not in evidence and I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did Mr. Lubben say anything of the kind to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. At or prior to the time of the Riviera meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you, before or after the time of the Riviera meeting, working on any of the tax matters for Mr. Lubben's companies?

A. No, sir. I had nothing to do with his tax matters.

Q. Now when was it that Mr. Cain said that he was willing to pay four hundred to $450,000.00?

A. My recollection is that it was at this 1951 meeting.

Q. Was it then that Mr. Lubben said that he was a fool if he did that?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell me again, so I may have it accurately, the reason that Mr. Lubben assigned when he 1707 stated that?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben said that Frank Huebner, when he got the money, would put—would divide it up in three piles and they were supposed to be equal piles. Of course, I am not giving it to you verbatim. I am giving it to you as I recall it to have been.

Q. Yes.

A. And I think that Lubben said he ought to have him down to the cellar and make him give back the money because he had stolen from his partners.

Byron Cain didn't say anything to that.

Q. And by "his partners", do you mean those interested in the three piles?

A. I have no idea who he meant.

Q. Did Mr. Cain say at that time that he was making efforts to settle the tax matters here in Chicago?

A. Are you speaking of the 1951 meeting?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. He just said that he was willing to pay four 1708 hundred to $450,000.00, was that it?

A. I think he said he was willing—he was willing to pay.

Q. Is that all he said?

A. And that someone had advised him against it. He was willing to pay it when Bob Hannegan was alive.

Q. Now you gave a deposition in this case in New York, didn't you, Mr. Davidson?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Going back to February of 1948, did Mr. Huebner get a ride back to New York from your farm?

A. I couldn't say. I would imagine that he did.

Q. Excuse me.

A. Because, Lubben always took his guests back to New York City in his car.

Q. Did you ride with him either to or from the farm on that occasion?

A. I may have.

Q. And didn't Mr. Lubben also?

A. Well, I would not have gone to New York with Mr. Huebner unless Mr. Lubben were along.

Q. As Mr. Huebner was leaving the farm, were you still present with Mr. Lubben at Lubben's home?

1709 A. I think I was, yes.

Q. And when he left, did you or Mr. Lubben in your presence say anything about visiting Morley Kramer?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you visit Kramer in Boston with Mr. Lubben?

A. I don't think I have ever met Mr. Kramer in my life.

Q. Did you go to Boston with Mr. Lubben to Mr. Kramer's office?

A. Yes, we did go to Gum Products. That was Mr. Kramer's company.

Q. And is it true that the reason you didn't meet him was that they asked you to wait outside?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And by "they" I mean Mr. Lubben and Mr. Carry.

A. Yes.

Q. And you did wait until they had concluded their discussion and had come out?

A. I returned to New York with them.

Q. And you went back with them?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Yes, sir. And was that before or after the time of the Riviera meeting?

1710 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think I will object to this line of questioning relating to Mr. Kramer. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination and I believe your Honor ruled the other day that it was immaterial and the previous testimony could be stricken.

By the Court: I think it is outside the scope of the direct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know how closely I am to be confined to the direct in testing the story.

By the Court: A little more closely than the rules of evidence require.

By Mr. O'Brien: That would be somewhat within the Court's discretion. I do not mean to pursue the matter, but I would like, while the witness is here, to get a small part of it that fits in with something that we want to develop later.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. At the time of the meeting in February, 1948,
1711 was Mr. Lubben having trouble about money?

A. I think he was.

Q. And was that also true in August of 1948?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. That is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Well, he may answer.
By the Witness:

A. Yes. I was told—I was told that Mr. Cain had promised to put up an additional $50,000.00 when they moved from the factory—when they moved the factory from New York to New Jersey, but the money never came. The money was never advanced.
By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You were told by whom that Cain—

A. By Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I move to strike that. I am asking for what—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, he asked the question, your Honor, and it was responsive.

By the Court: Well, you have gone into it.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

1712 Q. Now, was there any other reason why he was having money trouble?

A. Well, I wouldn't know of any specific reason except that when a man needs money, he needs it.

Q. Well, on your deposition, Mr. Davidson, did you not testify that Lubben had to make—that what Lubben told you was that he had to make tax payments and that he needed money?

By Mr. Lockley: Oh, I object to that, your Honor. What Mr. Lubben told him is clearly hearsay. It is also beyond the scope of the direct examination and I believe it is immaterial.

By the Court: Well, I think we are getting outside the scope of the direct examination now, Counsel. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor may sustain an objection to this too, but I do wish to make the record, unless you consider that I make a formal offer.

I have one further question which I would like to record:

1713 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you also testify on your deposition and answer and say that you did know that Lubben was having income tax trouble and that he was in consultation with Sproul & Scholz and you went along, possibly to pick up some legal angles that might require research?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object to that. I think it is beyond the scope of the direct examination again and it is immaterial.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I move that it be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Were you present at the Sproul-Scholz office when Mr. Crodez and Mr. Twohig took the records of the proprietorship?

By Mr. Lockley: I regret the necessity of objecting continually, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: But it is going beyond the scope

1714 of the direct examination.

By the Court: It certainly is going outside the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. How long have you been practicing law, Mr. Davidson?

A. Close to twenty-five years, sir.

Q. On this Riviera meeting night, where were you prior to the meeting at the Riviera?

A. I was visiting at Mr. Lubben's home.

Q. Did you know at that time that you were going to be called that night?

A. No, sir.

Q. For a Riviera meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had Mr. Lubben told you that he had had a communication from Mr. Morley Kramer; that Mr. Cain and Mr. Grace were coming down to see him?

A. This is something new to me, sir.

Q. Well, then you didn't know it, is that right?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

1715 Q. The only reason you knew you were there was just to enjoy television, is that it?

A. Yes, that and possibly Mr. Lubben had a question or two he wanted to ask me while I was available.

Q. You took care of his legal matters at that time?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. What were you, a sort of constant legal attendant of his at that time?

A. Will you define the "constant legal attendant" so that I can answer the question?

Q. You have been practicing law for twenty-five years and you know the word "constant", don't you?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object to counsel arguing with the witness.

By the Court: Yes, I think so. The use of "constant legal attendant," there is no basis for it.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Were you with him constantly?

Withdraw the question.

How often were you with him?

A. Quite often.

1716 Q. How many times a week did you spend with him at his home in Hillsdale?

A. Oh, there were times when I spent a short time every day of the week with him, and there were other times when I omitted a day or so.

Q. And you were engaged in legal discussions, were you, or advising him legally, were you, at those times?

A. I took care of whatever questions he may have propounded to me on a legal matter, of a legal nature, and I visited with him socially.

Q. Well, at these times you were going over there practically every day in the week, were you charging him for your time as a lawyer?

A. I was on a retainer, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, he has answered.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, anyway, what was the night of the Riviera meeting? Now, let us have that again.

A. What do you want to know about that night?

Q. What was the date?
A. As I say, it was in 1948, in August.
Q. Can't you fix it any closer than that?
1717 A. No, sir, I can't.
Q. You didn't make any memoranda?
A. I made no notes.
Q. You don't keep time records in your office, as a lawyer?
A. It was not necessary in this particular case because I was on a retainer.
Q. And you didn't?
A. No, sir, I did not.
Q. So all you can tell us is it was some time in August?
A. That is correct.
Q. And what time of the day was it?
A. It was in the evening. It was quite late.
Q. What time?
A. Well, I didn't look at any clock, but I imagine it was about ten o'clock or after that when we started out.
Q. How did you get to the meeting? What was the occasion for your going to the Riviera night club?
A. Mr. Lubben had received a telephone call and he called me—
Q. Was that in your presence?
A. He told me that Byron Cain had called or was 1718 calling, and I think he stopped in the middle of the conversation and said, "Sam, would you like to come with me to the Riviera? I am going to meet Mr. Cain." Or "Byron", I think he said.
Q. So a call came while you were sitting there with Mr. Lubben?
A. Yes. We were enjoying the television program.
Q. And how far is it from that place in Hillsdale to the Riviera?
A. A matter of miles or—I don't know. It is about twelve miles or thirteen miles or fifteen miles at the most. I have never clocked it.
Q. About what time did you get over there?
A. Well, we went directly. It may have been ten-thirty when we reached there.
You see, at that particular time, I had no inkling that it was going to become an important event.

Q. I didn't ask you that did I? Did I ask you whether there was any inkling in your mind it was going to be something important?

A. I don't want to argue with you, counsel.

By Mr. Lockley: You are still arguing with the witness.

1719 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, had you ever met Mr. Grace before that time?

A. Never saw him before in my life.

Q. But you did meet him there that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he and Mr. Cain were there at that time, is that right?

A. That is right. They met us in the vestibule, or the entrance there.

Q. Were they there when you and Lubben arrived?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say Mr. Grace was a lawyer from Brooklyn?

A. Yes. He gave me a card, and I think I visited him at his office subsequently.

Q. Now, did you know whether or not Mr. Lubben had obtained a passport at that time?

By Mr. Lockley: At what time?

By Mr. McConnell: At the time of the Riviera meeting.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I don't.

By Mr. McConnell:

1720 Q. Did you know of his obtaining a passport at any other time?

A. Well, I know that he obtained a passport. But if you want me to fix the time, I can't.

Q. Did he obtain the passport before or after that Riviera meeting?

A. I don't know, sir. I can't tell you.

Q. But you do know he obtained a passport?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see the passport?

A. I may have seen it. I don't recall.

Q. Did he consult with you about obtaining it?

A. No, sir.

Q. You didn't know anything about it until after he had obtained it, is that it?

A. Well, he may have mentioned the passport to me.
Q. Did he tell you he was applying for one?
A. No, sir; I don't recall his ever telling me.
Q. But you were his legal adviser at that time, were you not?
A. Why, is there anything wrong about that?
Q. I asked you a simple question. You can give me a yes or no answer. Were you or weren't you?
A. I was on retainer.
1721 Q. At the time he was applying for a passport, is that true?
A. I don't know whether my retainer had ceased prior to that time or not.
Q. Well, you do know he got a passport?
A. I subsequently learned, yes.
Q. Now, at this meeting at the Riviera night club, you say that Mr. Grace suggested that he get a passport?
A. I didn't say anything like that.
Q. Didn't you tell that to the Government Agent in your statement, that Mr. Grace said—
A. No, sir; there was no talk about a passport.
Q. Was there any talk by Mr. Grace—advice by Mr. Grace that he should go away to South America?
A. Yes, definitely.
Q. And at that same time there was discussion of income tax proceedings which might or might not be started by the Federal Government, is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And you, as a lawyer, knew that Mr. Cain was wanting—or Mr. Grace, on behalf of Mr. Cain, or Mr. Cain, or the other way around—was wanting Mr. Lubben to leave the country because of that investigation,
1722 is that right?
A. I gathered that from their conversation.
Q. Well, you surmised it, at least, at that time?
A. Definitely.
Q. You had a pretty definite idea that that was what was being talked about, didn't you?
A. That is correct.
Q. And you were a lawyer?
A. And I objected rather strenuously.
Q. Yes, I know. You did object very strenuously. And you suggested that the meeting break up, didn't you?
A. That's right.

Q. But you also discussed at that meeting the question of the purchase of Mr. Lubben's business—for how much money?

A. I never discussed that at all.

Q. Wasn't there a discussion of the purchase of some property of Mr. Lubben's over in Hillsdale?

A. Well, Mr. Cain talked about that.

Q. That's what I am asking you, wasn't there some discussion about that subject?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. And you knew that that subject was being discussed that night, didn't you?

1723 A. Well, I couldn't help hearing it.

Q. And you knew that that discussion was connected up with the question of the Federal Income Tax liability, too, didn't you?

A. I didn't know—

By Mr. Lockley: There is no such evidence.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: What is that question, sir?

(Question read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I did not.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, it took place at the same time, didn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. In the same meeting?

A. That's correct.

Q. Between the same parties?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that right?

A. Yes.

1724 Q. And you thought that it was time for you to leave because there might be some conspiracy, is that right?

A. That's right. That's correct.

Q. Conspiracy between whom?

A. Well, if Mr. Lubben had agreed to the suggestion, it would have been between Mr. Lubben, Mr. Cain, and Mr. Grace, and possibly I might have been involved, too.

1725 Q. And a conspiracy to do what?

A. A conspiracy to evade the income tax laws.

Q. Is that the conspiracy you had in mind?
A. That was my opinion at that time.
Q. Did you have in mind a conspiracy of any other kind, except conspiracy to evade the income tax laws?
A. You see, Mr. McConnell—
Q. I just asked you a question.
A. I know. Well, I am answering it. I didn't reflect too much. I just didn't like what was happening.
Q. Did you reflect about it later?
A. I didn't give too much thought to it later.
Q. Did you like it any better later than you did then?
A. I never liked it at any time.
Q. You never liked it at any time. You knew that this proposal was made, however, about the purchase of Mr. Lubben's property at that meeting, didn't you?
A. The suggestion was made.
Q. Did you go back with Mr. Lubben to Mr. Grace's office after that meeting?
1726 A. Yes.
Q. And you went back on the very proposal you are telling us now you didn't like at all, didn't you?
A. No, sir; we didn't go back on that at all.
Q. And at that time Mr. Grace told you, and told Mr. Lubben, that they weren't interested because they were going to make a disclosure, isn't that the fact?
A. Mr. Grace didn't talk to us too—much to us at all.
Q. Didn't he say that, that they weren't interested because they were going to make a disclosure; didn't he say that?
A. We have two questions. Will you, please, Mr. Stenographer, read the question, his last two questions.

(Record read.)

By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Didn't he say that?
A. The only way I can answer that is this—
Q. No. Let me have an answer to my question. Did he or didn't he say that?
A. No, sir; he did not use that language.
Q. Did he say that in substance?
1727 A. No, sir.
Q. Now, you testified here a moment ago that Mr. Lubben turned to you in this discussion and asked what is meant by a disclosure.

A. That's right.
Q. Was that in the same talk?
A. Well, disclosure—
Q. Was it in this talk?
A. Sir?
Q. Was it in that talk?
A. No, it was outside. Mr. Grace told us—
Q. When did you first hear of the word about disclosure?
A. At Mr. Grace's office.
Q. This meeting we are now talking about?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Which came after the Riviera meeting, didn't it?
A. That's right.
Q. So at least you were still talking about income tax at that time, were you not, in the meeting in Mr. Grace's office?
A. The only language he used was that Mr. Cain is contemplating making a disclosure, was making plans
1728 for a disclosure, "Therefore, what I talked to you about the other night, you can now forget it."
Q. Not interested any more?
A. Not interested.
Q. But you were interested?
A. No, sir; I wasn't.
1729 Q. Because you went back to Grace's office for a further conference about it, didn't you?
A. I wasn't interested in that at all. I was interested to ascertain what the man had in mind, that's all.
Q. You knew what he had in mind at the Riviera meeting, and you said you didn't like it; isn't that the fact?
A. Well, I had some idea as to what he had in mind, yes.
Q. And having the idea of what he had in mind, you still went back to see him at his office with Mr. Lubben, didn't you?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, that question has been asked and answered a half dozen times, and it is a very general one.
By Mr. McConnell: I know it is one you don't like and one the witness doesn't like.
By Mr. Lockley: Whether he is talking about that—what he had in mind was the disclosure or the sale of the property, he can't answer what the question has reference to.

1730 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, you said you told Mr. Lubben what a disclosure was. What did you tell Mr. Lubben a disclosure was?

By Mr. Lockley: I objected to that before and again I object.

By Mr. McConnell: We have connected it up. It is connected with what he is talking about.

By the Court: I sustained the objection to that question when it was asked by Mr. O'Brien.

1731 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, when was it that Mr. Lubben said that Mr. Cain was a fool if he paid this tax?

A. When we were at the LaGuardia Airport, while Mr. Cain was waiting for his plane to come in, or to go out.

Q. And what tax were you talking about at that time?

A. Well, Mr. Cain told us he was talking about some four hundred some odd thousand dollars in income tax the government was seeking.

Q. Were you talking about a tax on this Shotwell Corporation at that time; is that the tax you were talking about?

A. Well, that's the only tax we would be talking about.

Q. All right. And in reference to that subject Mr. Lubben said he would be a fool if he paid it, didn't he?

A. That's right, because Mr. Cain said that he was going to pay it himself, as the other people involved with him didn't want to pay, or some such thing.

Q. That isn't the reason you gave us a minute ago, is it?

1732 A. Of course it is.

Q. Didn't you say that he said he was a fool to pay it because Frank Huebner received it and would divide it into three piles?

A. Yes, he added that to his reason.

Q. He said that as a reason why he was a fool to pay it, didn't he?

A. He added that to his reason, yes.

Q. Said that Mr. Huebner had stolen from his partners, that was the words you used, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, you knew who the three piles represented, didn't you?

A. I didn't know.

Q. You knew there were three people?

A. I have heard a rumor.

Q. What rumor had you heard?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to what he heard in the way of rumors.

By Mr. McConnell: I am asking for his knowledge of these three piles, what he knew about it.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

1733 A. I heard a rumor that these three piles were to be—that was black market money.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Yes.

A. That it was divided between Mr. Huebner, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Cain. But I have no personal knowledge.

1734 Q. In the first part of your testimony you also said something about horses, too, didn't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Didn't he say something about the horses?

A. Yes.

Q. And you got that information from Mr. Lubben, didn't you?

A. Well, Mr. Lubben said that to Mr. Cain at that time.

Q. Now, isn't it a fact that after Mr. Grace had told you he wasn't interested in talking any more about what you talked about at the Riviera night club, you made your trip up to see Morley Kramer?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to that. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I think that is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to make an offer of proof on it, if the Court please.

By the Court: Certainly.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to make it outside the presence of the witness, if I may.

1735 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had outside the hearing of the jury and the witness:)

By Mr. McConnell: I want to show by this line of questioning that after knowing what the situation was, that the tax liability was involved—

By the Court: Is this your offer of proof?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I can't hear you.

By Mr. McConnell: —that this man went up with Mr. Lubben to get money by blackmail from Mr. Morley Kramer.

By Mr. Lockley: He has already said that he wasn't inside Kramer's office.

By Mr. McConnell: I am fixing the time of when he went, as after this. They are claiming that we are trying to submit something to them to go away, and we have a right to show it was just the other way, that they were submitting a proposition to us, that if we would pay them the money, they would go away. That is in issue,
1736 and I think it is perfectly proper cross examination to show times, and places, and how that worked, and what the logic of the situation is.

By the Court: Who is Morley Kramer?

By Mr. McConnell: He was a supplier who was supposed to have been paid over ceiling price, market price.

By the Court: In connection with these defendants?

By Mr. O'Brien: Supposed to be in the syndicate.

By Mr. Lockley: The $75,000 proposed syndicate.

By Mr. McConnell: Which was discussed at the Riviera night club.

1737 By Mr. Lockley: And Mr. Davidson previously testified he doesn't know Kramer, never met him. He went up and sat outside in the ante-room.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to know the time he went after the meeting.

By Mr. Lockley: It has been offered completely.

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: Let's find out whether or not he does know him, ever talked to Morley Kramer.

By Mr. O'Brien: He went up to do it and they kept him waiting outside.

By Mr. Lockley: It doesn't prove anything. He could go up there for a million reasons.

By Mr. McConnell: It proves who this thing emanated from.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By the Court: You may ask him whether or not he ever had any talk with Mr. Morley Kramer, if that 1738 is what your offer of proof is directed to.

By Mr. McConnell: First I would like to fix the time.

By the Court: You may.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you go up to Boston to the Gum Products Company after this meeting?

A. I don't recall.

Q. You don't recall?

A. I don't recall when we went up. But I know I was up there at one time.

Q. Did you meet Mr. Kramer up there?

A. Never met Mr. Kramer.

Q. You sat outside while Mr. Lubben and Mr. Carry—

A. That's correct.

Q. —went in to see him.

Going back to the Riviera meeting for a moment, wasn't there a discussion—

By the Court: I think it is about adjournment time, counsel. We will be in recess until two o'clock.

(Whereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock P. M. of the same day, Wednesday, September 23, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Wednesday, September 23, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein:

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will resume this session.

SAMUEL J. DAVIDSON, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been 1740 heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Now, Mr. Davidson, at that meeting at Pat Grace's office which you testified about this morning, did Mr. Grace state in your presence to you and Mr. Lubben that Byron Cain had the Shotwell Manufacturing Company make a voluntary disclosure or some kind of a disclosure of the money?

Do you remember, "Well, what has the Shotwell Manufacturing Company got to do with the disclosure?" Did Lubben say that, "What has the Shotwell Manufacturing Company got to do with the disclosure?"

A. I don't recall that, sir.

Q. Did he say "because the money is divided between Huebner and Sullivan and Byron Cain?"

By Mr. Lockley: Counsel, if your Honor please, is reading from a statement which I don't believe is in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I am asking him if he said that.

By the Court: Well, reframe your question that 1741 way, then, Counsel.

By Mr. McConnell: I thought I did. I asked him if that was said in his presence by Mr. Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. At Grace's office?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. It wasn't?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you try to contact Mr. Grace after that Riviera meeting?

A. Yes. I tried to call him several—maybe two or three times.

Q. Did you try to contact Mr. Hannegan?

A. Hannegan, no, sir.

Q. You finally got him and made a contact with Mr. Grace and you arranged the meeting for Mr. Lubben to come over and see him, didn't you?

A. Well, I did talk to Mr. Grace.

Q. Well, did you arrange the meeting?

A. Well, I must have arranged a meeting because when I got him on the telephone he made an appoint-1742 ment for us to come over on the day that we came over.

Q. And did he tell you at that time, did Mr. Grace tell you at that time that Mr. Cain had made some arrangement about making a disclosure or he would make a disclosure and hence he had nothing further to tell us and if there was anything further, he would contact us?

A. That is right. That is correct.

Q. Now, at this Riviera meeting, isn't it the fact that Mr. Lubben in your presence and in the presence of Mr. Grace and Mr. Cain said that "If you will give me $125,000.00, I will go to South America?"

A. Definitely not, sir.

Q. Going back for a moment to these documents which you testified to about here this morning, that you saw on the porch of Mr. Lubben's home down at Hillsdale, when did you take those documents out to be photostated?

A. The very next day.

Q. Now, what was the date of that meeting? Can you give us the date on it?

A. I can't, sir.

1743 Q. I think you said this morning you had no way to refresh your recollection as to when that date was, is that right?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Do you remember what photostating company you took them to?

A. Well, my recollection is I took it to Burpo's Brothers or I had them sent to Burpo's in Newark, in Newark, New Jersey.

See, I don't recall whether I took it or someone from my office took it out.

Q. At that time on that porch did you hear some discussion about the assignment of the mortgage that Mr. Cain had?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any discussion there in your presence about—

A. If there was, I didn't hear it.

Q. Was there any discussion in your presence about a Haberkorn Candy Company?

A. Well, I knew that there was a Haberkorn Candy Company in existence but I don't recall any discussion at all about that that night, that day.

Q. Nothing was said about the Haberkorn Candy
1744 Company?

A. Not in my presence.

Q. Was this meeting at night or in the daytime?

A. I believe it was in the afternoon, sir.

1745 Q. And were you there all the time with Mr. Huebner?

A. It may have been either a Saturday or a Sunday, or a holiday, but I—my recollection is that it was in the afternoon.

Q. And what time did you arrive at the meeting, do you remember?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Were you there all—

A. I may have been there when Mr. Huebner arrived, or I may have come in later.

Q. Were you there all the time that Mr. Huebner was there with Mr. Lubben?

A. I imagine I was, sir. I don't—I was asked this morning whether I went to New York to take Mr. Huebner back, and if I stayed—if I stayed at that house when Lubben went to New York, then I took the ride with him to the city.

Q. Did you go out to the barn?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never had any trip out to the barn?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did anybody go out to the barn when you were there?

1746 A. I don't know whether anybody went, of my own knowledge. I don't know of any visit to any barn, nor did I take any.

Q. You didn't see Mr. Huebner or Mr. Lubben going out to the barn while you were there?

A. I don't recall their going out of the house.

Q. Now, this transaction that you had—you had these documents which have been identified here this morning, and put them in an envelope, is that right?

A. They were put in an envelope. I didn't put them in any envelope.

Q. Well, who put them in the envelope?

A. I think Mr. Huebner put them in an envelope.

Q. Was the envelope there? Was it Lubben's envelope he put them in?

A. Lubben furnished the envelope.

Q. Lubben furnished the envelope?

A. I say, that he furnished the envelope. I don't know where the envelope came from, but I know the documents were in an envelope, and Mr. Huebner sealed it and put those pencil marks on the back of it.

1747 Q. So the envelope was sealed when it was given to you, is that right?

A. It was sealed when it was given to Lubben.

Q. And it was sealed when it was given to you, wasn't it?

A. No, sir.

Q. You saw it sealed in your presence, did you not?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it was turned over to Mr. Lubben?

A. That's right.

Q. And the purpose of sealing it was to see whether or not the documents were in the same condition when they were going to be gotten later by Huebner, that they were then in?

A. I assume that was so.

Q. That was the only possible purpose for it, wasn't it?

A. I imagine so, yes.

Q. And you knew that at that time; you knew that at that time, didn't you?

A. Now, what—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He is call-1748 ing for the witness' conclusion, and is arguing.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: What was the last question, sir?

(Question read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By the Witness:

A. I knew the documents were not to be tampered with.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And they were sealed in the envelope?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that was to insure that they weren't tampered with?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you hadn't made any photostats of them at that time, had you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you took the envelope after it was sealed, and initialed, wasn't it?

A. Well, there was writing on it. I don't know what he had on it.

Q. That was to further assure that it wouldn't be tampered with, wasn't it?

1749 A. That's correct.

Q. And you took that sealed envelope, which you knew was sealed to insure the integrity of the contents, and you opened it, didn't you?

A. I didn't say that.

1750 Q. Did you open it?

A. No, sir; I didn't open it. Mr. Lubben did.

Q. Who did open it?

A. Mr. Lubben must have opened it. I didn't open it.

Q. When did you get the letter from Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. Lockley: What letter?

By Mr. McConnell: Or the envelope, rather.

By the Witness:

A. That same day Mr. Huebner was there.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Was Mr. Huebner there at the time?

A. Not when it was opened; no, sir; but I got the envelope—

Q. Wait a minute now. He wasn't there when it was opened, but you say he was there up until the time he went to New York in the automobile, isn't that it?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you got the envelope before they left for New York, was that it?

A. No, sir; I didn't say that.

Q. When did you get the envelope?

1751 A. I got the envelope when Mr. Lubben returned from New York.

Q. So you didn't get it at the time Mr. Huebner was there, as you said this morning, did you?

A. I didn't so testify.

Q. Didn't you testify this morning that you got it in Huebner's presence?

A. No, sir.

Q. You got it when, that night after Mr. Huebner—Mr. Lubben came back from New York?

A. I got it that night.

Q. And it was opened at that time, wasn't it?

A. When I got it it was opened. I had nothing to do with opening it.

Q. So it was open when you got it?

A. That is correct.

Q. So you knew it wasn't in the same condition as it was when you had seen Mr. Huebner have it initialed?

A. Well, the envelope wasn't in the same condition, but as to the contents—

Q. Well, it had been opened, hadn't it?

A. It had been opened.

Q. And after being opened you took it over to 1752 have it photostated?

A. That is correct, sir, so that Mr. Lubben could have supporting proofs—

Q. I just asked you if you took it over to have it photostated.

A. Either I or somebody from my office took it over. I don't recall whether I did it or not.

Q. And you got back the original documents?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you put them in an envelope and seal them?

1753 A. No, sir; I returned them all to Mr. Lubben with the photostatic copies.

Q. I thought you said this morning you delivered them to Mr. Huebner.

A. I don't know where you got that from, sir.

Q. You didn't deliver them to Mr. Huebner?

A. No, sir.

Q. All you did was give them back to Mr. Lubben?

A. I gave them back to Mr. Lubben.

Q. And that was the end of the transaction so far as you were concerned, is that it?

A. That's right. And the next time that I saw th envelope—

Q. I didn't ask you when the next time was that you saw the envelope.

A. I am sorry.

Q. Now, you testified this morning that you went all the way out to Palm Springs, California—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —to get a guarantee of the Sterling Bank mortgage?

A. No, sir; I didn't go there to get a guarantee, and that wasn't my testimony.

My testimony was that I flew to Palm Springs,
1754 California, to get an assignment of a mortgage—of a real estate mortgage, and a chattel mortgage.

Q. You are right. I stand corrected. Let's go back a little.

You testified this morning about a $50,000 additional amount that was asked by Mr. Lubben, in addition to the $75,000 mortgage; do you recall that?

A. I didn't so testify. I said—

Q. Were you present at the Gotham Hotel when the amount of $50,000 was discussed with Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, I may have been there.

Q. Now, when was that?

A. It was before the assignment date.

Q. And it was before this date in February, wasn't it? Down on the porch at Hillsdale?

A. It may have been, sir. I have no way of recalling it, becau. I have no records.

Q. You don't keep any office records of where you are and what you are doing?

A. Not in a matter where you are on retainer.

Q. But you recall being at the Gotham Hotel with reference to a $50,000 transaction, don't you?

A. Well, I didn't say it was a $50,000 transaction, sir.

1755 Q. Do you recall being at the Gotham Hotel?

A. I recall being at the Gotham Hotel, now that you bring it up. Mr. Cain had promised—

Q. Wait a minute.

A. —Mr. Lubben--

Q. Wait a minute. Who was there, first?

A. Who was there?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Lubben was there, Mr. Cain was there, Mr. Huebner was there, and I don't know whether Mr. Sullivan was there or not.

Q. All right. Now, at that discussion, at the Gotham Hotel, was the subject of $50,000.00 additional money to go to Lubben's company discussed?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Now, didn't Mr. Lubben ask for $50,000.00 additional money over what had already been paid, that is, the $75,000.00 by Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, but the reason for that was—

Q. Just: Did he?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. And Mr. Cain refused to pay it, didn't he?

A. Well, it wasn't a question of refusing to pay anything. It was a question—

1756 Q. Did he refuse to give him $50,000.00 additional money?

A. If he used the word "loan", I will say, yes, he refused the loan of an additional $50,000.00.

Q. Were you present at any discussion after that between anybody—either Mr. Cain or Mr. Huebner or Mr. Lubben, which had to do with getting an assignment of that Sterling Bank mortgage from Mr. Cain?

A. Yes, I think we met at a lawyer's office in New York.

Q. Now, where was that?

A. A Mr. Posis.

Q. Poser?

A. Posis, P-o-s-i-s. I don't recall the name of his law firm, but he was the man who handled that transaction.

Q. Whose lawyer was he?

A. He was Byron Cain's attorney.

Q. Byron Cain's attorney?

A. As far as I know. He may have been Shotwell's attorney.

Q. Now, who was present at that meeting?

A. I can't tell you, sir. I don't recall.

1757 Q. You don't remember?

A. I don't remember who was there. I know I was there.

Q. When was it, do you know?

A. It must have been—it was prior to my trip to Palm Springs, California.

Q. Well, how much prior to your trip to Palm Springs, California?

A. I can't tell you that either, sir. I don't recall. It is four years or more.

Q. I know it is a long time ago. Was it after your meeting on the porch at Hillsdale?

A. When you say after—I was not involved in any meeting—

Q. I just asked you—I am trying to place the date of this meeting in Mr. Posis' office.

A. Let's have it understood then. I was not involved in any meeting.

Q. I didn't ask you whether you were involved in any meeting, I asked you when this meeting was which you say you attended.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any further testimony along this line. It is beyond the scope of the direct 1758 examination. I have been waiting to find what the materiality is.

By Mr. McConnell: It isn't beyond the scope of the direct examination. You went into the assignment of the mortgage. It leads up to it.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't recall that any reference was made to a meeting in Posis' office at any time. The only question of assignment of mortgage that came up was when Mr. Davidson volunteered the information that he flew out to get an assignment of a mortgage. There was no reference to anything prior to that.

By Mr. McConnell: It leads up to that.

By the Court: You mean it has something to do with Palm Springs?

By Mr. McConnell: That's right.

By the Court: All right. Go ahead.

1759 By the Witness: What was that last question?

(Question read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Fix it as near as you can. I can't ask you to be exact, but give us an approximate time.

By Mr. Lockley: Are you referring to the meeting in Posis' office?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, at which Mr. Lubben was present.

By the Witness:

A. It may have been in January of 1948.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, was an assignment of the Cain mortgage discussed at that time?

A. I think it was, sir.

Q. And were arrangements made there at that time for you to go out to Palm Springs?

A. No, sir. The arrangements for me to go out to Palm Springs were made after I had arrived in Chicago, and after the Haberkorn deal was closed.

Q. All right. Now, after the Haberkorn deal was closed—did you have something to do with the Haber-1760 korn deal closing?

A. No, sir.

Q. But after the Haberkorn deal was closed, you were to go out and get an assignment of the Cain mortgage, was that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you went out to Palm Springs, and you got an assignment of that mortgage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that was a mortgage on all of Lubben's property down at Hillsdale, wasn't it?

A. Hillsdale, Whitecliff Lake, a chattel mortgage covering the equipment in the factory, and I think there was another chattel mortgage covering some of the items that were at the New York plant.

1761 Q. Securing a note made for $75,000, wasn't it?

A. Yes. The note was a prime obligation.

Q. That mortgage Mr. Cain had paid, hadn't he, or bought from the Sterling Trust Company?

A. Yes, it was assigned to him.

Q. And you brought it back to Mr. Lubben, didn't you, after you got the assignment?

A. I brought the assignment back.

Q. That's right. You brought the assignment back to Mr. Lubben?

A. I did, yes.

Q. Now, after this had happened, was that when these papers were delivered to Mr. Huebner?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: Which papers?

By Mr. McConnell: After the assignment of the mortgage had been brought back, your Honor, to Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Was that when these papers were delivered to Mr. Huebner?

A. Are you referring to the papers—

Q. That you had photostated—

A. That I had photostated?

1762 Q. Yes.

A. No. They were delivered before that. They were delivered after the Haberkorn deal was closed. That is the best of my recollection.

Q. And that transaction took place immediately after, as part of the closing of the Haberkorn deal?

A. I don't know. You have got two questions. Will you let me have the first question, please?

Q. Let's withdraw the question, and I will give you a brand new one.

A. All right. That's fine.

Q. Were the papers delivered to Mr. Huebner right after the Haberkorn deal was closed?

A. I didn't attend at the closing of the Haberkorn deal.

Q. You told us you knew when they were delivered.

A. I can say that my information is that they were delivered the same day.

Q. That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I move that be stricken, your Honor, if it is just his information.

By Mr. McConnell: He is representing this man as a lawyer.

1763 By Mr. Lockley: He said he didn't represent him during the Haberkorn deal.

By the Court: I suppose it would be hearsay, if you—

By Mr. Lockley: Purely.

By the Court: Well, I suppose, if it is hearsay testimony, he could have it. He is not objecting to it.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you have anything further to do with that matter; was that the end of your participation in the Haberkorn deal, or anything growing out of the Haberkorn deal?

A. I had nothing to do—

By Mr. Lockley: I don't understand the question, your Honor. I must assume the witness doesn't.

By the Court: I think he has said he had nothing to do with the Haberkorn deal.

By the Witness: I had nothing to do with it.
By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did you have anything further to do with the 1764 assignment of this mortgage which you had obtained from Mr. Cain?

A. Are you referring to the assignment of the mortgage?

Q. Yes, I am referring to the assignment of the mortgage.

A. All right. Let's keep the record straight.
Now, what—

Q. What did you do with it; after you gave it to Mr. Lubben, did you do anything further with it?

A. I think I recorded the documents, and I gave them to Mr. Lubben, delivered them to him, so he could transfer it to his sister, or whatever he wanted to do with it.

Q. Now, at the time you received these documents from Mr. Lubben, back on the porch in Hillsdale, did you sit down and study the documents?

1765 A. No, I didn't study them.

Q. Did you read them?

A. I glanced at them.

Q. You glanced at them?

A. That is about all.

Q. And now, after four years—when was it, in 1948? After five years you can tell this jury that these photostats are the exact copies of the originals in that envelope?

A. Well, some of those photostats have Mr. Lubben's writing on them.

Q. Yes.

A. I know his handwriting.

Q. You know his handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the only way you know it is the same?

A. The others, they appear to be similar to what my recollection tells me.

Q. They just appear to be similar. You can't tell us of your own knowledge that they are exactly the same, can you, at this time, five years later?

A. I don't think that any human being can.

Q. I don't either. That's all.

1766 Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Davidson, down in New York, under an order of court, you gave a deposition, didn't you?

A. Yes, I testified.

Q. And attorneys for the government were there, as well as attorneys for the defense?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall being asked this question and did you make this answer:

By Mr. Lockley: What page?

By Mr. Kirby: Page 148.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. (Reading):

"Q. When was it that you first met Mr. Lubben?

"A. It was in August, 1946, that is, July or August of 1946."

Do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that the answer you made?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall being asked at page 112 these questions and making these replies:

1767 "Q. So, he was having some trouble"—referring to Lubben—

"and he was being pressed for money?

"A. Oh, yes. No doubt about it.

"Q. About when was that, 1947?

"A. Well, ever since I met the man. I mean, within a short time after I met him he was having money troubles."

Do you remember those questions and did you give those answers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at page 139 is the question:

"Q. Well, did Lubben talk to you some time prior to that about his tax problem?

"A. Oh, yes.

"Q. About how long before?

"A. Oh, that tax problem was a continuous thing. When he first talked to me about the tax problem it may be six, seven or eight months after I met him or it may have been a year, but I doubt it."

Did you answer in that way to those questions?

A. Yes, sir.

1768 Q. So that almost ever since you knew him he has had these problems about his income tax that he has talked to you about, isn't that right?

A. He has had income tax problems, yes.

Q. And don't the problems, Mr. Davidson, relate to what happened to this cash money he handled? Isn't that the big problem?

A. No, sir.

Q. That isn't involved in it at all?

A. That is not the big problem.

Q. No problem. The government isn't interested so far as you know, about whether he ought to pay tax or not?

A. Mr. Kirby, I don't know whether the government is interested or not.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what you consider to be the government's interest in the matter and he has already answered the question.

By Mr. Kirby: He said that the witness had tax troubles.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, all right.

By Mr. Kirby: Almost continuously since he knew him.

1769 By Mr. Lockley: Ask him what kind of troubles they were.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did I understand then that you say that these large sums of cash were not involved in Mr. Lubben's tax troubles?

A. Which large sums of cash are you talking about?

Q. Well, Mr. Lubben was asked about sums which were totaling several—oh, a million and a half.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what Mr. Lubben was asked.

By the Court: You are going far outside the scope of any direct examination now, Counsel.

1770 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, have you represented Mr. Lubben more or less continuously, sir, since you first met him in 1946?

A. I have always—I am sorry. I didn't mean to interrupt you. Will you please read that question again.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. No, sir, I have not.

Q. When have you represented him?

A. When I met Mr. Lubben in 1946, he was having zoning trouble. I was retained.

Q. The question was, when, Mr. Davidson?

A. The latter part of July or the early part of August, and I fix that in 1946—I fix that because in connection with that retainer, I had a trip to make for him during the month of August out to Tucson, Arizona, and from there to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Q. In 1946?

A. In 1946.

Q. When did you stop representing Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, I have never represented Mr. Lubben
1771 continuously. Mr. Lubben gave me particular assignments.

Q. Do you represent Mr. Lubben now?

A. I have some matters for him now, yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley—

By the Witness: May I be excused?

By the Court: Apparently. Mr. Lockley, do you have any redirect examination?

By Mr. Lockley: Just a couple of questions, your Honor.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Davidson, you stated both on direct examination and on cross examination that Mr. Lubben said to Mr. Cain that he was a fool to pay this four hundred or $450,000.00 in tax. Now, was anything further said about that payment, if you can recall?

A. Yes. Mr. Lubben tied that in with the statement that Mr. Huebner took these various piles—took these various sums of money he got and put them in piles and stole from his partners and—

1772 Q. Go ahead.

A. And my recollection is that Mr. Lubben thought that he would be a fool to pay it without getting it from Mr. Huebner or whoever also got the money, because Byron Cain said he was willing to pay it himself. I mean, that is my thinking at the moment.

Q. There was nothing said that the taxes should not be paid?

A. No.

Q. Just that Mr. Cain shouldn't bear the whole burden?

A. That is correct. I didn't mean to give that impression.

Q. Now, with reference to the tax problems that you referred to in your deposition, can you be a little more specific as to what kind of a tax problem Mr. Lubben had?

A. Well, he had a problem, for example, with a man by the name of Giglio who was a partner of his for a while before my time, who entered into an agreement to pick up—pay income tax amounting to approximately $25,000.00 or thereabouts, which was never paid. He had trouble getting him—he couldn't file his tax return 1773 for that particular year.

Q. Why not?

A. Because he didn't have any books and records.

Q. Do you know where they were?

A. I don't know where they were, but I was told by Mr. Lubben—

By Mr. Kirby: I object. It is purely hearsay.

By the Court: Very well. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Davidson, did you ever file any lawsuits against Mr. Giglio?

A. No. When I testified in the deposition, I was under the impression that I had. I was getting ready to file when I was substituted by another attorney.

By Mr. Kirby: I object. It is not responsive to the question.

By the Court: Well, it may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

By the Court: Apparently that's all.

By the Witness: Thank you. Am I excused, sir?

1774 By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley will have to tell you whether you are excused or not.

By Mr. Lockley: As far as the Government is concerned, Mr. Davidson, that's all.

Mr. Heitmann—

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask, while Mr. Davidson is still here—I haven't heard any further report, Judge, about this barn—these barn papers.

By the Court: I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien: I haven't heard, Mr. Lockley, anything further about these barn papers. That was a week ago.

By Mr. Lockley: Supposing you come up here and tell us, Mr. Davidson.

By the Witness: Oh, those papers—

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness: I personally addressed those cards, on Sunday.

By the Court: Well, you are now referring to the papers that were going to be boxed up and sent here?

1775 By the Witness: That is right. I went back East. I took care of some of my business and I went up to see the gentleman who is supposed to be packing these cartons. There are about ninety-six of them. I addressed them all for him on Sunday. He was supposed to have given them to the Railway Express on Monday, so they should be arriving here. If they are not here today, they will be here tomorrow.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. We have Mr. Davidson under subpoena too.

By the Witness: If you want them, just give me a couple of days.

(Witness excused.)

WILLIAM H. HEITMANN, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Heitmann—

By the Court: William H.?

1776 By the Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Heitmann, what is your occupation?

A. My occupation is factory superintendent.

By the Court: Now Mr. Heitmann, you will have to speak up so the jury can hear you.

By Mr. Lockley: You speak up so the people can hear you.

By the Court: The people won't hear you if you don't speak up.

By the Witness: I will be glad to speak up.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, you haven't got his name in the record yet. He hasn't given his name for the record, except privately to the Court and to the reporter.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you give us your full name?

A. William H. Heitmann.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 8811 Second Avenue, North Bergen, New Jersey.
Q. Where are you employed? Where were you employed in 1944?
A. In 1944 I was employed by Eatsum Food Products Company.
1777 Q. By whom was that owned at the time?
A. I believe it was owned by Mr. Lubben and Mr. Giglio.
Q. In 1944?
A. In 1944? No. It was owned by Mr. Lubben in 1944.
Q. And how long did you continue in the employ of the Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. Until it was taken over by a partnership, Mr. Giglio and Mr. Lubben.
Q. Did you continue in the employ of the partnership?
A. I did.
Q. And how long?
A. Until it terminated.
Q. Then what did you do?
A. I was working for General Confections.
Q. How long did you stay with them?
A. I stayed with them until they closed.
Q. What was your job during the period that you were working for Eatsum and General Confections?
A. Factory superintendent. Assistant factory superintendent.
Q. Factory superintendent and assistant factory
1778 superintendent?
A. No. I said assistant factory superintendent.
Q. Have you met any of the defendants here, Mr. Byron Cain or Mr. Frank Huebner, or Mr. Harold Sullivan?
A. I met Mr. Huebner and I met Mr. Cain. I have not met Mr. Sullivan.
Q. Will you point out Mr. Huebner and Mr. Cain?
A. Mr. Huebner is in the rear, and the one with the glasses on, and Mr.—I don't see Mr. Cain here.
Q. Do you wear glasses, Mr. Heitmann?
A. Well, I do, sir.

Q. Put them on. If you want to, you may walk down to the table, and see if you can see a little better.

A. There is Mr. Cain back there with the blue suit on.

By Mr. Lockley: Let the record indicate that the defendants were pointed out.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Heitmann: I show you Government Exhibit No. 13, and ask you if you have ever seen that before?

1779 A. Yes, sir; I seen this before. I seen the original of it.

Q. Where did you see the original of it?

A. Well, it was given to me by Mr. Lubben.

Q. Where was that?

A. At the factory.

Q. Factory of what?

A. General Confections, or Eatsum.

Q. In New York City?

A. In New York City, right.

Q. And what is that piece of paper?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It is calling for the contents of the document.

By the Court: Well, I don't think—

By Mr. Lockley: I just meant for him to describe what it was, you Honor.

By the Court: I don't think you have made any foundation as to the witness having any knowledge of the paper, outside of the fact that it was given to him.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, the document is in evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: I know that. But you are now attempting to ask him something about a document, and you 1780 don't know whether he has any knowledge of it or not yet.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You received that from Mr. Lubben?

A. That is right.

Q. When was that?

A. Before I made one of the trips for him.

Q. Before you made the trips for him?

A. That is right.

By Mr. McConnell: I can't hear a thing back here. I can't hear a word.

By the Court: You will have to speak louder, Mr. Heitmann. This courtroom is apparently a difficult one in which a voice can carry.

By the Witness: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you receive anything else at the time you received that instruction, or that exhibit?

A. Yes. I received some money from him.

Q. Do you know how much?

A. Well, it was about $3,000, I think.

Q. Anything else?

A. And this instruction sheet.

1781 By the Court: Will you speak a little louder, please?

By the Witness: An instruction sheet.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you receive the money in currency or—

A. I received some cash, yes. I received some in cash, and two checks.

Q. And two checks?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you get the cash?

A. I got some cash in Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. Oh, you didn't get it from Mr. Lubben?

A. I got some from Mr. Lubben, and I got some in Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. Do you know how much you got from Mr. Lubben?

A. I am not positive any more how much I got from him.

1782 Q. Do you have any present recollection at all?

A. As to the amount?

Q. Yes. Well, did you receive anything at the time that you received the money?

A. I received two checks from him at the time I received some money. I received some money, a small amount for my expenses.

Q. Speak up. Besides the money, what did you receive?

A. I received two checks from him.

Q. And what else?

A. And the instruction sheet.

Q. Was that government's Exhibit 13 which you have seen?

A. That is the exhibit which you have there.

Q. If you examine Government's Exhibit 13, will that refresh your recollection as to how much money you received?

A. According to this, I did not receive anything but the two checks from Mr. Lubben, and my expense money.

Q. And your expense money?

A. That is right.

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibits 1783 92 and 93 and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, sir. These are the two checks I received from Mr. Lubben.

Q. What did you do with them?

A. I cashed these at the bank in Chicago, here.

Q. What bank?

A. Mid-City Bank of Chicago.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Heitmann.

By the Witness:

A. Mid-City Bank of Chicago, National Bank.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, let us go back a minute. On leaving New York, did you come directly to Chicago?

A. No, sir, I did not. I went to Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. What did you do in Youngstown?

A. I picked up $13,039.25.

Q. What did you do after that?

A. I come to Chicago.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I object to his reading from that exhibit and that document. We would like to know and the record should show his own recollection of these events. We can read that document 1784 ourselves.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what you did in Youngstown?

A. Yes, sir. I picked up some money in Youngstown as per instructions.

Q. Do you know how much?

A. Around $13,000.00.

Q. All right. And then from whom did you get it?

A. I don't know from whom, but it is from—

Q. Well, is there anything that would refresh your recollection?

A. Well, I know there was some super market out there and I forgot the name of the gentleman I was to see.

Q. At any rate, you picked up about $13,000.00?
A. That is right.
Q. And you also had those two checks at that time?
A. I had these two checks, yes.
Q. Now you came to Chicago?
A. That's right.
Q. What did you do when you arrived at Chicago?
A. I went out to the Shotwell Manufacturing Com-
1785 pany to see Mr. Huebner.
Q. When was that? Can you give the day?
A. I arrived here on a Friday. I am not sure of the exact date.
Q. Do you know what time of the day it was?
A. I think it was around the middle of the month.
Q. Do you know what time of the day it was?
A. Yes. I arrived here in the morning.
Q. How did you get to the Shotwell plant?
A. I took a taxi out there.
Q. What did you do when you got there?
A. I asked for Mr. Huebner and met him.
Q. What year was this?
A. I believe this was in 1946.
Q. Do you know the month?
A. I believe it was in May.
Q. After you asked to see Mr. Huebner, what did you do?
A. Well, after I saw Mr. Huebner, we went up to his laboratory and I gave him some money.
Q. How much money?
A. I guess about eight or nine thousand dollars. I am not sure of the amount.
Q. Well—
1786 By Mr. O'Brien: When was this, Mr. Lockley? You haven't said yet.
By Mr. Lockley: I understood it was May, 1946.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Is that correct?
A. May, 1946, on a Friday.
Q. Was there anything that would refresh your recollection as to the amount of money you gave him?
A. Yes. The instruction sheet.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, he testified what it was.
By Mr. Lockley: He said approximately.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I wonder if there is anything that would refresh your recollection as to the exact amount.

A. Not the exact amount. I can't tell the exact amount.

Q. You were given this sheet, you said?

A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything on the sheet to help you refresh your recollection?

A. On the sheet is the amount I was supposed to 1787 pay Mr. Huebner.

Q. Take a look at this sheet and tell us how much you paid Mr. Huebner?

A. I paid him $8,179.00.

Q. And how did you make that payment?

A. In cash.

Q. That is, currency?

A. That is right.

Q. What size bills?

A. I think they were in denominations of 50 dollars.

Q. How did you carry the money?

A. In an envelope.

Q. In an envelope?

A. That is right.

1788 Q. You gave it to Mr. Huebner in the—

A. In his laboratory.

Q. In the laboratory?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, was there any conversation at that time?

A. Well, there was generalities.

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By the Witness: We were just talking generalities, and I told him I would be back the next day to take him some more.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did he say anything?

A. He said he would wait for me until I got there.

Q. All right. What did you do the next day then?

A. The next day I met Mr. Urban at his bank to cash these two checks.

Q. Which Mr. Urban is that?

A. Mr. Edward Urban of Close and Company.

Q. Did you arrange to meet him at the bank?

A. I did.

Q. Which bank was that?

A. That was Mid-City National Bank.
Q. And did Mr. Urban endorse the checks at that time?
1789 A. Mr. Urban endorsed the checks. I endorsed them, and he collected the money and gave it to me.
Q. Did he endorse it in your presence?
A. He did.
Q. What sort of money did he turn over to you?
A. I believe they were fifty and one hundred dollar bills.
Q. How much?
A. They totaled forty-six hundred dollars.
Q. Is that the amount of those checks?
A. The amount of the two checks.
Q. All right. Then after you received the money, what did you do?
A. Well, I paid Ed Urban what I was supposed to pay him, according to this sheet, and then I went out to Mr. Huebner, and paid him the balance.
Q. What time of the day was this?
A. This was around the noon hour.
Q. What did you do when you got—did you go to the Shotwell plant?
A. I went back to the Shotwell plant.
Q. What did you do when you got there?
A. I met Mr. Huebner.
Q. Where?
1790 A. At the plant. And then we left the plant and I gave him the envelope with the balance of the money in it.
Q. Where did you give him the money?
A. Somewhere outside the plant.
Q. On the sidewalk outside, or somewhere? Was it close by the plant?
A. Well, not far away from the plant.
Q. Was the plant open at that time?
A. No, it was not.
Q. What day of the week was this?
A. It was a Saturday.
Q. About what hour of the day?
A. Oh, it was around—oh, I believe—
Q. Saturday afternoon?
A. Right.

Q. How much did you give Mr. Huebner?

A. I believe I gave Mr. Huebner about seven thousand dollars, or something like that.

Q. Did you give him more than the money you received from those two checks?

A. I am not positive. I may have had some, though I doubt it. But I paid him on a Friday what I was supposed to give him on Friday, and the balance I 1791 gave him on Saturday morning, or Saturday noon, rather.

Q. All right. Would an examination of this instruction sheet refresh your recollection?

A. Yes.

Q. As to the amount you gave him on Saturday?

A. Yes. On Saturday I gave him $6,038.05.

Q. Was there any conversation at that time?

A. Yes. I told Mr. Huebner he was to understand this was for payment, partial payment on the car of chocolates that went to the West Coast.

Q. Did he say anything?

A. He just acknowledged the check, and that's all.

Q. Have you made any other trips besides the—

A. Yes, I made one, I believe, before this.

Q. All right. When was that?

A. That was during the holidays in 1945.

Q. What holidays?

A. I think it was close to the Christmas holidays.

Q. What did you do on that occasion?

A. I brought some money to Mr. Huebner.

Q. Are you able to fix a date any more definitely than that?

A. Well, I am sure it was in December, because 1792 see—all the stores had their Christmas decorations out, and so on.

Q. How much money did you give Mr. Huebner on that occasion?

A. I gave him $10,000.

Q. Where?

A. At the factory, in his laboratory.

Q. And in what form was the money?

A. In 50-dollar bills, I believe.

Q. Did anything happen in the laboratory?

A. Why, he just counted the money.

Q. Counted the money?

A. That is right.
Q. Did he count it more than once?
A. Not that time. He only counted it once and found it right, but the previous—the second time I was there, he counted the money and he thought he found a shortage, and so he recounted it and found it was correct, the amount that I gave him.
Q. Where did you get the ten thousand dollars that you gave to Mr. Huebner?
A. I got it from Mr. Lubben.
Q. Did you have any conversation with Mr. Huebner as to why you were paying him the ten thousand 1793 dollars?
A. Yes. I told him it was for Mr. Lubben. It was something—payment of his.
Q. Was that all of the conversation?
A. That was all.
Q. Did Mr. Huebner say anything?
A. He just acknowledged the fact that he received the money.
Q. Did you know what the money was for?
A. Well, I fear it was for premium payments.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object and move that be stricken. There is no connection.
By the Court: Yes. The answer may be stricken.
By Mr. Lockley: All right.
You may cross examine.

1794 Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Heitmann, how many payments did you make altogether, to Huebner?
A. To the best of my recollection, I made two payments.
Q. And the first one you say was in Christmas of 1945?
A. I believe it was Christmas of 1945, around the Christmas season in 1945.
Q. You remember you testified too on a deposition and pursuant to order of court in this case, didn't you?
A. That is right.
Q. And government counsel was there?
A. That is right.

Q. Do you remember being asked this question—by the way, when was the second visit, so I don't get too mixed up?

A. The second visit was in May, 1946.

Q. I see. Now, then, do you remember being asked these questions and your making these replies:—

By Mr. Lockley: What page, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: 182.

1795 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, this is the question:

"Q. Now can you place any more definitely the time of your first visit to Chicago for this purpose?

"A. No. I am afraid I can't. I can't tell you the exact dates or near the dates, because I know I was out there twice.

"Q. Can you tell me the date of the second visit?

"A. Yes. I think that was—it may have been in November or the early part of December. I know it was around the holidays or close to the holidays, anyway.

"Q. In the year of 1946?

"A. 1946, yes."

So that at that time, you were asked those questions and did you make those answers?

A. I did.

Q. So at that time, you said that the second visit was in December of 1946, didn't you?

A. Well, I got my visits mixed up, in all probability. I didn't remember.

1796 Q. You say it was in May of 1946, is that right?

A. The second visit was in May of 1946.

Q. Now, when you were asked the question before you said you couldn't fix the date but now you say you can fix it and it was late in 1945, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, you testified that you gave Mr. Huebner on the first visit about $3,000.00, is that right?

A. On the first visit?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No. I testified just now on the first visit that I gave him $10,000.00.

Q. I am sorry. When did you give him the three?

A. Three?

By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony that there was any $3,000.00.

By the Witness:

A. I did not give him $3,000.00. I didn't say that.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The three thousand was what you picked up to start with?

A. Yes, what I picked up, the money I got at 1797 Youngstown.

Q. I see. In my notes here it is eight, as I see it. Do you have that exhibit there?

A. I have it right here. I gave him that amount on the third line.

By the Court: May I have the number of that exhibit, please?

By Mr. Kirby: It is Government's Exhibit 13.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Is this the first visit?

A. That is the second visit.

Q. On the first visit, where did you get that money?

A. I got it from Mr. Lubben at his office.

Q. What form did he give it to you in?

A. He gave it to me in 50-dollar bills, I believe, in an envelope.

Q. And you just simply brought that right straight out?

A. I brought that right out.

Q. It was on the second visit that you made this stop-over at this super market?

A. That is right, at Youngstown.

1798 Q. Now, do you say now that Mr. Lubben—or excuse me—that Mr. Huebner was alone or with others when you gave him this first payment?

A. He was alone when I gave him his first payment. There was somebody in his laboratory when we got there and he asked them to leave.

Q. Well, on the second visit, was he alone?

A. On the second visit—on the Friday, he was alone in the laboratory. When I got there on Saturday, there were some people in his office and we left.

Q. On the second visit, did you have lunch with Mr. Huebner?

A. No, sir. I had lunch with him on the first visit.

Q. Well, you were asked at page 186:

"How about the second visit?"

And your answer:

"The second visit, I had lunch with him."

Is that a mistake?

A. That is a mistake that I made. I got the visits mixed up.

Q. And you say now that the amount you gave 1799 to Mr. Huebner the second time was how much?

A. It was eight thousand. That is eight thousand some odd dollars on a Friday and six thousand some odd dollars on a Saturday.

Q. That is a total of how much?

A. Well, it is better than fourteen thousand dollars.

Q. Do you recall when you were asked about this before, the second one—let me ask you this—the second day that you met him, the second time, you gave him how much?

A. About six thousand dollars.

Q. Do you recall being asked before at page 187, Mr. Heitmann, in making this answer as to the second visit, the second time:

"Q. You again had a package, an envelope?

"A. That is right.

"Q. What were the contents?

"A. $10,000.00, I think.

"Q. In currency?

"A. In currency."

Now, was it ten?

A. Well, I figure it was around ten. I didn't remember the exact amount of money that I had.

1800 Q. But now you do?

A. Now I do, from the exhibit there.

Q. And you now say it was six?

A. On the second day there was a little better than six and the first day there was a little better than eight. That is on the Friday. There were two visits there.

Q. I assume that since the testimony that you gave down there at that deposition that you have been interviewed?

A. No, I did not give that testimony—the deposition—of course, I did not remember the exact amount that I gave.

Q. Yes, Mr. Heitmann. My question to you is this, that since you gave your deposition you have been interviewed?

A. That is right.

Q. And since then you say you have a better memory of what the transactions were?

A. That is right.

1801 Q. But I am sure, Mr. Heitmann, that when you were being asked questions in New York you were giving us your best recollection of the matter?

A. I was, definitely.

Q. And you were under oath?

A. I was under oath.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

Say, I just want to ask Mr. Heitmann a couple more questions, Vincent, if you will just tolerate me for a minute.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you handle, sometimes, currency from boxes that were kept on Mr. Lubben's business premises?

A. No, sir; I did not.

By Mr. Lockley: Again I object. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Let me pose a specific question, whether in August of 1945 you were paid from boxes on Mr. Lubben's premises, as much as—

1802 By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. —thirty thousand in cash?

By Mr. Lockley: I object. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, you will recall that there has been some testimony about currency coming from the box.

By the Court: I understand that full well. But you are now exceeding the scope of the direct examination.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Heitmann, on the deposition I asked you—withdraw that.

The deposition was taken last October, was it not, in New York City?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you remember who was present on our side?

A. Yes, Mr. Sullivan was present, I believe you were present, Mr. Cain was there.

1803 Q. You met Mr. Cain at that time?

A. That's the first time I met Mr. Cain.

Q. Is that the only time you met him?

A. That's the only time I met him.

Q. Until you came to the courtroom here?

A. That's right, Mr. Cain in the courtroom here.

Q. Now, at the end of that examination, I asked you whether you had recently conferred with the folks at the Treasury Department, the Revenue Department?

A. Right.

Q. And you said you had?

A. Not recently. I said I had.

Q. You had within some months?

A. Within some months.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object. In any event, it is beyond the scope of the direct examination, no matter what was done at the deposition.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, counsel—perhaps I shouldn't say so—but the conception of what is the scope of the direct is very peculiar to me. A man that said one thing here and one thing there. And I certainly have a 1804 right to show what chance and opportunity he had had to refresh his recollection at the time he was testifying last October.

By the Court: I said he has answered the question. I assume that is tantamount to a ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You recall that I did ask you that, Mr. Heitmann, whether you had had that opportunity; do you understand the question?

A. I believe I do. I know I didn't have any opportunity to talk over the deposition at the Treasury Department or anywhere else.

Q. No. But you had been down there within some months preceding the time of the deposition and they had interrogated you about these amounts, had they not?

A. No, they had not.

By Mr. Lockley: I object. There is nothing improper—

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't say there is anything improper.

By the Court: Well, he said they had not.

By Mr. O'Brien:

1805 Q. As a matter of fact, Mr. Heitmann, without reference to this Exhibit, Government Exhibit 13, you can't tell us about the dates or the amounts or just where you went, or who you saw, from the time you left New York, can you?

A. I think I can make that quite clear. On the first trip I went to see Mr. Huebner. I went directly to Chicago.

On the second trip, I went out to Youngstown, collected some money, come to Chicago, saw Mr. Huebner, paid him, stayed over the next day, went to the bank with Mr. Urban, collected some more money, and went out to Mr. Huebner again. Made the payment as per the instruction sheet.

Q. Well, just what payments did you make now; tell us about them.

A. In the first trip that I made out here, I paid him $10,000. That was a direct trip.

Q. Was the first trip the one when you came right to Chicago?

A. Came right to Chicago.

Q. And the second trip was via Youngstown?

A. That's right.

1806 Q. And on the second trip, what payments did you make?

A. On Friday I paid him eight thousand some odd dollars, and on Saturday I paid him six thousand some odd dollars.

Q. Does that cover all the payments you made on that trip?

A. That covered the payments I made to Mr. Huebner on that trip.

Q. What other payments, if any, did you make?

A. I made some payments to Mr. Urban—Eddie Urban.

Q. How much?

A. Whatever is on the slip there.

Q. That's what I want to know. And when did you make it to Urban?

A. I made that on Saturday morning after we had been to the bank.

Q. To Urban or to Huebner?

A. To both.

Q. Did you get the money to pay Urban at the bank?

A. I did.

Q. You didn't pay Urban out of the money you got at Youngstown, then?

1807 A. Right, I did pay some of that money that I got out of Youngstown.

Q. Which is it?

A. Either one. If I add the two together, I paid both. It added to so much money and I had to pay each one so much.

Q. First you tell me you paid him with the money you got from the bank and now you say you may have paid him with the money you got at Youngstown. Which is it?

A. Well, after I paid Mr. Huebner on Friday I had so much money left.

Q. How much did you have left, approximately?

A. If I had thirteen thousand I paid out eight, I had about five thousand dollars left.

Q. Before you paid Urban?

A. Before I paid Urban. Then we went to the bank and I collected $4,600.00.

Q. How much did you pay Urban?

A. And I paid Urban whatever the amount is on the slip there.

Q. You don't know what that was?

A. No. A balance of around three thousand some odd dollars, I believe.

1808 Q. Can you state approximately how much you paid Urban; without figuring it up can you tell us?

A. About $3,000 or so.

Q. And how much did that leave?

A. About six thousand some odd dollars.

Q. After you paid Frank Huebner, you think you had about five thousand dollars left?

A. I had nothing left after I paid Frank Huebner.

Q. After the first payment that you made to Huebner?

A. Well, after the first payment, yes, I think I had about five thousand.

By the Court: Perhaps we can take our recess now.

We will take our afternoon recess and suspend for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Was it on your first or second visit that you had lunch with Mr. Huebner?

A. On the first visit, as near as I can recollect.
Q. And that was at the Lake Shore Club, was it not?
1809 A. That's right.
Q. Over on the lake?
A. On the lake front.
Q. On your second visit you did not have lunch?
A. We did not have lunch, no.
Q. Was the second visit on a Saturday?
A. It was on a Friday and a Saturday.
Q. Friday and Saturday. Now, you had come to Chicago around—let's see; it is hard for me to keep these visits straight. Your second visit was on a Friday and a Saturday?
A. That's right.
Q. And you made a payment, or payments, of how much, do you say?
A. On Friday I paid him eight thousand some odd dollars, and on Saturday I paid him six thousand some odd dollars.
Q. That was in May?
A. Beg pardon?
Q. In May of '46?
A. May of '46.
Q. And those were the payments which Mr. Lubben told you were related to some shipment of chocolates to the west?
A. That's right.
1810 Q. And did he say to whom the shipments had been made, of those chocolates?
A. He did not.
Q. Now, back in December of '45, you came through Chicago on the way to Kansas City, did you not?
A. I do not think so, no.
Q. Did you go to Minneapolis?
A. Not on that trip.
Q. In December of '45?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you ever go to Kansas City or Minneapolis?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.
By the Court: He can answer yes or no.
By the Witness: Will you repeat the question, please?
(Question read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By the Witness:
A. I did.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Alone?
1811 A. Alone.
Q. Do you remember the purpose?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.
By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Do you remember when it was?
A. I do not.
Q. You have no recollection at all of the time?
A. Not of the time. I believe it was in 1945.
Q. And did you bring money for delivery?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. The general nature of the question—
By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Lockley: —is beyond the scope of the direct examination.
1812 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I would like to be heard momentarily on that. May I be heard here?
By the Court: Well, it seems to me it is so evident, I don't see that we should labor the point. He has testified regarding the two visits.
By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.
By the Court: You can cross examine him as to those two visits. But the government hasn't called him for any other purpose. And unless you can show any relevancy to these other visits, with these visits, then I say it is entirely outside the scope of the direct examination.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, of course, that is what I am trying to do.
By the Court: Well, you can make an offer of proof.
By Mr. O'Brien: That's what I mean.
By the Court: All right. Come forward.
By Mr. O'Brien: Outside the presence of the witness?
By the Court: Yes.
1813 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had outside the hearing of the jury and the witness:)
By Mr. O'Brien: It is our position that he was not here in December of '45 to make any payment to us, and that he did not make such a payment. I am informed that he was here—through Chicago at or about that time on his way to make a payment either at Kansas City or Minneapolis, and I believe that the witness is confused as to the payment made to us at that time and the payment made to the other people, of whom we are informed.

By the Court: You can ask him if he was in Minneapolis in December of '45, at or about that time, if that is what you have in mind. But you are not going to explore any other payments, if that is what you want.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I have a specific thing in mind. He says he was there, but he can't remember the time in '45 when he was there.

1814 By the Court: But you already explored the other so-called—

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I say on the payment he says he made to us in December of '45, he was really through Chicago to make to somebody else. I am not interested in the details of it, but I do say he is confused on those two payments, between the one he made there and the one that he made here.

1815 By the Court: You can cross examine him as to whether or not he was in Minneapolis in '45. But you certainly are not going to go into what may have taken place in Minneapolis, or what payments he made there. It can't have any possible relevancy to the payments he made in Chicago.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't know in actual performance how far you will permit me to interrogate him, but I did want to go on the record, because I consider what I have to ask him is closely related to what I think is his confusion on that. And the things that I want to ask him about, he will know when I mention them, and they may straighten him out on that. That is why I wanted to do it.

By the Court: Well, you can go forward and see what objection is made.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, Mr. Heitmann, you do say that you re-
1816 member in the year of '45 going either to Kansas City or to Minneapolis?

A. That's right.

Q. Which place was it, or was it both?

A. I went to both.

Q. And can you tell us the time of your visit to Minneapolis in the year 1945?

A. The only thing I can recall about it, it was during the summer months, I believe. It was kind of warm.

Q. How do you recall that?

A. By the heat, I think. I did not carry an overcoat.

Q. And when was your visit to Kansas City?

A. I am not sure of the dates. I can't recall.

Q. May it have been in the latter part of 1945, your visit to Kansas City?

A. It could have been, yes.

1817 Q. And did that visit have to do with the delivery of money?

A. That's right.

Q. The expenses of your two visits to Chicago, and of your visit to Minneapolis, and your visit to Kansas City, were paid by your company?

A. That's right.

Q. Which, in December of 1945, was the Eatsum Food Products, the partnership?

A. That's right, 1945.

Q. If any of those visits was early in the year 1945, the company would be the proprietorship, would it not?

A. Early in 1945?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I didn't make any visits in early 1945.

Q. As I am reminded, Mr. Heitmann, the partnership commenced to operate June 1st, 1945.

A. That's right.

Q. And I think my question should be, then: If any of the visits you have mentioned were made before that time, the expenses would have been paid by the proprietorship?

A. I did not make any trips before that time.

1818 Q. All right. Then all of the visits that you mentioned, including the two to Chicago here, were made after June 1st, 1945?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, the monies that you were delivering at Kansas City and at Minneapolis had nothing to do with Huebner, did they?

A. They did not.

Q. Did you procure those monies for Kansas City and Minneapolis at the same bank, the Mid-City National Bank?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I have been trying to give counsel some latitude, but I think we are going beyond the scope.

By the Court: He may answer it.

By the Witness:

A. I did not.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You procured the money in the east?

A. In New York, right.

Q. And brought it with you in currency?

A. That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: I have a couple of questions.

1819 Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. If I understand your testimony, you can't tell us where you got this money in Youngstown, is that right?

A. I do not recall.

Q. There is nothing on this memorandum that you referred to that refreshes your recollection?

A. That's right.

Q. In other words, it doesn't tell you where it came from, does it?

A. It does not.

Q. And without telling you where it came from, you just don't know where it came from, do you?

A. That's correct.

Q. The other things you have testified to, which you read from the memorandum, it does tell you about names and places, is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. How long were you in Youngstown?

A. About one day. I was met at the airport there by the person I was to meet, and we went over to the hotel.

Q. And you don't know who he was?

A. I don't remember his name. I only met the 1820 man once.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

1821 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You said that this was in—

By Mr. McConnell: Where is the document you used?
(Document handed to counsel.)
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. You say that this memorandum was entirely in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, is that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. And it is?
A. It is. This is a copy of it.
By Mr. McConnell: I was referring then to Government's Exhibit 13, received in evidence.
That is all the questions I have.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Mr. Heitmann, were you in any doubt as to whether you made a visit in May of 1946?
By Mr. McConnell: I object to whether he was in any doubt.
By the Court: Will you put that question again.
1822 By Mr. Lockley: I am asking if he has any doubt that he made a visit in May of 1946.
By the Witness:
A. I have not.
By the Court: You may answer.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You are not in any doubt?
A. I am not in any doubt about that.
Q. You also testified that you made another trip around Christmas time?
A. That's right.
Q. Well, now, if the trip around Christmas time was in 1945, that would have been the first trip, is that correct?
A. That is correct.
By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I do think it is improper, and I object after a witness has been cross examined, for the Government to turn—with all his many years of experience in the Department of Justice, to get up and ask these leading questions.
By the Court: Has he had many years of experience?
1823 By Mr. Kirby: Well, I understand he has been in the Department of Justice for many years and that he is one of their stars.

But, in any event, if it were his first year, he should know that you shouldn't ask these leading questions. And I object to that last question.

By the Court: Well, I assume your observation is quite proper, but I take it Mr. Lockley was trying to clear up any confusion that might appear by reason of the witness having reversed his visits in the deposition, and which came out on cross.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I respectfully—

By the Court: I think, under those circumstances, counsel has a right to call to the witness's attention these two dates to see if there is any confusion in his mind with respect thereto.

By Mr. Kirby: I beg to stress the point, your Honor, that he shouldn't do it by leading questions. And that last question, if your Honor has it in mind, I object to 1824 as leading.

By the Court: Well, the answers may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, do you have any doubt in your mind as to whether this was 1945 or 1946?

By the Court: You mean the first visit?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, the first visit.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The one around Christmas.

A. I can't say exactly that I am definite about it, but I believe it was 1945.

Q. That is your best recollection?

A. That is my best recollection of the matter. I know the second one was in 1946.

Q. Where did you stay on the Christmas visit, do you remember that?

A. Yes, I stayed at the hotel near the lake front.

By the Court: Near the what?

By the Witness: Near the lake front here in Chicago.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know the name of the hotel?

1825 A. I do now, yes. It is the Webster Hotel.

Q. The Webster Hotel?

A. That's right.

Q. Had you ever stayed there before?

A. I did not.

Q. Well, how did you come to stop at the Webster?

A. Mr. Huebner was kind enough to get me a place there. It was hard getting rooms in Chicago and I called him up and he secured the reservation for me.

Q. Had you ever stayed there before?

A. I never stayed there before or since.

By the Court: This is your first visit, that you stayed at the Webster?

By the Witness: The first visit, at the Webster.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, there was also some reference made on cross examination to a slight discrepancy in your testimony on the deposition and here on direct. Was I the Government attorney which counsel refers to as having been present during the course of that deposition?

A. You were not.

By Mr. Kirby: I will stipulate that you were not.

1826 By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby: The name was Gorman, the other fellow.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you at that time have the instruction sheet, Government's Exhibit 13, to refresh your recollection?

A. I did not.

Q. How long had it been since you had seen this?

A. I only saw it—it must have been seven years.

Q. You hadn't seen it for about seven years?

A. I hadn't seen it for a period of years, I hadn't seen it at all.

Q. When did you next see it, after the deposition?

A. I saw it, I believe, this—I believe in June or July of this year.

1827 Q. In June or July of this year?

A. Yes.

Q. And did that refresh your recollection?

A. That did refresh my recollection.

Q. Did the Eatsum Food Products Company have a customer known as Imperial Candy Company?

A. They did.

Q. And where was that located?

A. In Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. That was in Youngstown, Ohio?

A. Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection as to where you went in Youngstown?

A. That is where I went, I believe.

Q. You now have an independent recollection that when you went to Youngstown you went to the Imperial Candy Company?

A. I believe that was the one I went to see.

Q. I don't want you to take my word for it. I want to know if you remember it.

A. I believe that is it.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, that illustrates why I objected to his leading the witness.

1828 By the Court: It is leading. I appreciate that. But the answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all. Thank you, Mr. Heitmann.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Heitmann, just one question, if I may, your Honor.

Recross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Where did you stop—

By the Court: Sit down, Mr. Heitmann.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Where did you stop on the other visit? You say you stopped at the Webster Hotel on the one visit.

A. Yes.

Q. At what hotel did you stop on the other visit?

A. The Sherman Hotel.

Q. The Sherman House?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, Mr. Heitmann.

(Witness excused.)

1829 BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. What is your name?

A. My name is Beatrice Feldman.

Q. And where do you live, Miss Feldman?

A. 105-07 66th Avenue, New York City.

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am an office manager and bookkeeper.

Q. How long have you followed that occupation?
A. About sixteen years.
Q. Where were you employed in 1944?
A. In July of 1944 I was employed by the Eatsum Food Products Company.
Q. The Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. That's right.
Q. And who employed you?
A. You mean who hired me?
1830 Q. Yes.
A. Well, Mr. Bercu hired me as office manager for the firm.
Q. And for whom did you work?
A. For Mr. David Lubben.
Q. And who was Mr. Bercu?
A. Mr. Bercu was the outside auditor who was employed to make a monthly audit.
Q. Is he a certified public accountant?
A. He is.
Q. Now, what was your employment in 1945?
A. Well, as of June 1st, 1945, a partnership was formed, and I continued as the office manager and bookkeeper for the partnership.
Q. That continued to be known as Eatsum Food Products?
A. That's correct.
Q. And you continued to work for them for the balance of the year?
A. That is correct.
Q. And in 1946 where did you work?
A. Well, on March 9, 1946, the partnership was dissolved—
By the Court: March?
1831 By the Witness: 9, 1946.
By the Witness:
A. And I was requested to stay on for the liquidation of the partnership, which I did.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you mean it was legally dissolved on March 9th?
A. Well, I don't know whether it was legally dissolved. The partnership was ended as of March 9th. Mr. Lubben left the partnership, and we started to liquidate the business, as such, collecting the accounts receivable, and paying out the bills that were still open and payable.

Q. And who asked you to remain with the partnership?

A. Well, I believe that Mr. Lubben and Mr. Roth asked if I would stay on to liquidate.

Q. And how long did that process of liquidation take?

A. Well, I left the employ of the partnership in the end of July of 1946, at which time they were still liquidating.

Q. And then what did you do after the end of July?

A. I went to work for General Confections in the 1832 Bronx.

Q. That was again Mr. Lubben?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, were your duties throughout all of these various organizations the same?

A. They were.

Q. And what were they again?

A. I was employed as head bookkeeper and office manager. I supervised the keeping of the books. I told the girls what to do, and, in general, ran the office.

Q. Well, what was the nature of the books kept by the Eatsum sole proprietorship during the year 1945?

A. We had a cash receipts book, a cash disbursements book, a purchase book, a sales book, a general journal, a general ledger, a petty cash book, and a payroll book.

Q. And is that a complete double entry—so-called double entry set of books, to your knowledge?

A. It is.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification No. 5, and ask if you have seen that before?
1833 When you are through with it, just put it on the table.

A. I have seen this before.

Q. And what does it purport to be?

A. This is the purchase book for the period from September, 1944 to May of 1945.

Q. Of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. That's correct.

By the Court: You call it the purchase book?

By the Witness: That's correct, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And was that a book kept by you?

A. It was kept either by me or under my supervision.

Q. Did you have other employees who also worked on the books?

A. Yes, sir, we did.
Q. And they came to you for instructions, did they?
A. That's correct.
Q. Was that a book that was kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was.
Q. And were the entries in it true and correct, 1834 to the best of your knowledge and belief?
A. They were.
Q. And were they made contemporaneously?
A. I am sorry.
Q. Were they made at or about the time the entries were made?
A. Yes, they were.
By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know that I understand that last question.
By Mr. Lockley: I mean by that, were the entries made at or about the same time as the transactions they intend to reflect.
By the Witness: I gathered that, sir. I am sorry.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. All right. I show you Government Exhibit for Identification No. 6, and I ask if you have seen that before?
A. I have.
Q. What does that purport to be?
A. This is the accounts payable ledger that was kept for the period from April, 1944, to the close of the single ownership, May of 1945.
Q. And was that book also kept under your 1835 supervision and direction?
A. It was.
Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge and belief?
A. It is.
Q. Was that a book kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was.
Q. Were the entries made therein at or about the time they occurred?
A. Approximately.
Q. Going back to the purchase book, Miss Feldman, what is the purpose of a purchase book?
A. Well, the entries made in a purchase book are taken from the invoices which you receive for merchandise that you purchase from different vendors.

Q. And after the entries are contained therein, what information does it reflect?

A. It reflects the monies due and payable at any given time to the various individuals.

Q. And now the accounts payable ledger. What does that reflect?

A. The accounts payable ledger shows the monies
1836 due to any one particular individual at the particular time that you look at it.

Q. It shows how much the business owes?

A. That's correct.

1837 Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit No. 7 and ask you if you have seen that book before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. This is a record of the cash disbursements for the single ownership, from September, 1944, to May, 1945.

Q. Was that a record kept under your supervvision and direction?

My Mr. O'Brien: What was the period again?

By the Witness: This is a cash disbursements book from the period 1944 to May, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was that book kept under your supervision and direction?

A. It is.

Q. Was it kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. It was.

Q. Can you tell us the purpose of a cash disburse-
1838 ments book?

A. A cash disbursements book contains a record of all checks issued as taken from the stubs of the check book for the business.

Q. Does it show anything besides the checks issued?

A. It does. It shows the name of the individual to whom the check was issued, the amount of the check, any deduction for discount, freight and the total amount posted to the accounts payable ledger.

Q. Is that sometimes also referred to as the check register?

A. Yes, I believe it is.
Q. It shows the amount paid out by check?
A. That is correct.
Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 8 and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. I have.
Q. And what does it purport to be?
A. This is the general journal for the period from January, 1945, to May of 1945.
Q. Of what company?
A. The Eatsum sole proprietorship.
1839 Q. Is that a book likewise kept under your supervision and direction?
A. That is correct.
Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?
A. It was.
Q. And was that a book kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was.
Q. What is the purpose of a general journal?
A. Well, there are certain entries and books which cannot be handled through the cash receipts or cash disbursements and these entries are contained in the journal.
Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 9 and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. I have.
Q. What does it purport to be?
A. This is the general journal for the single ownership from January 1, 1945, to May, 1945.
By Mr. O'Brien: Isn't that what we just had?
1840 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What do you call it?
A. I am sorry. It is the general ledger. I think I said the general journal.
Q. Is that a book kept in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that kept under your supervision and direction?
A. Mr. Bereu posted this from the books of original entry.
Q. Did you make any entries in it?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. Is that one of the books which was kept as a part of the ordinary course of business of the Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship?

A. It was.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. It was.

Q. Miss Feldman, is that all of the books and records of the sole proprietorship or are there any more that you know of?

A. Well, there was a petty cash book. There was 1841 also a sales book which I don't believe is here.

Q. And what information would be contained in the petty cash book?

A. Well, they—we maintained a petty cash box, I believe, and we had something like $50.00 or $100.00 in it which we used for the purchase of stamps or for trucking charges and miscellaneous supplies that we purchased for the office for which we had to pay cash.

1842 Q. Those were charges for small purchases?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what is the other record that you refer to?

A. The sales book.

Q. And what information is contained in it?

A. That would be a record of the sales made to the different people to whom we sold merchandise.

Q. During the period of the partnership, can you describe the books and records kept at that time?

A. We had the same books. We opened a new set of books at the time the partnership was formed, but they consisted of the same types of books.

Q. Will you name them?

A. The cash receipts book; the cash disbursements book; purchase book; a sales book; a general ledger; general journal; petty cash book; payroll book.

Q. And when did you last see those books?

A. I saw one of the books at the office at 253 Broadway.

Q. And what is at 253 Broadway?

A. I believe that is the Special Investigation Department.

By Mr. Kirby: Treasury?

1843 By the Witness: I believe so.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government Exhibit 9-A for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 9-A for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for Identification No. 9-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, I have seen this before.

Q. Where was that?

A. Both at the offices of the Eatsum partnership at 19 Rector Street, and also at the Treasury Department.

Q. That is the book you referred to as the one you saw at 253 Broadway?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that one of the books and records kept by the partnership in the ordinary course of business?

A. That is so.

Q. What book is it?

A. This is the general ledger.

Q. Was that kept by you or under your supervision and direction?

1844 A. At the beginning it was kept by the accountant, and then I started to post it up.

Q. And who were the accountants during the period of the partnership?

A. Well, we had two sets of accountants, Mr. Bercu —that was Bernard Bercu and Company, and we also had Louis J. Roth.

Q. Did Mr. Roth succeed Bercu?

A. No. Mr. Roth came into the partnership at the same time the partnership was formed, and he took an independent audit with the understanding that he represented Mr. Giglio's interest.

Q. So you had two sets of accountants working on the books at the same period of time?

A. That is correct.

Q. For whom was Mr. Bercu working?

A. Mr. Bercu was employed by the Eatsum Food Products partnership, and he had come in with Mr. Lubben at the time the partnership was formed.

Q. And Mr. Roth, who was he employed by?

A. Well, he then was employed by Eatsum Food Products partnership.

Q. Did both of them remain throughout the course of the partnership?

1845 A. No, Mr. Bercu left as auditor for the firm, I believe, in November or December of 1945.

Q. Did Mr. Roth then remain?
A. He did.
Q. He remained throughout the end of the partnership, did he?
A. That is correct.
Q. Now did you answer my question as to where you had last seen the balance of the books you enumerated for the partnership?
A. I don't believe I did. The last time I saw the full set of books was at 19 Rector Street.
Q. What was 19 Rector Street?
A. The offices of the partnership were located at 19 Rector Street.
Q. And who had custody of them at that time?
A. Mr. Roth and Mr. Giglio.
Q. Was Mr. Roth associated with the partnership at that time?
A. He was not.
Q. When was that?
A. That was the end of July.
Q. What year?
A. 1946.
Q. Now after leaving the partnership, you say 1846 you went to work for General Confections?
A. That is correct.
Q. And what sort of books did they maintain?
A. They maintained the same books, mainly a general and cash receipts, cash disbursements, purchases, sales, general ledger, general journal, petty cash, and payroll book.
Q. Did you also work for the Reserve Trading Company?
A. I did.
Q. What sort of books were kept by that company?
A. The same books—cash receipts,—
Q. The same as you have just enumerated?
A. That is correct.
Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit 10 for identification, and ask if you have seen that before?
A. I have.
Q. What does that purport to be?
A. This is the binder containing all of the books of the Reserve Trading Company.

Q. You mean all of the books you have enumerated are contained in that one volume?

A. Correct, with one exception. There was no
1847 payroll book on Reserve Trading Company. There were no salaries paid; and there was no petty cash book.

Q. And was that book kept by you?

A. It was.

Q. Was it kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time that it was made?

A. It was.

1848 By Mr. Lockley: Will you stamp this Government's Exhibit 11 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 11 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 11, and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. This was the general journal for the period from April, 1946, to July, 1946, for the General Confections.

Q. From April to July, of General Confections?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was that kept by you in the ordinary course of business or under your supervision and direction?

A. Part of it was.

Q. Was the balance of it kept under your supervision?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was 1849 prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that a book kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please stamp this Government's Exhibit 11-A for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 11-A for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 11-A, and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. What does it purport to be?

A. This is a general journal for the period from April, 1946, to February, 1947, for General Confections.

By the Court: Is that a general journal?

By Mr. O'Brien: Is that a general journal overlap?

By the Witness: Yes. May I explain that, please.

1850 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Yes. Will you explain it.

A. When I came to work for General Confections I found that they had started to use this small book which was a six-column journal and the three debit columns and the three credit columns were not sufficient to handle the type of entries we were making, so I started this twelve-column journel and rewrote the entries, copied them exactly from the small book to the large book.

Q. For how long a period of time was that overlap?

A. That would be for the period from April to July.

Q. And was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. It was.

Q. And at least for the period after July, was it kept under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit for identification No. 12.

1851 (Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 12 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 12 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, I have seen this before.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. This is the general ledger or general journal for General Confections from March 1, 1947, to February, 1948.

Q. So that there will be no confusion, you say that there is the general journal for General Confections?

A. That is right, general journal for General Confections.

Q. Now, was that book kept under your supervision and direction?

A. Only up until the end of July of 1947.

Q. And was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. It was.

Q. Was it a book that was kept in the ordinary 1852 course of business?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 140 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 140 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 140, and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. This is the accounts payable ledger for the period—

Q. Was it—

A. For the period commencing March 1, 1947.

By the Court: What date?

By the Witness: March 1, 1947 until March, 1948.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And was that record kept under your supervision and direction?

A. For the period that I worked there, yes.

1853 Q. And is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge and belief?

A. It is.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. With respect to the General Confections Corporation, have I showed you all of the books that were kept by you or under your supervision, to the best of your knowledge?

A. No.

Q. Which ones are missing?

A. I don't believe you showed me the cash disbursements book, the sales book. The sales book is not here.

Q. When did you last see the cash disbursements book?
A. At the time that I left Mr. Lubben's employ.
Q. And is the purchase book there?
A. No.
Q. The accounts pay book?
A. This accounts payable ledger is for the period commencing March 1, 1947. There should be another one from March 9, 1946 to March 1, 1947.

1854 Q. And when did you last see those records?
A. Those records were at the office in New Jersey when I left Mr. Lubben's employ in July or August, 1947.
Q. Do you know where they are at this time?
A. I do not.
Q. Well, now, directing your attention to the period of the sole proprietorship of the Eatsum Food Products Company, do you know if purchases were made at that time from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. This is for the single ownership?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, there were.
Q. Now when a purchase was made, can you tell us what the ordinary routine was in so far as the books and records kept by the sole proprietorship were concerned? How was that recorded on the books?
A. Well, in the case of Shotwell, we added a pencil notation covering the amount of payment due for the overage on the face of the invoice.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, this would surely be hearsay evidence to this witness and so that we 1855 can keep straight on what the truth is, I wish that that last statement might be stricken and the witness be interrogated as to what she did, how she did it, from whom she secured her knowledge, and things of that kind.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to also object at this time to this lady, or whoever she was working for, doing things to Shotwell invoices outside the presence of Shotwell.

By the Court: Well, I take it—what do you say, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it would be most helpful and we would avoid objections if Miss Feldman could first describe the general practice of handling the books which she has been doing, the general pattern, and then when we get to the items in controversy here, let us take those up specifically so that we don't fall within generalities.

By Mr. Lockley: That is what we intend to do.

By Mr. O'Brien: You started off asking about 1856 Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: I didn't ask her about Shotwell. I am afraid she assumed I intended to ask her that.

By the Court: Supposing you ask her generally what the practice was.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: Without going into the alleged premium payments.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Generally, what was the practice with respect to recording a payment on the books of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. Well, let me put it this way: In the case of—well, let us forget items that had overages on them.

We would get an invoice, it would be checked as to the extension, as to the correct amount of the extension and it would be entered on the purchase book and the notation made on the invoice of the page in the purchase book to which it had been posted. From there, this particular item would be posted to the accounts payable ledger sheet for that particular firm.

1857 Q. From the purchase book?

A. From the purchase book to the accounts payable ledger sheet.

Q. From the concern from whom the purchase was made?

A. That is correct.

Q. And then, were there more entries made with respect to the purchase or was that all?

A. There were, at times.

Q. Now, when payment was made, what entries were made on the books?

A. Then we would enter in the cash disbursements book the amount of the check, the name of the firm, to whom it had been drawn, and the accounts payable item —that is, it would be posted to the accounts payable item in the cash disbursements sheet.

Q. All right. So you draw a check, you enter it in the cash disbursements book and you also enter it on the other side of the accounts payable ledger?

A. Yes. The next step would be to take it from the cash disbursements book to the accounts payable ledger sheet for the individual concerned.

Q. Now, prior to the issuance of a check, was there any other record prepared?

1858 A. Yes, depending on what the check was being issued for.

Q. Well, in the case of a check issued to cash, what sort of records were kept?

A. We would have to make out a cash authorization slip showing how the check was drawn, to cash, the name of the firm or individual that was going to get the cash, the amount of money that was being drawn, and in most instances, the purpose for which it was being used, whether it was the purchase of material or whether it was the payment of any other item.

Q. All right. Now, how was that check to cash recorded on the books of the company?

A. The check to cash would be entered in the cash disbursements book in the regular manner and next to the word "cash" would appear the name of the firm or the individual to whom it had been paid.

Q. And how about on the accounts payable ledger?

A. Well, from the cash disbursements book, we would enter that item on the ledger sheet for the individual firm or person to whom it was paid.

Q. Who instructed you in the method of bookkeeping?

1859 A. Mr. Bercu and Mr. Lubben.

Q. Well, with respect to the bookkeeping system generally?

A. Well, Mr. Bercu.

Q. Who was responsible for instituting this system of cash authorization slips?

A. Mr. Bercu.

Q. Now, directing your attention to the period of the Eatsum partnership from June 1, 1945, to the time you left which would be July, 1946, was there any change in the method of bookkeeping which you have just described, that you know of?

A. I am not sure of that. I believe there was a change.

Q. And in what respect?

A. I don't know whether when we started the partnership we continued keeping our records in the same way or whether the change came immediately upon the formation of the partnership. I have no way of checking it.

Q. What was the nature of the change?

A. Well, there had been a number of discussions and Mr. Roth felt that we should not show—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object to 1860 that. She wasn't asked for conversation.

By Mr. Lockley: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Don't tell us what was said.

A. I am sorry.

Q. Let us know what the end result was.

A. Well, the end result was there was a change in the handling of cash payments.

Q. And just what was the nature of the change, if you know?

A. Well, in one instance they were taking—

By Mr. Kirby: Is this the change that she is not sure about or is this the change that she is sure of?

By the Witness: Well, there were several changes in that period, if I may add that, and it is a little bit difficult to pinpoint them. We still drew—let me put it this way, we still drew cash.

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. Is this a change about which the witness feels sure she knows or is this still one about which she is not too sure, if I may ask the good 1861 lady to tell us?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is this the one you aren't sure about when it started?

A. There is one I am not sure about when it started. I am sure of two changes but I cannot be sure when the first change came about. I am sure of the second change.

1862 Q. You know the change but you don't know exactly when it was inaugurated, is that what you are trying to say?

A. Yes, that is correct.

By Mr. Kirby: I wonder, which is this?

By the Witness: Well, since we are discussing the usual method of handling cash—

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. I am not discussing the usual method. We are talking about this one.

By Mr. Lockley: If you please, Mr. Kirby—

By Mr. Kirby: I object.

By the Witness: Would you mind repeating the question? Let us put it that way. I will start all over again.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell us what were the changes which were inaugurated in the keeping of the books of the company during the period of the partnership?

A. There were changes inaugurated in the handling of invoices with respect to certain items that had appeared on them previously.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. One, we had added certain information on the 1863 invoices—we no longer did.

Q. I see. Did you keep any other record of that information which you had previously kept on the invoices?

A. I did.

Q. Where did you keep it?

A. I kept rough copies, rough memoranda, I should say.

Q. Memoranda notes?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, were there any other changes?

A. Well—

Q. You referred to another one that you weren't sure of when it started?

A. This is the one I am not sure of as to when we stopped entering certain information on invoices. I have no way of telling that.

Q. Well, if you had the books and records, could you tell us?

A. Yes, I could.

Q. Well, now, with respect to the handling of checks to cash during the period of the General Confections, how was it handled there?

A. We still drew cash authorization slips.

1864 Q. And did you continue entering certain information on the invoices?

A. No, we did not.

Q. How was such information then recorded?

A. I kept—

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. I think he is repeating himself.

By Mr. Lockley: No, I am not. I am going over to General Confections now, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: I am touchier than I thought.

By the Court: I think it is adjournment time, Counsel.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. I don't know whether she answered the question or not.

By the Witness: I wanted to ask you to repeat the last question.

By Mr. Lockley: Let us let it go until tomorrow morning.

By the Court: We will be in recess until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing until the jury files out?

This Honorable Court will recess until 10:00 o'clock

1865 tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause until Thursday, September 24, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a. m.)

Chicago, Illinois
Thursday, September 24, 1953,
10:00 o'clock a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

(Whereupon Government's Exhibits 6-A, 6-B, 10-A, 10-B, 10-C, 10-D, 10-E, and 10-F were marked for identification.)

1867 By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, The United States of America versus The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al, case on trial.

By Mr. Lockley: I note, your Honor, that the defendant, Harold Sullivan—oh, I am sorry.

By Mr. Kirby: Harold is here, and here I am. Glad to see you.

By Mr. Lockley: You were hiding.

By Mr. Kirby: You can't hide Harold. He is too big.

BEATRICE FELDMAN a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Well, Miss Feldman, at the close of yesterday afternoon, I was asking you about the method of handling checks to cash during the period of General Confections in 1946.

Now, did you continue to enter the additional information on invoices in the same manner as you previously 1868 testified that it was done in the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. No, we did not.

Q. Now how was that additional information recorded, if there was such information?

A. It was recorded on the cash authorization slip, and this authorization slip was then posted to the purchase book as a regular purchase.

Q. Was the full amount of the invoice posted from the cash authorization slip?

A. No, just the full amount of the overage payment.

By Mr. O'Brien: Full amount of what?

By the Witness: Of the overage payment.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now what figure was recorded on the accounts payable book?

By Mr. Kirby: The what?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The accounts payable book.

A. First the invoice—

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. I did appreciate that the lady said there was a change. Now, which entity are you talking about, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: The General Confections.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

1869 By the Witness:

A. The full amount of the invoice was entered on the purchase slip. The full amount of the cash authorization was entered on the purchase book, and both amounts were posted to the accounts payable ledger sheet for the particular company.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Two separate entries?

A. That is true.

1870 Q. Now I failed to ask you yesterday, what was the period covered by Exhibit 9-A. Now, will you tell us what period is covered by Government's Exhibit 9-A for identification?

A. I believe I did identify this.

Q. I know, but what period of time?

A. Oh, this is from June 1, 1945, to March 9, 1946.

Q. And what entity was in existence at that time?

A. That was the partnership.

Q. Now with respect to Exhibit for identification No. 10, Government's Exhibit No. 10, what was the period covered by that book?

A. This was for Reserve Trading for the period from August, 1946, until June 30, 1947.

Q. Now with respect to the entries on the Reserve Trading purchase book, from where were those amounts obtained, in the purchase book?

A. Some of them were from regular invoices and others were from authorization slips.

Q. What amount was obtained from the regular invoices?

A. The invoice amount of the item.

Q. And what amount was obtained from the au-

1871 thorization slip?

A. The amount of overage payable on the item.

Q. Were there subsequent entries made after those in the purchase book?

A. I am sorry. I don't understand.

Q. In some other book of the company?

A. Yes. The items were transferred from the purchase book to the accounts payable ledger.

Q. And in what amounts?

A. For the actual invoices plus the authorization slip.

Q. And now, when the amounts were paid, were there entries made in the books for that?

A. There were.

Q. And was there one entry or two entries and from where was the information obtained?

A. Well, as the checks were issued, whether the payment of the invoice or the overage, the checks and the explanation were entered in the cash disbursements book and from the cash disbursements book, the items were entered on the ledger sheet for the individual firm.

Q. Was that in two entries or one?

A. You mean for the invoice price plus the overage?

1872 Q. Yes.

A. If there were two checks drawn, there were two entries.

Q. Were cash authorization slips required for cash checks for the entity Reserve Trading Company?

A. They were.

1873 By Mr. Lockley: At this time I offer Exhibit No. 5 in evidence, which is the purchase book of the sole proprietorship.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it on behalf of the corporation on the basis and the grounds that the testimony of the witness has shown that the entries made in it are made from invoices which she, or somebody in her office, has marked up after they left Shotwell, not binding on the Shotwell Company, and self-serving.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I think it would be best to let Mr. Lockley go on with the books and if I have objection to them, I would like to do it by way of a motion after the cross that pertains to those items. In other words, I don't want to interrupt by cross examining about each item as it comes up at this time.

By Mr. Lockley: These are books made in the regular course of business.

By the Court: I will receive the exhibit in evidence.

1874 (Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit No. 5.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, yesterday, Miss Feldman, you identified Government's Exhibit for identification No. 6 as the accounts payable ledger. I now show you Government's Exhibits for identification 6-A and 6-B and ask you if you have seen those before.

A. I have.

Q. And what are they?

A. This is the ledger sheet for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the life of the single ownership.

Q. For what period of time?

A. From May, 1944, to May, 1945.

Q. And was that a part of the accounts payable ledger kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Were those entries made by you or under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were prepared?

A. That is so.

1875 By Mr. Lockley: At this time we offer Exhibits 6-A and 6-B in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to these sheets for the same reason that I have given for the previous book, representing a mark up of invoices of Shotwell Manufacturing Company; and for the further reason that insofar as they encompass entries in '44, they are outside the period of the indictment.

By Mr. Lockley: We can eliminate the portion of the objection relating to 1944, your Honor, by just offering that portion of the exhibit 6-A, which relates to entries made in 1945.

By the Court: What is 6-B?

By Mr. Lockley: 6-B is a continuation, sir. It begins—

By the Court: Both sheets then extend from May, '44 to May, '45?

By Mr. Lockley: The first sheet begins with June, 1944, and ends with April—

By the Witness: No.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Maybe the expert better tell us.

1876 A. The first sheet commences as of May 17, 1944, and the last entry on there is April 28 of 1945. And 6-B commences at April 20, 1945, and concludes at May 31, 1945.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I don't know whether I am clear. Did you limit your offer to 1945, and not offer the 1944 items?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct.

By the Court: I so understand his offer.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibits 6-A and 6-B.)

By Mr. Lockley: I now offer Government Exhibit for Identification No. 7, which is the Eatsum Food Products Company cash disbursement book. And I limit my offer to the entries contained in that book for the year 1945.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection to this offer, that it is based on invoices which have been 1877 marked up without any authority of Shotwell.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibit 7.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for Identification 10-A, and ask you if you have seen those before—and 10-B?

A. Yes.

Q. And what are they, what do they purport to be?

A. They are the purchases for the month of October.

By the Court: Again, please.

By the Witness: They are the purchases for the month of October for the Reserve Trading Corporation.

By the Court: What kind of sheets?

By the Witness: Purchase sheets.

By the Court: Purchase sheets?

By the Witness: Purchase records.

1878 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And those are part of the purchase book which was previously identified by you yesterday as part of the records of Reserve Trading Corporation?

A. That's correct.

Q. Were they kept under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. And were they made in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. They are.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 10-A and 10-B.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection to Exhibits 10-A and 10-B as heretofore made, as being self-serving, based on marked up invoices.

By the Court: They may be received.

By Mr. Lockley: I am at a loss to understand the objection to marked up invoices. As I understand it, 1879 invoices are sent by a supplier to a customer, and when they are received by him, it seems to me, he can tear them up, throw them away, mark them, or do whatever he wants. I am frankly at a complete loss to understand that.

By Mr. McConnell: You can tear them up, or anything else, but it isn't binding on us. That is my point. We didn't authorize you to do it.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't think any authorization is necessary.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 10-A and 10-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 10-C and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. And what does it purport to be?

A. This is a ledger sheet for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company out of the Reserve Trading Corporation book.

Q. And is that part of the accounts payable record of the Reserve Trading Company?

1880 A. It is.

Q. Was that kept under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. And was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 10-C in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: The Corporation makes the same objection as to Exhibit 10-C.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 10-C.)

1881 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibits for identification 10-D, E and F, and ask if you have seen those before

A. I have.

Q. And what do they purport to be?

A. These are the cash disbursement sheets for the months of October and November from the Reserve Trading Corporation.

By the Court: What year?

By the Witness: 1946.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And were those records made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. They are.

Q. Are they records made in the ordinary course of business?

A. They are.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 10-D, E and F in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection,

1882 if the Court please, as to those documents.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Governments Exhibits 10-D, 10-E and 10-F.)

1883 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification 23-A, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And what does that purport to be?

A. This is an invoice from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. By whom was it prepared, do you know?

A. The original invoice was prepared by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And was it received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Did it become part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. It did.

Q. Calling your attention to the penciled notations thereon, do you recognize that handwriting?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Were those notations made under your supervision and direction?

1884 A. They were.

Q. Well, what do they purport to be?

A. That is the amount of overage that we were paying for pounds of gum drops.

Q. Were those records a part of the Eatsum sole proprietorship books and records?

A. They were.

Q. Made in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification 23-B, purporting to be an invoice of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Was that true and correct at the time it was received by you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it made a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

1885 A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. I call your attention to the penciled notations. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. No.

Q. Were those records made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Were they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. They were.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 23-A and 23-B for identification.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to Government's Exhibits 23-A and 23-B on the ground that Miss Feldman had no authority from Shotwell to mark up Shotwell's invoices, and they are self-serving.

By Mr. O'Brien: As to Government's Exhibit 23-B,

1886 your Honor,—Judge as to Government's Exhibit 23-B, it is undated. It doesn't show the date of the shipment, and we object to it on that basis. The item 23-A is dated December 26, 1944.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I will tie that in, your Honor, by showing that those were both paid by check issued in January, 1945, and I will further tie it into the books and records of the company showing that these shipments—this 23-B was received in 1945.

By the Court: Perhaps you had better defer your offer. What is Exhibit 23? My notes aren't clear.

By Mr. Lockley: I have that in my hand, your Honor. That is a check which has not yet been offered or received, or identified.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I will show you Government's Exhibit for Identification No. 23, purporting to be a check, and I ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. I recognize the signature.

1887 Q. Whose signature is it?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

1888 Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Would it be made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, will you please refer to the purchase book which, I believe, is Government's Exhibit 5, and I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 23 and ask you whether that is recorded—

By the Court: 23 what?

By Mr. Lockley: No. 23-A. I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I ask you if that is recorded in the purchase book?

A. It is.

Q. Will you give us the date, line and page, please?

A. It is recorded in the purchase book for the month of December, 1944, on page 36, line 33.

Q. And in what amount?

A. For $3,636.98.

1889 Q. Is that the amount of the printed figures on the invoice?

A. No, sir, it is not. That is the amount of the printed figure plus the penciled notation for the overage.

Q. Will you now refer to the accounts payable book and tell me if that invoice is entered in the accounts payable book, Government's Exhibit 6-A?

A. Yes, it is. Here (indicating).

By the Court: Tell the exhibit number when you refer to something like that.

By Mr. Lockley: It is 23-A.

By the Court: Will you refer to the exhibit number hereafter?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. 23-A is the exhibit which I am asking to have related to Exhibit 6-A.

By the Witness:

A. It appears from Exhibit 6-A under the date of December 26th from page 36 that the amount is $3,636.98.

By Mr. O'Brien: I—

By Mr. Lockley: That book is in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

1890 Q. Will you now refer to the cash disbursements book and tell me if—that is number what, No. 7? It is Exhibit No. 7. Tell me if Exhibit 23-A is entered.

Strike that question.

A. Not as an individual check.

Q. Strike that question, now.

I show you Government's Exhibit 23-B and I ask if that exhibit is entered in Exhibit 5, the purchase book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. It is entered for $6,177.00.

Q. Is that the total amount of the invoice or is that the printed amount?

A. That is a printed amount, plus the penciled notation for the overage.

Q. Is that invoice likewise recorded in the accounts payable book, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. For $6,177.00.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 23 and ask you if that has any relation, 1891 if you know, to Government's Exhibit for identification 23-A and 23-B?

A. It has.

Q. And what is that relationship?

A. Check No. 2317 was issued in payment of both invoices for the printed amount.

Q. How is that recorded on that cash disbursements book, Government's Exhibit 7?

A. On page 45 of the cash disbursements book it appears as a payment to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company on January 12th, a net check of $4,198.28, purchase discount of $85.70 and a total debit to the account of $4,284.98.

By the Court: How much again?

By the Witness: A total debit of $4,284.98.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is there an entry of that check in the accounts payable ledger, Exhibit 8-A?

A. There is.

1892 Q. In what amount?

A. $4,284.98.

Q. Now, Exhibits 23-A and 23-B for identification then were paid by Exhibit 23, and what is Exhibit 23 dated?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the statement of counsel that they were paid. We haven't seen the check yet.

By Mr. Lockley: That is the testimony of the witness. I re-offer Exhibits 23-A, 23-B and I offer Government's Exhibit 23.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to cross examine on this, if the Court please, I mean on the document.

By the Court: Are you offering now some exhibits?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. Government's Exhibits 23, 23-A and 23-B for identification, your Honor.

By the Court: Counsel may examine on them as to foundation.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. I understand you to say, Miss Feldman, that the check in the amount of $4,199.00 was for the full amount of both the printed invoice and the overage. Was that correct?

A. I did not say that, sir. I said—

Q. The check was only for the amount of the printed invoice as you received it from Shotwell, isn't that true?

A. That is correct.

Q. And does not include any overage?

A. Does not include the pencilled overage on the bill at that time.

By Mr. McConnell: That's all.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 23, 23-A and 23-B.)

By Mr. McConnell: I want to make my objection, if the Court please. I want to make my objection and 1894 move to strike the invoices that are marked up.

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 24-A and ask if you have seen that before.
A. I have.
Q. What does it purport to be?
A. It is an invoice from Shotwell Manufacturing Company for spice buttons.
Q. Is that a record received by you in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it made a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?
A. It was.
Q. It was kept under your supervision and direction?
A. That is correct.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 24 and ask you if you have seen that before.
A. I have.
Q. Do you recognize the handwriting on it?
A. No.
1895 Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?
A. It is.
Q. Is it made under your supervision and direction?
A. It was.
Q. Was that correct to the best of your knowledge at the time it was prepared?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 24 and 24-A for identification.
By Mr. O'Brien: We don't see the relationship she has testified to.
By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask a question about that too, now, if I may.
By the Court: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Miss Feldman, this check to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Government's Exhibit 24, is only for the amount of the printed invoice as you received it from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, is that not the fact?

1896 A. That is correct.

Q. And it does not include the amount of the pencilled items which have been pencilled on the invoices, is that true?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Let me see it.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Is the check related to this invoice, 24-A, Miss Feldman?

A. I believe it is.

Q. The printed invoice is $1,257.30 and the check is $1,232.15. How is that explained?

A. May I see the check, please?

Q. Yes.

A. In the upper left hand—

Q. It may be a discount but you haven't said it.

A. It is a discount in the upper left hand corner where there is a notation under the No. 61544 for $1,257.30 less a two per cent discount of $25.15, which made the check $1,232.15.

1897 Q. One other question as to the penciled amount $1524.00, even.

A. Yes.

Q. Which appears on Exhibit 24-A. Is there an entry on your books made at the time as the date of this check for that amount?

A. I don't follow you, sir.

Q. Have you any—you have entered on your—

By the Court: Louder please, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. This check for $1232.15 is put on the Shotwell's accounts payable?

A. The check appears on the Shotwell's accounts payable.

Q. And that takes care of that part of this invoice, Government's Exhibit 24-A?

A. It takes care of one part of the invoice.

Q. Now, is there also an entry on the Shotwell accounts payable for $1524.00, the penciled—

A. No. I believe that amount was taken care of at a later date.

Q. That is all I want to know now. Was there an entry for $1524.00 made at the same time?

A. No, there was not.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all.

1898 By the Court: The exhibits may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 24 and 24-A.)

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now with respect to Exhibit 24-A, Miss Feldman, is that recorded on the purchase book?

By the Court: Wait a minute, now.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 5.

By the Court: You have 24-A. The check is 24.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you the invoice 24-A, and ask you if that was recorded on the purchase book, Exhibit No. 5?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. It appears as $2,781.30.

Q. And is that the full amount of the invoice plus the penciled notations?

A. That is the typed amount plus the penciled notations.

1899 Q. Is that likewise recorded in the accounts payable ledger, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,781.30.

By Mr. O'Brien: Under what date?

By the Witness: January 10th.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that the full amount of the invoice, both the printed amount and the written amount?

A. It is, sir.

Q. Now with respect to Government's Exhibit 24, is that recorded in the cash disbursement book, Exhibit No. 7?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. It appears in the check book for the face of the check, as $1,232,15.

By Mr. O'Brien: How much was that, Miss Feldman?

By the Witness: $1,232.15, the purchase discount of 25.15, and a net amount debit to accounts payable of $1,257.30.

1900 Q. And is that likewise recorded in the accounts payable book, 6-A?

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the date on that last item?

By the Witness: January 22nd is the date of the check.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And is there an entry in the accounts payable book with relation to that check?

A. There is.

Q. And what is that entry?

A. The entry appears on January 26th—on January 22nd—I am sorry—for $1,257.30.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 25-A and I ask you—

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, I have a little difficulty in following the testimony, not having seen the check, and not having seen the invoice, and I wonder if it wouldn't be a good plan when they are received in evidence to read them so that the jury and I may know what it is, otherwise she reads the figures and I can't follow her.

1901 By the Witness: I am sorry.

By the Court: I can't follow her, not knowing just what the exhibits reflect.

By Mr. Lockley: I had not done so for fear that the defense might object to it.

By the Court: When the exhibits are introduced in evidence it is appropriate for counsel to read the salient portions of them to the Court and jury so that we can follow the testimony more clearly.

By Mr. Lockley: Going back to the original—

By the Court: If I understood her testimony correctly, the check, that is, Exhibit 24 is, according to her testimony, in payment of invoice 24-A, not including the so-called overages.

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, your Honor.

By the Court: But she stated that the full amount of the invoice, plus the overages, was entered on the accounts payable book, is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

1902 By Mr. O'Brien: On the purchase book.

My Mr. Lockley: On both the purchase book and the accounts payable book, was my understanding.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Am I correct, Miss Feldman?

A. That is so.

By the Court: All right. Now, if you will give me the amount of the check.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, there was one more thing she said, Judge, that I am confused about, too, and I know something about it.

This last entry in the cash disbursements book, Exhibit 7, she said that so fast, gave the figures so fast, I couldn't follow what she said.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What are the entries in the cash disbursements book, Miss Feldman, with respect to Exhibits No. 23 and No. 24?

A. Which is Exhibit 24?

(Documents handed to the witness.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, you have already given us 23, haven't you, Mr. Lockley?

1903 By the Court: Well, I think your question is before the witness now, Mr. Lockley.

1904 By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Witness: Do I repeat both checks?

By Mr. O'Brien: She already testified to 23.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Since counsel is satisfied with 23, just give us the information on 24.

A. The check 2408 appears on page 47 of the cash disbursements book for January, 1945, on line 35. Net cash amount is $1,232.15. The discount is $25.15, and the debit to the accounts payable is $1,257.30.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, wait. I didn't get that. $1,257.30?

By the Witness: That's right.

By Mr. McConnell: And what was that date in January?

By the Witness: 22nd.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibits 23-A and 23-B are Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoices to Eatsum Food Products Company for 683 cases of gum drops, on Exhibit 23-A, at a weight of 20,490 pounds, and a price of seven and three-quarter cents, for a total of $1,587.98. There 1905 is an extension of ten cents, and a total of $2,049, for a sum total in the amount of $3,636.98.

By the Court: Again.

By Mr. Lockley: $3,636.98.

By the Court: Is that the face of the invoice, or is that the face of the invoice plus the so-called overage?

By Mr. Lockley: The $3,636.98 is the invoice plus the overage.

By the Court: What is the face of the invoice?

By Mr. Lockley: The face of the invoice is $1,587.98.

By the Court: Then the overage is how much?

By Mr. Lockley: $2,049.

By the Court: That makes a total of $3,636.98, right?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, your Honor.

And Exhibit 23-B is a Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice, No. C65050, for 1,160 cases of gum drops at 30 pounds each, 34,800 pounds, at 7-¾ cents, for an invoice price of $2,697.00.

1906 There is an extension of ten cents for the amount of $3,480.00, making a total of $6,177.00.

1907 By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, he says an extension. I think it should be made clear to this jury that he is talking about the face amount as it comes from Shotwell, then something that his organization or the Eatsum organization put on the checks.

By the Court: When you say extension I take it you mean the handwritten amount of the overage?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, your Honor.

Exhibit 23 is a check dated January 12, 1945, to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $4,199.28.

And on the face of it—

By the Court: That is sufficient information now, I suppose, to tell me and tell the jury—

By Mr. Lockley: There is a further explanation, your Honor, that this check is in payment of invoice No. 60254, which is Exhibit No. 23-A, and 65050, which is 1908 Exhibit No. 23-B, less a two per cent discount of $85.70, for a total amount of $4,199.28.

By the Court: In other words, it is in payment of the face amount of those two invoices, not including the overage.

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct, your Honor.

And my understanding of Miss Feldman is that the total amount is recorded in the purchases book, which includes the overage.

By the Witness: That is so.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And the total amount is posted to the accounts payable book?

A. That is correct.

1909 Q. Including the overage?

A. That's correct.

Q. And only the invoice amount is recorded on the cash disbursements book for the amount of the check?

A. That's correct.

Q. At this time?

A. That's correct.

Q. And only the invoice amount is posted to the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That's correct.

Q. So at this point you have an amount owing to Shotwell?

A. That's correct.

By Mr. Lockley: Is that clear, your Honor?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask this question? While you are on those items, do you have somewhere in the cash disbursements book that picks up these precise overages, so-called?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: In these dollar amounts. On 1910 Exhibit 23-B you have an item of $3,480.00 in pencil. Is that the overage figure?

By the Witness: That was the figure that was—the amount of the overage on that particular transaction.

By Mr. O'Brien: And on Exhibit 23-A you have a figure of $2,049.00, which is the overage figure?

By the Witness: That's correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, do you have subsequent entries in the cash disbursements book for those two figures, $3,480.00 and $2,049.00?

By the Witness: You mean for the individual figures?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness: No. The overages were paid in the group of bills.

1911 By Mr. O'Brien: I just want to know if they appear there, because if they did, while you are on it, I would like to get it.

By Mr. Lockley: I think this will clarify itself as we go along.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: The testimony will show that the overages were not paid by individual checks.

By Mr. Kirby: I except to the statement of counsel. Let him prove—

By the Court: At least that is what the evidence reflects to date, as I understand it.

I say, the evidence reflects that the overages were not paid by checks. The Government contends that the overages were paid by cash.

Is that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Sure, but—

By the Court: Well, just for clarity, I think that is a fair statement to make.

By Mr. O'Brien: There is no doubt about that, but the question is—

By the Court: I am not raising other questions. I 1912 am merely stating that, that up to date we haven't had any evidence that any of the so-called overages were paid by checks, and I don't understand that the Government contends that they were paid by check. The Government contends they were paid by cash.

By Mr. Lockley: We will eventually tie in checks to these particular overages as we go along, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, but up to date, we haven't had any.

By Mr. Lockley: Not to this point; no, sir.

Exhibit 24-A is a Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice to Eatsum Food Products Company for 508 cases of spice buttons, 30 pounds each, for 15,240 pounds, at eight and one-quarter cents, total invoice price of $1,250.30. That is invoice No. C61544.

Exhibit No. 24—

By the Court: The amount of the invoice is how much?

By Mr. Lockley: The amount of the printed in- 1913 voice is $1,257.30, and the overage, or the pencil extensions are ten cents a pound on 15,240 pounds, or $1,524.00, for a total amount of $2,781.30.

Exhibit No. 24 is a check, No. 2408, dated January 22, 1945, in the amount of $1,232.15, with the description number 61544, which is Exhibit No. 24-A, less two percent, $25.15, in the amount of $1,232.15.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask one question on that discount, your Honor?

By the Court: Well, you may.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Miss Feldman, was that two percent discount for cash on the invoice?

1914 By the Witness: That was two per cent cash on the face of the invoice.

By Mr. McConnell: For prompt payment of the invoice, is that it?

By the Witness: I believe it read that way. According to the invoice, the terms were cash ten days, net 30, one per cent discount on marshmallows and two per cent on candy.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was there any discount on the overage payments, Miss Feldman, if you know?

A. What was that?

Q. Was there any discount on the overage payments?

A. No.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 25-A and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And what does that purport to be?

A. That is an invoice from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for spice buttons.

Q. Is that a record received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

1915 Q. From the books and records of the Eatsum proprietorship?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you 25-B—

Before I do that, let me ask you if you recognize the penciled handwriting on Exhibit No. 25-A?

A. May I clarify that, that I know it is the handwriting of the accounts payable clerk, but I don't know who she was at the time.

Q. Was she working under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes.

Q. Were those entries true and correct at the time they were made?

A. Yes.

1916 Q. Were these entries made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. With respect to 25-B, which purports to be an invoice of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, have you seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: I wonder if I might speed these up by handling several at a time?

By the Court: Just as you think best.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I also offer you 25-C, and 25-D, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Were those received by the Eatsum Food Products Company in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. I direct your attention to the penciled notations and ask if you know by whom they were made?

A. By the accounts payable clerk.

1917 Q. Were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Were they a part of the books and records of the company?

A. They were.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge, at the time they were made?

A. Yes, they were.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit for Identification 25, purporting to be a check, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. The accounts payable clerk.

Q. Was that a record made under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 25, 25-A, B, C, 1918 and D.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask Miss Feldman whether or not those notations, those pencil notations that you identify as being made by a clerk, whether they were on the invoice when they were received from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

By the Witness: No, they were added in our office.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the documents—the parts of the documents which were altered by adding the pencil memorandums.

By Mr. O'Brien: Who was the accounts payable clerk, Miss Feldman?

By the Witness: We had a number of them. I am not sure who it was at that time.

By Mr. O'Brien: You were there in January of 1945?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Was it Miss Jeretsky?

By the Witness: No.

By Mr. O'Brien: Was it Miss Seider?

By the Witness: No.

By Mr. O'Brien: Were those notations put on by 1919 the auditors?

By the Witness: By the who?

By Mr. O'Brien: By Bercu's office?

By the Witness: No, they were made by us.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 25, 25-A, 25-B, 25-C and 25-D.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibits for Identification 26-A, and 26-B, and ask if you have seen those before?

1920 By the Court: Are you now going to another transaction? Are they tied up with 25?

By Mr. Lockley: Perhaps I better retrace my steps.

By the Court: Let's clear up 25 and tell the jury what they are. Otherwise it is impossible for us to follow.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to 25-A, B, C and D, will you tell me if those are recorded in the purchase book of the Eatsum proprietorship?

A. They are.

Q. And in what amount?

A. Invoice 61094 is recorded for $3,159.08.

Q. What exhibit number is that?

A. That is Exhibit No. 25-B.

Q. And is that amount the invoice price or the invoice plus the extensions?

A. That is the invoice plus the extensions.

Q. With respect to 25-B—

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, Judge, we have no objection to the use of the word "extensions" so long as 1921 it is—

By Mr. Lockley: I hardly know what else to refer to it as.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By the Court: Refer to it as overage then.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just so long as it is understood to be defined as Mr. Lockley first defined it.

By the Court: I am sorry?

By Mr. O'Brien: Just so long as the term "extension" in the record is defined as Mr. Lockley defined it before.

By the Court: Well, it purports to be the handwritten notations of the alleged overage. That is what it purports to be.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is what it is, sure, not extensions.

By Mr. Lockley: I will call it overages, if that will please you more.

By Mr. McConnell: You better call it alleged overages.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. We will call it alleged overages then.

1922 By the Witness:

A. Invoice No. 59931, which is Exhibit 25-A, appears on page 45 of the purchase book, line 22, as $2,447.33.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And is that the invoice price or the invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. It is.

Q. It is what?

A. It is the total of the typewritten amount plus the amounts of the alleged overage.

Q. And how is Exhibit 25-C recorded; that is, on the purchase book, Exhibit 5?

A. 25-C appears on page 47 of the purchase book, line 15, in the amount of $2,874.38.

Q. And is that the amount of the invoice price or the invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. That is the invoice plus the alleged overage.

Q. And with respect to Exhibit No. 25-B—

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Lockley, maybe I can save some words for the Reporter, they have a happy expression on there, they call it the full price. Is that right, Miss Feldman?

1923 By the Court: Let's go forward.

By the Witness:

A. Exhibit 25-D appears on page 47, line 16 of the purchase book, in the amount of $2,847.00.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, what relation, if any, does Exhibit 25 have to Exhibits 25-A, B, C, D and E, if you know?

A. Exhibit 25, which is check No. 2484, represents payment to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company of the typewritten amounts on the four invoices, which are Exhibits 25-D, C, B and A.

By Mr. Lockley: Now, for further clarification—

By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering them now?

By Mr. Lockley: I had understood they were offered and received, Mr. McConnell.

Exhibit 25-A is a Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice for 447 cases of spice buttons, 13,410 pounds, 8-1/4 cents a pound, $1,106.33, invoice price.

By the Court: Again.

By Mr. Lockley: $1,106.33, invoice price, plus a
1924 ten cents per pound alleged overage on 13,410 pounds, or $1,341.00 alleged overage, for a total price of $2,447.33.

25-B is a similar invoice for 17,310 pounds spice buttons at 8-1/4 cents a pound, $1,428.08, invoice price, ten cents a pound alleged overage on 17,310 pounds, or $1,731.00, for a total price of $3,159.08.

25-C is a similar invoice for 15,750 pounds of spice buttons at 8-1/4 cents for an invoice price of $1,299.38, an overage of ten cents a pound on 15,750 pounds, $1,575.00, for a total of invoice and overage of $2,874.38.

1925 Exhibit 25-D is a similar invoice for 15,600 pounds of spice buttons at eight and one-quarter cents, or $1,287.00, plus an alleged ten cents a pound overage on 15,600 pounds, $1,560.00, for a total of $2,847.00.

Exhibit 25 is a check in the amount of $5,018.37, dated January 26, 1945, from Eatsum Food Products Company endorsed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, with the explanation, invoice No. 61904, which is Exhibit 25-B, 59931, which is Exhibit 25-A, 63830, Exhibit 25-C, and 64176, which is Exhibit 25-D, the total amount of $5,120.79, less two percent discount of $102.42, for the face amount of the check of $5,018.37.

By the Court: Give me the printed invoice amount on Exhibit 25-B.

By Mr. Lockley: D as in Day?

By the Court: B as in Button.

By Mr. Lockley: The printed amount is $1,428.08.

1926 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits 26-A and 26-B and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Well, are those records received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. What do they purport to be?

A. They are invoices from Shotwell Manufacturing Company for gum drops.

Q. Are those records a part of the business records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. They are.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 26 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. That is a check to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in payment of—

Q. Never mind. Just describe—is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

1927 A. No.

Q. Was it a record made under your supervision and direction?

A. It is.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 26, 26-A and 26-B—pardon me. I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I neglected to ask you about the penciled extensions, Miss Feldman. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. The accounts payable clerk.

Q. Were those records made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Were they made as part of the records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

1928 By Mr. Lockley: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 26, 26-A and 26-B for identification.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask one question about Government's Exhibits 26-A and 26-B.

By the Court: Very well.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. I call your attention, Miss Feldman, to the stamp on these invoices "Paid, February 9, 1945" and also I call your attention to the fact that the check which is Government's Exhibit 26 is under date of February 9, 1945, and I ask you whether or not that "Paid" reference only refers to the amount of the printed invoice and not the overage, the alleged overage?

A. That refers only to the amount of the printed invoice.

Q. So when it states "Paid" on that invoice, it does not include the "Paid" of the alleged overage?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the documents as 1929 far as they have been marked up.

By the Court: They may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 26, 26-A and 26-B.)

Direct Examination (Ctd.) By Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, Exhibit 26-A, an invoice of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, will you tell me if that is recorded on the purchase book of the Eatsum Food Products Company, Government's Exhibit No. 5?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. It appears on page 53 on the purchase book of February, 1945, line 19, in the amount of $2,928.75.

1930 Q. Is that the amount of the printed invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. It is.

Q. Is that invoice recorded on the accounts payable ledger sheet of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Exhibit 6-A?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,928.75.

Q. That is the amount of the printed invoice plus the alleged overage, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 26-B and ask if that is recorded in the purchase book, Exhibit 5.

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,481.45.

Q. Is that the total amount of the invoice?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is the printed amount plus the alleged overage?

A. Plus the alleged overage.

Q. Is that recorded in the accounts payable book, 1931 Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $2,481.45.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit in evidence No. 26, and ask you if that has any connection to Government's Exhibits 26-A and 26-B?

A. It has.

Q. What is it?

A. Check No. 2649 is in payment of the printed amounts on the invoices Nos. 68259 and 66013.

Q. And is that recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. Net cash, $2,314.96, purchase discount, $47.24 and a debit to accounts receivable of $2,362.20.

Q. Do you know what that amount reflects with respect to invoices Government's Exhibits 26-A and 26-B?

A. Well, that reflects a payment of the printed amounts on both invoices.

By Mr. Lockley: Is that transaction clear, your 1932 Honor, or shall I go through it? Do you think it is clear?

By the Court: Now, if you will tell me what Government's Exhibits 26-A, B and C are as to amounts—

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor.

By the Court: You are going into the details as to the exact amounts of cash. I think we are primarily interested in the amount of the invoice and the amount of the alleged overage. State that, so that we may follow it.

By Mr. Lockley: The amount of invoice Government's Exhibit 26-A is $1,278.75.

By the Court: Seventy-five cents?

By Mr. Lockley: Seventy-five cents. The overage is ten cents a pound on 16,500 pounds, or $1,650.00. The total is $2,928.75.

Exhibit 26-B, the invoice amount is $1,083.45. The overage is ten cents on 13,980 pounds or $1,398.00 for a total of $2,481.45. The check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, endorsed by them, is for $2,314.96, and it 1933 has the description "C-68259", which is Exhibit 26-B, and "C-66013", which is Exhibit 26-A, in the amount of $2,362.20 less a two per cent discount of $47.24 or a net amount of $2,314.96.

By the Court: We will take our morning recess now. We will spend ten minutes, members of the jury.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the jury files out.

This honorable court will recess for ten minutes.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence 27-A, and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. When was that?

A. The notation in pencil is in my handwriting.

Q. Did you prepare the typewritten portion of it?

A. I did.

1934 Q. What is that document?

A. That is a recap sheet of money due Shotwell Manufacturing for the overages on the various items.

Q. Was that prepared by you?

A. It was.

Q. From what information?

A. From the memos I kept as to the amount of poundage of the different items.

Q. What is the amount shown due on the settlement sheet?

A. $10,849.00.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 27 in evidence, check for $10,849.00, and ask you if those exhibits are in any way related?

A. They are.

Q. What is Exhibit No. 27?

A. Exhibit No. 27 is a cash issued—is a check issued to cash for $10,849.00.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 28 in evidence, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. What is that exhibit?

A. It is a check issued to cash for $6,183.00.

1935 Q. Now, Exhibit 27-A. I call your attention to that. Does that have any connection with Government's Exhibit 23-A and B, 24-A, 25-A and B in evidence, and if so, what?

A. Yes. Several of these invoices, specifically 24-A, 23-B, 23-A, and 25-A, are included in this recap sheet.

Q. Will you turn to Exhibit No. 5, the purchase book —pardon me. Turn to Exhibit No. 7, rather, the cash disbursements book.

Will you first explain; what is the relationship that you just testified there was between Government's Exhibits 27-A, and 23-A, and B, 24-A, and 25-A?

A. Well, Exhibit No. 24-A is invoice 61544, which is invoiced as 15,240 pounds of spice buttons. Now the invoice we received from Shotwell, we had made a penciled notation on there of the overage, and that amount was transferred to the recap sheet.

Q. What is that amount?

A. The amount here is $1,524.00, but that appears in total on the recap sheets as part of ... extension, but the poundage was transferred as it appeared.

1936 Q. What is the relationship between the other invoices?

A. Number—Exhibit 25-A which is invoice C 59931, calls for 13,410 pounds of spice buttons. That also appears on the recap sheet.

By the Court: What is the amount of the overage?

By the Witness: And the amount of the poundage—

By the Court: Give me the amount of the overage.

By the Witness: The overage as it appears on the invoice is $1,341.00.

By the Court: $1,341.00?

By the Witness: That is right.

By the Court: That appears on the recap sheet?

By the Witness: Well, as the recap sheet was worked we showed the poundage, multiplied by the overage, for the particular item, and then got the total for the total of the poundage.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And what is the relationship of Exhibit 23-A

1937 and B?

A. 25-B is invoice—is exhibit number—I am sorry. 25-B is Invoice C19044 for 17,310 pounds of spice buttons, and that also appears on the recap sheet.

Q. Now, is there any relationship to Exhibit 25-B?

A. 23-B?

Q. All right.

A. Which is Invoice No. C65050 in the amount of 34,800 pounds of gum drops. It also appears on this recap sheet.

1938 Q. Will you tell me whether, if you know, Government's Exhibit 27 in the amount of $10,849.00 is included in the cash disbursements book—

A. It is.

Q. —Exhibit 7?

A. It is.

Q. What is that entry?

A. It appears on page 46 of the cash disbursements book for January, 1945, on line 30. The entry is check No. 2367, January 19th, cash to Shotwell, $10,849.00 and the debit to accounts payable is $10,849.00.

Q. Now will you examine the accounts payable, Government's Exhibit 6-A. Does that entry appear thereon?

A. It does.

Q. In what amount?

A. $10,849.00.

Q. What is the significance of that entry?

A. That entry paid the overages on the specific group of invoices.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that statement, the entry paid for the overages. It may record such payments, but—1939 By the Court: Well, I don't know that I follow the witness's answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you qualify your answer, Miss Feldman?

A. Well, the entry of the check for $10,849.00 appears on the accounts payable ledger sheet.

Q. What does that indicate?

A. That indicates that the payment was made to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now with respect to Government's Exhibit 28, is that recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?
A. $6,183.00.
Q. Is that the face amount of that check?
A. It is.
Q. Is there any description on the cash disbursements book?
A. Yes, "Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company."
Q. On which line and page?
A. That is on page 54 of the cash disbursements book for February, 1945, line 35.
1940 Q. Is there an entry on the accounts payable ledger, Government's Exhibit 6-A, relating to that check?
A. There is.
Q. What is that entry?
A. That entry is for $6,183.00.
Q. What does that entry signify?
A. That the money was paid to Shotwell.
Q. I call your attention to some pencilled notations on the bottom of Government's Exhibit 27-A, and ask you if that has any relationship to Government's Exhibit 25-A?
A. Yes, it has. I described that as one of the four invoices that were included on this recap sheet.
Q. Does that cash authorization slip have any reference to Exhibit, Government's Exhibit 26-B?
A. No, it does not.
By Mr. Lockley: Now, if your Honor please, Government's Exhibits 27 and 28 are checks to cash.
By the Court: I know, but you have offered them, haven't you?
1941 By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. They have been offered previously.
By the Court: 26—
By Mr. Lockley: 27 is a check to cash in the amount of $10,849.00. Government's Exhibit 28 is a check to cash in the amount of $6,183.00. These exhibits were received at the time Mr. Lubben testified.
By the Court: Oh, they have already been received?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. I was just showing the relationship.
By the Court: You say they were identified by Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, they were identified.

By the Court: And received during the time he was on the stand?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 27-A is a typewritten slip of paper headed "Shotwell Manufacturing Company", with the words "spice buttons" and the date January 10, 1945, and the amount—

1942 By the Court: Have you offered 27-A?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. It was likewise offered and identified.

By the Court: If you would tell me that—Government's Exhibits 27-A and 27 and 28 have already been offered and received?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Now go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley: There is the next entry of January 12, 1945, for 17,310 pounds for a total of 32,550 pounds at ten cents, or $3,255.00.

There is a column headed "gum drops" December 6, 1944, 20,100 pounds; December 8, 1944, 23,580 pounds; December 9, 1944, 20,100 pounds; December 12, 1944, 23,460 pounds; December 26, 1944, 20,490 pounds; and January 5, 1945, 34,800 pounds or a total of 142,530 pounds at ten cents— $14,253.00, with a notation "advanced, $8,000.00.", leaving a balance of $6,253.00,—in the amount of $9,508.00.

There is also a pencilled notation on January 13, 1943 1945, for 13,410 pounds of spice buttons, and a pencilled notation "$1,341.00" making a total of $10,849.00, which is the amount of check No. 27.

By Mr. McConnell: While you are indicating the checks, will you indicate the endorsement on the back too.

By Mr. Lockley: These endorsements were by Freda Seiderer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I might ask you, Miss Feldman, if you recognize the endorsements on the back?

A. I do.

Q. Of Government's Exhibits 27 and 28?

A. Yes, sir.

1944 Q. Whose endorsements are they?

A. They are the endorsement of my assistant, Frieda Seiderer.

Q. Do you know what she did with those checks? Do you have any independent recollection?

A. What she did with the checks?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. She would take them to the bank, cash them and bring the cash back either to me or to Mr. Lubben.

Q. If she gave it to you what did you do?

A. I turned it over to Mr. Lubben.

By the Court: Well, will you help me straighten out my record, Mr. Lockley. Did I understand that Government's Exhibits 24-A, 23-A, 23-B and 25-A are included in the recap sheet 27-A?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, you have examined Government's Exhibits 23-A and 23-B, 24-B, 25-A, B, C, D, and 26-A and B, and I ask you what relationship, if any, and if you know, Government's Exhibits 27 and 28 bear to those invoices?

1945 A. Would it be all right if I use these sheets that I have here with me?

Q. Do you have some work papers that you have prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you make them?

A. I made them last April.

Q. From what information did you make them?

A. I made them from whatever records were available here in Chicago.

Q. What records were those?

A. The records of the Eatsum single ownership, copies, duplicate copies or photostats of Shotwell invoices and checks in payment of invoices and recap sheets that were available.

Q. Well, are those the records which are now in evidence?

A. That is right.

Q. In your possession on the stand?

A. Correct.

By Mr. Lockley: May she use her work papers, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, I don't follow just what you are referring to.

1946 By Mr. Lockley: She has some work papers which she said she prepared from the evidence which has now bee . introduced and which would help her in organizing her testimony.

By the Court: Well, I have no objection.

By Mr. Lockley: And from an examination of the work papers.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I don't mean to be impolite with the lady, but on behalf of the defendant Sullivan, I do object because quite an essential question in the very proof here is going to be as to what memoranda exists to support what Mr. Lubben did with this cash that he did get and this young lady, Mr. Lubben has testified, did prepare memoranda.

Now, we are at a juncture where there is not a memoranda in evidence, so if it is asked that she be permitted to refer to memoranda she has recently prepared. Because the question of her memoranda will be of such moment in the case, I must respectfully object to 1947 her use of any recently prepared memoranda because the memoranda of this lady will be an important question in the proof, and so I most sincerely object to her use of new memoranda.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no intention, your Honor—

By the Court: You haven't made clear to me just what data she used in preparing this memoranda and whether or not the data is now in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. With respect to the matters the pending question refers to, the data is all in evidence.

By the Court: What data are you now referring to?

By Mr. Lockley: I am referring to the invoices which have been introduced, the checks to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Which invoices? Do you mean all the invoices are in evidence?

1948 By Mr. Lockley: At this point, I have only asked her relating to invoices, Government's Exhibits 23-A and B, 24-A, 25-A, B, C, D, and 26-A and B which are all in evidence.

I also asked her with reference to checks to cash, Government's Exhibits 27 and 28.

By the Court: Say that again.

By Mr. Lockley: The question will also relate to two checks to cash.

By the Court: 27 and 28?

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibits 27 and 28, which are in evidence. If deemed necessary to do so, we can give Miss Feldman a pencil and paper and she can make her addition and subtraction on the stand or we can provide a blackboard. This is merely to expedite the testimony.

By the Court: Have you named all the exhibits that she has used in supplying the summary that she is now desiring to use in testifying?

By Mr. Lockley: In so far as we have gone, and 1949 in so far as the question is now pending, yes, her papers will, of course, include other exhibits which have not been introduced but which will be introduced in the normal course of events.

By the Court: Well, what has she done with reference to these exhibits which you have named, in making these computations? Are they merely mathematical?

By Mr. Lockley: That's all, your Honor. During the time this case was set for trial last April, Miss Feldman was here expecting to testify at that time and she prepared the summaries. They are merely mathematical computations from the invoices and checks and books of the Eatsum partnership or the Eatsum sole proprietorship which are in evidence or which will be in evidence and all of which, incidentally, have been shown to the defense and they are aware of them and have been aware of them for some time.

1950 By the Court: When was this shown to the defendant?

By Mr. Lockley: All of the exhibits which Miss Feldman also had available at the time she prepared her computations.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, let me stress again, sir, that the question of what proof exists as to what happened to this cash after Mr. Lubben got it, is very material. When we asked—

By the Court: Perhaps you should direct your statement, however, to the matter that is now before the Court.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, sir.

By the Court: He says,—or rather Mr. Lockley says that she has used the exhibits that are now in evidence, and to which reference has been made, and she has made certain mathematical computations, addition, subtraction, and what-not, in order to expedite her testimony.

What is your objection to the use of that memoranda?

By Mr. Kirby: It is memoranda by Miss Feldman.

1951 This is a crucial part of the case of the Government.

By the Court: If it isn't right, if the mathematical computations are not right, I suppose that can be demonstrated.

By Mr. Kirby: I am not making myself plain.

By the Court: No.

By Mr. Kirby: The existence of memoranda, whether they exist or not,—

By the Court: They are here in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, but she has now talked about four invoices, and she is running out of contemporaneous memoranda, and they want to substitute April, 1953 memoranda.

By Mr. Lockley: No.

By Mr. Kirby: And that will introduce confusion in this case, to which I object.

By Mr. Lockley: I am very—

By Mr. McConnell: Just a minute.

If your Honor please, I add this further objection: It is perfectly all right, when evidence is in the record, as I understand it, for an accountant to summarize it.

1952 By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: And to testify to a summary, but this summary Mr. Lockley is talking about includes all the evidence, some of which is not yet in.

By the Court: Oh, no, I have limited Mr. Lockley to the use of the exhibits with reference to the specific exhibits which are in evidence.

I did not include the use of this memoranda as to the exhibits which are not in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I understand him to say it is based on all the evidence, some of which is in, and some of which is not in.

By the Court: I didn't understand Mr. Lockley that way.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I have no intention of introducing this evidence. It is merely for the purpose of expediting this trial of the case.

By the Court: Can't you make it clear to me whether or not it is based on any documents which are not in evidence?

1953 By Mr. Lockley: It is based on documents which are not in evidence, which are now—

By the Court: Well—

By Mr. Lockley: May I explain?

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: (Continuing)—which consists of checks to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and invoices of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, which we just haven't reached yet.

By the Court: Well, then we will have to wait until you reach them.

By Mr. Lockley: Can't you use that portion of the exhibit, or of the memoranda which relate to the exhibits we have already in.

By the Court: If you make it clear what the underlying data is, so we will know, and so there will be no misunderstanding—

By Mr. Lockley: The underlying data relates to that portion of the exhibit, or the work papers he now desires to us, are the invoices which are in evidence, and the checks to cash which are in evidence, and checks to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company which are in evidence.

1954 By Mr. McConnell: May I suggest—

By the Court: Can't you identify them by exhibit number?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: May I suggest that counsel lay the foundation for the whole summary, and then she can testify, if she wants to, from it.

By the Court: Well, now, it appears that a portion of this summary is based on exhibits which are not in evidence. I take it Mr. Lockley wants her to use these computations with respect to an explanation of certain exhibits which are in evidence? Is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, your Honor.

1955 By the Court: Well, then the exhibits which he has named are the exhibits which constitute the underlying data?

By Mr. Lockley: They are Government's Exhibits 23-A and B, 24-A, 25-A, B, C, and D, and 26-A and B, invoices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Government's Exhibits 23, 24, 25, and 26, which are checks issued to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, Government's Exhibits 27 and 28 which are checks issued to cash and Government's Exhibit 27-A which is the recap or settlement sheet, all of which are in evidence.

By the Court: Well, then, you better lay a foundation for your exhibit with reference to—

By Mr. Lockley: I beg your pardon?

By the Court: You had better lay foundation with reference to these memoranda, as to the exhibits which you have now mentioned.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no intention of offering it in evidence, your Honor, or even identifying it for evidentiary purposes.

1956 By the Court: I understand that, but nevertheless, you will have to lay a foundation. You will have to ask her what she has done in making these computations with respect to the exhibits you have named.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, Miss Feldman—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it if he is not going to offer it in evidence. I object to his having her testify from a document not in evidence. He can put it in evidence if it is a proper summary and she can testify from it.

By the Court: Do you have any objection to putting it in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection. I had some question in my mind as to whether it was evidentiary. She pointed out it was made last April. It wasn't made contemporaneously with the entries in the book or the receipt of the invoices in payment of the checks.

By the Court: If the defendants want it in evidence, of course they can make the offer.

1957 By Mr. Lockley: They are perfectly welcome to do it and they are perfectly welcome to use it for the purposes of cross examination.

By the Court: Now, will you ask the witness what she has done in making these comput ns so we will know what the summary purports to be?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, have you made a summary or a work sheet?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you explain what you used in preparing that summary or work sheet, will you explain what is on it?

A. I took the ledger sheets for the single ownership. I took the checks in payment of the invoices, the cash checks. I entered all the invoices on the summary, showing both the actual typed amount and the alleged overage and the total of the two.

I then proceeded to show the checks that were issued in payment of the typed amount on the invoices. I also showed what checks were drawn to cash and how they were applied.

1958 Q. Now, will you describe what you mean by how they were applied?

A. I showed which checks issued to Shotwell covered which specific invoices. I also showed which checks to cash covered what particular invoices so that, for the purposes of testifying, if it were possible we would have to do away with my sitting and figuring this.

Q. And you made that last April?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you use anything which has not yet been shown to you in evidence in the preparation of that work paper?

A. No, except for the items past the point which we have gotten.

Q. You mean, there are certain items which relate to the period after Government's Exhibit No. 26-B which have not yet been shown to you, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. But up to that point, the only documents which you have used are already in evidence?

A. That is right.

1959 By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. McConnell: I still object to it. Now she has got just part of the picture. You just can't cut it up that way in little pieces. I understand it is tied in backwards and forwards and whether or not the books balance out—

By the Court: I see no objection. They are going forward with an explanation of the exhibits which are not in evidence, in so far as they may be reflected in her computations.

By Mr. Kirby: Judge, may I ask just one little question?

By the Court: You may.

Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. At what point chronologically do you stop with the contemporaneous memoranda and go to the new ones? So far, I don't come down later than January, 1945, with any recap sheet that was made at the time.

By Mr. Kirby: Am I right, Mr. Lockley? So far
1960 you have only shown us a recap sheet that was made back there for January, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley: That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: So we have the first month of the indictment period and we are leaving the papers she summarized then and going on there to the ones she made while getting ready for trial.

By Mr. Lockley: I am afraid you don't understand, Mr. Kirby. We are not using her recent papers as evidence of the payment of any amounts or drawing the checks to cash.

1961 By Mr. Kirby: What I mean is we haven't been able to come further down on the books that were prepared in the old days than the first few days of the year. Now, we have to go to the new ones, is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: At this point it is difficult for her to summarize this number of checks and invoices and show how they tied in together without some help by way of that previously prepared work sheet.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I just wanted to understand that we leave the papers that were formerly prepared right in the first month of the indictment period.

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: Excuse me just a moment, your Honor.

I might add that the purpose of putting in the evidence in chunks, so to speak, is that there were periods when a check to cash was issued, which brought the account into balance, or Mr. Lubben said he was even Stephen at regular intervals, at times. What I have 1962 done up to now is to show there were certain invoices received, there were checks in payment of those invoices, and now we come to a point where a check was issued to cash in payment of the overages.

By use of the work sheets, Miss Feldman can more readily testify as to which invoices those checks to cash have any relation.

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. Will you get out your work sheets, Miss Feldman.

Now, are you able to tell us with respect to Government's Exhibit No. 27, a check for $10,849.00 what that check was in payment for, as reflected on the books of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. That was in payment of the overages entered on the—

By Mr. McConnell: I object to her stating that. If she wants to say that the books indicate that, all right.

1963 By Mr. Lockley: That is the question, Mr. McConnell.

By the Court: I understand from her testimony that the books indicate that this check for $10,849.00 was in payment of certain overages.

By Mr. Lockley: As reflected on the books.

By the Court: Yes, as reflected on the books.

By Mr. Lockley: She is not testifying that those payments were made. She is merely testifying that that is what is shown on the books.

By the Court: Very good.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. Will you tell us which invoices?

A. I believe that I already have on this one particular—

Q. Let us go over it again.

A. All right. Check No. 2367, which is Government's Exhibit 27, for $10,849.00 covers the following invoices: In January of 1945, No. C-65050.

Q. Exhibit 23-A. That is Exhibit 23-A.

1964 By the Court: Let us have that again.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Government's Exhibit 23-A.

A. Invoice No. 61544.

Q. 24-A.

By the Court: Twenty—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 24-A.

A. 61904.

Q. 25-B.

A. And 59931.

Q. 25-A.

All right. Now with respect to the Exhibit 28, a check to cash for $6,183.00, what do the books of the Eatsum partnership reflect that that was in payment of,—Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. Check No. 2593, Exhibit No. 28, covered the payment of overages on invoices Nos. 63830—

Q. That is 25-C.

A. 64176—

Q. 25-D.

A. 66013—

Q. 26-A.

1965 A. 68259.

Q. That is 26-B.

Now, are you able to state whether the account was in balance at that time, the account of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. It was not in balance because there was a February 8th invoice following that.

Q. Which had not yet been paid?

A. That is right.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 29-A and also Government's Exhibit No. 29-B, purporting to be invoices of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and I ask you if you have seen those before.

By the Court: Have they been received?

1966 By Mr. Lockley: No, sir. None of the invoices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company except—

By the Court: That is Exhibit 29-A and B?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Have you seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Are those records received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. They are.

Q. Are they kept as a part of the regular books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 29 and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it was prepared?

A. Accounts payable clerk.

Q. Was that a record in the ordinary course of 1967 business?

A. It is.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge and belief?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the penciled notations on Government's Exhibits 29-A and 29-B, have you seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know by whom they were made?

A. Accounts payable clerk.

Q. Were they made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I now offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 29, 29-A and 29-B.

By Mr. McConnell: Your Honor, I would like to ask a question.

1968 By the Court: All right.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Miss Feldman, both of these invoices which are Government's Exhibits 29-A and 29-B bearing the mark "Paid on February 27, 1945", may I ask you whether or not that "Paid" refers to the check made to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company under date February 27, 1945?

A. It does.

Q. And that check which is Government's Exhibit 29 is only for the face amount of the printed invoice and does not include the amount shown as penciled, of alleged overages?

A. That is correct. It is just the face of the invoice.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the documents in so far as they contain penciled statements of alleged overages. It is purely self-serving.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the 1969 Court and marked Government's Exhibits 29, 29-A and 29-B.)

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits for identification Nos. 30-A, 30-B, 30-C and 30-D, purporting to be invoices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Were they records received in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I direct your attention to the penciled notations on the bottom. Do you know by whom they were prepared?

A. The computation, you mean?

Q. The penciled notations.

A. There was a notation, a notation on 30-A. It is a notation of the receiving record but I don't know—
1970 Q. Referring to the extensions of the alleged overages.

A. Oh, the extension of the alleged overages are on the accounts payable.

Q. Were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes.

Q. Were they part of the books and records of the business?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 30 and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that prepared by you or under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it part of the books and records of the company?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's 1971 Exhibits 30 and 30-A, B, C, and D.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask a question.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Miss Feldman, again I ask you whether or not the reference to "Paid" on these invoices refers to the check in the amount of $4,884.97, Government's Exhibit 30, and refers only to the amount of typed material?

A. That is correct.

Q. And not the handwritten material on the invoices?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the documents. They are self-serving in so far as the contents of the handwritten memoranda.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 30, 30-A, 30-B, 30-C and 30-D.)

1972 Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, calling your attention to Exhibit 29-A, can you tell me if that is recorded in the purchase book of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. It is entered in the purchase book, February, 1945, on page 55, line 32, in the amount of $2,369.63.

Q. And is that the amount of the invoice price or the invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. That is the invoice price plus the alleged overage.

Q. And is it also recorded in the accounts payable record, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,369.63.

Q. I show you Exhibit 29-B. Is it recorded in the purchase book?

A. It is.

By the Court: Does the account payable entry include the alleged overage, the full amount of the invoice and the alleged overage?

1973 By the Witness: Yes. I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is 29-B recorded in the purchase book?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $2,556.83.

Q. And is that the amount of the invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, I show you Exhibit 29, check for $2,146.55, and ask you if that has any relation to Exhibits 29-A and 29-B?

A. It has.

Q. What is that relationship?

A. That is the check to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in payment of the typed amounts on both invoices.

Q. And is that recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. It appears as net check for $2,146.55, discount of $43.91, a debit to accounts payable of $2,190.46.

Q. And does that include any overages?

1974 A. That does not.

Q. That is just the invoice?

A. Correct.

Q. Is that also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the sole proprietorship, Exhibit No. 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,190.46.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 29-A is an invoice in the amount of $1,034.63—

By Mr. O'Brien: Have you offered those?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Have they been received?

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibits 29, 29-A and B, I believe so.

By Mr. O'Brien: O. K.

By Mr. Lockley: —ten cent alleged overage on 13,350 pounds, or $1,335.00, for a total amount of $2,369.63 on Exhibit 29-A.

1975 29-B is an invoice for $1,155.83, plus a ten-cent alleged overage on 14,010 pounds, or $1,401, for a total of $2,565.83.

Exhibit 29 is a check for $2,146.55, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, endorsed by them, with the description 2845, Invoice 68817, which is Exhibit 29-A, for $1,034.63; and February 16, 1945, Invoice No. 70524, which is Exhibit 29-B, for $1,155.83, less cash two per-cent discount of $43.91, or a total of $2,146.55.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, I ask you to look at Exhibit 30-A, in evidence, and tell me if that is recorded on the purchase book of the Eatsum Food—

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,655.38.

Q. And is that the amount of the invoice, or the invoice plus the alleged overage?

A. Invoice plus the alleged overage.

Q. Is it likewise recorded in the accounts payable book, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

1976 A. $2,655.38.

Q. Is that again the amount of the invoice plus the overage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I also show you Exhibit 30-B, and ask if that is recorded in the purchase book?

A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $2,409.
Q. And is that the amount of the invoice, or the invoice plus the overage?
A. Invoice plus the overage.
Q. And is that recorded in the accounts payable book, Exhibit 6-A?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $2,409.
Q. Is that the amount of the invoice, or the invoice plus the overage?
A. Invoice plus the overage.
Q. I show you Exhibit 30-C and ask if that is recorded in the purchase book?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
1977 A. $3,285.00.
Q. Is that the invoice, or the invoice plus the overage?
A. Invoice plus the overage.
Q. Is that recorded in the accounts payable book?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $3,285.00.
Q. Is that the total amount, Invoice plus the overage?
A. It is.
Q. I show you Exhibit 30-D, and ask if that is recorded in the purchase book?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $2,677.28.
Q. Is that the amount of the invoice plus the overage?
A. It is.
Q. And is it recorded in the accounts payable book?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $2,677.28.
Q. I show you Exhibit No. 30, and ask if that 1978 has any relationship to Exhibits 30-A, B, C, and D?
A. It has.

Q. And what is that relationship?

A. The check is in payment of the typed amounts of the four invoices.

Q. And is that recorded on the cash disbursement book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. Net check is $4,884.97, the discount is $99.69, the debit to the accounts payable is $4,984.66.

Q. And that check is in payment of the invoice amounts of these exhibits 30-A, B, C, and D?

A. That is correct.

Q. Less two percent discount?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 30-A is an invoice for $1,238—

By the Court: Which one now?

By Mr. Lockley: 30-A.

—an invoice for $1,238.00 plus overage of ten cents a pound, $1,455.00, a total of $2,655.38.

1979 30-B is an invoice, 13,200 pounds, at eight and one-quarter cents, for $1,089.00, plus an alleged ten cent overage, totaling $1,320.00, for a total price of $2,409.00.

Exhibit 30-C is an invoice, eight and one-quarter cents for $1,485.00, plus a ten cent alleged overage of $1,800.00, for a total of $3,285.00.

1980 Exhibit No. 30-D is an invoice at 8¼ cents a pound, $1,210.28—

By the Court: Again, please?

By Mr. Lockley: $1,210.28, plus a ten-cent overage per pound, $1,467.00, a total of $2,677.28.

And check No. 3057, which is Exhibit 30, issued to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company by Eatsum Food Products and endorsed by Shotwell, in the amount of $4,884.97, carries the explanation that it is for invoices 71295, which is Exhibit 30-D; 70866, which is Exhibit 30-B; 70944, which is Exhibit 30-C; and 70683, which is Exhibit 30-A—total of $4,984.66, less two per cent of $99.69, a total amount of $4,884.97.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits for identification 31-A, 31-B, 31-C, 31-D and 31-E, and ask if you have seen those before.

A. I have.

Q. And what do they purport to be?

A. They are invoices from Shotwell Manufactur-
1981 ing Company.

Q. Are they records received by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. They are.

Q. And were they a part of the books and records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the handwriting, was that made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a part of the books and records of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Exhibit 31 for identification and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. And what does that purport to be?

A. That is the check in payment of the invoice
1982 amounts on these five invoices.

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 31 and 31-A, B, C, D and E in evidence.

1983 Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Miss Feldman, these invoices, which are Government's Exhibits 31-A through D, are invoices which are marked paid, and the check appears to be in the amount of $8,086.85. Is that $8,086.85 the printed amount of those invoices?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the "paid" refers to the payment not of the penciled amounts but of the printed amounts on the invoices, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencil memoranda on the invoices.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 31, 31-A, 31-B, 31-C, 31-D and 31-E.)

By the Court: Perhaps you could make that statement for the record when that is a fact, Mr. Lockley. If the check is merely in payment of the face amount 1984 of the invoice, you could make that statement for the record, and that will avoid any further questions in that regard, and we might expedite matters.

By Mr. Kirby: I think, Mr. Lockley, it is true that your checks, Exhibits 25, 26, 29, 30 and 31, were all simply payments of the invoices, isn't that true, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct.

By the Court: I think Mr. McConnell covered that by his examination.

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Miss Feldman, is Exhibit 31-A recorded in the purchase book?

A. It is.

Q. Of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes.

By the Court: Can't you cover them at one time, A, B, C, D and E, if you want to ask if they are recorded in certain books.

1985 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are they recorded in the purchase books, 31-A, B, C, D, and E?

A. They are.

Q. And in what amounts?

Perhaps we could simplify it by asking: Are they recorded only in the amount of the invoice price?

A. No, they are recorded in the amount of the invoice price plus the overage.

Q. All right.

A. They are all recorded in the month of March.

Q. And all in the invoice price plus the overage?

A. That's correct.

Q. And are they likewise recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. They are.

Q. And in what amount?

A. The invoice price plus the overage.

Q. Now, I show you check, Exhibit No. 31, for $8,086.85, and ask you if that has any relationship to Exhibits 31-A, B, C, D, and E?

A. It has.

Q. And what is that relationship?

A. The check is in payment of the invoices from 1986 Shotwell.

Q. And where the "Paid" stamp appears on the invoice, that relates only to the payment of the invoice price?

A. Of the typewritten amount, that is right.

Q. And is the check, Exhibit No. 31, entered in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And is it likewise entered in the accounts payable book?

A. Yes.

Q. What does the entry in the accounts payable book indicate?

A. That on March 20th, the check was issued to Shotwell Company in the gross amount of $8,251.89.

Q. And was there at that time a balance due The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, according to your books?

A. Yes, there was.

Q. Was that for invoice amounts or premium amounts?

A. Let's see. For premiums.

Q. Insofar as the invoice amounts were concerned, were you at that time in balance and paid up; are 1987 you able to tell?

A. I can't tell from the ledger sheet.

Q. Well, strike the question then.

A. All right.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 31-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum for $1,099.73—

By Mr. McConnell: You haven't offered these yet.

By the Court: Yes, he has offered them, and they have been received.

By Mr. Lockley: —$1,099.73, plus a ten cent overage on 14,190 pounds, or $1,419, for a total of $2,518.73.

1988 Exhibit 31-B is for 14,370 pounds at seven and three-quarter cents, or $1,113.68, plus a ten cent overage of $1,437, for a total of $2,550.68.

Exhibit 31-C is for 44,670 pounds at eight and one-quarter, $3,685.28, plus a ten cent overage of $4,467.—

By the Court: Again.

By Mr. Lockley: $4,467, a total of $8,152.28.

Exhibit 31-D, an invoice at seven and three-quarter cents for $1,120.65, plus ten cents a pound overage on 14,460 pounds, or $1,446.00, for a total of $2,566.65.

Exhibit 31-E, is an invoice to Shotwell at eight and one-quarter cents, for $1,232.55, plus a ten cent overage on 14,940 pounds, for $1,494, a total of $2,726.55.

By the Court: We will suspend now.

We will suspend, members of the jury, until two o'clock this afternoon.

By the Marshal: Will the audience kindly remain standing until the jury files out?

1989 This Honorable Court will now recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above entitled cause, until two o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Thursday, September 24, 1953.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Thursday, September 24, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 31 is a check to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $8,086.85, endorsed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, 1991 and bearing the notation, or description, that it is for invoices C71541, in the amount of $1,099.73—

By the Court: Well, you have covered that, haven't you?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, that is the exhibit 31-A—

By the Court: Well, doesn't it appear that 31 is in payment of the face amount of Exhibits 31-A through E?

By Mr. Lockley: That's correct. It is in payment of the face amounts of 31-A, B, C, D, and E. And that information is contained on the face of the check itself.

By the Court: Very well.

BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibit for identification 32-A and ask if you have ever seen that be-1992 fore?

A. I have.

Q. And is that a record received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. What does that purport to be?

A. It is an invoice from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for 14,370 pounds of gum drops.

Q. Are the penciled notations made in the ordinary course of business?

A. They are.

Q. Were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 32, purporting to be an Eatsum Food Company check and ask if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

1993 Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 32 and 32-A.

By Mr. McConnell: Are you going to show that the "Paid" mark, that it was paid for, and the pencil mark, "Paid" were put on after they got them?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does the "Paid" mark on the invoice, 32-A, relate only to the invoice price?

A. That's correct.

Q. And the penciled memorandum was prepared—or placed on the invoice after it was received by the Eatsum Food Products Company, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencil memoranda for the reasons I have stated.

1994 By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 32 and 32-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, with respect to Exhibit 32-A, will you tell me if that is a record that is recorded in the purchase book?

A. It is.

Q. Of the Eatsum Food Products Company. And is it recorded in the amount of the invoice price, or the invoice plus the overage?

A. It is recorded in the amount of the invoice price plus the overage.

Q. And is it recorded also on the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,550.68.

Q. Is that the invoice plus the overage?

A. That is.

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 32, which is a check in the amount of $1,091.00. Is that recorded on the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

1995 Q. And in what manner?

A. It is shown on the cash disbursements book of April, 1945, on page 77, line 33. The net amount was $1,091.41, the discount was $22.27, and the debit to accounts payable was $1,113.68.

Q. And was that figure posted to the accounts payable book, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It was.

Q. What does that indicate?

A. That indicates that the amount typed on the invoice was paid to Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 32-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for 14,370 pounds of gum drops at seven and three-quarter cents, for an invoice price of $1,113.68, plus a ten cent overage per pound of $1,437.00, for a total amount of $2,550.68.

1996 The check, Exhibit 32, is in the amount of $1,091.41, showing—

By the Court: One thousand—

By Mr. Lockley: $1,091.41, showing on its face that it was in payment of invoice 75029, which is Exhibit 32-A.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit 33-A and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Were the pencil notations made thereon after it was received, the pencil notations?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. And does the "paid" stamp on the invoice indicate the payment of the invoice price?

A. That is so.

Q. I show you Exhibit 33 and ask if you have seen that before.

1997 A. I have.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge, at the time it was made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the business of the Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 33 and 33-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencil memorandum for the same reason.

By the Court: They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 33 and 33-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to Exhibit No. 33-A, is that recorded on the purchase book of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

1998 A. It is.

Q. And in what amount.

A. The amount of $2,641.20.

Q. Is that the amount of the invoice plus the overage?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And is it likewise recorded on the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. $2,641.20.

Q. That is again in the amount of the invoice plus the overage?

A. That is correct.

Q. I show you Exhibit 33, which is a check for $1,130.14, and ask you if that is recorded on the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And is it also recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. And what does the record in the accounts payable book reflect?

A. Payment of $1,153.20.

1999 Q. To whom?

A. To The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 33-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for 14,880 pounds at 7¾ cents, for $1,153.20, plus a ten-cent overage, amounting to $1,488.00, for a total of $2,641.20.

Exhibit 33 is a check of Eatsum Food Products to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $1,130.14, showing on its face that it was paid—or that it was used in payment of Exhibit 33-A, less two per cent discount.

By Mr. McConnell: You haven't indicated that it wasn't in payment of the pencilled alleged overage.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe Miss Feldman so testified, but—

2000 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, was that in payment of the invoice price, or the invoice plus the overages?

A. That was in payment of the invoice price.

Q. I show you Exhibits for Identification 34-A, 34-B, and 34-C, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Are they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. They are.

Q. Kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. That is so.

Q. Were the penciled notations placed thereon after they were received?

A. They were.

Q. Were they placed under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were they correct at the time they were prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the "Paid" stamp thereon indicate only the payment of the invoice price?

A. That's correct.

2001 Q. I show you Exhibit for Identification No. 34, purporting to be a check and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. And is that a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. Kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 34, 34-A, 34-B, and 34-C.

2002 By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memoranda on these documents for the same reason I have already given, if your Honor please.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 34, 34-A, 34-B and 34-C.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, will you look at the purchase book and tell me if Exhibit 34-A, and Exhibit 34-B and 34-C are recorded therein?

A. They are.

Q. In what amount are they? Let me put it this way:

Are they in the amounts of the invoices or the invoice plus the overage?

A. They are entered in the amount of the invoice plus the overage.

Q. And are they posted to the accounts payable ledger sheet, Exhibit 6-A?

A. They are.

Q. Is that also in the amount of the invoice plus
2003 the overages?

A. That is so.

Q. Now, with respect to the penciled notations on those invoices, Government's Exhibit 34, that is, A, B and C, when were those penciled notations placed thereon?

A. After we received the invoices.

Q. How soon afterwards?

A. As soon as they were processed through the accounts payable clerk.

Q. How long would that be in terms of hours or days?

A. It may have been a day, it might have been an hour, depending on when they arrived and how busy we were in the office.

Q. With respect to all the other invoices you have been shown this morning, 23-A, B, 24-A, 25-A, B, C, D, 26-A, B, 29-A, B, 31-A, B, C, D, E, and 32-A and 33-A, would the answer be the same?

A. Yes, it would.

2004 Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit No. 34.

By Mr. McConnell: May I ask a question on that?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Did you make those entries yourself?

A. No. They were made under my supervision.

Q. Did you see the entries made?

A. At the time they were actually written?

Q. Yes.

A. No. The girls were following instructions.

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Did you see the invoices after the entries were made?

A. I would have. I signed some of the checks for these invoices.

Q. You know of your own knowledge that those entries were placed at or about the time the invoices were received, do you?

A. That is right.

Q. Now with respect to Government's Exhibit No. 2005 34, is that reflected on the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. What was that exhibit in payment of?

A. The exhibit is in payment of Exhibits No. 34-A, B and C.

Q. The invoice price or the invoice plus the premium?

A. The invoice price.

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. What does the record in the accounts payable book reflect?

A. It reflects the payment to Shotwell of the amounts typed on the bills.

Q. That is, just the invoice price?

A. That is correct.

Q. Government's Exhibit 34-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for gum drops, 14,370 pounds at 7¾ cents for $1,113.68 plus a ten cent a pound overage or $1,437.00, for a total of $2,550.68.

Government's Exhibit 34-B is a Shotwell invoice 2006 for spice buttons at 8¼ cents for a total of $1,225.13 and a ten-cent overage for a total on the overage of $1,485.00, and a total of $2,710.13, invoice plus overage.

Government's Exhibit 34-C is an invoice for spice buttons at 8¼ cents a pound, 13,830 pounds for $1,140.98 and 30 pounds at 8¼ for $2.48, making a total invoice price of $1,143.46 plus a ten-cent overage, amounting to $1,386.00, for a total invoice plus overage of $2,529.46.

2007 By the Court: What is the total invoice price?

By Mr. Lockley: $1,143.46.

By the Court: And the overage is $1,286?

By Mr. Lockley: $386.00.

Government's Exhibit No. 34 is an Eatsum check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company endorsed by Shotwell in the amount of $3,412.62, bearing the invoice numbers of Exhibits 34-A, B, and C, and showing on its face that it was in payment of those invoices, less two percent discount.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits for Identification 35-A, 35-B, 35-C, 35-D, 35-E, 35-F, 35-G, and 35-H, and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Were those records received in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Were they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That is correct.

2008 Q. With respect to the writing appearing thereon, was that made on or about the time the invoices were received?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir, they were.

Q. With respect to the "Paid" stamp thereon, does that relate to the invoice price, or the invoice plus the overage?

A. The invoice price.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification 35, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and di-

2009 rection?

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was made?

A. It was.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 35-A, 35-B, 35-C, 35-D, 35-E, 35-F, 35-G, 35-H, and 35, in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the documents which are invoice items—

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

By Mr. McConnell: —for the reasons I have given.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 35, 35-A, 35-B, 35-C, 35-D, 35-E, 35-F, 35-G, and 35-H.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, do you know when the penciled memoranda contained on Exhibits 35-A to 35-H, inclusive, were placed thereon?

A. Shortly after they arrived at the office.

Q. Would that be a matter of hours or days?

A. Several hours, several days.

2010 Q. Now, will you examine Government's Exhibit No. 5, the purchase book, and tell me if Government's Exhibits 35-A, to 35-H, inclusive, are recorded therein?

By the Court: Is there a summary sheet to indicate whether or not they were recorded in the purchase book or the payables book?

By the Witness: Yes, it would.

By the Court: Well, let her use that to determine that matter, if she has that information from a prior examination of the books, and we can get along with that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, Miss Feldman.

A. These were all entered in the purchase book.

Q. And in what amount?

A. In the amount of the original invoice, plus the penciled notations for overage.

Q. Were they also recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. They were.

Q. In what amount?

2011 A. The original invoice price plus the overage amount.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 35, which is a check for $14,930.24, and ask if that is recorded in the accounts,—or rather, in the cash disbursements book, Exhibit No. 7?

A. It is.

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. Now what relationship if any, if you know, does Government's Exhibit 35 bear to Government's Exhibits 35-A to 35-H?

A. It represents the payment made to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the invoice price shown on the invoice.

2012 By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 35-A is a Shotwell invoice for citrus drops at 13 cents, invoice price $1,006.20 and a 10 cent overage of $774.00 for a total of $1,780.20.

35-B is an invoice for chocolate—for box chocolate Cardinals at 37⅓ cents, $2,016.00 plus an overage of 18¾ cents for a total of $1,012.50—a total of $3,028.50, both overage and invoice.

35-C is an invoice for 197 cases of Krafton chocolates at 37⅓ cents, total invoice price of $1,765.12 and an 18¾ cents overage—$886.50. Also, 450 cases of citrus drops at 13 cents for an invoice price of $1,755.00, and a 10 cent overage, $1,350.00.

By the Court: Well, I have lost you on that.

By Mr. Lockley: You lost me?

By the Court: The face of the invoice indicates a charge of $1,755.00?

By Mr. Lockley: That is 65, your Honor.

By the Court: How much?

2013 By Mr. Lockley: 65.

By the Court: Now, give me the total of the invoice.

By Mr. Lockley: There were two items on that invoice. One was Krafton chocolates and the other was citrus drops.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: The total invoice for the two is $3,520.00—

By the Court: Again?

By Mr. Lockley: The total invoice for the two is $3,520.12 plus the overages for a total of $5,756.62.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: 35-D is an invoice again for two items, 76 cases of box chocolate Cardinals at 37⅓ cents, $680.96 invoice, and 18¾ cents overage or $342.00.

There were 438 cases of citrus drops at 13 cents, for a total of $1,708.20, plus 10 cents overage of $1,314.00.

The total invoice price is $2,389.16 and the total in-2014 voice plus overage is $4,045.16.

By the Court: Four thousand—

By Mr. Lockley: $4,045.16.

By the Court: Give me the overage.

By Mr. Lockley: On what?

By the Court: Give me the overage.

By Mr. Lockley: The overage is $342.00 plus $1,314.00—$1,656.00.

By the Court: How much?

By Mr. Lockley: $1,656.00.

35-E is an invoice for spice buttons at 8¼ cents. The invoice price is $1,336.50 and a 10 cent overage—$1,620.00. The total is $2,956.50.

2015 Exhibit 35-F is Cardinal chocolates at 37½ cents, total invoice, $2,688.00, with an overage of eighteen and three-quarter cents—$1,350.00. Total invoice plus overage, $4,038.00.

Exhibit 35-G is an invoice for gum drops at seven and three-quarter cents, for a total invoice price of $1,043.93—a ten cent overage, $1,347.00. The total invoice plus overage is $2,390.93.

Exhibit 35-H is spice buttons at eight and one-quarter cents, $1,235.03 invoice price, a ten cent overage amounting to $1,497.00, and a total of $2,732.03.

Exhibit 35 is a check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company from Eatsum Food Products endorsed by Shotwell, in the amount of $14.930.24, which is in payment of these invoices 35-A to H, inclusive, less two percent discount.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification 36-A, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record received in the ordinary course
2016 of business?

A. It is.

Q. Was it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It was.

Q. Were the penciled memoranda made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. When were they made?

A. After the receipt of the invoice at our office.

Q. How soon thereafter?

A. Within a day or two.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were prepared?

A. They were.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 36 for identification, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. I do.

Q. Whose is it?

A. Mine.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

2017 A. It was.

Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 36 and 36-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memoranda on 36-A, for the reason I have already given.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 36 and 36-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, can you state whether Government's Exhibit 36-A is recorded in the purchases book of Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. The month of April.

Q. In what amount?

2018 A. Oh, in what amount? I am sorry.

Q. Can you tell that from your work papers?

A. Yes, right here—$16,825.00.

By the Court: I think we are primarily interested in whether or not it was the invoice plus the overage.

By the Witness: It is entered in the amount of the invoice plus the overage.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what amount?
A. $16,825.00.
Q. Is that the invoice plus the overage?
A. It is.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 36, the check for $10,976.00, and ask if that is recorded in the accounts payable book?
A. It is.
Q. To what account?
A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. Does that have any relationship to Exhibit 36-A?
A. It does.
2019 Q. What is that relationship?
A. It represents the payment for the typed amounts on the invoice.
Q. Is it also recorded on the accounts payable book, that is, Government's Exhibit 36?
A. It is.
2020 Q. What does that indicate?
A. It indicates that the payment was made to Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 36-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for Cardinal chocolates at 37⅓ cents, total invoice price of $11,200.00, and 18¾ cents overcharge, amounting to $5,625.00, for a total invoice plus overage of $16,825.00.

Exhibit 36 is a check of Eatsum Food Products Company to Shotwell Manufacturing Company endorsed by Shotwell in the amount of $10,976.00.

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 37-A and ask if you have seen that before.
A. I have.
Q. Is that a record received in the ordinary course of business?
A. It was.
Q. Was it part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?
2021 A. Yes, sir.
Q. With respect to the penciled notations thereon, were they made under your supervision and direction?
A. They were.
Q. At what time were they made?
A. Several days after the arrival of the invoice.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. They were.

Q. Were they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. They were.

Q. With respect to the paid stamp on the invoice, what does that indicate?

A. It indicates that the typed amount of the invoice was paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. What is just the invoice amount?

A. Just the invoice amount.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 37 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Was that prepared under your supervision and direction?

2022 A. It was.

Q. Do you know the handwriting?

A. The accounts payable clerk.

Q. Was that a true and correct record at the time it was prepared?

A. It was.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 37 and 37-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencilled memoranda on Exhibit 37-A for the reasons I have given.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 37 and 37-A.)

By Mr. McConnell: Did you ask what that paid stamp on this invoice indicated?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: I didn't hear you.

By Mr. Lockley:

2023 Q. I will ask you again, Miss Feldman, what does the paid stamp on this invoice indicate?

By the Court: She has gone into it.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. McConnell asked some question about it.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you look at the purchase book and let me know if that invoice is recorded therein?

A. It is.

Q. Is it in the amount of the invoice only or the invoice plus the overage?

A. The invoice plus the overage.

Q. Is it likewise recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

Q. Government's Exhibit 6-A?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the invoice plus the overage?

A. That is correct.

Q. With respect to Government's Exhibit 37, a check for $2,672.00, is that recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

2024 Q. And is it likewise recorded in the accounts payable book?

A. It is.

Q. To what account is it recorded?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company

Q. What does that indicate?

A. That the invoice price was paid by check to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

2025 By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 37-A, is an invoice for two items, gum drops at seven and three-quarter cents, for an invoice price of $1,232.25, and Cardinal chocolates for thirty-seven and a third cents, to al invoice of $1,496.32. The total invoice price for both items, $2,728.57.

The overage on gum drops, at ten cents, is $1,590.

By the Court: One thousand five hundred—

By Mr. Lockley: Ninety.

The overage on Cardinal chocolates, at eighteen and three-quarter cents, appears to be, $751.50. The total amount of the invoice plus premiums, is $5,070.70.

And the check, Exhibit 37, for $2,672.00, shows that it was paid for Invoice No. 80602, which is Exhibit 37-A, less two percent discount.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits for identification 38-A and 38-B, and ask you if you have seen those before?

2026 A. I have.

Q. And what do they purport to be?

A. They are invoices received from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And were they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. They were.

Q. Were they kept under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. With respect to the penciled notations thereon, were they maintained under your supervision and direction?

A. That's correct.

Q. Were they part of the books and records of the sole proprietorship?

A. They were.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were prepared?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when they were placed on the invoice?

A. A short time after the receipt of the invoice.

Q. A matter of days or hours?

2027 A. Hours or days.

Q. With respect to the "Paid" stamp on the invoice, what does that indicate?

A. That indicates that the amount typed on the invoice was paid by check to Shotwell.

2028 Q. I show you Exhibit for identification No. 38 and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. The accounts payable clerk.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Was it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 38, 38-A and 38-B in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencil memoranda on 38-A and B for the reasons I have given.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 38, 38-A and 38-B.)

2029 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, are you able to tell us whether Exhibits 38-A and 38-B are recorded in the purchase book.

A. They are.

Q. And in the amount of the invoice or the invoice plus overage?

A. The invoice plus overage.

Q. Are they also recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. They are.

Q. And in what amount?

A. The invoice plus overage amount.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit, in evidence, No. 38 and ask if that is recorded in the cash disbursements book.

A. It is.

Q. And is it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

Q. To what account?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And what relationship if any is there between Exhibit 38 and Exhibits 38-A and B?

2030 A. Exhibit 38 represents the payment of the amounts typed on the invoice to Shotwell Company.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 38-A is for Cardinal chocolates, at 37-1/3 cents, $11,200.00, invoice, plus 18-3/4 cents overage, amounting to $5,625.00, a total of $16,825.00.

Exhibit 38-B is two items, gum drops at 7-5/4 cents, for an invoice price of $955.58, and Cardinal chocolates at 37-1/3 cents for an invoice price of $1,845.76, a total invoice price of $2,801.34.

There is an overage on the gum drops of ten cents, amounting to $1,233.00.

By the Court: One thousand—

By Mr. Lockley: —two hundred thirty-three dollars; and of 18-3/4 cents on the chocolates, amounting to $927.00, the total invoice, plus premiums, $4,961.34.

By the Court: I didn't get that.

By Mr. Lockley: For $4,961.00.

By the Court: What are the two overage figures, please?

By Mr. Lockley: $1,233.00—

2031 By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: —and $927.00. $2,160.00.

Exhibit No. 38 is a check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, endorsed by them, in the amount of $13,721.31, showing on its face that it was in payment of invoices 80635 and 80639, which are Exhibits 38-A and 38-B, respectively, less two per cent discount.

2032 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit for identification No. 39-A and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. With respect to the penciled notations, were they placed under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. And do you know when they were placed thereon?

A. Within hours or days after the receipt of the invoice.

Q. Were they a part of the books and records of the company?

A. They were.

Q. Are they true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Exhibit for identification No. 39 and ask you if you have seen that before?

2033 A. I have.

Q. And is that a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.
Q. Was it made in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it prepared under your supervision and direction?
A. It was.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 39 and 39-A in evidence.
By Mr. McConnell: The same objection to the penciled memo on 39-A.
By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 39 and 39-A)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit 40, in evidence, a check to cash in the amount
2034 of $18,000.00—
By the Court: On 39-A and 39, will you conclude your testimony regarding that?
By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor.
By the Court: Otherwise I lose the trend of it.
By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I am trying to skip a step.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Will you look at Exhibit 39-A and tell me if that is recorded in the purchase book, Exhibit No. 5?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $3,202.08.
Q. And is that the invoice plus the overage?
A. It is.
Q. And is it so recorded in the accounts payable ledger?
A. It is.
Q. As owing to whom?
A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
Q. That is in the amount of the invoice plus the overage?

A. That's correct.

2035 Q. I show you Exhibit 39 and ask if the check is recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And as paid to whom?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

Q. And what does that record reflect?

A. The record reflects the payment of $1,546.08 to Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the amount typed on the invoice.

Q. And is there any relationship between that invoice and that check?

A. Yes, the check is in payment of the typed amount on this invoice.

2036 By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 39-A, is an invoice of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company to Eatsum Food Products Company for two items, gum drops at seven and three-quarter cents, for the invoice amount of $1,116; Cardinal chocolates at 37-1/3 cents, for the invoice amount of $430.08; the total invoice amount is $1,546.08.

A ten cent overage on Cardinal chocolates, in the amount of $1,440.00, and an eighteen and three-quarter overage—I am sorry, I think I said Cardinal chocolates. That was on gum drops. Eighteen and three-quarter cents on Cardinal chocolates, amounts to $216.00, for a total overage of $1,656.00, and a total overage plus invoice of $3,202.08.

Exhibit No. 39 is a check of Eatsum to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, endorsed by them, in the amount of $1,515.16, showing on its face that it paid Invoice No. 80887, which is Exhibit 39-A, less two percent discount.

2037 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibits 40, 40-B, and 40-D, all of which are in evidence, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Are those recorded on the cash disbursements book of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. They are.

Q. And where?

A. Exhibit 40 is on page 64 of the cash disbursements book of March, 1945.

Q. How does that entry read?

A. Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $18,000.00.

By the Court: Well, now, let's see that I follow you. You are reading now from what book?

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 5—I am sorry, Exhibit No. 7.

By the Court: State your answer again.

By the Witness: The entry reads: Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $18,000.00.

By the Court: Under what date?

2038 By the Witness: March 6th.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 1945?

A. That's right.

Q. And that check is made to cash, is it not?

A. That is so.

Q. When was the entry in the cash disbursements book placed therein?

A. When ever the check book was entered in there.

Q. On the date indicated in the book, is that correct?

A. Either the same day, or the day following.

By Mr. McConnell: Isn't there a date in the book?

By the Witness: Yes, there is, March 6.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That was the $18,000 one?

A. That was the $18,000 one.

Q. I now show you Exhibit 40-D, a check for $22,124.13, and ask if that is entered in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And what is the nature of the entry?

A. It reads: Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Com-

2039 pany, on May 2nd, $22,124.13.

Q. And what is the date of that check?

A. May 3rd.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 40-B, a check for $15,[illegible].00 to cash, and ask if that is entered in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. And what is the nature of the entry?

A. On March 28th, cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $15,000.

Q. I now show you Exhibit 40-A, and ask if you have seen that before? It is in evidence.

A. I have.

Q. And what is it?

A. It is a cash—

By the Court: What number is that?

By Mr. Lockley: 40-A.

By the Court: I thought we had 40-A, that check of $18,000.

By Mr. Lockley: Let's see here. No, sir; that was 40.

By the Court: Oh! I am sorry. 40-A is a memorandum of some kind?

By Mr. Lockley: A cash authorization slip.

2040 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that correct, Miss Feldman?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. It is my own.

Q. Did you prepare that?

A. I did.

Q. And when?

A. On March 6, 1945.

Q. And at whose instructions?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. What does that cash authorization slip purport to show?

A. That there is a payment of $18,000.00 in cash to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for overages.

Q. And is there any relationship between the cash authorization slip, Exhibit 40-A, and the check for $18,000.00, Exhibit 40?

A. There is.

Q. And what is it?

A. Exhibit 40, which is check No. 2887, was issued for this cash authorization slip.

Q. Is there any notation on the cash authorization slip which indicates the number of the check?

2041 A. There is.

Q. And what is it?

A. The authorization slip reads that the date paid was March 6, 1945, by check No. 2887.

Q. And is that the check that you hold in your hand?

A. That is.

Q. I now show you Government's Exhibit No. 40-C, in evidence, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. And what is it?

A. It is a cash authorization slip for $15,000.00, to Shotwell.

Q. Do you know by whom it was prepared?

A. By me.

Q. And when?

A. On March 26, 1945.

Q. At whose instructions?

A. Mr. Lubbens.

Q. Is there any relation between that exhibit and Exhibit 40-B, a check for $15,000.00?

A. There is.

Q. And what is that?

A. Check No. 2306 was issued for this cash au-
2042 thorization.

Q. Is there any notation on the cash authorization slip which indicates the number of the check?

A. There is.

Q. And what is it?

A. The notation reads: Date paid, March 28, 1945; Check No. 32006.

Q. Is that the number of the check?

A. That is.

2043 Q. I show you Exhibit No. 40-E and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

By the Court: 40-E?

By Mr. Lockley: E, your Honor.

By the Court: That is not in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe not. I am going to lay a foundation now.

By the Witness:

A. I have.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And do you recognize the handwriting thereon?

A. Yes.

Q. Whose is it?

A. My own.

Q. When was it prepared?

A. It was evidently prepared sometime in April.

Q. What year?
A. 1945.
Q. And was that a record kept by you?
A. It was.
Q. As a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. This was a memo record that I used later on to 2044 make a recap sheet from.
Q. Was it your practice to keep such records?
A. It was.
Q. Was that true and correct at the time it was prepared?
A. It was.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibit 40-E in evidence.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to 40-E on the grounds that it is self-serving, on the ground that no proper foundation has been laid that it is part of the books and records of the company.
By the Court: It may be received in evidence.
By Mr. O'Brien: We have never seen that before.
By Mr. Kirby: I make the further objection that there was an order heretofore entered—I don't know whether we ever got a copy of that.
By Mr. Krane: It was made available.
By Mr. Kirby: Did you give us a copy?
By Mr. Krane: We weren't required to. We were 2045 required to make them available and if you so desired, to make your own copies. That document was shown to you.
By Mr. Kirby: We were under the impression that we had been given copies.
2046 By Mr. Lockley: I showed you this particular copy in court the other day, as I recall, when you asked for it.
I am informed by Mr. Krane that it has been made available to the defense, and they have seen it as long as a year ago.
By Mr. O'Brien: That may be, Mr. Lockley. I don't know.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 40-E.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What does Exhibit 40-E purport to be, Miss Feldman?

A. This is a record of the shipments that came in from Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the period from April 4 to April 14.

Q. What year?

A. Of 1945.

Q. And what is the purpose of that record?

A. This record shows that the invoice amounts, the weight of each item, the total amount shipped, and, in some instances, the extension has been made for the overage.

2047 Q. Now, I ask you if you will total Government's Exhibits Nos. 40, 40-B, and 40-D, which are all checks to cash; what do they total?

A. $55,124.13.

Q. I ask you if you know what relationship, if any, those three checks have to Government's Exhibit 29-A and Exhibits 29-B, 30-A, B, C and D, 31-A to E, inclusive, 32-A, 33-A, 34-A, B, C, 35-A to H, inclusive, 36-A, 37-A, 38-A, and B, and 39-A, which are on the table beside you?

A. The exhibits numbers 40, 40-B, and 40-D, represent the overages due and paid on these invoices received from February 8 to April 24, which commenced with Exhibit 29-A through 39-A.

2048 Q. And what was the total amount of the premiums due and paid at that time?

A. The total amount of premiums due was $55,174.50.

By the Court: Sixty cents?

By the Witness: Fifty cents, your Honor. We paid $55,124.13, and the difference of $50.37 represents an adjustment that was made.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know the nature of the adjustment?

A. No, not offhand.

Q. Was there any further balance due on the premiums at that date?

A. No, there was not.

Q. Would you state what date it was that those were paid up to?

A. That was—wait a minute, you say no further balance on this batch of bills?

By Mr. Lockley: On the overages, according to your records.

By the Court: Just a moment, Mr. Lockley.

2049 By Mr. Kirby: The Court will recall that I made a point a little earlier as to whether proof was being made from memoranda she made in April of 1953 or memoranda made back at the time of the transactions. And I would like to inquire whether these recapitulations, the summaries that Mr. Lockley is now inquiring about, are the matters that she has recapitulated in preparation for shortening her proof here or whether they are existing pieces of paper that we can look at, that were in existence in 1945.

By the Court: I understand she is testifying from the books and records of the company, and it is her opinion and her statement that Exhibits 40-A, 40-B and 40-D are payments of the overages as reflected in invoices 29-A to 39-A, inclusive.

By Mr. Kirby: But is there a piece of paper?

By the Court: Yes, she says the books and records show that.

2050 By Mr. Kirby: But does she have a recap, Judge, that shows that?

By the Witness: I don't need a recap, sir. The ledger sheets are keyed off.

By Mr. Kirby: I am happy to have her statement that she doesn't need one, because to me that indicates she doesn't have one. Am I correct in that?

By the Witness: I have the authorizations here, sir, but I am further clarifying the issue by saying that the payments for the original invoices amounts, plus the overage checks, are keyed off on the ledger sheets to show which items were included in the overage payments.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I am trying to find out whether there was a recap memo that shows this or whether she had to summarize that recently.

By the Court: She says she is testifying from the books and records.

By Mr. Kirby: But is there a recap of those books and records?

By the Court: You will have to find out on cross
2051 examination. She is not depending now on the summary. As I understand it, she is endeavoring to point out on the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company that they reflect, according to her statement, that these overages were paid, as indicated by entries in the books and records.

By Mr. Kirby: As distinguished from a separate recap sheet made up at that time.

By the Court: That is the way I understand it.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: With the exception that there is a recap sheet, No. 40-E, for a portion of that period.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, the first month, I think.

By the Court: That is April 4th to April 14th.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

2052 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, just what period of time does that recap sheet cover?

A. From April 4 to April 14.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification 41-A, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. Were the penciled notations made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. And when were they made thereon?

A. Within hours or a day after the invoice was received.

Q. With respect to the stamp "Paid" on the invoice, what does that indicate?

2053 A. That indicates that the amount typed on the invoice was paid to Shotwell Manufacturing Company by check.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification No. 41, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.
Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits 41 and 41-A.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencil memorandum on 41-A, for the reasons I have heretofore stated.
By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

2054 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 41 and 41-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Can you state, Miss Feldman, if the invoice 41-A, is recorded in the purchase book of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?
A. It is.
Q. And in what amount?
A. $5,410.92.
Q. And is that the premium plus the invoice price?
A. It is.
Q. And is that same amount recorded in the accounts payable ledger?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 41, and ask if that is recorded in the cash disbursements book?
A. It is.
Q. Who prepared that record?
A. The check?
Q. Yes.
A. The accounts payable clerk.

2055 Q. And who signed it?
A. I did.
Q. When did you sign it?
A. On the day it was issued.
Q. When was that?
A. On May 4, 1945.
Q. And is there a record of that check in the accounts payable ledger?
A. There is.

Q. And what does that reflect?

A. It reflects the payment to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company of the amount typed on the invoice.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 41-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for 402 cases of Cardinal chocolates at 37½ cents, invoice price $3,601.92, plus an overage of 18¾ cents, for a total of $1,809.00, and a total invoice plus premium of $5,410.92.

Exhibit 41 is an Eatsum Food Products Company check to Shotwell, endorsed by them, in the amount of $3,529.88—

By the Court: $3,529?

2056 By Mr. Lockley: Correct, and 88 cents—showing that it was in payment of Invoice No. 72993, less two percent discount.

That invoice is Exhibit 41-A.

By the Court: Well, we can take our afternoon recess now.

We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing until the jury files out?

This Honorable Court will now recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

2057 By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 42-A and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record received in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Is that part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. It is.

Q. And with respect to the penciled notations, were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. At about what time were they prepared?

A. Within matters of days after the invoice was received.

Q. Does that invoice bear a paid stamp?

A. It does.

Q. What does that indicate?

A. That the amount typed on the invoice was paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, by check.

Q. Is that record true and correct to the best of 2058 your knowledge?

A. It is.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 42 and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Was that prepared under your supervision and direction?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was it true and correct to the best of your knowledge at the time is was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose signature appears thereon?

A. Mine.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 42 and 42-A in evidence.

By the Court: 42 has been received, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe not, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, my records indicate it.

2059 By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memoranda, Judge.

By the Court: 42 has been received, if I understood your exhibit number right. I may have misunderstood.

By Mr. Lockley: I had not previously offered it, your Honor.

By the Court: Which exhibit is it?

By Mr. Lockley: 42.

By the Court: 42?

By Mr. Lockley: It is a check.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to 42-A. It has a penciled memorandum on it. I object to it for the same reason I have already given.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 42 and 42-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I call your attention to some penciled numbers, 191899 on Exhibit 42-A. Do you know what those numbers represent?

2060 A. Offhand, no, unless it is a car number.

By the Court: Speak a little louder, Miss Feldman.

By the Witness:

A. Offhand, I say no, unless it is a car number.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. A railroad car number?

A. It could be a railroad car. No. It was ABC Forwarding. I don't know how it would have gotten on.

Q. Those numbers have no significance?

A. No, no particular significance.

Q. Will you check your purchase book and see if Exhibit No. 42-A is recorded therein?

By the Court: So that I may check the records to see that they are correct, will you look up in your record to see whether or not immediately after Exhibit 40-B—

By Mr. Lockley: There was Exhibit 40 and 40-A, B, C, D and E.

By the Court: What is the cash authorization, the $15,000.00 check? What exhibit number is that?

2061 By Mr. Lockley: That is 40-A. Wait a minute, the $15,000.00 check was 40-C, your Honor.

By the Court: 40 what?

By Mr. Lockley: 40 sub letter C.

By the Witness: Yes, this invoice is entered on the purchase book.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And in the amount of the invoice or the invoice plus the premium?

A. The invoice plus the premium.

Q. Is it also entered on the accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

Q. And in what amount?

A. The invoice plus the premium.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 42 and ask if that is recorded on the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. In whose account?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is it also recorded on the Shotwell accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

2062 Q. What, if any, relationship does Government's Exhibit 42 have to Government's Exhibit 42-A?

A. Exhibit No. 42 is check No. 3722 for $1,159.07. It was issued in payment of the typed amount on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit No. 42-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum for Cardinal chocolates at 37⅓ cents a pound, invoice price $1,182.72, an overage of 18¾ cents, totaling $594.00—a total invoice plus overage of $1,776.72.

Government's Exhibit No. 42 is an Eatsum check to Shotwell, endorsed by them in the amount of $1,159.07 showing on its face that it was in payment of invoice No. 81505. That invoice bears an additional number 72994A which is also written on the check and less the two per cent discount, it amounts to $1,159.07.

2063 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence No. 43, a check to cash, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Is that recorded on the cash disbursements book of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. It is.

Q. And where?

A It appears on page 89 of the cash disbursements book for May, 1945, as of the date of May 3rd.

Q. What line?

A. Line 11.

Q. What is the entry?

A. Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $2,403.00.

Q. Is that likewise recorded on the accounts payable ledger sheet, Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $2,403.00.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit 42-A and Government's Exhibit 41-A and ask if there is any relationship between those two exhibits and check, Ex-

2064 hibit No. 43.

A. There is.

Q. What is it?

A. Check No. 3665 for $2,403.00 represents the payment of the overage for Exhibits Nos. 42-A and—

By the Court: Again, please?

By the Witness: For Exhibit Nos. 42-A and 41-A.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What is the amount of the overage on Exhibit 41-A?

A. The amount of overage on Government's Exhibit 41-A is $1,809.00.

Q. What is the amount of the overage on Government's Exhibit 42-A?

A. $594.00.

Q. Does that add up to $2,403.00?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Is that the amount of the check, Government's Exhibit No. 43?

A. That is right, sir.

Q. Do you have a cash authorization slip for Government's Exhibit No. 43?

A. Was that the check?

2065 Q. Yes.

A. There should be one.

Q. Was one prepared at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what it is now?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Are you able to tell whether, after payment of the $2,403.00 check there was any balance remaining due on the overages to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company according to your records?

A. That cleaned up the overages to a certain point but there was still some due at the time that this payment was made.

Q. To what point, if you know?

A. The check is for $2,403.00, which cleared up the overages for all invoices to the end of April.

By the Court: 1945?

By the Witness: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, is Miss Feldman looking at the records now? Is it from the records that that statement was made?

By the Witness: It could be made either way, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

2066 Q. From what record are you now testifying?

A. I was looking at my work sheets, but it can also be made from the record on the ledger sheet.

Q. That ledger sheet is Government's Exhibit 6-A?

A. That is correct.

Q. Can you make that statement from an examination of Government's Exhibit 6-A?

A. I can.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 44-A, B, C, and D, and ask if you have seen those before.

A. I have.

Q. Were those records received in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Are they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With respect to the penciled notations, were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. They were made at what time?

A. Within a short period of time after the in-
2067 voices were received in the office.

Q. Do those invoices bear any paid stamp on them?

A. They don't.

Q. Are those records true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. They were.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 44 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?

A. My own.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it true and correct—was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 44 and 44-A, B, C and D in evidence.

2068 By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memoranda on Government's Exhibits 44-A, B, C and D for the reasons I have already given.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 44, 44-A, 44-B, 44-C and 44-D.)

2069 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, will you examine the purchase book, and tell me if Government's Exhibits 44-A through

D, inclusive are recorded therein?

A. They are.

Q. In the amount of the invoice, or the invoice plus the overage?

A. The invoice plus the overage.

Q. And are they also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, they are.

Q. And in what amounts?

A. The amounts of the invoice plus the overage.

Q. All right; I show you Government's Exhibit No. 44, and ask if that is recorded in the accounts payable, or in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. Also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It is.

Q. What does that check reflect?

A. This check reflects the payment to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company of the amounts typed on the invoice.

2070 By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit No. 44-A is an invoice of Shotwell to Eatsum Food for Cardinal chocolates at 37⅓ cents, for an invoice price of $2,867.20.

By the Court: Ten cents?

By Mr. Lockley: Twenty cents. $2,867.20—an overage of 18¾ cents a pound, totaling $1,440.00, a total invoice plus overage of $4,307.20.

Government's Exhibit 44-B is an invoice for two items, Cardinal chocolates at 37⅓ cents for invoice price of $1,236.48; spice buttons at 8¼ cents for invoice price of $1,200.38. The total invoice is $2,436.86. Cardinal chocolates overage of 18¾ cents amounts to $621.00; spice buttons overage of ten cents, amounts to $1,455.00—making a total invoice plus overage of $4,512.86.

Government's Exhibit 44-C is an invoice of Shotwell to Eatsum for Cardinal chocolates at 37½ cents a pound for $976.64, and 18¾ cents overage amounting to 2071 $490.50, for a total invoice plus overage of $1,467.14.

Government's Exhibit 44-D is an invoice for Cardinal chocolates and spice buttons, Cardinal chocolates at 37⅓ cents—$1,890.56 and spice buttons at 8¼ cents—invoice amount $1,249.88.

By the Court: Forty-nine dollars?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: And eight cents?

By Mr. Lockley: 88 cents.

The total invoice price is $3,140.44. The overage on Cardinal chocolates is 18¾ cents, amounting to $949.50. The overage on spice buttons is ten cents, amounting to $1,515.00. The total invoice plus overage is $5,604.94.

According to my computations, the overage amount alone is $2,464.50.

Government's Exhibit 44 is a check to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the amount of $9,232.72, endorsed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: May I see Government's Exhibit 44-D and Exhibit 44, please?

2072 By Mr. Lockley: Here they are, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 45 in evidence, a check to cash in the amount of $6,459.75, and ask you whose signature appears thereon.

A. Mine.

Q. When did you write that?

A. On May 9th.

Q. What year?

A. 1945.

Q. At whose instructions?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. Well, what did you do with it after you had written it?

A. I gave it to Miss Seiderer to take to the bank to get the cash for it.

Q. Do you know what she did with the cash after that?

A. Probably gave it to me or Mr. Lubben.

Q. If she gave it to you, what would you have done with it?

A. I would have given it to Mr. Lubben.

2073 Q. Will you look in the cash disbursements book and tell me if Government's Exhibit 45 is recorded therein?

A. It is.

Q. What is the nature of that entry?

A. The entry reads on that May 9th "Cash to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $6,459.75."

Q. What is the amount of the check?

A. $6,459.75.

Q. What is the line and page of the entry you refer to?

A. That is page 91, of cash disbursements, May, 1945, line 26.

Q. Is it recorded in the accounts payable ledger, Government's Exhibit 6-A?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $6,459.75.

Q. What does that reflect?

A. That reflects the payments of the overages of the four invoices.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 41-A, B, C and D, and ask you if there is any relationship between 2074 those exhibits and Government's Exhibit 45?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. What is it?

A. Check No. 3752 is a payment for the overages on Exhibits Nos. 44-D, 44-C, 44-B, and 44-A.

Q. When was that check issued?

A. On May 9, 1945.

Q. Were there any more overages due at that point?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. In what amount?

A. That would be the invoices—the overage on the May 9th invoice is $1,505.63.

Q. This check is dated May 9th. Does that indicate that an invoice had been received subsequent to the payment of the check or the issuance of the check?

A. Well, there was an invoice issued on the day that this particular payment was made.

Q. Do I understand that Government's Exhibit No. 45 paid the overages on Exhibits 44-A, B, C, and D? Is that correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit for 2075 identification 46-A and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It was.

Q. Was it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It was.

Q. Were the penciled entries thereon made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. At what time?

A. A few hours or a day or two after they were received.

Q. Does that invoice bear a paid stamp?

A. It does.

Q. What does that reflect?

A. It represents the payment of the amount typed on the invoice paid to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is that record true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

2076 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 46 and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record made in the ordinary course of the business?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 46 and 46-A in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the pencilled memoranda on Government's Exhibit 46-A for the reasons I have heretofore stated.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

2077 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 46 and 46-A.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, with respect to Government's Exhibit 46-A, is that recorded in the purchase journal of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

2078 Q. In what amount?

A. $1,505.63.

Q. Is that the amount plus the overage?

A. It is.

Q. Is it recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. In what amount?

A. $1,505.63.

Q. That is the invoice plus the overage?

A. That is correct.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 46 and ask if that is recorded in the cash disbursements journal?

A. It is.

Q. To what account?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is it likewise recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It is.

Q. What does that reflect?

A. The payment of the amount typed on the invoice paid to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

2079 By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit No. 46-A is a Shotwell invoice to Eatsum Food Products for spice—for spice buttons at 8¼ cents a pound, $680.63; 10 cents a pound overage, $825.00—a total of $1,505.63.

Government's Exhibit No. 46 is a check to Shotwell from the Eatsum Food Products, endorsed by Shotwell in the amount of $667.00, dated May 17, 1945.

By the Court: What is the date again?

By Mr. Lockley: May 17, 1945. It shows that it was drawn in payment of invoice 84104 which is Government's Exhibit No. 46-A.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits 47-A and 47-B and ask if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Are those records made in the ordinary course of business?

A. That is right.

Q. Are they a part of the books and records of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. They were.

2080 Q. Were they kept under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. Were the penciled notations made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. At about what time?

A. Within a few hours or a day or two after the invoice was received.

Q. Were they true and correct at the time they were prepared?

A. They were.

Q. What do the "Paid" stamps thereon reflect?

A. They reflect payment to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company of the items that were typed on the invoice.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 47 and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

Q. Was it made under your supervision and direction?

2081 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. It is a payroll—it is the accounts payable clerk.

Q. Is is true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 47, 47-A and 47-B in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memoranda on Government Exhibits 47-A and B for the same reasons I have heretofore given.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 47, 47-A and 47-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to Government's Exhibit 47-A and Government's Exhibit 47-B in evidence, are those recorded on the purchase book of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

2082 A. They are.

Q. And in what amounts?

A. The amount typed on the invoice plus the overage.

Q. And are they recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. They are.

Q. In what amount?

A. In the amount of the invoice plus the overage.

Q. Government's Exhibit No. 47, is that recorded on the cash disbursements book of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. To whose account?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Is it also recorded on the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It is.

Q. Is there any relationship between Government's Exhibits Nos. 47 and 47-A and B?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. What is it?

A. Government's Exhibit No. 47 is the payment in the amounts typed on the invoices, to Shotwell Manu-

2083 facturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 47-A is an invoice to Eatsum from Shotwell for spice buttons and gum drops. Spice buttons were at 8¼ cents a pound, invoice price of $581.63. Gum drops at 7¾ cents a pound, invoice price of $1,134.60. Spice buttons overage at 10 cents amounts to $705.00. Gum drops overage at 10 cents amounts to $1,464.00. The total invoice price is $1,716.23. The total invoice plus premium is $3,885.00.

Government's Exhibit No. 47-B is an invoice for gum drops at 7¾ cents, amounting to $1,132.28, plus a 10 cent overage amounting to $1,461.00—a total of $2,593.28.

Government's Exhibit No. 47 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell endorsed by them, in the amount of $2,791.54 showing on its face that it was drawn for invoices 84901, which is Government's Exhibit 47-B and 86658 which is Government's Exhibit 47-A.

2084 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit 48 in evidence, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And whose signature appears thereon?

A. It is my handwriting; it is my signature.

Q. Did you have any authority to draw checks on the bank account of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. I did.

Q. And at whose direction did you draw that check?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. Was the cash authorization slip issued at the time the check was drawn?

A. Definitely.

Q. Do you know where it is?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Will you look in the accounts—or, will you look in the cash disbursements book and tell me if that check is recorded therein?

A. It is.

Q. What is that entry?

A. I am sorry. What is it?

Q. What is the entry?

2085 A. The entry is Check No. 3936, dated May 25th, cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $4,455.00.

Q. Was it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $4,455.00.

Q. And what date?

A. May 25th.

Q. What year?

A. 1945.

Q. Now I ask you if there is any relationship between Government's Exhibit 48 and Exhibits 46-A and 47-A and 47-B?

A. Yes, there is.

Q. What is the overage on Government's Exhibit 46-A?

A. The overage on Government's Exhibit 46-A is $825.00.

Q. What is the overage on Government's Exhibit 47-A?

A. 47-A is the total of $2,169.00.

Q. And Government's Exhibit 47-B?

A. $1,461.00.

2086 Q. What is the total of those overages?

A. $4,455.00.

Q. What is the amount of the check, Government's Exhibit 48?

A. $4,455.00.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification No. 49-A, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Is that a record made and received in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. With respect to the penciled notations thereon, were they made under your supervision and direction?

A. They were.

Q. About what time were they made?

A. Within several hours or a day after the invoice was received.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. They were.

Q. Is there a "Paid" stamp on that invoice?

2087 A. There is.

Q. What does it denote?

A. It shows The Shotwell Manufacturing Company received a check for the amount typed on the invoice.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for Identification No. 49, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Whose signature appears thereon?

A. Mine.

Q. Is that a record made in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was it part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. It is.

Q. Was it true and correct at the time it was prepared?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 55-C, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. In whose handwriting is it?

A. My own.

2088 Q. Do you know when it was prepared?

A. That must have been prepared in June of 1945.

Q. Was that the record made and kept by you in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it a part of the books and records of the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What does it purport to be?

A. That is a rough recap sheet of the overages due at the time.

Q. And what time is that?

A. At the time this was made up. I believe it covers part of June. This is about June of 1945.

Q. About June, 1945.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 49, 49-A, and 55-C in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the penciled memorandum on Government's Exhibit 49-A for the reasons I stated, and I object to Government's Exhibit 49-B.

2089 There is no proper foundation laid—it is Government's Exhibit 55-C, rather. No foundation has been laid.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: I also object to Government's Exhibit 55-C, if the Court please, on the ground there is not a sufficient foundation.

By the Court: I understand that this Government's Exhibit 55-C is in your handwriting, Miss Feldman?

By the Witness: Yes.

By the Court: You contend that you made it some time in June, 1945?

By the Witness: That is correct, yes, sir.

By the Court: And you retained it as part of the books and records?

By the Witness: Yes.

By the Court: It may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court, and marked Government's Exhibit 49, 49-A, and 55-C.)

2090 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, with respect to Government's Exhibit 49-A, is that recorded—

By the Court: 49?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 49-A. Is that recorded in the purchase journal?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $2,365.20.

Q. Is that the amount of the invoice plus the overage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what amount?

A. $2,365.20.

Q. With respect to Government's Exhibit No. 49, is that recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. Well—

Q. I mean, to what account?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

2091 By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit No. 49-A is an invoice for spice buttons at eight and one-quarter cents, amounting to $1,069.20—ten cents overage, $1,296.00 for a total of $2,365.20.

Government's Exhibit No. 49 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell, endorsed by them, in the amount of $1,047.82, which shows on its face that it was in payment of Invoice 88523, less two percent discount, which is Government's Exhibit No. 49-A.

By the Court: Let me see Government Exhibit 49-A.

2092 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman at what point did the Eatsum sole proprietorship cease its existence and the Eatsum partnership begin?

A. As of June 1, 1945.

Q. Do the books and records of the sole proprietorship reflect entries up to June 1, 1945?

A. The last entry on the books would be as of May 31st.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits, in evidence, 50-A, 51-A and 51-B, which are accounting copies of invoices from The Shotwell Manufacturing Company to the Eatsum Food Products Company, and I ask if those are recorded in the purchase journal of the Eatsum sole proprietorship.

A. Yes, sir; they are.

Q. And in what amounts?

A. The amounts shown on the green accounting copies, plus the overage.

Q. That is the amount recorded in the purchase journal?

A. That's correct.

By the Court: Which exhibits are they again, please?

2093 By Mr. Lockley: 50-A is an invoice showing—

By the Court: Just give me the numbers first. I have a record of it.

By Mr. Lockley: 50-A.

By the Court: Yes:

By Mr. Lockley: 51-A and 51-B.

By the Court: She says they are recorded in the accounts payable register?

By Mr. Lockley: In the purchase journal, I understood Miss Feldman.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are they also in the accounts payable ledger?

A. I believe two of them are, and one was entered on the old single proprietorship books that we continued after June 1st in order to clean up all the transactions. This invoice appears on the books after June 1st for the old Eatsum single proprietorship.

Q. That's Exhibit 50-A?

A. That's right. 51-A and 51-B appear on the books of the single proprietorship prior to June 1st, 2094 1945.

Q. All right. With respect to 51-A, the invoice price is $12,096.00. What is the amount of that invoice as recorded on the purchase journal of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. $18,171.00.

Q. 51-B is an invoice in the amount of $1,055.55, dated May 31st. How does that appear?

A. As $2,417.55.

By the Court: Well, are we in the partnership now or are you now speaking of the records of the proprietorship?

By the Witness: No, I am still speaking of the records of the single ownership, because after the partnership was formed the single ownership continued its books for a short period of time.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to invoice No. 51-A, there is a photostatic copy of a check in evidence in the amount of $12,088.52. Is that recorded on the accounts payable ledger or the cash disbursements book?

A. Not on the one that I have.

2095 Q. That is dated June 11.

A. That would be on the old Eatsum account, as we called it, during the life of the partnership.

Q. So anything after June 1 would not be recorded?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit, in evidence, No. 51, and Exhibits 51-A and 51-B, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, I have seen these before.

Q. 51-A is a check. Whose signature does it bear? 51, I mean.

A. That is my signature.

Q. Does that have any relation to Exhibit 51-A and Exhibit 51-B?

A. Yes, it does. It represents the payment of the amount typed on the invoices to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And I show you Exhibit 50 and 50-A. Whose signature does Exhibit 50 bear?

A. That bears my signature.

Q. And do Exhibits 50 and 50-A have any relationship?

A. Yes, Exhibit 50 is in payment of invoice 2096 marked Exhibit 50-A.

Q. In what amount?

A. The amount typed on the invoice.

Q. And what is that?

A. $4,916.10.

Q. All right. And I show you Exhibits 52-A and 52-B, and Exhibit 52. Have you seen Exhibit 52 before?

A. I have.

Q. And what is that?

A. That is a check drawn on the partnership check account for the amounts typed on the invoices from Shotwell.

Q. And does that check have any relationship to Exhibits 52-A and 52-B?

A. That's right it covers the amounts typed on the invoices.

Q. I show you Exhibit 53, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting it is?

A. It is the accounts payable clerk's.

Q. Who signed it?

A. Mr. Lubben.

Q. Does that have any relationship to Exhibit 53-A?

2097 A. It does.

Q. And what is it?

A. The Exhibit No. 53 is in payment for the amount typed on the Shotwell invoice marked Exhibit 53-A.

By Mr. Kirby: I didn't hear that answer. Will you read it?

(Question read by the reporter as above recorded.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 54, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting it is?

A. The accounts payable clerk.

Q. And who signed it?

A. Mr. Lubben.

2098 Q. And does that have any relationship to Exhibit 54-A?

A. It does.

Q. And what is it?

A. Exhibit No. 54 is in payment of the amount typed on the Shotwell invoice marked Exhibit 54-A.

By the Court: What is the amount of invoice, 54-A; will you tell me?

By the Witness: The amount is $1,165.00—

By the Court: Again.

By the Witness: $1,165.73.

By the Court: And the amount of the check, 54?

By the Witness: Check 54 is $1,142.42.

By the Court: $1,142.42?

By the Witness: That's right.

By the Court: Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley: Would your Honor like me to read off the amounts of these checks?

By the Court: No, I have it on my notes, but you may read it for the benefit of the jury.

I understand you are now referring to certain exhibits that were identified by Mr. Lubben, and heretofore 2099 received.

By Mr. Lockley: By previous witnesses. The accounting copies were identified by Mrs. Morrill and the photostatic copies of these checks were identified by the young man from Manufacturers Trust Company.

By the Court: All right. I have, for my records, the notations that I need. I don't know whether you think it is necessary to further clarify it by calling it to the attention of the jury, what you have been asking the witness.

Of course, it is very difficult to follow the testimony, and I appreciate that when we are talking about books and records, and the jury haven't been in a position to keep notes, that it is not too simple to follow it.

I take it that after this testimony is in that the Government intends to present a summary of it in a way that will be more easily understood. Am I right in that?

By Mr. Lockley: We hope it will make it easy, 2100 your Honor. We will try.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think it is helpful that the record show—helpful to us—what the item is, as Mr. Lockley has been doing.

By Mr. Lockley: I will run through these quickly.

Exhibit 50-A is an invoice for citrus drops and gum drops showing an amount of $4,916.10.

50 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell in the amount of $4,817.78, and showing on its face that it was issued in payment of invoice 87659, which is Exhibit 50-A.

2101 Exhibit 51-A is for Cardinal chocolates, in the amount of $12,096.00; 51-B for $1,055.55.

Exhibit 51 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell for $12,888.52, showing on its face that it was issued for invoices number 89123 and 88586, which were exhibits 51-B and 51-A, respectively.

Exhibit 52-A is for spice buttons, in the invoice amount of $1,252.35; and Exhibit 52-B is for Cardinal chocolates in the amount of $10,375.68.

Exhibit 52 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell in the amount of $11,395.47, and it shows it was issued for invoices 90598, which is Exhibit 52-A, and 90631, which is Exhibit 52-B.

Exhibit 53-A is an invoice, spice buttons, $35,031.83—

By the Court: How much?

By Mr. Lockley: $3,531.83.

Exhibit 53 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell in the amount of $3,461.19, and shows on its face that it

2102 was issued for invoice number 94002, which is Exhibit 53-A.

And Exhibit 54-A is an invoice for $1,165.73.

Exhibit 54 is a check from Eatsum to Shotwell for $1,142.42, showing on its face that it was issued for invoice 94986, which is Exhibit 54-A; less 2 per cent discount on those invoices.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, as long as we are clarifying this, when these documents were offered and received I think the statement was made that they were all on the Shotwell books and were all included in the income tax.

By Mr. Lockley: There is no question about that. These are checks to Shotwell. These are invoices received from Shotwell. These are Shotwell's accounting copies.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit 55-B in evidence, and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And what is it?

2103 A. It is a recap sheet for Cardinal, spice buttons and gum drops.

Q. And can you relate it to any of these invoices which I have just introduced in evidence?

Will your work sheets help you on that?

A. Yes, but I can fix them up from here.

By Mr. O'Brien: Is the reference to the work sheet on the basis of existing records already in evidence?

2104 By Mr. Lockley: With reference to the invoices and checks which are already in evidence, and the settlement sheet, which is already in evidence.

By the Witness:

A. This sheet refers to—

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A. This recap sheet refers to Exhibits Nos. 51-A, 51-B and 49-A.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. And how do you know that?

A. Exhibit No. 49-A calls for twelve thousand—

By the Court: 49 is not in evidence, is it?

By Mr. Lockley: 49?

By the Witness: 49-A.

By Mr. Lockley: I had thought so.

By the Court: Well, supposing we check that up between now and tomorrow morning.

By Mr. Lockley: It was put in at the same time as 55-C. They all went in together. It is in, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, you can check that between 2105 now and tomorrow morning.

By Mr. Lockley: We will check it with the record.

By the Court: We will be in recess, members of the jury, until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury files out.

This honorable court will recess until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause to Friday, September 25, 1953, at 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

2106 Chicago, Illinois, Friday, September 25, 1953, 10:00 o'clock A.M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, KJR.,
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby,

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in Chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the jury:—

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I got up early this morning, got in to work, and having enough troubles, I didn't read the papers. Tribune, was called to my attention about 2107 twenty minutes ago. I don't know where it came from. I haven't talked to the paper. It is headed, "Tell 1.1 Million Tax Dodge in Shotwell Case."

Then the article itself refers to a deficiency assessment against Mr. Cain. And it is so tied in that it does seem patent to me that anybody on the jury who may have seen this article would, or could be prejudiced by it to a point that it would be very hard, if not impossible, to cure by instruction, or direction of any sort.

Now, I mean it literally when I say I just heard of it fifteen minutes ago.

I pulled out one of the books to see what I ought to do about it, and I have just glanced at a section in the Federal Encyclopedia on newspaper articles, but I have had no chance to read the case or cases.

The reason I refer to that is because apparently the cases indicate a condition that would not only be an article which could be or is prejudice, but one which the jurors, or some of them, did see, and I would—not having read the cases, do not know what the proper procedure is 2108 for ascertaining whether they saw it or didn't see it,—we all wanted to call it to the Court's attention at an early moment, and make a motion for a mistrial, based on that article, which I would like to have put in the record, for the purpose of this collateral motion, not for the jury, but to record it here with this motion as our Exhibit A of this day.

I would like an opportunity to see if there is anything that I should do formally about it, because, frankly, I don't know.

2109 By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I am in the same position as Mr. O'Brien is in with respect to former knowledge of the article, until such time as it appeared in the newspaper.

I think you will notice that it bears a Washington, D. C., date line, and that it relates entirely to a civil matter which is not connected with the criminal matter which is now on trial.

Now, as I understand, from reading the newspapers, and over which, of course, we have no control, that was brought about as much by the action of the defendants as by the action of the government. As I understand it, what happened is that the defendants filed a petition in the Tax Court for a review of a deficiency determination by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. It was that action on their part which brought to light the existence of the claimed deficiency and which, in turn, promoted the preparation of that newsaper article.

I hardly feel that they are in a position to complain now that something which they did may have redounded to their own disadvantage.

In any event, I have neither looked up the law, but I believe that before an article of that sort is the basis for a mistrial it has to be of an inflammatory nature

2110 or at least more than a mere casual and objective reporting of a news story which, in some way, relates to one of the defendants and which is all that article appears to be.

By the Court: I will deny the motion for a mistrial. If counsel desires to warn the jury to disregard the article and to call to their attention that it refers to a civil matter and has nothing to do with the Shotwell case, and the headlines may appear somewhat confusing for that reason, I, of course, will be glad to do so.

By Mr. Lockley: Isn't the jury under instructions not to read newspaper articles in any event?

By the Court: Yes, I will—

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to have such instruction made on behalf of the company. Now, what Mr. Lockley says—

By the Court: I didn't hear you, Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. McConnell: Pardon me. I would like to have such a statement made by the Court on behalf of the Shotwell Company.

Now, this appears to be a matter between Cain—or Cain and Culhane. It has nothing to do with Shotwell at all. But they have a statement in the headline that it is Shotwell. That is the part that bothers me. This 2111 certainly wasn't originated by Shotwell. Shotwell has no interest in it. The corporation has no interest in it. Whether Cain has a tax liability or not is no concern of the corporation. But it leads the jury to believe that it is in some way hooked up with Shotwell.

And I think that the Court should instruct the jury that it doesn't concern the Shotwell Company at all, even by the terms of the article, even though the headline says so.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I wanted to add some sort of a connective remark first. Mr. Lockley mentioned the defendants as being the people who are involved in that petition.

2112 By Mr. Lockley: I stand corrected. I glanced at it very casually. I believe Mr. McConnell is right. It just does refer to Mr. Cain.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true.

Now, second, on the basis of my limited present knowledge as to what is a proper motion, I feel that I may not have advanced it as completely as might be required by the cases, Judge.

For example, it may be under these cases that if I wanted to make the motion complete, and have a sufficient basis, so that your ruling would mean something, the jury would have to be asked—the jurors would have to be asked whether any of them read that article.

I don't like to ask them that question, unless it is required under the cases. And, therefore, I also don't like to give the matter prominence at this moment by any instruction or direction to the jury to disregard the article, or that it doesn't apply to Shotwell, and so on.

But I would like time, during the noon recess, to see whether we have to request your Honor to ask the jurors a question about it, or whether we don't. I just don't know.

2113 By Mr. Lockley: I think, for the record, it also ought to be brought out that that article was not on the front page. I believe that it was on one of the inside pages. Perhaps we can establish exactly where, from an examination of the paper itself.

By the Court: Yes, that is my recollection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I certainly will agree that it is not on the front page.

By Mr. Lockey: I think we ought to know what prominence the paper gave the story, if that is any criterion for determining—there it is. It is on page 15.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right opposite the editorial page.

By Mr. Lockley: Opposite the editorial page.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have this marked at this time Defendants' Exhibit A, your Honor, so as to identify it as being the article that we have been talking about.

By the Court: Surely.

2114 By Mr. Lockley: You don't want this part.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think the two together. No matter how you look at it, it is fair to put them both in, because they have a separate article here about the case itself.

By the Court: Mr. McConnell, what is your suggestion now, in view of the position taken by Mr. O'Brien. He informs the court that he doesn't desire the court at this time, at least, to make any reference to the newspaper article, or to emphasize it until he is further informed as to just what steps he should take, if any. What have you to say about that?

By Mr. McConnell: Well, of course, I represent the corporation, and regardless of Mr. O'Brien's position,

I have to protect my record here for the corporation. And this refers to Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and has nothing to do with Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

While it may emphasize the article, nevertheless, I haven't any doubt at all that either the jurors have read the article, or will be advised of it. And we just have to take the facts of life as we know them.

2115 The only way I know that it can be remedied is to point out to the jurors that the article does not concern The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley: I doubt if there is any basis for assuming that the jurors are going to do something that the Judge has expressly instructed them not to do.

By Mr. McConnell: I know, but here is something that has happened.

By Mr. Lockley: And I also think the defendants ought to either decide upon one particular course of action, so if there is error to one, there is error as to all, or if there is no error as to one, there is no error as to all.

We can hardly take two different courses of action with respect to all of the defendants.

By Mr. McConnell: You have sued four different defendants, and I am representing one. I have to make my record, as I see it.

By the Court: We will proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: May I say one thing for the record while we are here?

By Mr. O'Brien: Incidentally, I don't recall any instruction. I could be wrong, because—2116 By Mr. McConnell: Nothing about newspapers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Nothing about reading or not reading the newspapers. If there was such a direction, I don't recall it.

By the Court: I don't know that I have made any such instruction to the jury, and I haven't been so requested by any of the parties.

By Mr. Lockley: I just wanted, on the record at this time, your Honor, to inform counsel that at the noon recess yesterday, I became aware for the first time of the existence of two letters, one dated February 8, 1946, and one February 15, 1947, written by officers of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company to Busby and Oury, and which the Government may seek to introduce in evidence, and I wish to make them available to counsel at this time for inspection.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

(Whereupon the newspaper article herein above referred to was marked Defendants' Exhibit A, of this date, and is attached hereto and made a part hereof, and is in words and figures as follows:—)

TELL 1.1 MILLION TAX DODGE IN SHOTWELL CASE

Amount Unreported by Cain, U. S. Says
By Philip Warden

Washington, Sept. 24—Byron A. Cain, president of the Shotwell Manufacturing company, failed to report $1,115,062 in personal income during 1947, 1948, and 1949 for tax purposes, the bureau of internal revenue claimed, it was revealed today.

The Shotwell company and three individual defendants, including Cain, are on trial in federal District court in Chicago on charges of evading $286,607 in income taxes in 1945 and 1946.

In petitions filed in the United States tax court here on June 1 and 3, and late last week, Cain revealed that the government is seeking $880,788 in additional taxes from him and his wife, Sally, and $440,393 in fraud penalties from them, for a total of $1,321,181.

Seek Additional Taxes

In addition, Cain, as a stockholder of Cain & Culhane, Inc., 4545 Broadway, Chicago, also has been named in government actions seeking additional taxes of $48,414 for 1947, $50,687 for 1948, and $61,638 for 1949. Fraud penalties of $80,369 also are sought.

Cain's petitions, which cleared the Tax court's recording system today, revealed that he reported a net income of $54,845 in 1947. The government says he should have reported $416,833.

In 1948, Cain and his wife reported a $67,772 income and their petitions contest the bureau of internal revenue's claim that they should have reported a net of $451,837.

Report $59,055 in 1949

Their 1949 income, according to their petitions, was reported as $59,055. The government contends it was $428,064.

Cain & Culhane, Inc., reported a net income of $30,259 in 1947. The government said it should have reported $147,608. For 1948, its tax return reported a net income of $6,153 and the government says it should have been $136,500. For 1949, the return listed $28,478. The bureau claims its income was $179,394.

The Cains and the corporation won a motion heard here yesterday demanding that the bureau of internal revenue be required to furnish additional data to substantiate its charges that they had failed to report all their income in the years in question.

WOMAN TELLS OF PAYMENTS IN SHOTWELL CASE

Beatrice Feldman of New York City testified yesterday for the government in the income tax evasion trial of the defunct Shotwell Manufacturing company, candy producers, and three of its former officers, in federal District court.

The defendants are charged with evading payment of $286,607 in income taxes in 1945 and 1946 on more than $500,000 in unreported income. The individual defendants are Frank Huebner, Byron A. Cain, and Harold E. Sullivan.

Miss Feldman was bookkeeper for the government's chief witness, David G. Lubben, 43, former New York City candy broker. She corroborated testimony given by Lubben that he made "overage" or black market payments in cash for candy commodities purchased from the Shotwell company.

2118 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Clerk: 52 C 143, United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al., case on trial.

By the Court: I hope our juror who had that slight accident this morning is all right.

By a Juror: Yes, sir.

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at the close of the session yesterday, you were inquiring as to whether Government's Exhibit 49 was in evidence. It is. It appears on page 2104 of the transcript.

BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd. by Mr. Lockley).

2119 Q. Miss Feldman, at the close of the session yesterday I handed you Exhibit 55-B in evidence and asked you whether that had any relationship to Government's Exhibits 51-A, 51-B and 49-A.

A. They have.

Q. What is that connection?

A. Well, 55-B is a recap sheet that was made up for the three invoices.

Q. Does it contain certain information?

A. It does.

Q. What is that information and how does it relate to each one of the exhibits I have shown you?

A. Well, the first item on the recap sheet reads "Cardinals, 32,400 pound boxes at 18-¾ cents," and Exibit 51-A is for 32,400 boxes of Cardinals.

The second item on the slip is spice buttons, 12,960 pounds at ten cents a pound.

Government's Exhibit 49-A is for 12,960 pounds of spice buttons.

The third item on the recap slip is for gum drops at 13,620 pounds and at ten cents a pound.

2120 Government's Exhibit 51-B is for 13,620 pounds of gum drops.

Q. Is there any other notation on that slip?

A. Yes. There is a notation here that the total overages due to these three amounted to $8,733.00 against which we advanced $20,000.00 in overages, leaving a balance due us of $11,267.00.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 55, a check for $20,000.00, and I ask you if that has any relationship to that settlement sheet?

A. That is a $20,000.00 prepayment referred to on the settlement sheet.

Q. What is the date of that check?

A. May 25th.

Q. As of May 25th the sole proprietorship was still in existence, was it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that $20,000.00 check reported in the cash disbursements book?

A. It is.

Q. Where?

A. It is reported on page 96 of the cash disbursements book of May, 1945.

2121 Q. What is the nature of the entry?

A. The nature of the entry reads—the entry reads: "Cash, Shotwell Manufacturing Company, $20,000."

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet?

A. It is.

Q. What is that exhibit number?

A. 6-A. No, that is 6-B, I believe.

Q. What is the nature of the entry?

A. It shows a payment on May 25th of $20,000 to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 55-C, and Government's Exhibit 55-A, and I ask you if those have any relationship to each other?

A. They do.

Q. What is that connection?

A. Well, the items on the white sheet, on the Exhibit 55-C, are also included on 55-A.

Q. Well, what was the purpose of having Exhibits 55-C and 55-A prepared?

A. This was my rough copy of the shipments, to the time I made up this small white sheet, when I made up—

2122 Q. That is, referring to 55-C?

A. Yes. 55-A was a recap sheet that was drawn after this date, which contained both the information of 55-C and some additional information.

Q. And is there any connection between Government's Exhibit 55-A and 55-B?

A. There is.

Q. And what is that?

A. 55-B shows an advance payment of $20,000 against premiums. 55-A also shows a $20,000—

Q. Do you know if that is the same advance payment?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. What did you do with the settlement sheet after you completed typing it?

A. I would give Mr. Lubben the original copy with the cash, so that he would know what he was paying for, and so that he could leave a copy if necessary.

Q. How many copies of the settlement sheet did you make?

A. It was usually an original and duplicate, or an original and two duplicates.

Q. What did you do with the duplicates?

A. The duplicates were attached to the cash au-

2123 thorization slip.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibits 50-A, 52-A, and B, 53-A, 54-A, 51-A, and B, and 49-A, and I ask you if the information contained on Government's Exhibit 55-A is in any way connected with those previously mentioned exhibits?

A. They are.

Q. Will you take each of the entries on 55-A and tell in what way it relates to each of the other exhibits I have handed you?

A. The first item on the recap sheet is for Cardinals.

By the Court: Refer to the exhibit number, please.

By the Witness:

A. On, Exhibit. The first item on Exhibit 55-A calls for Cardinals, May 25th, 32,400 pound boxes.

Invoice No. 88586, Government's Exhibit 51-A, which is dated May 25, calls for 32,400 pound boxes.

Exhibit No. 52-B dated June 6th calls for 27,792 pound boxes of chocolates, Cardinal chocolates.

2124 Exhibit No. 55-A shows a shipment of May 6th—of June 6th, for 27,792 pound boxes.

The second item on Exhibit 55-A calls for spice buttons. The first item is dated May 24th, calls for 12,960 pounds.

2125 Q. Well, in the interest of brevity, Miss Feldman, are all of the invoices reflected on Government's Exhibit 55-A in the same manner that you previously testified?

A. They are, the dates and the weights appear on the recap sheet.

By Mr. O'Brien: You mean all of the invoices you mentioned, Mr. Lockley, I suppose?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: By exhibit number?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence No. 56 purporting to be a check and Exhibits 56-A and 56-B and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Which exhibits have you seen before?

A. I have seen the photostat of the check. I have seen the green copy when I made up my work sheet papers but that was the first time.

Q. Did you see the original of that invoice at the time you were employed at the Eatsum Food Products Com-

2126 pany?

A. Yes, sir, I did.

Q. Is there any relationship between the exhibits I have just handed you—do they bear any relationship to each other?

A. They both appear on the check as payment of them.

Q. That is what I want to know. All right. The check, Government's Exhibit No. 56 is in payment of Government's Exhibits 56-A and 56-B, invoices, is that correct?

A. That is so.

Q. So that likewise that is true of Government's Exhibits 57 and 57-A?

A. That is so.

Q. And is check, Government's Exhibit No. 58, in any way related to Government's Exhibit 58-A, an invoice?

A. It is.

Q. What is the connection?

A. The check pays for the invoice.

By the Court: You mean the face of the invoice?

By the Witness: That is right, the face of the in-2127 voice. None of these have penciled notations.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is your answer the same with respect to Government's Exhibits 59 and 59-A?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Is there any connection between Government's Exhibit 50—or 60, rather, and Government's Exhibit 60-A and 60-B, being a check and two invoices?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the relationship?

A. Check No. 1900 paid for both invoices.

Q. Paid for just the invoice price?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is there any relationship between Government's Exhibits 61 and 61-A and 61-B, being a check and two invoices?

A. Yes.

Q. What is the relationship?

A. Government's Exhibit 61 is in payment of the invoice price on these two invoices.

Q. 61-A and 61-B?

A. 61-A and B.

Q. Is there any relationship between Government's 2128 Exhibits 62 and 62A?

A. Yes. Check marked Government's Exhibit 62 is in payment of invoice, 62-A.

Q. All right. Now I show you Government's Exhibit 63-A and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know who prepared it?

A. I did.

Q. At whose direction?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

2129 Q. How many copies did you make?

A. There was an original. There might have been another duplicate.

Q. What did you do with the original, if you know?

A. The original was given to Mr. Lubben.

Q. Keep your voice up, Miss Feldman.

A. Oh, I am sorry.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 63-B in evidence and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Where did you see it?

A. Mr. Lubben gave it to me.

Q. At what time?

A. Evidently after a visit with Mr. Huebner.

Q. I mean, the time of the year.

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike that, the first part.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I mean, the time of the year, the date.

By the Court: It may be stricken.

By the Witness:

A. That would be towards the end of the year of 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

2130 Q. Can you be any more definite?

A. I can. The last item that appears on this, the last date that appears on this slip is November 12, 1945.

Q. And it would be some time after that date?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, is there any relationship between Government's Exhibits 63-A and 63-B?

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, I appreciate that you have to stand there when you are handing exhibits to the witness, but—

By Mr. Lockley: I was trying to get back over here as fast as I could, your Honor.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, there is a relationship.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And will you please describe what the relationship is?

A. My recap sheet includes the items mentioned on the Exhibit 63-B.

Q. What is your recap exhibit?

A. 63-A.

Q. Does your recap sheet, 63-A, include addi-
2131 tional items that are not on 63-B?

A. It does.

Q. Do you know the purpose for which Mr. Lubben gave you Government's Exhibit 63-B?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that.

By Mr. McConnell: I object.

By the Court: I didn't follow your question.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked if she knew the purpose for which Mr. Lubben gave her Government's Exhibit 63-B.

By the Court: I suppose that obviously calls for a conclusion.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting on the bottom of the sheet?

A. I do.

By the Court: Which exhibit is it?

By Mr. Lockley: 63-B.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Whose is it?

A. That is Mr. Lubben's handwriting.

Q. Will you read it?

A. "Miss Feldman: These were Huebner's last 2132 figures."

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the reading of the document.

By the Court: The exhibit is in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits 56-A and B, 57-A, 59-A, 60-A and B, 61-A and B, and 62-A, and I ask you if those exhibits which are invoices are in any way related to Government's Exhibit 63-A. Will you describe the connection on each one of those, Miss Feldman, as you examine it, so that we might save a little time.

A. All right. My recap sheet shows four classifications of chocolates, chocolate nut meats, chocolate covered nut meats, cardinals and spice buttons.

The sheet also shows the date of the shipment, the invoice number and the poundage on each shipment.

Q. Does it also show the overage amounts per unit and the—

2133 A. It does. As a matter of fact, there were two classifications of nut meats. One was chocolate nut meats at 42 cents billed price and chocolate covered nut meats at 48 cents.

On the 42-cent item, there was a ten-cent overage. On the 48-cent item, there was a 15-cent overage.

Exhibit No. 62-A calls for 67,482 pounds of chocolate covered nut meats at 42 cents a pound.

On Exhibit 63-A, on the chocolate nut meats at 42 cents, there appears an item, November 10th, invoice No. 123399 for 67,482 pounds.

There is another item on invoice—on Exhibit 62-A calling for 9,960 pounds of spice buttons.

On Exhibit 63-A under date of November 10th, invoice No. 123399, there appears 9,960 pounds of spice buttons.

Exhibit 61-A calls for 40,536 pounds of assorted—of Cardinal assorted chocolates, 7,774 pounds of chocolate covered nut meats at a 48-cent billing price, and 32,637 pounds at a 42-cent billing price.

On Exhibit 63-A under Cardinal assorted chocolates 2133 there is a notation, November 17th, two classifications of nut meats. One was chocolate nut meats at 42 cents billed price and chocolate covered nut meats at 48 cents.

On the 42-cent item, there was a ten-cent overage. On the 48-cent item, there was a 15-cent overage.

Exhibit No. 62-A calls for 67,482 pounds of chocolate covered nut meats at 42 cents a pound.

On Exhibit 63-A, on the chocolate nut meats at 42 cents, there appears an item, November 10th, invoice No. 123399 for 67,482 pounds.

There is another item on invoice—on Exhibit 62-A calling for 9,960 pounds of spice buttons.

On Exhibit 63-A under date of November 10th, invoice No. 123399, there appears 9,960 pounds of spice buttons.

Exhibit 61-A calls for 40,536 pounds of assorted—of Cardinal assorted chocolates, 7,774 pounds of chocolate covered nut meats at a 48-cent billing price, and 32,637 pounds at a 42-cent billing price.

On Exhibit 63-A under Cardinal assorted chocolates there is a notation, November 17th, invoice No. 124206—40,536 pounds of Cardinals.

Under chocolate covered nut meats at 48 cents a pound there is a notation, November 17th, invoice No. 124206—7,774 pounds.

Under chocolate covered nut meats at 42 cents a billing price, there is a notation, November 17th, invoice No. 124206—32,637 pounds.

Exhibit 61-B calls for 19,680 pounds of spice buttons, 19,274 pounds of chocolate covered nuts at 48 cents billed price and 24,610 chocolate covered nuts at 42 cents billed price.

Exhibit No. 63-A bears the following items: Under spice buttons, dated November 24th, invoice No. 125386—19,680 pounds.

Under chocolate covered nuts at 48 cents a pound appears a notation, November 24th, invoice No. 125386—19,274 pounds.

And under chocolate covered—under chocolate nut meats at 42 cents, there appears the notation invoice of November 24th, invoice No. 125386 for 24,610 pounds.

Exhibit No. 60-A calls for chocolate nut meats,
2135 27,347 pounds at a 42-cent billing price; chocolate covered nut meats, 17,848 pounds at a 48-cent billing price and spice buttons, 32,010 pounds.

2136 Exhibit 63-A contains the following information: Chocolate nut meats at 42 cents billing price bears a notation August 27th, invoice number 120655—27,347 pounds. Chocolate covered nut meats at a billing price of 48 cents bears a notation, October 27th, invoice number 120655—17,848 pounds.

Under spice buttons, October 27th, invoice number 120655—32,010 pounds.

Exhibit No. 60-B calls for 30,000 assorted—Cardinal assorted chocolates. And Exhibit No. 63-A, under date of November 12th, invoice number 123402—30,000 pounds of Cardinals.

Exhibit No. 59-A calls for 59,856 pounds of Cardinal assorted chocolates.

On Exhibit 63-A there appears a notation, November 2nd, invoice number 112518—59,856 pounds of Cardinals.

Exhibit 58-A calls for 36,000 Cardinal chocolates. On 63-A the notation appears as October 20th, invoice number 119874—36,000 Cardinals.

Exhibit 57-A calls for 30,000 Cardinal chocolates.

Exhibit 63-A bears a notation, October 12th, 2137 invoice number 117892—30,000 Cardinal chocolates.

Exhibit 56-A calls for 8,119 bulk chocolate nut meats at a billing price of 48 cents.

Exhibit 63-A calls for—shows the date of September 29th, invoice number 114184—8,119 pounds of chocolate covered nut meats at a 48 cent billing price.

Q. If there a total on Government's Exhibit No. 63-A?

A. There is.

Q. What is that total?

A. $66,148.35.

Q. Do you know if that was recorded in the books of the Eatsum partnership?

A. I have no way of determining that, sir.

Q. Do you know what the total represents?

A. That represents the total overages due to Shotwell as of November 27, 1945.

Q. That would be on the shipments listed on that Government's Exhibit 63-A that you hold in your hand?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there any further notations on Government's Exhibit 63-A relating to payments?

A. There are.

2138 Q. What are they?

A. One notation reads "Less advance of $30,000.00. Balance due $36,148.35."

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 63, a ledger sheet of the Manufacturers Trust Company with an entry, $36,148.35, and ask if you recall having drawn such a check?

A. Yes, I would have.

Q. Do you recall to whom that check was made payable?

A. I don't. Probably cash.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to what it probably was and move that it be stricken.

By the Court: It may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection? Do you have any present recollection?

A. No, I don't.

2139 By the Court: What is the date of that entry on the ledger sheet of the Manufacturers Trust?

By Mr. Lockley: November 27, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, what is the date of Exhibit 63-A, the settlement sheet?

A. November 27, 1945.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, from the invoice and checks which you have seen and testified from, are you able to state the amount of overages recorded on the books of the Eatsum sole proprietorship and the partnership, during the year 1945—

By Mr. O'Brien: I will object.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —as paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that part of the question which includes the books of the partnership. As I remember it, the witness just said that she couldn't tell us whether certain payments or transactions were recorded on the partnership books. I have no objection to a 2140 recap of, or summary of her figures on the book overages on the proprietorship, but I do object to the part of the question which includes the partnership books.

By the Court: Well, what books do you have reference to when you refer to the partnership books?

By Mr. Lockley: I have reference, your Honor, only to the exhibits which she had seen during the period of the partnership. There are no books in evidence for that period of time.

Perhaps I should restate my question in this way:

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to tell us from your examination of the books of the sole proprietorship, and the other items in evidence which you have seen, including the checks to cash, and the settlement sheets, the amounts which are recorded as having been paid to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company during the year 1945?

A. I think I can give you that. For the single proprietorship, the amount paid out in overages to Shotwell appears at $105,473.88.

2141 By the Court: That includes the year 1945 only?

By the Witness: That is only 1945, for the single ownership. For the partnership, for the period from June 1—December 31, 1945, the amount—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I am not aware that this lady has identified even scraps of paper later than the 27th of November, but she now presumes to bring us to the end of December. And I object.

By the Court: Well, I am not too clear as to the date she refers to—when you state the date of December 31st.

By the Witness: Your Honor—

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me, your Honor.

2142 By the Court: She can answer my question.

By the Witness: I used the date of December 31st only because it signifies the close of the year. The last sheet was the one that I was just shown for $66,148.35. If you wish, I will amend the date to read November 27, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. Will you answer the question then?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I am confused. It is, of course, a grievous and serious matter, and if we might have a new question, so that I could again tell whether an objection would stand to that, I would appreciate that.

By the Court: Well, I think the question still stands, except that it is amended to read from June 1, 1945, to November 27, 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: Is that the way the government proposes the question then, with that amendment?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, I will make that amendment, Mr. Kirby.

2143 By the Witness:

A. The amount of overages paid out from the partnership up to November 27th, 1945, was $71,672.35.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that relate to shipments up to November 27th; is that correct?

A. That relates to shipments to November—covering and including the shipment of November 24th.

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me, Mr. Lockley. Does that also include the payment on November 27th?

By the Witness: Yes, it does.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, will you give us the total of the two figures?

A. The total is $177,146.23.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I don't like to be in conflict with my colleague, but I would like to know if there is anything else down to the end of the year, for the record.

By Mr. Lockley: We are coming to it. We have gotten to November 27th now.

2144 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit 63-A again, a settlement sheet, and I ask you if there is an item of advance on that settlement sheet?

A. Yes, there is.

2145 Q. And what is the amount of the advance?

A. $30,000.00.

Q. And do you know at what time that advance would have been made?

A. I would be unable to tell without the records.

Q. Would it have been made prior to or subsequent to the preparation of the settlement sheet?

A. That would—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the question. The lady says she is unable to tell when the advance was made.

By the Court: I so understood her answer.

By Mr. McConnell: He keeps referring to this as a settlement sheet. I don't understand that any foundation has been laid that this sheet was used to settle between Shotwell and the corporation, or proprietorship or partnership. If you want to call it a recap, all right, but certainly there is no showing that we sat down and settled on this basis. At least the corporation didn't.

By the Court: Well, I think it has been referred 2146 to as the recap sheet. Mr. Lubben may have referred to it as a settlement sheet. I don't remember.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, Miss Feldman, do you know what this sheet, 63-A, and similar sheets, is usually referred to as; is there any particular designation for it?

A. We called them several things. We have called them recap sheets, settlement sheets, overage sheets. There is no one particular way of referring to them.

Q. But any one of those terms has reference to the same type of record?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right, now I show you Government's Exhibit No. 64 and 64-A and B, and ask you if you can state if there is any relationship between those exhibits which consist of a check and two invoices, respectively.

A. Exhibit No. 64 is the payment of the two invoices, Exhibits Nos. 64-A and 64-B.

Q. In what amount?

A. The check is for $13,384.73.

Q. And I show you Government's Exhibit No. 65 and 65-A, B and C, and ask you if there is any 2147 relationship between those exhibits, which are a check and three invoices, respectively.

A. Yes, there is a relationship.

Q. And what is it?

A. Exhibit No. 65 is for the payment of the three invoices.

Q. And is that just the invoice amount, as shown on the face of the invoice?

A. Just the invoice amount.

Q. And what is the amount?

A. The total amount is—

Q. On the check.

A. $25,865.87.

2148 Q. I show you Exhibit 66 and 66-A, and B, and C, and ask if there is any relationship between those exhibits consisting of a check and three invoices?

A. There is.

Q. And what is that relationship?

A. Exhibit No. 66 is in payment of the three invoices.

Q. Of the face amount of the invoices?

A. Of the face amount of the invoices.

Q. And what is the amount?

A. $13,091.45.

Q. I show you Government Exhibits 67 and 67-A and B, and ask if there is any relationship between those documents, consisting of a check and two invoices?

A. There is.

Q. And what is it?

A. Exhibit No. 67 is in payment of the two invoices attached.

Q. Of the face amount of the invoices?

A. Face amount of the invoice.
Q. And what is the amount?
A. $13,603.79.
2149 Q. And I show you Exhibit 68 and Exhibit 68-A, a check and an invoice and ask you if there is any relationship between those two exhibits?
A. There is.
Q. And what is it?
A. Exhibit No. 68 is in payment of the attached invoice.
Q. Of the face amount?
A. The face amount.
Q. And what is the amount?
A. The check is for $18,119.46.
Q. And I show you Exhibits 69 and 69-A, a check and an invoice, and ask if there is any connection between those two exhibits?
A. Exhibit No. 69 is in payment of the face of the invoice attached.
Q. In what amount?
A. This is $11,565.72.
Q. All right. I show you Exhibit 70 and 70-A, check and an invoice, and ask if there is any relationship between those two documents?
A. There is.
Q. And what is it?
A. Exhibit 70 is in payment of the face amount of the invoice attached.
2150 Q. In what amount?
A. $13,967.59.
Q. I show you Exhibits 71 and 71-A, a check and an invoice, and ask if there is any relationship between them?
A. There is.
Q. And what is it?
A. Exhibit No. 71 is in payment of the face amount of the invoice attached.
Q. And what is the amount?
A. $10,370.26.
Q. I show you Exhibit 72 and Exhibit 72-A, and ask if there is any relationship between those exhibits?
A. There is.
Q. And what is that?
A. Exhibit No. 72 is in payment of the face amount of the invoice attached.

A. $5,717.95.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit 14-C, and I ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know who prepared it?

2151 A. I did.

Q. When?

A. February 6, 1946.

Q. At whose direction?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. And what did you do with it after you prepared it?

A. I gave it to Mr. Lubben.

Q. Now, is there any relationship between Exhibit 14-C—will you describe what that is?

A. It is a recap sheet for shipments from November 30 up to and including January 17, 1946.

Q. Is there any relationship between that exhibit, 14-C, the settlement sheet, and Exhibits 64-A and B; 65-A, B, and C; 66-A, B, C; 67-A, B; 68-A; 69-A; 70-A, and 71-A?

A. Yes, there is a relationship.

Q. Now, have you compared Exhibits 64-A and B; 65-A, B, and C; 66-A, B, and C; 67-A, and B; 68-A; 70-A, and 71-A; with Exhibit 14-C?

A. I have.

Q. And are each of the exhibits I have enumerated reflected in Exhibit 14-C?

A. They are.

2152 Q. And what is the nature of the information contained on 14-C?

A. It shows the item received, the date, and the poundage, and the overage.

2153 Q. Any other information; the item, the date and the poundage; and what is the nature of the items?

A. Cardinals, spice buttons, chocolate covered nuts, billed at 42 cents; and chocolate covered nuts at 48 cents.

Q. Any further information?

A. Yes, the total weight of each classification of candy, multiplied by the overage, to get the actual extension for the item.

Q. All right. And what is the total amount?

A. $41,682.10.

By the Court: Was that the overage?

By the Witness: That is the total amount of the overage, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 14, 14-A and 14-B, and ask if you have seen them before?

A. I have.

Q. And when was that?

A. When Mr. Lubben returned and gave these to me.

Q. Do you know who prepared them; do you recognize the handwriting?

A. Mr. Lubben prepared these.

2154 Q. And what did you do with them after he had returned them to you?

A. I voided the checks in the check book.

Q. Were those checks in the same condition then that they are at the present time?

A. They are.

Q. That is to say, did they have the names cut out at the time they were returned to you?

A. I received them with the names cut out.

Q. Will you total those three checks for me, please?

A. $41,682.10.

Q. Will you compare that with the total on Exhibit 14-C?

A. It is the same as the total on Exhibit 14-C.

Q. I show you Exhibit 73-A and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. Yes, I have seen this before.

2155 Q. Do you know who prepared it?

A. I must have, because of the information contained hereon.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting on it?

A. There are some figures here in Mr. Lubben's handwriting.

Q. Now, is Exhibit 73 in any way reflected to Exhibit 14-C, both of them being settlement sheets?

A. Yes, there is a relationship.

Q. And what is it?

A. Settlement sheet, 73-A, contains exactly the same items as Exhibit 14-C, with one difference. There is an additional shipment shown on 73—73-A, that is—dated February 28, 13,892 pounds chocolate covered nuts.

By Mr. O'Brien: 73-A or C?

By the Witness: That's 73-A.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. The difference is in the shipment of February 28th?

A. That is correct, the 13,892 pounds of chocolate covered nuts.

Q. And do you have an invoice in your hand for 2156 that shipment of chocolate covered nuts; if so, will you give us the information from it and the exhibit number?

A. Yes, the invoice covering that shipment of February 28th is Exhibit No. 72-A.

Q. And what is the amount of shipment or the weight of the shipment?

A. 13,892 pounds of chocolate covered nuts at 42 cents.

Q. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 73 and ask if you have seen that before, or the original.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know who wrote it?

A. No. This was written after the corporation was formed. I was not there at the time.

By Mr. Kirby: I didn't hear that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You don't know?

A. I say this was written after the corporation was formed. I was not there at the time.

Q. I ask you to compare that exhibit, No. 73, with Exhibit No. 73-A, and tell me if there is any relationship.

A. There is.

2157 Q. And what is it?

A. There is a notation on the recap sheet of $35,536.00. Exhibit No. 73 is $35,536.00.

Q. I also show you the reverse of Exhibit 14-C and ask you if you recognize the handwriting on it.

A. That is Mr. Lubben's handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is 73-C, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Just a second. I don't think there is one.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am just confused between 73-A and C.

By Mr. Lockley: 73-A is an invoice—I am sorry. 73-A is that settlement sheet, correct?

By Mr. Krane: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: And 73 is a check for $35,536.00. There is no 73-C, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh.

By Mr. Lockley: 14-C.

If your Honor please, I have reached a stopping point, if you wish to take the morning recess now.

2158 By the Court: All right. Take a recess for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now recess for ten minutes. Everybody remain standing until the jury gets in the jury room, please.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 74 and ask if that is a record kept by the General Confections in the ordinary course of business.

A. It is.

Q. Do you know from whom it was received?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 74—

By the Court: 74?

By Mr. Lockley: The first one was 74-A, your Honor, in case I was wrong. This is Exhibit 74.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. It is.

2159 Q. And as part of the books and records of the General Confections?

A. It is.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Exhibits Nos. 74 and 74-A.

By Mr. McConnell: No objection.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 74 and 74-A.)

By Mr. Lockley: May I have your indulgence for just a moment? I believe we may be able to shorten this by stipulation.

2160 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, counsel for the government and counsel for the defendants have stipulated that the following exhibits may be introduced into evidence:

Government's Exhibit 74, which is a check for $1,130.14.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I would like to make plain the basis of the stipulation, and that is that these are all on the books of Shotwell. They are all recorded and taxes have been paid on them. There is no question about anything on these transactions at all.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 74, a General Confections check to Shotwell for $1,130.14.

Government's Exhibit 74-A, an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections showing the same amount.

By the Court: I assume it is stipulated that the check is in payment of the face of the invoice?

2161 By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: That is right. They all match out. They are all shown on the books. There is no controversy. The taxes were paid on them.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 75-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $1,523.52 and Government's Exhibit 75 is a check from General Confections to Shotwell for $1,493.05 which is less 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 76 is a check from General Confections to Shotwell for four thousand—

By the Court: Is that 76 or 76-A?

By Mr. Lockley: Perhaps I better take them in logical sequence. I will take the invoices first in every case.

Government's Exhibit 76-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $4,501.56.

Government's Exhibit 76 is a check from General to Shotwell for $4,411.53. It is the invoice price less 2 per cent discount.

2162 77-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $1,627.50.

Government's Exhibit 77 is a check from General to Shotwell in the amount of $1,594.95, which is the invoice amount less 2 per cent discount.

By the Court: Read the amount of the check again, please.

By Mr. Lockley: $1,594.95.

Government's Exhibit 78-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $1,732.50.

Government's Exhibit 78 is a check from General to Shotwell for $1,697.85, which is the amount of the invoice less 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 79-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $3,148.65.

Government's Exhibit 79 is a check from General Confections to Shotwell in the amount of $3,085.68, which is the invoice less 2 per cent discount.

2163 Government's Exhibit 80-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General for $4,528.13.

Government's Exhibit 80 is a check from General to Shotwell for $4,437.57, which is the invoice price with 2 per cent discount.

Exhibit 81-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General for $6,094.35.

Government's Exhibit 81 is a check from General to Shotwell for $5,972.46, which is the amount of the invoice less 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 82-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General for $1,640.93.

Exhibit 82 is a check from General to Shotwell for $1,608.11, which is less the 2 per cent discount.

2164 Government's Exhibit 83-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $1,741.33.

Government's Exhibit 83 is a check from General to Shotwell for $1,706.60, which is the amount of the invoice less two percent discount.

Exhibit 84-A is an invoice for $3,429.30 plus freight charges, making a total of $3,513.51.

Government's Exhibit 84 is a check from General to Shotwell for $3,444.92, which is less the two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 85-A is an invoice for $5,409.60 from Shotwell to General, and Exhibit 85 is a check from General to Shotwell, for $5,301.41, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 86-A is an invoice of Shotwell to General for $4,677.74, and Exhibit 86 is a check from General to Shotwell for $4,584.15, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 87-A is invoice for $6,720.00,
2165 from Shotwell to General.

Exhibit 87 is a check from General to Shotwell for $6,585.60, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 88-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General for $5,448.24, Exhibit 88 is a check from General to Shotwell for $5,339.28, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 89-A is an invoice from General to Shotwell—I mean, from Shotwell to General for $8,010.24, and Exhibit 89 is a check from General to Shotwell for $7,850.04, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 90-A is an invoice from General, —or from Shotwell to General for $4,085.76.

Government's Exhibit 90 is a check from General to Shotwell for $4,004.04, which is the invoice less two percent discount.

Government's Exhibit 91-A is an invoice from Shotwell to General for $6,000.20, And Government's Exhibit 91 is a check from General to Shotwell for $5,880.20, which 2166 is the amount of the invoice less two percent discount.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman—

By Mr. McConnell: Why don't you read all of them, Mr. Lockley, and we will be through with them. You have some more.

By Mr. Lockley: We have some more. Do you want me to read them now?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By the Court: The exhibits referred to may be received in evidence.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the court, and marked Government's Exhibits 74, 74-A, 75, 75-A, 76, 76-A, 77, 77-A, 78, 78-A, 79, 79-A, 80, 80-A, 81, 81-A, 82, 82-A, 83, 83-A, 84, 84-A, 85, 85-A, 86, 86-A, 87, 87-A, 88, 88-A, 89, 89-A, 90, 90-A, 91, 91-A.)

By Mr. Lockley: Counsel for the Government, and counsel for the defendants likewise stipulate that the following exhibits may be received in evidence with-2167 out objection—

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 103-A, an invoice from Shotwell to General Confections for $2,300.40.

Government's Exhibit 103, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,254.39.

By the Court: $2,664.—

By Mr. Lockley: $2,254.39, which is the invoice less the two percent discount.

2168 Government's Exhibit 104-A, an invoice for $2,656.80.

Government's Exhibit 104, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,603.66 which is less the 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 105-A, an invoice from Shotwell to General for $2,484.00.

Exhibit 105, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,434.32, which is less the 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 106-A, an invoice from Shotwell to General for $3,600.00.

Exhibit 106, a check from General to Shotwell for $3,528.00 which is less 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 107-A, an invoice for $3,697.20 from Shotwell to General, and Exhibit 107, a check from General to Shotwell for $3,623.26, which is less the 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 108-A, an invoice for $2,678.40 from Shotwell to General and Exhibit 108, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,624.83, which is less the 2
2169 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 109-A an invoice for $2,387.60 from Shotwell to General and Exhibit 109, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,319.85, which is less the 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 110-A, an invoice for $2,520.00 from Shotwell to General. Exhibit 110, a check from General to Shotwell for $2,469.60 which is less the 2 per cent discount.

Government's Exhibit 111-A, an invoice for $1,638.00, and Exhibit 111-B, an invoice for $4,140.00.

By the Court: Wait a minute. 111-A is an invoice. What is the check number?

By Mr. Lockley: There are two invoices there, your Honor.

By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. Lockley: The first is for $1,638.00. That is 111-A. And 111-B is $4,100.40. Exhibit 111 is a check from General to Shotwell for $5,738.40.

(Handing documents to counsel.)

2170 By Mr. McConnell: There is no objection to those.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the series number?

By Mr. Lockley: Do you want the exhibit numbers?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, please.

By Mr. Lockley: They go from 113 to 119.

By Mr. Kirby: Give me the second group.

By Mr. Lockley: Counsel for the government and counsel for the defendants likewise stipulate the following exhibits may be received in evidence without objection—

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Kirby: And incidentally, it is plain, I am sure, but it is for the same reason that we stipulated before—it is all paid for. The taxes are paid for.

By the Court: Yes.

2171 By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 113-A,—

By the Court: You skipped 112?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. That is another matter.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 113-A is an invoice—perhaps I can save time if I say these are all Shotwell invoices to the General Confections and the checks are all from General Confections to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 113-A is an invoice for $1,202.40. Exhibit 113 is a check for $15,631.55.

Government's Exhibit 113-B is another invoice for $14,748.16. Exhibit 113 paid Exhibits 113-A and B.

Government's Exhibit 114-A is an invoice for $16,000.00 and Government's Exhibit 114-B is an invoice for $2,040.00. Exhibit 114 is a check for $17,697.20.

Government's Exhibit 115-A is an invoice for $15,
2172 877.12. Exhibit 115 is a check for $15,559.58.

Government's Exhibit 116-A is an invoice for $14,757.12. Exhibit 116 is a check for $14,461.98.

Government's Exhibit 117-A is an invoice for $8,377.60. Exhibit 117 is a check for $8,210.05.

Government's Exhibit 118-A is an invoice for $2,404.80. Exhibit 118 is a check for $2,356.70.

Government's Exhibit 119-A is an invoice for $1,202.40. Exhibit 119 is a check for $1,178.35.

In every instance where the amount of the check and the amount of the invoice do not coincide, it is because of the two per cent discount having been taken.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 103, 103-A, 104, 104-A, 105, 105-A, 106, 106-A, 107, 107-A, 108, 2173 108-A, 109, 109-A, 110, 110-A, 111, 111-A, 111-B, 113, 113-A, 113-B, 114, 114-A, 114-B, 115, 115-A, 116, 116-A, 117, 117-A, 118, 118-A, 119, 119-A.)

2174 (Handing documents to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell: No objection.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor, please, it is likewise stipulated between the counsel for the Government and for the defendants that the following exhibits may be received in evidence without objection:

121-C, an invoice for $408.00. Government's Exhibit 121-D, an invoice for $4,069.47. Exhibit 121-E, an invoice for $18,672.00.

By the Court: Is that E?

By Mr. Lockley: E.

By the Court: A, B, and then you jumped to E?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor, A and B are checks which I have not yet come to. The invoices are C, D and E. This is invoice 121-E, $18,672.64.

Government's Exhibit 121-F is an invoice showing a correction and a balance due Shotwell of $175.11 on account of an incorrect billing.

Exhibit 121 is a check from General Confections to 2175 Shotwell for $8,000.00.

Exhibit 121-A is another check for $8,000.00, and Exhibit 121-B is a check for $7,325.22.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 121, 121-A, 121-B, 121-C, 121-D, 121-E and 121-F.)

(Handing documents to counsel.)

By Mr. Lockley: It is stipulated between counsel for the Government and counsel for the defendants that the following exhibits may be introduced in evidence without objection—Exhibit 123-A.

By the Court: 123?

By Mr. Lockley: 123-A, an invoice for $636.16. 123, a check for $623.44.

Government's Exhibit 125-A, an invoice for $1,202.40. 125-B, an invoice for $2,404.80 and Exhibit 125-C, an invoice for $1,202.40.

2176 Government's Exhibit 125 is a check for $4,809.60.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 123, 123-A, 125, 125-A, 125-B, 125-C.)

By Mr. Lockley: Is there any objection to the invoices?

By Mr. McConnell: No objection to the invoices.

By Mr. Lockley: It is stipulated that the following exhibits may be admitted in evidence without objection—Exhibit 127, an invoice for $19,676.16. Exhibit 128, an invoice for $6,653.18. Exhibit 129, an invoice for $7,757.43.

Government's Exhibit 130 is an invoice for $4,489.93. Government's Exhibit 131 is an invoice for $3,175.20 and 132 is an invoice for $3,360.52.

By Mr. McConnell: Are you offering these?

2177 By Mr. Lockley: If you have no objection.

By Mr. McConnell: We have no objection as to those, as to the foundation. We object to these checks on the ground that they are all in 1947, which is outside of the indictment period. He has to lay a foundation for the admission of the checks.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I will develop later on, your Honor, that these checks were issued in payment of certain invoices and shipments which were made during the year 1946. The checks were written in 1947.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: I will do that when I come to it.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, and 132.)

2178 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, will you examine Government's Exhibit 74, and 74-A, 75, and 75-A, 76, and 76-A, 77 and 77-A, 78 and 78-A, 79, and 79-A, 80 and 80-A, 81 and 81-A, 82, and 82-A, 83, and 83-A, 84, and 84-A, 85, and 85-A, 86 and 86-A, 87 and 87-A, 88 and 88-A, 89 and 89-A, 90 and 90-A, 91 and 91-A, and tell me if those exhibits have any relation to each other?

A. They have.

Q. What is that relationship?

A. The checks are all payments of the invoice amount.

Q. And the invoices are all exhibits with the letter "A" following the exhibit number, is that correct?

A. That is so.

Q. And the checks are all the numbers without the letters following?

A. That is so.

Q. Now I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence, 101, and ask you if you can state if that has any connection to Exhibits 74-A to 91-A, inclusive?

2179 By Mr. O'Brien: Is Exhibit 101 in evidence, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is it, a recap sheet?

By Mr. Lockley: It is a recap sheet.

By Mr. McConnell: Haven't you work sheets you can use to shorten this up?

By Mr. Lockley: Well—

Q. Can you?

A. Yes, sir, the work sheet will show it.

Q. Refer to your work sheets and maybe you can tell us quicker that way.

2180 A. There is a relationship.

Q. Will you describe it?

A. With the exception of 88-A, 84-A, 85-A, 75-A and 76-A, all the other invoices appear on the recap sheet.

Q. And in what manner do they appear?

By the Court: When you speak of the recap sheet you should refer to it by Exhibit number.

By the Witness: I am sorry, sir. It is Exhibit—they appear on Exhibit 101.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And Exhibit 101 is a recap sheet?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, in what manner do they appear?

A. There is a notation as to gum work and Cardinals, all Shotwell shipments, and under gum work appears a notation: March 25, 496 cases of gum drops, 14,880 pounds.

Q. And that is Government's Exhibit 74-A?
A. That refers to 74-A.
Q. All right.
A. Government's Exhibit 75-A appears on Exhibit
2181 No. 101 as April 12th, 700 cases of gum drops, 21,000 pounds.
Exhibit No. 78-A appears on Exhibit 101 as 21,000 pounds of spice strings.
Q. Will you check Exhibit No. 75-A and see if you are correct on that number.
A. 75?
Q. On the 2100 pounds.
A. No, 75-A is not included on this recap sheet.
Q. All right. Well, you said one of them was 75-A.
A. I am sorry.
Q. What is the correct number of that exhibit?
A. Spice strings is 78-A.
Q. And the one before that?
A. 77-A.
Q. All right. That's it.
A. 77-A appears on Exhibit No. 101 as 21,000 pounds of spice strings.
Q. Well, to shorten it, can you state that with the exception of those exhibits you enumerated, 75-A, 76-A, 84-A, 85 and 88-A—
By the Court: Will you read them again, a little more slowly?
2182 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. —75-A, 76-A, 84-A, 85-A and 88-A, that each one of the exhibits from 74-A to 91-A, inclusive, are reflected on Exhibit 101?
A. That is so.
Q. Now, what is the nature of the information contained on Exhibit 101?
A. The date of the shipment, the number of cartons, the name of the item, the weight, the overage per pound, and the total amount due on overages for each item.
Q. And is that information, as contained on 101, does it correspond to the similar information contained on Exhibits 74-A to 91-A, inclusive, with the exception of 75-A, 76-A, 84-A, 85-A and 88-A?
A. It does.
By Mr. Kirby: And with the exception of the overage. You mean that, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: No, I did not mean that.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. What was the purpose for the preparation of Exhibit 101, if you know?
A. There was going to be a payment made on the overages due for this group of shipments.
2183 Q. And what is the significance of the figures with the dollar marks in front of them?
By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute. I would like to move to strike the answer that there was going to be a payment. You mean there was going to be a check drawn for cash.
By the Court: Well, I don't think she is to draw any conclusions from exhibits. She may read the exhibit, if that is what you have in mind, but I don't understand that she prepared it.
Or did you prepare it?
By the Witness: This is Lubben's handwriting.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you recognize that handwriting?
A. Mr. Lubben's.
Q. Mr. Lubben's handwriting. Now, I show you Government's Exhibit 102. Have you ever seen that before?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that also a settlement sheet?
A. It is.
Q. And does that have any relationship to Gov-
2184 ernment's Exhibit 74-A to 91-A?
A. It has.
Q. What information does it contain?
By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I would like to inquire—at the moment. I am under the impression that this young lady was not working for General Confections at this time. Now, am I right or wrong about that?
By Mr. Lockley: That is a record kept in the ordinary course of business.
By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me.
By the Court: Wait a minute. Let's find out.
By Mr. Kirby: I don't mean to be interrupting, but I don't think she was even working there at this time, was she?
2185 By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you know the date of that settlement sheet, Exhibit 102?
A. Yes.

Q. And what is it?

A. May 15th.

Q. May 15th. And were you working for General Confections at that period of time?

A. I was not.

By Mr. Kirby: I move to strike all her responses with respect to Exhibit 102, and also all of her responses with respect to Exhibit 100, because she wasn't working there during the period of Exhibit 100, either.

By the Court: Well, 101 and 102 are in evidence. She hasn't presumed to lay any foundation for those exhibits.

By Mr. Kirby: But she was explaining how they were made up. And she wasn't even there.

By Mr. Lockley: These are records which are kept in the ordinary course of business, your Honor.

2186 By the Court: I assume that there has been a foundation laid for them.

By Mr. Kirby: But we don't want it adorned by the proof of this lady who wasn't there. That's why I object to it.

By Mr. Lockley: It isn't necessary for her to be there, your Honor. Under Section 1732, Title 28, United States Code—

By the Court: She was asked if there was any relationship between Exhibit 101 and Exhibits 74-A to 91-A, inclusive, except certain exhibits. She pointed out that there was that connection by having a notation of similar invoices as appear on the Exhibit 101. So I understood.

By Mr. O'Brien: We have no objection to that.

By the Court: I don't know just what Mr. Kirby is referring to then.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it.

By Mr. Kirby: So do I.

By Mr. McConnell: She isn't supposed to be an expert on books.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

2187 By Mr. Kirby: And I want to apologize to the Court. I sat her for five minutes and listened to her testimony before I remembered she wasn't there.

By the Court: I see no objection to her calling—I see no objection to her statement that the same invoice numbers as reflected in these various exhibits appear on Exhibit 101. That is all she did.

By Mr. O'Brien: There was one statement she made, though, Judge, which I asked be stricken and I didn't hear your Honor rule. Miss Feldman said, "We were about to pay certain overages," and I ask that be stricken.

By the Court: Well, I don't remember that statement. If that statement was made about during the time she was not employed there, then it may be stricken.

2188 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, will you look at Exhibit 102 and tell me the amount in dollars?

A. $33,567.

Q. Will you read from that exhibit sheet, from that Exhibit 102, how that amount was paid?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object. That relates to a period when I am under the impression she was not there, and the document will speak for itself.

By the Court: Well, if it appears on the exhibit, she may read from it.

By Mr. Lockley: May I read from it, your Honor? It is in evidence.

By the Court: Yes.

She can read it, or counsel can read it. Anyone can read it if it is in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: Exhibit 102 is what is commonly called a settlement or recap sheet, headed "Shotwell shipments", with a column, gum work, and the dates from March 25 to April 30, the column of description, gum drops, spice drops, the amount of each shipment in 2189 pounds, the column 10 cents a pound, and a total extension in dollars amounting to $19,518.00.

Another column headed "Cardinals" showing shipments from April 10 to May 6, the number of dozen, the figure $2.25 a dozen, and the total amount, $14,049.00. Total gum work, $19,518.00; total Cardinals, $14,049.00; for a total of $33,567.00, less payments paid to Frank on way to farm, $1,488.00; paid to Frank in Chicago, $14,000.00; paid to Miss Krasne, or Mr. Krasne, for Mr. Cain, $1,450.00; paid to Frank by Hankermyer, $8,450.00, total twenty-three thousand—I am sorry—$25,388.00; $33,567.00, from which is subtracted $25,388.00, and the figure is $8,179.00 balance, paid to Frank by Heitmann.

This cleans up allowances on all shipments to May 15.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits 103, 103-A, 104, 104-A, 105, 105-A, 106, 106-A, 107, 107-A, 108, 108-A, 109, 109-A, 110, 110-A, 111, 111-A, and 111-B, and ask if those exhibits bear any relationship
2190 to each other?

Use your work sheets, if necessary.

By the Court: Those are not in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: They were just stipulated in evidence.

By the Court: Just now?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. Those were part of them.

By the Court: I am sorry. Yes, that's right.

2191 By the Witness:

A. Yes, they do bear a relationship.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is the relationship?

A. The checks offered in evidence are in payment of the invoice amount on the attached invoices.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 112, in evidence, and ask you if that bears any relationship to Exhibits 103-A to 111-B, inclusive, which are the invoices?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I wonder if we might not be informed before he proceeds to ask this young lady about that whether it is not true that she was not in the employ of General Confections during the periods of each of the invoices to which he is now directing her attention.

By the Court: Yes, you may.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, when did you begin your employment with the General Confections?

A. Around August 1 of 1946.

Q. And I call your attention to Exhibit No. 112,
2192 do you know when that was made up?

A. I don't—after July 11.

Q. And how are you able to tell that?

A. Well, the last date on this recap slip appears as July 11.

Q. And what was your position in the General Confections when you began your work around August 1?

A. Office manager and head bookkeeper.

Q. And as such did you have charge of the files and the books and records of the General Confections Company?

A. I did.

Q. Did you find those invoices and those checks and that Exhibit 112 in those files when you arrived?

A. I did.

Q. And were they a part of the regularly kept books and records of the General Confections?

A. They were.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is disputed. And I don't think there is any evidence to show that they were part of the regular records, within the meaning of the Federal Shop Book rule.

2193 By the Court: Which exhibits are you referring to when asking that question?

By Mr. Lockley: Specifically to 112, a recap sheet.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is a recap sheet and not part of the regular books and records, as defined by Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, what was the general practice of the General Confections in keeping a record of overages?

By Mr. Kirby: I wish to object to that question specifically because Exhibit 112, to which reference is being made, and each of the invoices on it, are dated for a period which it now appears was not a period of this young lady's service. She was not there.

By the Court: Yes, I think you will have to lay further foundation for Exhibit 112.

Well, I think it is about adjournment time.

2194 Before we adjourn, members of the jury, I wanted to make this statement to you, that my attention has been called to a news item in one of the morning papers regarding some civil tax litigation involving one of the defendants in this case.

Now, those proceedings are in the United States Tax Court in Washington, D. C., and are of a civil nature.

Now, the headline of the article makes reference to the Shotwell case. Of course, the tax litigation referred to in the article is in no way connected with the Shotwell case or the Shotwell Company.

If any of you have read the article, you will completely disregard the same and remove from your mind any inference or suggestion that the civil tax litigation in Washington involving one of the defendants is in any way connected with this case.

And in that connection I ask you not to read any news items which might appear in any of the newspapers
2195 regarding the proceedings in this case. This case must be decided on the evidence you hear in the court room and nothing else. And in order that you may in no way be influenced by news reports of these court proceedings I ask you to refrain from reading any news articles of the case during the time that you are serving as jurors.

We will be in recess now until two o'clock.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, may I interrupt at this point to make a motion in that connection?

By the Court: Well, I think that is all that I will state now to the jurors. You may make your motion subsequently.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

Everybody will kindly remain standing until the jury is in the jury room.

(Whereupon a recess was taken to 2:00 o'clock p. m. of the same day, being Friday, September 25, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Friday, September 25, 1953,
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell
Mr. William T. Kirby

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By the Court: You may proceed.

2197 BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Continued)

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I would now like to read from the recap sheet, Government's Exhibit 112, and from the invoice which that Government Exhibit—

By the Court: I don't follow you, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I would now like to read from the recap sheet which is Government's Exhibit 112, and show the relationship between that recap sheet, and the Government's Exhibits 102- to 111-B, respectively.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 112 is headed, "The Shotwell Manufacturing Company", with five columns headed, respectively, "Invoice Number", "Date", "Item", "Weight", and "Cost".

The first line on Government's Exhibit 112 is C219517. The date is 6/18/46. 1,000 cases jells; weight, 30,000.

2198 Cost, $3,600.00.

That is in agreement with the information contained on Government's Exhibit 106-A, which has the same invoice number, the same date, the same description of items, the same weight and the same cost.

In the interest of brevity, the same will be true of the other invoices.

The second line on Exhibit 112 is C220289. Date 6/20/46. 690 cases of jell jells. Weight, 20,700. Cost, $2,484.00.

That information is likewise contained on Government's Exhibit 105-A.

Third line is C220591. The date is 6/25/46. 738 cases jell jells. Weight, 22,140. Cost, $2,656.80, which is the information contained on Exhibit 104-A, an invoice.

2199 The fourth line of Government's Exhibit 112 is C221149. The date is 6/28/46. 369 cases Jell Jells. Weight, 19,170. Cost, $2,300.40. It agrees in every respect with the information on Government's Exhibit 103-A, an invoice.

The fifth line is invoice number C221448. The date is 7/2/46. 1,027 cases of Jell Jells. Weight, 30,810. Cost, $3,697.20—which is the amount and other information shown on Government's Exhibit 107-A, an invoice.

The sixth line of Government's Exhibit 112 is invoice number C222035, dated 7/5/46. Item, 744 Cases of Jell Jells. Weight, 22,320. Cost, $2,678.40—which information is likewise contained on Government's Exhibit 108-A.

By the Court: Perhaps you can summarize your statement by making some general statement which applies to the remaining invoices as they may be related to Government's Exhibit 112.

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 109-A and 2200 110-A and 111-B are likewise contained in a columnar fashion on Government's Exhibit 112 and are exactly the same information. There is a total weight of all items of $242,190.00.

By the Court: Will you state that again, please?

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me, sir. It is 242,190 pounds.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I ask if you know on the books of the General Confections Company, what was the amount of overage that was charged on items listed on Government's Exhibit 112?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object because this all relates to a period when the lady was not there.

By the Court: Well, if the books are in evidence, why she may answer the question.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, sir. The books are not in evidence. We have no books for that period.

By Mr. Kirby: No.

2201 By the Court: I don't know that you have laid any foundation for the admission of secondary evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: These items are in evidence. I will withdraw the question then.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I will further call your attention—

By the Court: There is nothing before the Court now.

By Mr. Kirby: Excuse me. I wanted to say that he was reading from Exhibit 112 the dollar amount on there which is the invoice amount and not the overage amount. It is just a recap of invoices.

By the Court: I make no comment about it.

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, but he didn't read the whole thing.

By Mr. Lockley: I read all of it. Would you like to examine it?

By Mr. Kirby: I think under Court order you are required to give a copy anyway.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. Didn't I read all of it?

2202 By Mr. Kirby: Well, the 3600 on the first item is in the invoice item as to which we stipulated. There is no controversy. It was paid. There is no tax due on it. There is no argument. The same thing is true as to each of the dollar amounts on that exhibit, your Honor.

2203 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibits 113 and 113-A and B and 114 and 114-A and B, 115, 115-A, 116, 116-A, 117, 117-A, 118, 118-A, 119 and 119-A. Are there any more that I have handed you?

A. No.

Q. Will you examine Government's Exhibits 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118 and 119, and tell me if they bear any relation to Government's Exhibits 113-A and B, 114-A and B, 115-A, 116-A, 117-A, 118-A, 119-A?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object to the question on the ground that the transactions as to which he is now interrogating the witness occurred during a period when she was not there.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, are you able to tell from the information appearing on those invoices the dates upon which they were paid?

A. Yes.

By the Court: The dates upon which—

By Mr. Lockley: The invoice amounts were paid.

By the Witness:

2204 A. Yes. They were paid on August 1st and September 3rd, both of those dates.

Q. On August 1st and September 3rd?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you employed by the General Confections on August 1st and on September 3rd?

A. I was.

Q. Will you—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, the invoices that he asks about—the shipments into this company occurred prior to the time, as I understand it, that she came back to work with them, the shipments.

By the Court: He just asked her whether she was there when the invoices were paid.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, but I originally arose to object when he was asking her about the shipments.

By Mr. Lockley: I didn't ask about the shipments. What I asked was do those checks—

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley:

2205 Q. Do those checks have any relationship to those invoices I have handed you, being invoices 113-A to 119-A, inclusive?

By Mr. McConnell: I thought we agreed that the checks paid the invoices.

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness: The relation—there is a relationship.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is it?

A. The checks pay the typed amounts on the invoices.

2206 Q. All right. I show you Exhibit 120 in evidence and ask you if you have seen it before?

A. I have.

Q. And do you know who prepared it?

A. I did.

Q. Is it in your handwriting?

A. It is.

Q. Do you know when you prepared it?

A. It was prepared—part of this was prepared some time after August 14th, and the balance after December 17.

Q. And with respect to the part that was prepared after August 14, what does it relate to?

A. It relates to a group of shipments that were made between July 22nd and August 14th.

Q. And what are those shipments?

A. They are shipments of gelatin jells, Cardinals, special chocolate liquor and Coronet mix.

Q. And do they bear any relation to Exhibits 113-A to 119-A, inclusive?

A. They do.

Q. What is it?

A. The invoices, which are Exhibits 113-A to 2207 119-A, are contained on this sheet.

Q. And is there any other information contained on that sheet with respect to those invoices?

A. There is.

Q. What is it?

A. The amount that appears as typed on the invoice, the item, the weight for the item, and the overage due on each item.

Q. And what is the overage due on each item, as shown by that Exhibit 120?

A. $1,002.00 for gelatin jells, $1,503.00 for Coronet mix, and $27,005.63 for Cardinals.

Q. And is there a total amount shown due by that Exhibit 120?

A. There is.

Q. What is it?

A. $29,510.63.

By the Court: Do you have the total amount of overages which are said to be noted on Exhibit 120?

By the Witness: Well, there is another part to this, your Honor.

By the Court: Can you give it to me?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that total of $29,510.63 relate only to the 2208 part of the entry made—

A. At the top of—the top part of the sheet.

Q. —about August 14?

A. That's right.

Q. Then what was the purpose of the balance of the sheet?

A. That was the rough recap of the shipments between November 6, and December 17.

Q. All right.

Will you just put that exhibit down beside you for a moment?

Now, I show you Exhibits 121 and 121-A, B, C, D, E, and F, and ask you if you know if they bear any relationship to each other?

By the Court: It already appears, doesn't it, that they bear a relationship with the checks, that they paid the face amount of the invoice? That is in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: We agreed to that, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence 122-A, and Exhibit 122-C, and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

2209 Q. And what are they?

A. 122-C is the rough copy that I kept of shipments from Shotwell.

Q. For what period?

A. From September 5th to October 26th.

Q. And do any of the invoices, 121-C, D, E and F, appear thereon?

A. They do.

Q. And which ones are they?

A. 121-C, 121-D, 121-E.

Q. Is that all?

A. That's right.

Q. And what exhibit does that appear on?

A. It appears on Exhibit No. 122-C.

Q. And what is Exhibit 122-A?

A. 122-A is a recap sheet.

Q. And what information does it contain?

A. It is dated 9/10/46, contains a record of a shipment of 25,000 pounds of liquor at fourteen eighty and —it was 25,000 pounds of liquor at fourteen eighty, $3,700,00; and September 24th an item of 50,016 boxes of Cardinals, at 18¾ cents. The extension is $9,378.00.

Q. Is there a total on that?

2210 A. There is a total.

Q. What is it?

A. $13,078.00.

Q. And there is a total on Exhibit 122-C?

A. No, there is not.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence 122-D and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. And when was that?

A. October 7th, 1946.

Q. Do you know the handwriting?

A. It is my own.

Q. And when did you prepare it?

A. On October 7th.

Q. And at whose direction?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. And what does that purport to be?

A. That is a payment of cash to Shotwell for $12,235.00.

Q. You don't mean it is a payment of cash. That isn't what the exhibit is.

A. Well, this is a cash authorization.

Q. A cash authorization slip?

A. That's correct.

2211 Q. Was that a part of the records of the company?

A. It is.

Q. And what was done with relation to that cash authorization slip?

A. It was posted in the purchase book, and then from there to the accounts payable ledger.

Q. And anything else; what was the purpose of the cash authorization slip?

A. Well, this called for the issuance of a check to cash for the purposes of payment.

2212 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 122 and ask you if that has any relation to the cash authorization slip.

A. Yes, it has.

Q. And what is it?

A. This is a cash check for $12,235.00, issued by Mr. Lubben.

A. And does that bear any relation to Exhibits 121-C, D, E and F, or to 122-A and B?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is it?

A. That is a payment of the overages on Exhibits 121-D and 121-E.

By the Court: A little slower, please.

By the Witness: 121-D and 121-E.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object again, your Honor, to the characterizations that those papers are for payment. The check was drawn to get proceeds of cash to Mr. Lubben. And that is all she knows about it.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: She has no right to talk of payment.

By the Court: That's true.

2213 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You don't mean it reflects a payment of overage; what you mean is that the records of the General Confections so indicated, but you don't know whether such a payment was actually made?

A. No.

By the Court: The exhibits are 121-D and 121-E.

By the Witness: That's right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know for what purpose the check was issued?

A. The check was issued to get cash to pay for these overages.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 123 and 123-A, which it has been stipulated are an invoice and a check in payment of the invoice amount, and I ask you what is the nature of the shipment on 123-A.

A. That is a shipment of Cardinal chocolates.

Q. How much?

A. 1,704 pounds.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 124-A, in evidence, and ask you if you have seen that before.

2214 A. I have.

Q. And what is it?

A. It is a cash authorization slip.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting?

A. My own.

Q. And when did you prepare it?

A. On November 7, 1946.

Q. And at whose authorization or direction?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. And what was the purpose of it?

A. That was to show that a check was to be issued to cash to pay Shotwell for overages.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection, your Honor.

By the Court: I think she can testify that, according to the records reflected in the book, the check was drawn for that purpose. That's as far as she states.

By Mr. Lockley: That's as far as the exhibit states.

2215 I will read Exhibit 124-A. It says:

General Confections, Inc., 11/7/46, pay to cash, Shotwell, amount $2,323.50.

By the Court: How much?

By Mr. Lockley: $2,323.50.

By the Court: Well, which exhibit are you reading from?

By Mr. Lockley: This is 124-A, the cash authorization slip.

By the Court: I thought that was $319.50.

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor, that was the invoice.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Am I correct?

A. No, the invoice is $636.16.

Q. Well, will you describe the meaning of the rest of the writing on that cash authorization slip, Miss Feldman?

By the Court: You mean -124-A?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. There are some other entries?

A. That's correct.

2216 Q. Can you identify them?

A. It shows that $2,004.00 was entered on the purchase book on page 77, line 13, and that the balance of $319.50 was entered on the purchase book on page 85-A.

There is a notation here that on November 7, 1946, a check, No. 1521, was drawn for $2,004.00, and on November 23, 1946, check No. 1523 for $319.50 was drawn.

Q. All right. I show you check No. 1623, Exhibit No. 124, for $319.50 and ask you if that bears any relation to cash authorization slip, Exhibit No. 124-A?

A. There seems to be a difference in check numbers here.

By the Court: I don't hear you.

By the Witness: I said there seems to be a difference in check numbers here.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit No. 126, in evidence, a check for $2,004.00, and ask you if that bears any relation to Exhibit No. 124-A?

A. Well, that seems to be the payment for the $2,004.00.

2217 Q. And what do the two checks total?

A. Twenty-three hundred twenty-three, fifty.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibits 125 and 125-A, B and C. It is stipulated that 125 is a check which paid the invoice amounts of A, B and C. I also show you Exhibit No. 126-B, and ask you if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it appears?

A. My own.

Q. Do you know when it was written?
A. As the invoices came in.
Q. At whose direction?
A. These records were kept at Mr. Lubben's direction.
Q. And what is the information contained on it?
A. The information contained on here shows the invoice number, the date, the number of cases, the total weight and the invoice price.
2218 Q. And is that the same information which is contained on Exhibits 125-A, B, and C?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Is there any other information on that slip?
A. I seem to—without having extended it—have shown that the amount due on overages was $2,004.00.
Q. I show you Exhibits 126-A, and 126-C, and ask you if you have seen those before?
A. I have.
Q. And what are they?
A. They are the recap sheets that were made up from these rough notations.
Q. Well, will you describe by exhibit number what you refer to?
A. Well, Exhibit No. 126-A and 126-B, are duplicates of one another, which were made up after 126-B was made up.
Q. And 126-B is in handwriting?
A. 126-B is in my handwriting. 126-A and C, are the typed copies.
Q. What information do 126-A and C contain?
A. They contain the information on 126-B, as to the number of pounds of Coronet mix that were shipped 2219 on the three invoices, and the extension for the $2,004.00, which was due.
Q. All right.
I show you Government's Exhibit No. 126-D and ask if you have seen that before?
A. I have.
Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it is?
A. My own.
Q. And do you know when it was prepared?
A. I'd say on November 7, 1946.
Q. And at whose direction?
A. Mr. Lubben's.

Q. And what is Exhibit 126-D?

A. That is a cash authorization for $2,004.00 covering the three invoices on 126-B.

Q. And what are those three invoices?

A. Those are the three invoices for Coronet mix, and their invoice numbers—

Q. Give the exhibit numbers.

A. Yes. They are Exhibits Numbers 125-A, 125-B and 125-C.

Q. Will you give me the invoice numbers, please?

A. The invoice numbers are 181796, 181797, and 181798.

2220 By Mr. Lockley: May I read to the jury 126-D, which is cash authorization slip headed General Confections, Inc., pay to cash (Shotwell Manufacturing) amount $2,004.00; No. 187198, 5010; 187197, 120; 187196, 5010; total 20,040 pounds at 10 cents. Date paid, 11-7-46. Check No. 1615.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Exhibit 126 and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. And what is that check number?

A. 1615.

Q. And what is the amount?

A. $2,004.00.

Q. And does that bear any relationship to Exhibit 126-D, the cash authorization slip?

A. It does. This is the check that was issued for the authorization slip.

Q. Was that transaction, if you know, entered on the books of the General Confections Corporation?

A. It was. It was entered in the purchase book, 2221 line 13.

Q. How do you know that?

A. There is a notation here as to where it was entered.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Exhibits 127 to 132, inclusive, which are invoices of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. And I also show you Exhibit No. 120. And I call your attention to the notations contained on the bottom of that slip and I ask you if the lower portion of Exhibit 120 bears any relation to Exhibits 127 to 132.

A. It does.
Q. And what is it?
A. This is a rough recap of Exhibits Nos. 127 to 132.
Q. And what information is contained in that rough recap?
A. The date, the invoice number, the invoice price, the item, and the amount due on overage.
Q. And is there a total of the amount due on overages?
A. There is.
Q. And what is it?
A. $17,448.00.

2222 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 133-A and ask if you have seen that before.
A. I have.
Q. Do you know in whose handwriting it appears?
A. My own.
Q. When was it prepared?
A. December 4, 1946.
Q. At whose direction?
A. Mr. Lubben's.
Q. Does that bear any relationship to the lower portion of Government's Exhibit 120?
A. It does.
Q. What is the relationship?
A. Cash authorization slip which was Exhibit No. 133-A reads 75,660 pounds of drops at 10 cents, $7,566.00, and 52,704 Cardinals at 18¾ cents, $9,842.00—a total of $17,408.00. These figures are a copy of the ones appearing on this sheet.
Q. What sheet?
A. On Exhibit No. 120.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 133 in evidence and ask if you have seen that before.

2223 A. I have.

Q. Does that bear any relationship to Exhibit 120 and to Exhibits 127 to 132?
A. It does.
Q. What is it?
A. This is a check to cash that was drawn for $17,190.25 which represents the amount due on the overages.

Q. That check is for how much again?
A. $17,190.25.
Q. If you know, is there any explanation for the difference in that amount of the item and the previous amount of $17,405.00 that you testified to?
A. There seems to be an adjustment of some kind but there is no way of my checking it.
Q. Will you tell us, are you able to tell?
A. No.
Q. Is there any information on the cash authorization slip that will help you on that?
A. No, there is none.
Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification No. 133-B and ask if you have seen that before.
A. I have.
2224 Q. What is it? What does it purport to be?
A. This is the stub of the check book that we were using in December of 1946.
Q. Was that record kept by you?
A. Under my supervision or by me. My handwriting appears on it.
Q. Your handwriting appears there?
A. Yes.
Q. Was that made in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?
A. Yes, it was.
By Mr. Lockley: I offer in evidence Government's Exhibit 133-B consisting of only one page. You may detach it if you so desire.
By Mr. McConnell: I object to it. It is self-serving, so far as Shotwell is concerned.
By Mr. Lockley: Let the record show that Government's Exhibit 113-B was detached from the balance 2225 of the check in open court.
I offer Government's Exhibit 133-B in evidence, your Honor.
By the Court: It may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 133-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I call your attention to the notation on Exhibit

133-B appearing under the date 12-4 and ask if that is in your handwriting.

A. It is.

Q. And what does it say?

A. It says, "December 4th, Shotwell Manufacturing Company. Cash, $17,190.25."

2226 Q. What, if any, if you know, was the purpose of making such an entry on Government's Exhibit 133-B?

A. The reason for that was that we had not given Mr. Lubben our own company check for this item. He issued a check in Chicago for this amount, and put the words "General Confections, Inc." on the face of it, and then cashed it here in Chicago, and we picked it up when he told us about it afterwards.

By the Court: May I see that?

By Mr. McConnell: May we have the Exhibit number in the record now as to what she was referring to, the check that was cashed in Chicago?

By the Witness: There is no number on that check, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: The exhibit is 133.

By the Witness: The exhibit number, yes.

By the Court: This is Mr. Lubben's personal check?

By the Witness: He used a blank check for the purpose of issuing this.

2227 By Mr. McConnell: May I ask a question on that, if the Court please?

By the Court: I am sorry?

By Mr. McConnell: Could I ask a question on that?

By the Court: Yes.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell:

Q. On that memoranda that was made on the check stub, did you get your information as to the $17,000 cash from Mr. Lubben?

A. I made up a recap sheet for that, if I am not mistaken.

Q. And where did you get your information to make that entry?

A. From the figures that I had.

Q. Did you get it from Mr. Lubben?

A. The figures for the recap sheet, sir?

Q. No. The check stub, I am talking about.

A. I made up a recap sheet, sir.

Q. I am not talking about the recap sheet. I am talking about a check stub.

A. The amount of the check drawn?

Q. Yes.

2228 A. I would have gotten that from Mr. Lubben.

Q. Then you don't know anything about it except what he told you at that time, is that right?

A. I know the overages were due at that time, and I had a recap sheet for $17,448.00.

Q. You don't know anything about the payment of cash, is what I am talking about, except what Mr. Lubben told you?

A. No.

Direct Examination (Continued) by Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, are you able to state from the exhibits which have been presented to you today, the amount of the overages as shown by those exhibits which were due the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the year 1946?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, this covers a period of time when the lady was not there, and had no personal knowledge of it, and I object to the question.

By the Court: Well, insofar as the books and records are in evidence, she may testify as to what they disclose.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the expression "books"—

2229 By the Court: Well, I say books and records or documents.

By Mr. Kirby: The memoranda, she didn't prepare it, you see.

By Mr. Lockley: I used the term exhibits, Mr. Kirby.

By the Court: Yes, perhaps that would be a better term. If she is testifying entirely from the exhibits which have been received in evidence, then she may answer the question.

By the Witness: The figure I have is 162—

By the Court: Again, please?

By the Witness: The figure I have is 162,116.68.

By the Court: Well, you state is the total amount of overages, according to the exhibits which were due The Shotwell Company for the entire year 1946?

By the Witness: That is correct.

2230 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Your answer refers only to the exhibits which are presently in evidence?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibits 10-A and 10-B, 10-C, 10-D, 10-E and 10-F, that you have previously identified as a portion of the records of the Reserve Trading Company and I also show you Shotwell Manufacturing Company invoice Exhibit No. 157 and I ask if you can tell me if that is recorded on the purchase book of the Reserve Trading Company?

A. It is.

Q And is it recorded elsewhere in those books?

A. It is.

Q. Where?

A. It is recorded on the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. In what amount?

A. $30,796.98.

Q. Is that the face amount of the invoice?

A. That is.

Q. I show you three checks, Exhibits Nos. 157-A, 157-B and 157-C and I ask if those are the checks which 2231 were used in payment of the invoice amount?

A. They are.

Q. Are they recorded in the cash disbursements book of the Reserve Trading Company?

A. They are.

Q. Are they also recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with the Reserve Trading Company?

A. They are.

Q I now show you Government's Exhibit 158-B and ask if you have seen that before?

A. I have.

Q. What is that?

A. It is a cash authorization slip for the Reserve Trading Corporation for $35,929.81.

Q. Does it contain any further information?

A. It does.

Q. What is it?

A. It reads, Overage on syrup purchased the rate, 7 cents a pound on their invoice number 191554. I have already given them $10,000.00 so all we are giving them now is $25,929.81."

Q. Is invoice number 191554 Exhibit 157?

A. It is.

2232 Q. Now, what was the purpose of that cash authorization slip in so far as your bookkeeping is concerned?

A. The purpose was to have a record to enter on the purchase book.

Q. And is such a record entered?

A. It is.

Q. Where is it?

A. It is entered on page 7 of the October—wait a minute—it is entered on page 8, Exhibit 10-A, of the October purchases for 1946, Reserve Trading.

Q. In what amount?

A. $35,929.81.

Q. Is there any description?

A. It reads "October 17th, Shotwell Manufacturing Company."

Q. What is the amount again?

A. $35,929.81.

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibits 158 and 158-A being checks for $25,929.81, and $10,000.00, respectively, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. I have.

Q. Do they bear any relationship to Government's 2233 Exhibit 158-B, the cash authorization slip?

A. They do.

Q. How do you know that?

A. On the cash authorization slip I have a memo "Date paid, October 17, 1946, check No. 1194."

Q. And is one of those checks No. 1194?

A. It is.

Q. And what exhibit number is it?

A. Exhibit No. 158-A in the amount of $25,929.81.

Q. Are those recorded in the cash disbursements book?

A. They are.

Q. What is the nature of the entry?

A. It reads "Cash, $25,929.81".

Q. Is there any description other than that?

A. No.

2234 Q. Are they recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with Reserve Trading?

A. They are.

Q. In what amount?

A. $25,929.81 and $10,000.00.

Q. In two separate entries?

A. That is right.

Q. All right. May I have those, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: What sheet is that, Mr. Lockley? What ledger sheet is it?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you give the exhibit number?

A. It is 10-C.

By Mr. O'Brien: 10-C. That is the ledger sheet?

By the Witness: That is the accounts payable ledger sheet of Shotwell.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 159 which is an invoice of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and ask if that is recorded in the accounts,—or rather, in the purchase ledger of the Reserve Trading Com-

2235 pany.

A. It is.

Q. Is it also recorded in the accounts payable ledger?

A. It is.

Q. In what amount?

A. $11,268.60.

Q. I show you two sheets, Government's Exhibit 159-A and 159-B for $6,000.00 and $5,268.60, respectively, and ask if those checks bear any relationship to that entry.

A. These checks are the payments for the invoice amount.

Q. I think I failed to ask you, Miss Feldman, what that invoice is for.

A. The one I am holding now?

Q. Yes.

A. Corn syrup.

Q. Do you recall what the invoice Government's Exhibit 157 was for?

A. I believe it was corn syrup.

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibit 160-C purporting to be a cash authorization slip and ask if you have seen that before.

2236 A. I have.

Q. Do you know the handwriting?

A. It is my own.

Q. When did you prepare it?

A. It is dated October 18, 1946.

Q. Would that be about the date it was prepared?

A. Yes. It was probably made up and dated the same as the invoice which it applied to.

Q. All right. I show you Government's Exhibit 160-A and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. What is it?

A. This is a recap sheet that was made up on November 8th showing the overage due on the corn syrup referred to in invoice No. 187191.

Q. I call your attention to the fact that on the date there appears to be a zero struck over a one, or a one over a zero. Are you able to state whether that is an October or a November date?

A. That is a November date.

Q. Now with respect to the cash authorization slip, what information was contained thereon? That is Exhibit—

A. 166.

2237 Q. 160-C.

A. 160-C. It is dated October 18, 1946 and it reads: "Paid to Shotwell"—"Paid in cash, Shotwell Manufacturing, $13,146.70." And the explanation reads "Difference between cost price of 187,810 pounds at 13 cents, dollar and cents value, $24,415.30 and billed price of 187,810 pounds at six cents,"—extension of "11,268.60." And the difference between the two is $13,146.70, and there is a notation on here that on November 7, 1946, check No. 1210 was issued to this amount.

Q. Is Exhibit 160 a check for $13,146.70, the check referred to?

A. It is.

Q. And is that check recorded in the cash disbursements book of Reserve Trading Company?

A. It is.

2238 Q. What is the nature of the entry?

A. It reads "Cash, Shotwell, $13,146.70."

Q. Is it recorded in the accounts payable ledger sheet of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company with Reserve Trading?

A. It is.

Q. What is the nature of that entry?

A. It reads "November 7th, $13,146.70."

Q. Now, on the basis of the exhibits which you have examined, are you able to state the amounts as shown on those books and exhibits that was due the Shotwell Manufacturing Company from the Reserve Trading Company in 1946 on overages?

A. Where is the authorization slip? The amount paid on overages was $49,076.51.

Q. Now, Miss Feldman, I show you Government's Exhibit No. 155, a bill of lading and ask if you have seen that before?

By Mr. O'Brien: 155?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 155.

A. I have.

Q. Do you know whether or not an invoice was received by the General Confections Corporation on 2239 that particular shipment?

A. There was not.

Q. Do you know—

By Mr. Kirby: Is this from memory?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to state?

A. I have seen these as to the time that I worked there.

Q. Are you able to state whether any record of such shipment was made on the books of General Confections?

A. I usually issued checks. That is, we issued cash authorizations for some of these and billed shipments, say for all of them, as a matter of fact.

Q. Well, normally, your practice was to receive an invoice so you would know the amount due. How did you know the amount due on these particular shipments without an invoice?

By Mr. Kirby: I must object, if the Court please. I don't believe we can handle it in general language like groups of shipments. I think we should stick to particular documents.

2240 By Mr. Lockley: I am asking about the shipments, Mr. Kirby.

By the Court: I think you should refer to the bill of lading, Exhibit 155.

By Mr. Kirby: He was getting a plural on there, Judge.

By the Court: Well—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know what record, if any, you had?

By the Court: With respect to the bill of lading.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to that bill of lading.

A. If this was received at our factory, we would have a receiving ticket showing the number of cases arriving, when it arrived, and what item it was. That was the basis on which we could figure the weight of the total shipment, the amount that was ordinarily paid if we received an invoice plus the amount of the overage.

By Mr. Kirby: I move to strike the answer on the ground that it is a very general answer describing the general practice and is not in response to the ques-2241 tion with respect to this particular exhibit.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 155-A and ask you if that is a receiving ticket of the nature you have just described?

A. It is.

Q. Does it have any relationship to the bill of lading, Government's Exhibit 155?

A. This is a receiving ticket for the bill of lading, Exhibit No. 155.

Q. Are you able to state from an examination of either the bill of lading or the receiving ticket the amount recorded on the books of the company with respect to that shipment, either overages or regular price or both?

A. The billing price on a car, mixed, was ordinarily 24 cents a pound and there would be 10 cents a pound overage. According to this notation, there were 10,050 pounds received as net weight.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, what record does she have? I think the question was as to the record.

2242 By Mr. Lockley: She has a receiving ticket and a bill of lading from which she says she can determine the amounts.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you able to determine that amount, Miss Feldman?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the determination of an amount unless there is some testimony of knowledge as to what was done in this particular case.

By the Court: Well, I am not acquainted, Mr. Lockley, with what you are asking her. Now are you asking her with respect to this particular shipment?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, this particular shipment.

By the Court: The bill of lading, Exhibit 155, and the receiving ticket, Exhibit 155-A?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir, and her personal knowledge of the amounts shown on the books of the company which she had supervision and direction over. I want her to tell me, if she can, what was the amount shown 2243 on the books of the company as due and owing on that particular shipment.

By the Court: Due and owing Shotwell?

By Mr. Lockley: That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: It is plain that nothing—

By the Court: If she has a recollection, is that it?

By Mr. Lockley: If she has a recollection, yes, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that procedure.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it. There is no better foundation than the books and records.

By the Court: Are you referring to books and records of the General Confections Company?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. McConnell: There were such books, I understand.

By Mr. Lockley: I wish you would find them for me, Mr. Kirby—I mean, Mr. McConnell.

By the Court: I am not too clear about the posi-
2244 tion the government has with respect to these books. Have you, as yet, made any showing as to what happened to the books?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, there is a showing made. They were in the hands of the receiver down in New Jersey and no showing—

By Mr. Lockley: I made a showing to Miss Feldman as to the last time she saw them.

By the Court: I don't know that that is a showing.

I think in the absence of a more definite showing as to what happened to the books, I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I beg your indulgence a moment, your Honor.

You may cross examine.

By the Court: Well, perhaps we should take our recess now. We will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

2245 By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

Cross Examination.

By Mr. Kirby: May it please the Court, I am going to undertake to start the cross examination of this young lady, but there may be some delays.

May I ask if the good men of the Government will give me the same kind of help in assembling some of these documents as they were able to give Mr. Lockley, to keep these exhibits in the proper order.

It will take a little time to do it. Beyond that, I hope not to waste the Court's or the Jury's time.

By Mr. Lockley: I think you will find they are in the same order as I used them, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: I may not use them in exactly the same order, you see.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. McConnell arose from his chair, Miss Feldman, to inquire of you with respect to a check and asked you whether Mr. Lubben hadn't told you that that is what he did with the money, and that is the only way you 2246 knew about it? That was the check in December, 1946.

Do you remember Mr. McConnell asking you that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Am I correct in thinking that the check we are talking about is this one on December 4th for $17,190.25, which is Government's Exhibit 133?

A. I think this is the one.

Q. Do I recall that you responded to Mr. McConnell that you had made a recap sheet yourself, and you knew that that was the amount due?

A. Do you have any recap sheet there, sir?

Q. Do you recall whether that is the response you made to Mr. McConnell that you knew from your own recap sheet that that was the amount due?

A. I believe that that was what I said.

Q. Am I correct in believing that the recap sheet to which wou were referring is Government's Exhibit 120, which I would ask you to find for me if you can—I have a photostat of it only.

2247 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. While they are looking for that, may I inquire whether the ledger, or the check stub which reflects that check, $17,190.25, is this Exhibit 133-B?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, to get back to the recap sheet which you said gave you independent knowledge of it, is that this Exhibit 120?

A. It is.

Q. And would you be kind enough to tell me the total which you say, from the recap sheet, was due to overages?

Now, I am asking you to look at your recap sheet.

A. According to this recap, the total due was $17,448.00.

Q. Now, I think you said there was an unexplained difference there in the amount of the check, but, nevertheless, that is the recap sheet that gave you the independent knowledge that that check was in the right amount, isn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, let me ask you: What is the date of 2248 the shipment on that recap sheet, which is the last shipment on it?

A. According to this, December 17.

Q. Now, that is thirteen days after the date of that hand-made check that Lubben made out in Chicago, isn't it?

A. That is so.

Q. And that shipment, which was fourteen days after that, is shown by Government Exhibit 133; isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. What is the date of the next latest shipment shown on your recap sheet, Miss Feldman?

A. December 10.

Q. Now, that shipment which was made six days later than the hand-made check made in Chicago, is represented by Exhibit 131; am I correct in that?

A. Yes.

Q. Miss Feldman, I have not had the benefit of any information in this instant cross examination that produces your laughter. What is funny about it?

A. I was laughing at the fly buzzing around my head.

Q. I hope I am not—

2249 By the Court: She has given you an answer. Why labor it?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Ma'am, may I inquire now, as Mr. McConnell did bef[illegible] isn't it a fact that at the time that check was mad[illegible] out, you did not have a recap sheet in that amount?

A. May I recall an incident that occurred at the time that this payment was made sir?

2250 Q. Excuse me. No. Wait a minute now. I don't mean to be rude to you, but could you have had that recap sheet on the date that the check was made out?

A. I could have had the information, sir.

Q. Could you have had the recap sheet?

A. I may not have had the recap sheet, but I could have had the information.

Q. Now, what would you tell me is your present memory as to whether you did or didn't have the recap sheet on December 4th?

A. I might not have had the recap sheet, but I still say I might have known of the invoices involved.

Q. I am afraid you are forcing me to press the point. What is your present memory as to whether you did or did not have that recap sheet on December 4th, the date of the check?

A. This is only one sheet that was made up. There are other records that were available at the time this was made up. If you can produce those, sir, I would be very happy to answer your question.

By Mr. Kirby: Would the Court be good enough 2251 to strike the answer on the ground that she is not responding to my question as to whether she had this recap sheet.

By the Court: Which portion? Read the answer and tell me what you object to.

By Mr. Kirby: My question was a very simple one: Did she have that recap sheet which she has in her hand at the time the check was made out?

By the Court: I think she said no, didn't she?

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By the Witness: I believe I did, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, you said that this cash authorization slip, which is Exhibit 133-A, was made out on December 4, 1946, did you?

A. If the record shows that; yes, sir.

2252 Q. Excuse me, ma'am. I am asking you about your testimony. That is in your handwriting, isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. It is dated December 4th, isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make it out on December 4th?

A. I may have.

Q. Do you know whether you did or not?

A. I don't know whether I dated it December 4th on the day I made it out or if I dated it December 4th to take care of the issuance of the check on that date.

Q. Possibly you made it out after the check was made out; is that what you mean?

A. It might be.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you know where 159, 159-A and B, 160-C and A are?

I don't mean to bother you. You have been busy. Maybe Mr. Krane can help.

By Mr. Lockley: They are all here. It is just a matter of finding them.

By Mr. Kirby: There is another cash authorization. What about 160-C?

By Mr. Kirby:

2253 Q. One of the last things about which you were questioned was a November '46, or possibly, October, '46, question about some corn syrup; do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall that Mr. Lockley handed you Exhibit 160-A and asked you what the date of that was?

A. I said November 8th.

Q. And is that the date on which the memorandum was made up?

A. May I see the memorandum? Are you referring to this one?

Q. Yes.

A. That is the date of the memorandum, sir.

Q. That is, however, that the cash authorization is dated October 18th of 1946?

A. That is so.

Q. Is that so?

A. That is so.

Q. So that you made the cash authorization up in one month and the summary in the next, is that right?

A. That is so, sir.

2254 Q. And am I correct in thinking that you made the check out about three weeks after the date of the cash authorization?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Are there any other records with respect to the date on which that check was authorized, other than those we have there now?

A. This authorization slip, if that is what you are referring to, was made up because we knew that the 6 cents was due on the corn syrup, sir.

Q. And you paid it when, you say?

A. I paid it on November 7th.

Q. Of 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. And then you made up that memo?

A. The October 18th memorandum?

Q. No, no. The little memoranda there. I thought you said it was November 8th.

A. November 8th.

Q. So that is the order of the matter?

A. Yes, sir.

2255 Q. Three weeks later the check, and a week after that—

A. Yes.

Q. —the memo?

A. Yes. The check was made one day, and the memo was made the following day, when the check was evidently given to Lubben, or the cash was given to him to take with him. I don't know.

Q. It was a check that went to him?

A. Was it cashed in New York, do you know?

Q. In any event, it would always be a check to cash wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in any event it always would be that the check would be cashed, and the cash would be turned over to Mr. Lubben?

A. Not in all instances. Sometimes these checks were cashed in Chicago, and the cash was turned over to Mr. Lubben there, not in New York City.

Q. Well, in New York or Chicago, but he got the cash?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, on the back of a number of these checks I notice an endorsement of Mr. Urban. Do you know a Mr. Urban?

2256 A. Certainly.

Q. You people did black market business with Mr. Urban?

A. We paid him overages, if that is what you mean.

Q. You paid him cash?

A. That's correct.

Q. But do you know whether this cash was paid to him or not, of your own knowledge now?

A. Yes, I was present when cash was paid to him.

Q. This cash?

A. This cash was paid to who, Mr. Urban?

Q. My question is: Do you know of your own knowledge whether this cash was paid to Mr. Urban or not?

A. I beg your pardon, sir. Mr. Urban is not concerned in that transaction, except that he okayed the check to cash it, if that is what you are referring to, and if it is a check cashed in Chicago.

Q. Are you arguing with me?

A. No.

Q. Are you telling me—

2257 By the Court: She doesn't contend that she was present at any time when—

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By the Court: —when the cash proceeds of these checks were turned over to anybody.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the Court is precisely right, and if the young lady would answer me as directly as the Court summarizes it, I would be delighted.

By the Court: She hasn't indicated to the contrary.

By Mr. Kirby: But she wants to argue with me in a partison way, I submit, your Honor.

By the Witness: I beg your pardon, sir.

2258 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, I want to go to some more general matters. I will undertake over the intervening weekend to get some of these in some order so that I won't delay you too much with questions. But did you have in the proprietorship period a complete set of books; is that what I understand?

A. Are you speaking of the sole ownership or the partnership?

Q. The proprietorship, the sole ownership.

A. There was a complete set of books.

Q. And are all of those books here?

A. In the single ownership; yes, sir.

Q. Yes. In the partnership—do you mean every single book of the proprietorship is here; are you sure of that?

A. In so far as I know; yes, sir.

Q. Now, in the partnership did you have a complete set of books?

A. Yes, sir; we did.

Q. And am I correct in thinking that none of those are here?

A. There was one, I believe, I identified the other day as being the general ledger.

2259 Q. Other than that are there any others of them here?

A. No.

Q. In the General Confections, which was Mr. Lubben's company, did you have a complete set of books?

A. We did, sir.

Q. And are they all here?

A. They are not, sir.

Q. Which ones are missing?

A. I believe the cash disbursements, the accounts payable ledger, the purchase book and, I believe, the sales book are missing.

Q. All right. Now, the cash disbursement book, that is the book in which these various checks would be entered, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is the bound book in which these checks to cash that you have been talking about would be entered?

A. What bound book, sir?

Q. Well, it's—

A. It's a ledger, if that is what you are referring to, yes.

2260 Q. Yes. Now, that isn't here, is it?

A. No, it is not.

Q. All right. Now, these checks to cash that you talk about, that were cashed by Mr. Lubben, the only material that we have with respect to them then is either these cash authorization slips or these recap slips, is that true?

A. That is so.

Q. Now, then, let's go to the next book that you say is missing, the accounts payable ledger. Now, that is the book in which Shotwell's account with the company would appear, isn't it?

A. That's true.

Q. That is the book in which, if there were a payment to Shotwell, there would be an entry, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is missing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, the next book that you said was missing was the purchases book, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when the material came into General Confections it would be entered in the purchase book?

2261 A. That is so, sir.

Q. And I notice on some of these slips of paper that you have that there are references to a P-85, or something like that.

A. That is so.

Q. That means purchase book, doesn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. So that these purchases from Shotwell would be posted in the purchases book, is that right?

A. That is so.

2262 Q. And that book is missing?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Let's take these cash authorization slips then, which we say they are, and how many cash authorization slips, Miss Feldman—

Well, let me put it to you this way: Am I correct in believing that you have done, at the request of the Government, some preparation of schedules or work sheets or something in advance of the period when you testified here?

A. It was not at the request of the Government. I made it up because I could see that we were going to get into a long detailed discussion.

Q. Well, I don't think that is unusual for a witness to do that, Miss Feldman, at all.

A. No, I don't think so, either.

Q. I don't mean to criticize you for it.

A. No, I don't think you did, sir.

Q. But can you tell me how many checks to cash are involved in your testimony?

A. How many checks to cash are involved in my testimony?

Q. Yes.

A. Sir, I would be unable to tell you because in 2263 certain instances the supporting documents are not available, and all I can do is testify to the total, but not to the method of payment.

Q. Well, you and I are in exact agreement on that, but I wanted to ask you a series of questions that would make that very plain, and I am just going to ask you to indulge me while I do it.

How many checks to cash have you testified to; do you know?

A. Offhand, no. I would have to check these items.

Q. Well, you indicated that some of the stuff didn't exist to support. How many cash authorizations do you have, those little cash authorization slips?

A. The ones that are available at present, you mean?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know if I marked that here, but I will check, sir.

Q. Well, suppose we do this, Miss Feldman—I have already, I am afraid, brought disappointment to everybody's heart by indicating that we will still be questioning you on Monday—would you be good enough over 2264 the recess, Miss Feldman, to check these checks to cash that you have talked about here, and then how many cash authorizations you have with respect to those, which ones you do, and which ones you don't have a cash authorization for; would you check that, then I can ask you that simple question, and you can answer it. Do you understand what I want?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I have no objection to Miss Feldman making such a computation, if she desires to. But I would like to point out that they are all setting right here on the table, available to counsel at all times, and they have many people that they can put to work counting them.

2265 By Mr. Kirby: Well, I will accede to my brother's objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I am not objecting. I am just pointing out that it is there available without the necessity of putting Miss Feldman to work. If she wants to do it, that is up to her. I have no control over it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The first check to cash that I remember hearing you speak about is Exhibit 27, which was cashed by Frieda Seiderer, and the money given to Mr. Lubben, as I recall it. Do you have a cash authorization slip for that? The date of that was January 19, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, obviously Miss Feldman doesn't have those. They are in evidence. They are right here. They can be readily determined by an examination of the matters in evidence themselves. Now, I suppose Miss Feldman can walk down—

By the Court: I suppose you can pick them out and show them to the witness. Has she identified Ex-

2266 hibit 27?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, she did. And she said she didn't have a cash authorization for it, as I recall. I can't pick up a cash authorization and show it to her because I don't believe it exists, Judge.

By the Court: Well, do you have a cash authorization slip attached to each check when they are available?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. When they are available they are all right here, associated together, the checks, the invoices and the cash authorization slips that go together.

By the Court: Then if a cash authorization slip is not attached to 27, does that mean there is no cash authorization slip?

By Mr. Lockley: Precisely, there is none at this moment.

By the Court: 27-A is a memo of some kind, apparently. That is not a cash authorization slip.

By Mr. Lockley: It is a settlement sheet, your Honor.

2267 By the Court: Oh.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, the only thing that would be posted to the book would be the cash authorization slip, isn't that right?

A. Which period are you speaking of now, sir?

Q. I am starting in the proprietorship, ma'am.

A. For the cash check?

Q. Yes, ma'am.

A. The pencil notations on the invoices that were received from you would be also posted to the books.

Q. They would be posted to the accounts payable?

A. That's right.

Q. And to the purchases?

A. That's right.

Q. But not to the cash disbursements?

A. No, but the check from the cash disbursements would.

Q. The only thing that would be posted to the cash disbursements book would be the cash authorization, isn't that right?

A. No, that would be the check that would be posted to the cash disbursements book, not the author-

2268 ization.

Q. But then the only supporting document then, if I can put it that way, for that posting of that check would be the cash authorization?

A. The check required no supporting document, sir, because if the check was posted through the cash disbursements book it would show the fact that it was a cash check that was paid to someone, with the name shown, and from there it would be posted directly to the accounts payable account, and there would be no authorization required, actually. The authorization was for my benefit, for my protection, because I signed these checks and the accountants insisted that there be a cash authorization slip for every cash item that was drawn.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you read the last thing she said.

(Record read.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will take it up right there. The accountant insisted that there be a cash authorization slip for every cash check that was drawn?

A. That is so.

2269 Q. Was there a cash authorization slip for every cash check that was drawn?

A. Yes, sir; there was.

Q. Is there a cash authorization slip for the check introduced in evidence as Government's Exhibit 27?

By Mr. Lockley: We are going back over the same ground, your Honor. I think I have already stated—

By the Court: If she knows, she may answer.

By the Witness:

A. If there was none attached to the check I was shown, then there isn't any. At present, that is.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, the last time you saw the cash authorization slips, they were in the hands of Mr. Lubben? This is the proprietorship now.

A. I don't know whether they were or not. They may have been in an accountant's office.

Q. The next one that you testified about was Government's Exhibit 28. Was there a cash authorization sheet on that?

2270 A. May I see it, sir? May I see the check, please?

By Mr. Lockley: You are wasting your time. I I can tell you there isn't one.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I never think I am wasting my time when I do what a woman tells me to do, but I will take your statement that it doesn't exist.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. May I inquire, Miss Feldman,—maybe Mr. Lockley can answer—is there a cash authorization for the check for $22,124.13, which is Government's Exhibit 40-D?

By Mr. Krane: No. There is one for 40-A, and there is one for 40-B.

By Mr. Kirby: May we stipulate that there is no cash authorization slip for the check in the amount of $22,-124.13, in evidence?

By Mr. Krane: Yes, there is a cash authorization slip for the $18,000 check, and the $15,000 check.

By Mr. Lockley: Apparently not.

By Mr. Kirby: How can I get along with these fel-

2271 lows? They don't answer my questions. $22,124.13; do you have a cash authorization slip?

By the Court: It's 94, isn't it?

By Mr. Kirby: It is Exhibit 40-D.

By Mr. Lockley: Apparently not.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. There is a check of $2,-403.00, which she testified to, which is Government's Exhibit 43. Is there a cash authorization slip for that?

By Mr. Lockley: Not at the moment.

By Mr. Kirby: Am I to understand it will be offered later?

By Mr. Lockley: If we ever find it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You mentioned a check for $6,459.75. Is there a cash authorization for that?

By the Court: Which exhibit?

By Mr. Kirby: Exhibit 45, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: I think we can agree there isn't.

By Mr. Kirby: There is not.

Which was the last one?

By Mr. Lockley: 45.

2272 By Mr. Kirby: There is a check to cash in the amount of $4,455.00, which is Exhibit 48. Is there a cash authorization slip for that?

By Mr. Lockley: Do you want me to testify again, Mr. Kirby?

If so, I will say there is not.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

There is a check for $20,000, which is Exhibit 55. Is there a cash authorization slip for that?

2273 By Mr. Krane: That is a settlement sheet.

By Mr. Lockley: No cash authorization slip.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. That concludes the period of the proprietorship. Now, then, during the period of the partnership, Miss Feldman, do you recall seeing any cash authorization slips in evidence?

A. I don't know, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Maybe Mr. Lockley can help us on that, too.

By Mr. Lockley: I think you are aware, Mr. Kirby, that we don't have the partnership books.

By Mr. Kirby: Then the answer is that there are no cash authorization slips for any of the checks to cash in the partnership period, is that correct?

By Mr. Krane: At the present time, in the possession of the government.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, then, I will go to the period of the General Confections. And could you tell us, Miss Feldman, 2274 what cash authorization slips exist for any of the checks to cash in that period?

A. I don't know that I have those marked, either.

Q. Miss Feldman, another place where you indicated that there existed some notations as to overages was on the face of the invoices during the proprietorship period; is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Isn't it a fact, ma'am, that there are no such notations on the face of any of the invoices in the period of the partnership or in the period of General Confections?

A. I cannot say that about the partnership, because I don't know whether we changed that method of handling overage payments at the time we started the partnership or there was a change instituted after the partnership had been in effect a while.

Q. But, in any event, you are certain of the General Confections invoices, and you are certain that they are not marked up; is that true?

A. As far as I know, they are not, sir.

Q. Now, when the invoices in the period of General Confections were posted, they were posted to the accounts payable, Shotwell, is that correct?

2275 A. That's right.

Q. And in what amount were they posted?

A. For the amount typed on the invoice.

Q. They were not posted on the ledgers, that is, the accounts payable of Shotwell did not bear entries of overages, did it?

A. It did later on, in the cash—from the cash authorization sheets.

By Mr. Kirby: Would you read my question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. It did bear entries of overages.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The account payable?

A. Certainly.

Q. Of Shotwell?

A. Yes.

2276 Q. Concurrently with each invoice?

A. No, from the cash authorization slip, which was used as a posting device.

Q. All right. Then we are back to that cash authorization slip as a posting device for both the cash disbursements book, and the accounts payable ledger now, is that right?

A. The accounts payable ledger, and purchase book, right.

Q. Then that's three places it would be posted, am I correct, the accounts payable, the purchases, and the cash disbursements?

A. The cash disbursements book had nothing to do with the cash authorization slips. The cash disbursements record comes from your check stubs.

Q. The same information would be in all three places, isn't that right?

A. Yes, if you put it that way, yes.

Q. And am I correct in believing that the cash authorization slips reflected what you were told by Mr. Lubben as to what he did with the money?

A. If you put it that way, sir, yes.

Q. Now, I want to go back to the period of the 2277 proprietorship, where you did say that the books were here. Now, you would get an invoice from Shotwell, and you would mark it up and enter it in the increased amount in the accounts payable, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then you would take that same invoice, mark it up, and enter it in the purchases at the increased amount, is that true?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you had charges shown on your books and goods in dollar amount received on your books, larger than the face amount of the Shotwell invoices, isn't that right?

A. That is true, sir.

Q. That is, if the Shotwell invoices come to a certain height, you now had in dollar amount a larger amount posted on your books, isn't that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were then in a position to take out of your company that larger amount, were you not, Ma'am?

A. What do you mean, in a position to take out
2278 of the company?

Q. Withdraw from the company?

A. Yes, we would be in a position to withdraw overage payments.

Q. The larger amount?

A. The difference between the amounts already paid and the amount that appeared on our book.

Q. And you could withdraw this larger amount you had built up on the books by one check that went to Shotwell, and by another check to cash that went to Dave Lubben, couldn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Dave Lubben got the cash, didn't he?

A. For payment to someone else, yes.

Q. That's what he said.

A. Well, it held true in other cases, I don't know why not in this one.

Q. You mean there was a general pattern in your company, that you would put up high the amount of money which you could withdraw, and then pull it out with a check to a specific person, and a check to cash; was that a general practice?

A. No, Mr. Kirby.

2279 Q. That was not a general practice?

A. That was not the practice. The practice was to pay overages, not to withdraw cash.

Q. But am I correct, Ma'am, when I say that the effect of marking up the invoices, and posting them to the accounts payable and to the purchases book, in the larger amount, was to make it possible to withdraw from the company a larger amount than you could have if you only posted the invoices?

A. The implication is that the money was withdrawn illegally.

Q. Excuse me. The implication is for the Judge and the Jury.

By the Court: You are arguing with her.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Court: You are trying to inject an implication, and it isn't within the bounds of cross examination.

2280 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Ma'am, besides the transactions that you and I have discussed with respect to cash checks, am I correct in believing that you, at these various companies, also kept track of certain cash box—cash boxes?

A. I did not keep track of cash boxes as such, sir.

Q. Did you keep any records with respect to cash boxes at all?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. This is beyond the scope of the direct examination. There was no reference made to cash boxes.

By the Court: She may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, your Honor, I didn't hear your ruling.

By the Court: I said she may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

By the Witness:

A. I kept no record with respect to the actual cash box, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you keep any record at all of money going 2281 in and out of the cash boxes?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you personally handle any of the money in or out of the cash boxes.

A. I don't believe so.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you have those cash box summaries that show the amounts charged to Miss Feldman personally?

I don't find them, Joe. I will defer that question. I don't readily find the sheet that I wanted to show the young lady. I will withdraw the question and go back to these checks to cash.

2282 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, checks to cash you say were to be supported by a cash authorization slip?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. According to the instructions of your accountants?

A. That is so.

Q. And did those accountants include a man by the name of Bercu, Bernard Bercu?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did it also include a firm of accountants known as Sproul Scholz & Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was there a Joe Myer with Sproul Scholz & Company?

A. Joe Myer?

Q. Yes.

A. I know someone by the name of Joe. If his last name was Myer, I am not sure.

Q. And when checks to cash were issued did you, in fact, make out cash authorization slips?

A. I did.

Q. Was that true in every case?

A. Yes, sir.

2283 Q. Is that true in the period of General Confections, ma'am?

A. From the time I got there, yes.

Q. You came there about August 1st?

A. That is so.

Q. And were you there at the time of the making of the audit for the period of July 1, 1946, to October 31, 1946?

A. I must have been.

Q. Do you recall for that period there were checks drawn to cash by General Confections and examined by the auditors totaling 131 checks of an amount of $286,506.13 in cash; do you recall that?

By Mr. Lockley: There is no such evidence, your Honor. I object to the testimony by counsel.

By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness: Would you mind repeating that, please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I don't know what the amount was, sir, but if there was cash checks in that amount, there were cash authorizations for them.

2284 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you recall that there was $84,620.00 worth of checks in that period as to which there was no cash authorization and as to which the accountants had to ask for some sort of an explanation; is that true or false?

A. No, I don't recall that, sir.

Q. Do you believe it could be true?

A. Does the certified report they submitted say so?

Q. Well, I would like to know, Miss Feldman, in the light of your answer that you always supported the checks, whether you say that that statement—

2285 A. I say there were cash authorizations but if Sproul & Scholz made that statement, I would like to see that in the certified report that they put in for that period. And then maybe I am wrong.

Q. Thank you. May I inquire whether in the period next following, the next accounting period,—which I will concede, your Honor, does run into '47, but, nevertheless, includes some of the critical months in issue here—there were cash checks in the amount of $145,875.91, of which $71,725.77 was unsupported by cash authorization slips?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless counsel can establish the number of checks, and the amount of them in 1946. In fact, he hasn't even given us the date that was—

By the Court: I assume you will have to make it more definite, so that we can limit it to 1946.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the accounting periods went over, and I don't dare cut the accountants' work up, Judge.

2286 Perhaps I should withdraw the question.

By the Court: Otherwise she isn't in position to answer the question, because you are going outside the indictment period.

By Mr. Kirby: It is the only way I could reach that period, because it is bracketed, you see.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, did you know of an account in the partnership which was called Loans and Exchanges?

A. I imagine so.

By Mr. Kirby: A check for $36,148.35, there was a photostat on that. Do you know where that is, Sam? It was a photostat.

By Mr. Lockley: Isn't that Manufacturers Trust Company?

By Mr. Kirby: What?

By Mr. Lockley: Wasn't that on the Manufacturers Trust Company ledger sheet?

By Mr. Kirby: Perhaps it was. That was Exhibit 94.

2287 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, do you recall testifying with respect to a recap sheet which is marked Exhibit 63-A?

A. I do.

2288 Q. And also a sheet which is marked 63-B?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, that 63-B has some material on it that is in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, doesn't it?

A. That is so.

Q. And what does it say?

A. "Miss Feldman, these were Huebner's last figures. D."

Q. Now, actually, the figures that are on that 63-B are simply the quantities of the then recent shipments, isn't that all?

A. That is all that appears on here, sir.

Q. No overage on that.

A. I am afraid that I can't say, sir. I don't know that—no, there was no overage.

Q. You don't see any overage on 63-B is what I meant.

A. No. I am agreeing with you that there is no overage on it.

Q. It does just show that there were some shipments made from Shotwell, that is all it shows?

A. That's correct.

Q. And those shipments were made?

2289 A. But you wouldn't send us a statement this way, would you?

Q. Is that a statement; is there any dollar amount on it?

A. No, but it is a record of shipments, isn't it?

Q. Ma'am, the question was: Were those shipments made?

A. Yes, they were made.

Q. Thank you.

Now, 63-A is a recap sheet which you prepared, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it says that there was a thirty thousand advance, is that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, you didn't identify any check for that?

A. No, I did not, as far as I recall.

Q. There is a balance then shown on your recap sheet of $36,148.35?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did you identify a check having cleared your bank account by Exhibit 63 on November 27, in the amount of $36,148.35?

A. Yes, sir.

2290 Q. I show you a document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 21-A and ask you if you have ever seen that document before.

A. It is not my recording.

Q. I didn't ask you that.

By the Court: I didn't hear you. I am sorry.

By Mr. Kirby: She said it wasn't her writing. Indeed it is not. I am sure it is true.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you ever see that before, ma'am?

A. I may have.

Q. Well, it purports to be on the printed work sheet paper of Bernard Bercu & Company.

A. That is so.

Q. Was he an auditor of the company at that time?

A. That is right.

Q. And is that item $36,148.35—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to testifying from these until they have been introduced in evi-2291 dence. They are not introduced in evidence.

By the Court: He has a right to interrogate regarding the instrument, in so far as it may be pertinent in laying a foundation for it or otherwise.

By Mr. Lockley: As I understand it, she said she wasn't even sure she has seen it before, and now he is questioning her.

By Mr. O'Brien: She said she may have seen it.

By the Court: It is within the scope of the cross examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Does that item of $36,148.35 appear there?

A. It does.

By the Court: Wait, now. You can't do that, counsel. You can't get into the record by such a question—if you want to ask her what she knows about it or questions that go to the authenticity of it or the foundation, good and well, but you are now seeking to get into the record something by merely having her read an instrument 2292 which is not in evidence. That is not right.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move that the answer be stricken and the question.

By Mr. Kirby: I have conceived and I know that these questions are difficult and I may be in error on them, but I conceive, your Honor, that where on cross examination I must test the witness's answer by reference— I mean, I must test the witness's testimony by referring to a document. Couldn't I reasonably be permitted to ask if that item is on that sheet?

By the Court: No.

By Mr. Kirby: To key it to it?

By the Court: No, I don't think you are permitted to do it on cross examination. You may ask her whether or not that entry is correct or whether or not she has any knowledge of it but merely having her read from a document not in evidence is improper cross examination.

By Mr. Kirby:

2293 Q. I will inquire of Miss Feldman whether she knows whether the entry on that check, on that document, is correct or not.

A. I would have no way of checking it, sir.

Q. I show you another document which is marked 21-B and ask you if you know in whose handwriting that document appears.

A. I believe I do.

Q. Whose?

A. It looks like Arthur Hausman.

Q. Arthur Hausman was also an accountant that was working at the time of the partnership?

A. He was working for Mr. Louis J. Roth.

Q. And he was working there at the time at least that this $36,000.00 check was involved, is that right, November of 1945?

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. He posted the same way on the loans and exchanges account as Bercu did, didn't he?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the conclusion.

By the Court: Well, if she knows, she may answer.

By the Witness:

2294 A. I don't know, sir. I have no way of checking this.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The captions on the sheets don't help you?

A. I don't know whether this is a transcript of the record on the books or whether this is a record that they made up from some other source.

Q. I show you a document which is marked 21-C and ask if you know in whose handwriting that is.

A. Mr. Hausman's.

Q. I show you a document which is marked 21-D and ask you if you know in whose handwriting that is.

A. Mr. Hausman's.

Q. The document 21-E, I will show you that and ask you in whose handwriting that is.

A. Mr. Hausman's.

2295 Q. Now, Miss Feldman, isn't it a fact that that $36,148.35 was continuously from November of 1945 at least until the last paper you have there, the close of the partnership, in March, 1946, charged to Lubben personally?

By the Court: You mean on the books?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to her testifying to those work sheets.

By the Court: Is it on the books?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. They are take-offs on the books.

By the Court: On exhibits you have shown here?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: Oh, no. You can't. You haven't established any foundation for it. On these exhibits, you have to call somebody who can identify it and be able to testify as to the authenticity. No. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I will ask Miss Feldman then, solely from your own knowledge, Miss Feldman, is it not true that that $36,148.35 was on the books of the partnership

2296 charged against Lubben personally?

A. No, because we had a special account with "David G. Lubben, Special Account" for all moneys withdrawn from the company by him.

Q. The name of it was what?

A. David G. Lubben Special Account.

Q. And this account which shows as "DGL", whose is that?

A. That is Mr. Lubben, but—

By Mr. Lockley: I object again to counsel reading from these documents.

By the Court: Well, if she knows to whom that refers, she may answer.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know whose account "DGL" is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that Lubben?

A. "DGL" is an abbreviation of Mr. Lubben's initials.
Q. Thank you.
By Mr. Kirby: I think we do have some journal sheets here. Don't you have some general ledger sheets of the partnership?
By Mr. Lockley: It is not in evidence. It is identi-2297 fied. It has never been offered.
By Mr. Kirby: Did you identify it with a number, Mr. Lockley?
By Mr. Lockley: I believe there is a number on it.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Oh, yes. I show you a document which is marked Government's Exhibit 9-A for identification and ask you if you have ever seen that before?
A. I identified this previously.
Q. What is it?
A. It is a general ledger for the Eatsum Food Products partnership for a period June 1, 1945, to May 31, 1946.
Q. In that general ledger is there a loans and exchanges account?
A. There is.
Q. In that loans and exchanges account, do you find some postings in November, ma'am, of 1945?
A. Yes.
Q. One particularly of $55,736.31?
A. I do.
By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, that ledger
2298 sheet is not in evidence. The government had it identified but we haven't offered it.
By Mr. O'Brien: We are identifying it for—
By the Court: Do you want to offer it?
By Mr. Lockley: If you offer it, all right.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Do you know, Miss Feldman, whether included in that total of $55,736.31 is that check of $36,148.35? Do you know?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object again, your Honor.
By the Court: Well, it is for the purpose of laying a foundation?
By Mr. Kirby: That's all.
By the Court: She may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I have no way of telling from this entry, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Can you say against whom that is charged?

A. That is just debited to the loans and exchanges account. It is not charged against anyone here.

2299 Q. So that your looking at these books and these other sheets that I have shown you which have been marked as exhibits for identification only, does not tell you whether that is or is not charged, that $36,148.00 check, against Lubben personally?

A. I am sorry. I missed the beginning of that question.

(Whereupon the question was read.)

By the Witness:

A. I don't understand. Are you asking me whether the sheets you showed me previously show whether that is owed?

Q. What I am asking you is, does what I have shown you in any way refresh your memory about that thirty-six thousand dollar transaction?

A. No, unless I have my own record here. How can I know that this figure reflects the other item?

Q. All right. Thank you.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, there are a number of other transactions that I do intend to go into with this lady, and I am sure I would save everybody's time if I got them in a little better order.

2300 I won't pretend that I am a fool about these things. I do understand them, I hope, and I am slow, and I think we could save time if we adjourned now.

By the Court: All right.

Well, members of the jury, we will be at recess until Monday morning at ten o'clock, and I want to remind you again of the admonition I have given you not to talk to anybody about the case, nor to permit anyone to talk to you about it, and I want to remind you that if anyone does that, you speak to the Court about it.

I also remind you again about the statement I made to you at the noon hour. You should refrain from reading any newspaper articles pertaining to this case during the time you are serving on the jury.

We will be at recess until ten o'clock Monday morning.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now adjourn until ten o'clock Monday morning. Kindly remain standing until the jury leaves the jury box.

2312 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

By the Court: You may proceed.

BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, on Friday, do you recall I asked you some questions about a cash box? Do you remember that subject was touched upon?

A. Yes.

Q. And at page 2280 of the record there appear some questions and answers and I will read them and ask you whether you remember being asked those questions and making these answers:

"Q. Ma'am, besides the transactions that you and 2313 and I have discussed with respect to cash checks, am I correct in believing that you, at these various companies, also kept track of certain cash box—cash boxes?

"A. I did not keep track of cash boxes as such, sir.

"Q. Did you keep any records with respect to cash boxes at all?

"A. I kept no record with respect to the actual cash box, sir.

"Q. Did you keep any record at all of money going in and out of the cash boxes?

"A. No, I did not.

"Q. Did you personally handle any of the money in or out of the cash boxes?

"A. I don't believe so."

Do you remember those questions being asked and you giving those answers?

A. I think so.

Q. I call your attention particularly to the month of August in 1945 and ask you whether you included that month within your period when you say you did not handle cash in and out of the cash box. Did you?

2314 A. What cash box are you referring to?

Q. I asked you the other day about any cash boxes.

A. I handled no cash box.

Q. And I asked you if you handled any money in and out of the cash box and I read you your answer and does your answer apply to August of 1945?

A. Sir, if I did not handle the cash box, I would not handle the moneys coming in and out of it.

Q. All right. In August of 1945, did you handle a cash check which was cashed and the money given to you in the amount of $25,000.00?

A. Do you have such a check, sir?

Q. Well, I do, but I am inquiring if you remember it.

A. I wouldn't—sir, at this time I wouldn't know what checks were issued in August of 1945.

Q. Well, did you put such an amount from a single check, of $25,000.00, in the cash box?

A. I never handled the cash box, so I could not have put a check, deposited $25,000.00—I could not have cashed it and put the cash in the cash box.

Q. The same thing would be true if I asked you about a group of checks that found their way into the cash box in August, 1945, totaling about $60,000.00.

2315 You didn't handle that total either?

A. Sir, I did not handle the cash box.

By Mr. Kirby: Will the Reporter please mark this as Defendants' Exhibit 27 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 27 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley: Is that Defendants' Exhibit 27?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

2316 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you a document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 27 for identification and ask you if that isn't the handwriting of the accountant Hausman?

A. That is true. That is Mr. Hausman's handwriting.

Q. And was he doing accounting work during that period of August, 1945?

A. He was, for Mr. Roth.

Q. I ask you to please look at the entries with respect to the receipts in the cash box with your name on them in the upper left hand corner.

A. I am looking at them, sir.

By the Court: I did not hear you.

By the Witness: I say, I am looking at them.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now that you have looked at those matters in August of 1945, Miss Feldman, do you believe it is still correct that you did not handle any money in and out of that cash box?

A. Sir, I have stated repeatedly before that I did not handle the cash box. I still stand by that answer.

2317 The fact that my name appears next to these signatures does not mean that I handled the cash box.

Q. Well, ma'am, did you handle that cash?

A. Yes. If I cashed the check or one of the girls went to the bank and cashed the check and gave the money to me, I handled the cash, but I did not handle the cash box.

Q. My question the other day, and I thought I was making it plain, was whether you handled the cash box and then whether you handled any cash in or out of the cash box. Now, do you say—I will leave out the word "now", so I won't argue. Do you tell me that you did handle the cash, or some of it, in and out of the cash box?

A. My answer would still be no, sir.

Q. Well, is it still no that the checks to cash there charged to you on that sheet, you did not handle?

A. Did I endorse these checks?

Q. (Continuing) And put them in the cash box?

A. Did I cash these checks, sir?

Q. I understand you did, ma'am.

A. I don't know. I haven't seen these checks.

2318 Q. There are some $60,000.00 worth in one month and you surely can remember whether you did or didn't handle $60,000.00 in and out of that cash box.

A. I did not handle that cash box, Mr. Kirby. I have handled at least a half a million dollars in cash but you cannot tell me that I handled cash in and out of the cash box.

2319 Q. This sheet I gave you, Mr. Krane gave me, of the Government, and it purports to have some reference to a cash box, doesn't it?

A. Is that what this record is part of?

Q. If you look at it, isn't that what it purports to be, Ma'am?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. This sheet isn't in evidence. It hasn't been identified in any way.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Ma'am, do you recognize ever having seen a sheet like that exhibit before?

A. I probably did see it.

Q. Does that sheet bear any relation to a cash box?

A. Evidently, sir. Oh, yes, definitely.

Q. Do both sides of the entries on the sheet bear relation to a cash box?

A. Yes, sir, but I do know I did not handle this. I stated this at various hearings: This had nothing to do with anything that I handled.

2320 Q. That includes, Ma'am, the group of entries that bear your name on the upper left hand side?

A. I was requested to issue a check. I did so on a cash authorization. The fact that the money was put into the cash box, does not mean I handled the money for the cash box as such. The fact that my name appears on here, and also the fact that the money was originally obtained from the box, does not mean I handled it personally.

Q. Excuse me. Is your answer that you did not handle it personally?

A. I did not handle the cash box personally.

Q. How about those checks that are referred to there, that cash?

A. Sir, have I endorsed all of these checks? May I see them, please?

Q. Can you tell me?

A. I don't know, sir. I have handled over a half a million dollars. I have handled over a half a million dollars in cash during the course of those businesses.

Q. A half million dollars in cash? What did you do with the half million dollars in cash, Ma'am?

A. The cashed checks to pay—

2321 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object. I think the question is much too general.

By the Court: The objection is sustained. It is too broad and goes into matters that can't have any possible reference to the issues in this law suit.

By Mr. Kirby: I call the Court's attention to the great importance of the cash, and the accounting for it, because there wasn't a single check—

By the Court: I have sustained the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Ma'am, would you tell me what you mean by your statement that you handled a half a million dollars in cash? What do you mean by that?

A. Mr. Kirby, I believe that an examination of our books and checks shows there were numerous amounts of checks issued to cash which I, or my assistant, took to the bank. I don't know the sum total of the checks. I am fairly sure they total a half a million dollars over a period of three years, if not more.

Q. And were they turned over to Mr. Lubben?

2322 By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, I object to that, too. It seems to me there has been no evidence of that.

By the Court: Yes. We have one law suit here.

By Mr. Lockley: It is a conclusion.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection. We are not going to explore all of the various cash activities of this concern over a period of two years which has no reference to the issues in this law suit.

2323 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When I was questioning you on Friday about cash and checks to cash, these questions and these answers appear on page 2278—after reviewing the way the books were kept in the proprietorship, I then came to these questions:

"Q. And you could withdraw this larger amount you had built up on the books by one check that went to Shotwell, and by another check to cash that went to Dave Lubben, couldn't you?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. And Dave Lubben got the cash, didn't he?

"A. For payment to someone else, yes.

"Q. That's what he said.

"A. Well, it held true in other cases, I don't know why not in this one."

And then I asked you this question:

"Q. But am I correct, ma'am, when I say that the effect of marking up the invoices, and posting them to the accounts payable and to the purchases book, in the larger amount, was to make it possible 2324 to withdraw from the company a larger amount that you could have if you only posted the invoices?"

And your answer was:

"A. The implication is that the money was withdrawn illegally."

Now, did you?

By Mr. Lockley: Now that question was objected to and the objection was sustained.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the next question was—"Excuse me. The implication is for the Judge and the jury."

And the Court then said with reference to that last question that I was arguing with her but there was no objection to the question and the answer which I read, Mr. Lockley.

Now, did you make those responses to those questions?

A. I did.

Q. Now when you said:

"Well, it held true in other cases," you were referring to a practice of cashing checks to cash and then charging them on the cash disbursements book to suppliers,
2325 Shotwell and other suppliers of your company?

A. No, sir, I was not.

Q. Well, what did you mean when you said, "Well, it held true in other cases?"

A. I had—

Q. Didn't you follow the pattern you followed with respect to Shotwell?

A. Certainly, sir, but I saw the payments made to other people.

Q. All payments?

A. Not all of them, but I have seen payments made to other people.

Q. Well, the pattern then—am I correct in believing that you say the pattern was also the same with other suppliers, namely to draw a check to cash, turn the money over to Lubben, sometimes you saw the money go to people but it was a check to cash and then it would be marked on the cash disbursements against the supplier, is that right?

A. If that was the purpose for which the cash was being used, yes, sir.

Q. Was the $500,000.00 in cash you are talking about, ma'am, cash so connected with that practice of keeping books with respect to suppliers?

A. Mr. Kirby, I also drew cash checks for varying 2326 amounts for payroll, which was also a cash check.
I drew cash to pay for other items. It wasn't only for overages to suppliers. We sometimes had to purchase other items for full amount of cash where we could not put an overage.

Q. And those were transactions, for example, in corn?

A. I did not handle the corn, Mr. Kirby.

Q. You did not handle the corn box?

A. I did not handle the corn box and I did not handle corn.

Q. Let us get back to this question of the practice, limiting it now, for the moment, to suppliers of candy, to Lubben's companies. As I understand it, you did follow a practice with Shotwell and with the others of making a check to cash, cashing the check—the money would go to Lubben and you saw some of it go to some of the suppliers. You never saw any of it go to the Shotwell people, did you?

By Mr. Lockley: How many questions are you asking, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I just happened to ask, did you ever see any 2327 money paid to the Shotwell people yourself?

A. I never said that. I did not, sir.

2328 Q. All right. You say you have seen it paid to some of the other suppliers?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. But the practice you are talking about was a practice of making the checks to cash, and charging that check to the cash disbursements book against the supplier, is that right.

A. When we withdrew it for that purpose, yes.

Q. And the cash disbursements book would show that it was a check to cash, but that it was charged against the supplier, is that right?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And the effect of that then on the books was to charge that cash, that currency, against Shotwell, or against the supplier, is that true?

A. Where it was withdrawn for payment of overages, yes.

Q. Now did that money that is charged against the supplier, Shotwell, or to other suppliers, did that money go into the cash box?

A. Sir, I told you I handled no cash boxes.

Q. Do you know whether the money went into the cash box or not?

A. Sir, the cash box that you have reference to, if 2329 I am not mistaken, is the one for the corn. That occurred in the partnership period. It did not occur in the single ownership. There was no cash box in the single ownership, so the question does not apply, so far as I can see.

Q. There was no cash box in the single ownership at all?

A. No, not that I ever heard of.

Q. You didn't hear Mr. Lubben's testimony that there was?

A. A cash box in the single ownership?

Q. Yes.

A. He may have been mistaken. I don't know of any.

By the Court: I think he said a petty cash box, didn't he?

By Mr. Kirby: No, sir. We showed some substantial amounts.

Q. Well, were the entries as to a cash check or a cash disbursements book charged against the supplier, and do you know whether that cash did go into the cash box?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object. He has asked that question .

2330 By the Court: You would have to be more definite as to the period, Mr. Kirby. You are indefinite as to the period covered. We have a proprietorship, a partnership, and we have the regime of General Confections.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if the Court will indulge me a second through the proprietorship, and the partnership, and the corporation, so far as the defendant Shotwell Company is concerned, it was never different. It was simply a check to cash, charged on the disbursements book.

By the Court: Well, there may be a difference in the reference to the so-called cash box.

By Mr. Kirby: I was attempting to test the validity of the entries which purport to show this money for cash checks went to the suppliers. I was asking the young lady as to the contrary—it didn't go into the cash box.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. How about that, Miss Feldman, did it go into the cash box, or don't you know?

A. Which period are you referring to?

2331 Q. Well, I will ask you about the sole proprietorship. That is the period you got the book for, isn't it?

A. We had no cash box, to the best of my knowledge, at any time during the life of the single ownership.

Q. And when did the life of a single ownership end?

A. On June 1, 1945.

2332 Q. So the transactions of April of 1945 were in the sole proprietorship?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Would you be good enough then to tell me whether the entries to the cash disbursements book of the sole proprietorship of cash checks—could you locate that for me?

A. I believe so.

Q. Would you be kind enough to take a look at that book for the period in April of 1945 and I will ask you about certain transactions.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you want the purchase book?

By Mr. Kirby: No. The cash disbursements book.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, that cash disbursement book, that is the book in which you would enter a check to cash and then say it went to one or the other of the suppliers if it was an overage check, is that right, ma'am?

A. That is correct?

Q. That would be the same book, as far as Shotwell is concerned and other suppliers?

A. That is correct.

2333 Q. Was a man by the name of Joseph Eiger a supplier?

A. Offhand, I wouldn't know, sir.

Q. Did you ever hear of a Joseph Eiger?

A. The name sounds familiar. Do you have a ledger sheet for him, sir?

Q. Well, I think you will find him under that. I will get you specific reference on that. Would you have no memory of the man as you sit there now?

A. No.

Q. How about Blue Ribbon Trucking? Did they supply material sometimes?

A. Blue Ribbon Trucking is a trucking firm that hauled our merchandise in and out.

Q. Did they ever supply you materials?

A. I believe there were times we paid them for merchandise.

Q. Sugar?

A. Yes.

Q. Black—black market?

A. If you want to call it that, yes.

Q. How about National Process Foods, were they a supplier?

A. Yes, sir.

2334 Q. Were overages charged against them?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. This is beyond the scope of the direct examination. There has been no testimony by this witness as to any payments on direct, to anybody else.

By the Court: It goes to the general method of keeping books. If that is what he has reference to, I see no objection to it.

By Mr. Kirby: That is exactly it, sir.

What was that last question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. By National Process?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes.

A. I believe so.

Q. Did you know a Two Star Confectioners?

A. I did.

Q. Were overages charged against them?

A. Definitely.

Q. Did you know a Sam Gertz?

A. I did.

2335 Q. Were overages charged against him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you would charge overages against them in that cash disbursements book, your pattern was the same as with Shotwell?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then from the cash disbursements book you would charge—I maybe shouldn't say from because I don't think that is exactly accurate—I will rephrase the question.

You also charged overages against them on the accounts payable ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the same manner as with Shotwell?

A. I believe that on Two Star it was a little bit different. They were making a number of shipments on which they never submitted bills.

Q. Different than Shotwell?

A. No. Shotwell did the same thing except that Two Star followed that pattern for a much longer time.

Q. It was consistent with them? It was a consistent pattern with Two Star?

A. Yes.

2336 Q. Where is that located?

A. In Boston.

Q. Is that Morley Kramer's company?

A. It is.

Q. All right. Now, then, you have the cash disbursements book there and do you see a check on April the 5th of 1945, check No. 3300 to cash entered in there?

A. 3300?

Q. That is the number of the check, yes.

A. Yes.

Q. A check in the amount of $8,581.87?

A. Yes.

2337 Q. Now does that show that check went to Joseph Eiger?

A. It does.

Q. Now you asked me if there was a Joseph Eiger posted on the books. You see there now that there is?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that cash entry made in the period of the proprietorship?

A. It was.

Q. When you were keeping the books?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would have made out a cash authorization on that, I assume?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You would have shown that it went to Eiger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On the basis of information supplied to you by Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now do you know whether it is a fact or not that that $8,561.87 went into a cash box and not to Mr. Eiger?

A. Sir, I have already told you I know of no cash
2338 box during the life of the partnership—the single ownership.

Q. So it could not have gone into a cash box, in so far as you are concerned?

A. In so far as I know, no.

Q. Would you find a check on the 16th of the same month which is No. 3427? Do you find it?

A. I have it.

Q. And is that in the amount of $4.900.00?

A. It is.

Q. Is it charged as having gone to Blue Ribbon, one of your suppliers?

A. It went to Blue Ribbon.

Q. Your answer would be on any question as to whether that went into the cash box, that so far as you know, it could not have?

A. Sir, may I add something, please? These cash authorizations, if there was no bill at all for an invoice, had a receiving ticket attached so could never have gone into the cash box.

Q. Now on the 18th of that same month, will you take a look at check No. 3440. That is a check to cash, isn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

2339 Q. It is a small check, $135.00, but it was charged against National Process Foods, one of your suppliers, was it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As an overage?

A. Yes, sir. I don't know whether—yes, it would have been an overage. I am sorry.

Q. Charged against them?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not against the cash box?

A. No.

Q. Would you see a check there on the next day, No. 3457, to cash?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that in the amount of $2,632.66?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is charged as having gone, although it is a cash check, to Two-Star Confections?

A. That is right.

Q. As overage?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Not into a cash box?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now on the next month, on the 9th, do you

2340 find a check No. 3736?

By Mr. Lockley: Is this May 9th?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, Mr. Lockley, 1945.

Q. It is during the period of the proprietorship and I am asking about these particularly because these are the only books I can ask you about, really.

By the Witness:

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. I only asked you what the month was.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And that is a check to cash?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the amount of $4,788.00?

A. That is correct.

Q. And it is said to have been paid to Sam Gertz as overage?

A. That is correct.

Q. And not to a cash box?

A. That is so.

2341 Q. On the 27th of the same month, do you find a check, 3562?

A. Yes.

Q. That is the check to cash in the amount of $4,000?

A. That is so.

Q. That is shown as having gone to Two Star Confections as overage?

A. That is correct.

Q. And not into a cash box?

A. Mr. Kirby, there was no cash box at that time.

Q. Thank you. Now, Ma'am, as I understood your testimony, another book in which you would enter these payments, or these overages would be the accounts payable ledger?

A. That is so.

Q. Now the accounts payable ledger—well, let us take the largest number of the checks in there, and not go through all of them.

Could you look at the accounts payable ledger with respect to that $8,561.87 check to cash, which is charged off against Eiger?

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, please, Mr.
2342 Kirby. Only the two ledger sheets relating to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in the accounts payable ledger book are in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Have you got the balance of it?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. It is here, the balance of it, and it has been identified, but not introduced.

By Mr. Kirby: What exhibit number did you give to it when you had it identified?

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibit 6.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 6 for identification, and ask you if you would find the accounts payable ledger card for Joseph Eiger?

A. No. It doesn't seem to be in here.

By Mr. Lockley: I have just been advised by Mr. Krane that not all of the accounts receivable ledger—the accounts payable ledger sheets are not in that book. Some of them have been deleted with respect to certain purchases of suppliers.

By Mr. Kirby: I will ask her about some others then.

2343 By Mr. Lockley: Maybe in the independent files of the individuals, the name would appear on the sheet.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

Q. Do you have one in there for Blue Ribbon?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you find a $4,900 charge there on the 16th of April of 1945?

A. I don't. Wait a minute.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor—

By the Witness: How much? For $4,900?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, I do. It is right here.

Q. And is that the same item and the same date as the check to cash that I asked you about, No. 3427, dated the 16th of April, 1945, in the amount of $4,900?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I object.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley desires to make an objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I make my objection, your Honor, to the fact that this is going beyond the scope of the 2344 direct examination, and it is immaterial to the issues.

By the Court: Well, is this entire record now in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir, it is not. None of that is in evidence, with the exception of the two papers, the sheets which are now on the table by Mr. Kirby, and which relates to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Kirby: They identified the whole of them as being here and available for cross examination, which I am trying to do.

By the Court: Well, it is desirable from time to time to keep our law suit within proper bounds, and you are now interrogating about other matters that haven't any reference to the issues in this law-suit.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if your Honor please—

By the Court: What is the purpose of your inquiry?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, having in mind the great weight that the Judge holds with the jury,
2345 I think it has a great deal to do with the law suit, and I must respectfully urge upon you—

By the Court: I fail to see your purpose. Is it to determine the validity of the slips?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, and this is—

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor—

By Mr. Kirby: She says this is the precise pattern that prevailed as to the others, and I am tracing it down with her to see whether it can be tested. I think it can be.

By the Court: As to whether the overages that were paid to other suppliers were listed in the book, in the same manner as she contends it was listed with reference to Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Kirby: That is right, and then we can show what happened to that money.

2346 By the Court: Well, are we going to trace every entry that may have been referred, or that may have referred to an overage as to Tom, Dick and Harry, who were suppliers?

By Mr. Kirby: No, no; but certainly I ask to be permitted to show that comparable entries can be shown to be wrong.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I wish to point out—

By the Court: We have to determine whether a particular supplier received an overage which the books indicate he didn't receive.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, if they kept the books the same way with respect to the man as to whom we are now directing the question, I think it would be proper for me to show that the entries with respect to him are false so that would buttress our own proof that the entries with respect to Shotwell are false.

By the Court: You mean, we are going to try out the question as to whether or not a particular sup-2347 plier received the overage that the books indicate was paid to him?

By Mr. Kirby: No. We don't have to do that, but this is a foundation for impeachment of these very books that are offered by the government.

By Mr. Lockley: May I state, your Honor, that these books are, of course, merely corroborative evidence of the direct testimony of Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Kirby: No, no.

By Mr. Lockley: That certain amounts—please, Mr. Kirby, may I make my statement? That these amounts were paid to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. The books only reflect the recording of these amounts. Now, what those books reflect with respect to anybody else is certainly not binding or in any way controlling on the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: I assume counsel has a right to make reasonable inquiry as to whether or not the same matter was carried out as to overages with other suppliers, when other suppliers were paid overages. To that 2348 extent, I assume this is a proper inquiry.

By Mr. Lockley: He has already asked that and Miss Feldman has stated that there were exceptions to the manner in which such recordings were made, depending upon the company and the practice.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to counsel testifying. Miss Feldman didn't say any such thing.

By Mr. Lockley: That is my recollection, Counsel. Will you please read the question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. That is the same check.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And it is charged as an overage on dextrose?

A. I don't know what that was charged for, sir. Do you have the cash authorization slip for it?

2349 Q. Does it show what it was charged for?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Now, then, do you find a ledger sheet—accounts payable ledger sheet for Two-Star Confections?

A. No, it is not in here.

By Mr. O'Brien: It was our understanding that all of the books of the proprietorship would be available so that we would have them here for cross. Now, I am not interested in the fact that the Government may have withdrawn specific sheets for use in other files and pidgeonholed them somewhere. We would like to have the records here.

By Mr. Lockley: They are here, Mr. O'Brien. And had we had any notice whatsoever that you were going into this collateral issue—

By Mr. O'Brien: We wanted the proprietorship books here.

By Mr. Lockley: We had only introduced two sheets of that proprietorship book. If there is any other portion of it in the hands of the Government I will have 2350 them brought up at the noon recess, if they can be found.

By the Court: They can be introduced the same as other sheets that may be relevant to your lawsuit.

By Mr. O'Brien: We need the books in the court room for the cross examination, your Honor, and not out of the court room. All of the books of the proprietorship are pertinent.

By the Court: Proceed with your examination.

By Mr. Kirby: Will the reporter mark the cash disbursement sheets covering the proprietorship period, starting with April 5, 1945, through May 27, 1945, those being the ones to which Miss Feldman has had her attention called, as an exhibit number with sub letters starting with A.

Miss Feldman, would you find for the reporter, please, the pages we are talking about in April.

By the Witness: Do you want to give me those 2351 check numbers again? It will be much easier.

By Mr. Kirby: The earlier one is April 5th and the latest one is on the 27th of May.

By the Witness: The 5th of April and the 27th of May.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Witness: 78 to 96.

By Mr. Kirby: Then we don't want to bother with all those pages.

By the Witness: That is why I thought the check numbers would be helpful.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. The first check number is 3300.

A. 3300?

Q. Yes.

A. That's page 78.

Q. The next is 3427.

A. 3427, that's page 81.

Q. The next is 3440.
A. 3440, page 81.
Q. The next is 3457.
A. Page 81.
2352 Q. The next is 3736?
A. Page 91.
Q. The next is 3562?

By Mr. Kirby: Will the reporter then mark, in the cash disbursements book, as 28-A, page 78; as 28-B, page 81; as 28-C page 91; and as 28-D, page 84.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 28-A to 28-D, inclusive.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will the reporter mark as Defendants' Exhibit 29 for identification the page on the accounts payable ledger of the proprietorship for Blue Ribbon Trucking, on which the entry of April 16, 1945 appears.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 29 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will the reporter mark these four checks—I have inquired about six checks, but the Government has not been able to locate more than four for us at the moment, or maybe I should say it is our own fault—this group of four checks Defendants' Exhibits
2353 30, 30-A, 30-B, and 30-C.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 30, 30-A, 30-B, and 30-C, for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley: You are aware that those checks are always available for you, if you go and search for them yourselves, when the Government can't find them.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And Miss Feldman, I hand you four checks—four of the six I asked you about—marked in the 30 series, and ask whether you signed them all?
A. I did.
Q. And they are all checks to cash?
A. They are.
Q. And am I correct in believing that they look the same as the checks to cash that you have identified with respect to Shotwell, that is, they have no markings of any kind other than simply the word "cash" on the face?

A. That is so.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

2354 Will the reporter mark this Defendants' Exhibit 31 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 31 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you a sheet which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 31, and ask you if that is in the handwriting of the accountant, Hausman?

A. That is.

2355 Q. And was he the accountant, or one of the accountants working in this March and April of '45 period?

A. He was in there making an audit—wait a minute, '45?

Q. Or would that have been something he made up to review what had happened in March and April of '45?

A. This is something he may have made up in review.

Q. All right. Thank you. Had you ever seen that Exhibit 31 before, ma-am?

A. I don't believe so, sir.

Q. It shows all of the checks I asked you about.

A. I didn't check that, sir.

Q. Does it show the check for eighty-five sixty—

By Mr. Lockley: I object. The exhibit is not in evidence. She says she had never seen it before.

By the Court: Well, I assume that may be an appropriate question, in so far as the foundation of the document is concerned.

By Mr. Kirby: Will you read the question.

(Question read.)

2356 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. —$8,561.87?

A. It does.

Q. Does it show the check for forty-nine hundred?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it show the check for $135.00?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it show the check for $2,632.66?

A. It does.

Q. Does it show the check for $4,788.00?
A. Four thousand—yes.
Q. Does it show the check for four thousand?
A. Yes. It also shows these checks were paid out to the vendors.
Q. I will interrogate you about what it shows. Isn't it that statement of currency in a currency box?
A. Is it? I don't know, sir.
Q. Well, young lady, you just started to tell me what it shows, and now I want to ask you—
By Mr. Lockley: I object. He is arguing with the witness. And I recall no such testimony. She said she didn't know what it was. She merely said those particular checks are recorded.
2357 By the Court: The contents of the document are not in evidence.
By Mr. Kirby: Then I ask that her volunteered response be stricken.
By the Court: All right. It will be stricken.
By Mr. Kirby: And we will get to that when it is in evidence.
Is Hausman going to be a witness for you, too, John?
By Mr. Lockley: I will make up my mind on that, Mr. Kirby. You can subpoena him, if you want him.
By Mr. Kirby: Some of this material is in his handwriting. I will have to wait till you use him or don't use him.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Now, then, young lady, I am going to another subject.
A. Go ahead.
Q. The amount of cash that you mentioned briefly a while ago was $500,000.00, that you had seen, I think you said, isn't that right?
A. I said that it passed through my hands, if I
2358 remember correctly.
Q. And does that exclude cash connected with the corn box?
A. Sir, I think I have testified on a previous occasion that I had nothing to do with the corn box, that I only heard of it because someone couldn't add. I did not handle a corn box.
Q. All right, ma'am. Then the five hundred thousand doesn't include the corn box; we agree, don't we?

A. That's right.

Q. And you testified in front of the Kefauver Committee, didn't you, that the amount of money that had been in the corn box was approximately $400,000.00?

A. They asked me if I knew how much had been in the corn box and I said I thought that it was that amount. I did not say that I knew because I had counted it that it was in there.

Q. I don't doubt that Mr. Halley had precisely the same difficulty as I am having.

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to this sort of—

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

2359 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, then, you were keeping the books, except for a period in the middle of '46, were you not, for all of Lubbon's enterprises?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you were making the various entries in the check books, and handling the bank accounts, and things of that type?

A. Either I or someone under my supervision.

Q. And in the period of the proprietorship, during 1945, would it be true that the checks to cash which you posted, or had, under your supervision, posted to the various accounts would total approximately $383,000.00?

A. I wouldn't know.

2360 Q. Now, in the partnership period from—that was from June of '45 to March of '46, wasn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. In that period did you post checks to cash in the approximate amount of $353,000.00?

A. I have no way of knowing.

Q. Does that amount sound substantially right?

A. No, I would have no way of checking that figure.

Q. Besides that there was the four hundred thousand that you talked about down there.

Now, then, in the General Confections period, from 3-1-46 to 6-1-46, were the checks to cash in that period $323,000, approximately?

A. Mr. Kirby, again I must say I couldn't answer that.

Q. And in the period from July 1, 1946 to October 31, 1946, were the checks to cash of General Confections that you had posted, or posted under your supervision, $286,000.00 approximately?

A. I have no way of telling that, sir.

Q. And in Reserve Trading were the checks to cash approximately $105,000.00?

A. I have no way of checking that, sir.

Q. Well, ma'am, the total of those amounts is 2361 $1,843,000.00. Now, do you believe that you did handle, or those under your supervision did handle the writing and cashing and the entry of checks to cash in the amount of $1,843,000.00 in the two years of 1945 and 1946?

A. Sir, I have no way of knowing how much the cash checks amounted to. If that is what they total, that is what we entered on the books. That's as far as I can go on that.

Q. But that amount doesn't strike you as being demonstrably false?

A. I had no reason for checking it, so I couldn't tell you if it was false or not.

Q. Now, Mr. Lubben was the president of the General Confections?

A. I believe so.

Q. And did he draw his salary by check or by cash?

A. I don't recall how he drew on the payroll at that

Q. Do you know what his salary was?

A. Not offhand.

2362 Q. Well, would it strike you that for General Confections in 1946 his salary was $10,500—does that sound about right?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: She kept all these books.

By Mr. Lockley: It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I suppose the books are the best record, if it appears in the books.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the cash disbursements books, which would carry these checks, are missing.

By the Court: If she knows, she may answer.

By the Witness: I have no way of telling now what his salary was, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, let me ask you then, of this million eight hundred thousand that I have asked you about, in checks that were cashed, became currency—now, that was handled as directed by Lubben?

By the Court: You are assuming something that is not in evidence. She said she can't say whether it is the correct figure or not. Your question assumes it is 2363 a correct figure.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I will withdraw it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, whatever the amount of checks to cash, they were cashed, as I understand it, and the directions as to the disposal of the cash were given by Mr. Lubben; isn't that true?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. Now, do you ever recall charging a check to cash, or any of this currency, against Lubben personally as income; do you ever remember doing that?

A. Well, Mr. Kirby, we have an account on the books, which, I think, appeared on all three sets of books, called "D.G.L. Special" into which we put checks or cash—and I am not sure of whether there were checks drawn to cash that we did that with—which Lubben used for personal use, and which we charged to that account.

Q. And how much did that run to, do you know?

A. I have no idea, sir.

Q. Have you got that account here?

A. I don't know. You wouldn't—

2364 By Mr. Kirby: Have you got the account?

By Mr. Lockley: Where would it be, Ma'am, if we have got it?

By Mr. Kirby: I asked her about what was charged to Lubben, and she mentioned an account.

Have you got it?

2365 By Mr. Krane: What period?

By Mr. Kirby: Have you got it for any period?

By Mr. Krane: Mr. Kirby, every book we have, you have examined, and, I believe, made photostats of it. I don't know what you are referring to. If we have it, you have photostats of it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, Ma'am, where would I find—

A. It would be in the general ledgers.

Q. For the proprietorship?

A. I believe there was one there. I am not quite certain of that. I know there was one in the partnership, and I believe there was one in General Confections.

By Mr. Kirby: Do we have a general ledger for the proprietorship?

By Mr. Krane: We put all the books we have here, and you will be able to find whatever you want, if it is here. These are all the books that your accountants have gone over for months, so I am sure they are familiar with them.

2366 By Mr. McConnell: Do we have to have this running comment with the moving of the books?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, did you ever make a list, Mr. Fitzgerald or Mr. Lynch, of what books they did have?

By Mr. Fitzgerald: Yes.

By the Court: Wait a minute.

By Mr. Lockley: I object. Mr. Fitzgerald, or Mr. Lynch, are not under oath, and are not testifying.

By the Court: Go ahead with your examination. Haven't you had all of the books of these companies for inspection for many, many months?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Court: Well, I am just wondering why you should have this delay then. I assume you know about as much about the books as Mr. Lockley does.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, your Honor, I asked this witness a question— —

By the Court: And she said she doesn't know.

By Mr. Kirby: She said I could find it in a certain 2367 book, and I asked the Government if I might see the book that she referred to. That is all that this—I think—unseemly performance is about. Now that is all. I would like to see the books she told me to look at.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to this performance being characterized as unseemly. The Government has merely handed him all the books which we have in our possession, and which they have had for months.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I hand you a document which is marked Government's Exhibit 9 for identification, which is the general ledger for a part of the proprietorship, I believe, isn't it, Ma'am?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. And is that the book you referred me to?

A. Well, I remember seeing it in the partnership general ledger. Whether it is in here or not—

By Mr. Kirby: The next one she is referring me to is the partnership ledger. That is this, isn't it?

2368 I will learn this yet, Judge.

By the Court: Well, we will take our morning recess now, members of the jury.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now recess for ten minutes. Kindly remain standing until the jury files out of the jury box.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will you mark these Defendants' Exhibits 32 to 35, inclusive, for identification?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 32 to 35, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, before you begin, I have had the agent find for me the ledger sheets on National Process Food, Joseph Eiger, the Two Star Confectionery, W & N Kramer Gum Products. I guess that is all.. I will make them available at this time.

2369 (Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: I will ask the reporter to mark those with continued letters in the 29 series.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 29-A to 29H, inclusive, for identification.)

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I hand you a book, a page which has been marked Defendants' Exhibit 32 for identification, and is that the page to which you had turned at the time of the recess?

A. Yes, I was looking for David G. Lubben Special Account in here, and I don't think—

Q. Is there a David Lubben Special Account in the proprietorship at all?

A. I don't know, sir. If these are all the pages, then evidently there isn't.

Q. Exhibit 32 is his drawing account?

A. That is what it is marked.

Q. Now, can we tell from that which of the drawings charged against Mr. Lubben are checks to cash and 2370 which are not?

A. We would have to check every one of these entries, sir.

Q. In that cash disbursements?
A. That is correct.
Q. So that you couldn't indicate to me with sureness of any cash checks charged against him on that book until you checked the cash disbursements?
A. No, I would be unable to tell from here.
Q. I understand it is about twelve out of the total.
A. I don't know. But I couldn't tell from looking at this.
Q. All right. Now then, is the next account on which Mr. Lubben might have been charged for that cash in this account in the partnership, which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 33, and which is captioned, "David G. Lubben, Special"?
A. That's correct.
Q. And can you tell from that book which of those amounts charged against him were cash check items?
A. No, I would be unable to tell from this sheet.
Q. We would have to check that. Well, there is really no place we could check that if we don't have the checks to cash?
2371 A. We don't have the cash disbursements or the check books, no.
Q. All right. Now, the next place that we could find if there was any of this cash charged against Lubben, would be this sheet which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 35 for identification, is that correct?
A. That is correct.
By Mr. O'Brien: What happened to 34?
By Mr. Kirby: That's right.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. In the partnership we located another book of Lubben's, which is called "Drawings", I think, and it is marked 34. I meant to call that to your attention. It is just ahead or just behind that other one you found for me.
A. Yes, I see the one you mean.
2372 Q. That's Exhibit 34?
A. That's correct.
Q. That is a drawing account for Mr. Lubben in the partnership?
A. That is so.
Q. Can we tell from that Exhibit 34 whether any of this cash is charged against him there?

A. No, you would be unable to tell from this account, sir.

Q. And in the next period, the period of General Confections, I have handed you an exhibit marked 35, and is that the sheet in the books of General Confections to which we would look to see whether any of this cash was charged to Lubben?

A. It is marked 35, you say?

Q. 35.

A. Yes, I have it here.

Q. And is 35 the right one, ma'am?

A. Yes, that is marked David G. Lubben Special.

Q. And can we tell from that how much of this cash that was charged against Lubben?

A. Not from this sheet you can't.

Q. No. But that is the book—the book you have in your hand now, that covers the General Confections 2373 period up till at least the periods we are interested in here, doesn't it, '45, '46?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. And am I correct in believing that that shows what was charged against Lubben personally in that period?

A. That is so.

Q. And does it show that he put in $15,000.00 net more than he took out?

A. In which book are you referring to now, sir?

Q. Exhibit 35.

A. What was that question again?

By Mr. Kirby: Will you read it?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Not for the entire sheet, it doesn't, sir.

Oh, wait a minute. Are you referring to this balance?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes.

A. Oh. Yes, the balance at March 1, 1947, shows that.

Q. Well, to the end of the indictment period, anyway, which is the end of '46, in that General Confections 2374 book, which is where we would find any of these cash things entered, it shows that Lubben put fifteen thousand more in than he took out; isn't that what it shows?

A. That's right.

Q. Thank you. Is there a place in New York called 253 Broadway?

A. There is.

Q. And is that where they work on special investigations on people's income taxes?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you have done some work there?

A. Well, they have called me down to ask me questions on innumerable occasions.

Q. With respect to both the Shotwell case and also Mr. Lubben's personal income tax?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to the witness's conclusion, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

2375 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When was the first time that you—you say you were called down; when was the first time you were called down to 253 Broadway, ma'am?

A. In October of 1948.

Q. And were you there with Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object. That is immaterial. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Well, she may answer.

By the Witness: I am sorry. What was that question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Lubben was present, if that is what you mean.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And was a Mr. Tobias present?

A. He was not.

Q. Do you know a Daniel Tobias?

A. I did not know of him at the time. I have since heard of him.

Q Well, were you there when—by "there" I mean at the General Confections—when Daniel Tobias worked 2376 there or had you left before he arrived?

A. I don't know when he arrived, sir. As far as I know, I have never seen him.

Q. He wasn't there during your time there?

A. No, not as far as I know.

Q. All right. Did you ever work with him, Daniel Tobias, at any time, either at 253 Broadway, or any place else, on these books?

A. In so far as I know, I have never worked with Mr. Tobias, Mr. Kirby.

Q. Now, when you were at 253 Broadway, did you confer then with Mr. Twohig?

A. With Mr. Twohig and Mr. Cordez.

Q. And that was in the fall of 1948?

A. It was in October of 1948.

Q. And when you conferred that first time, was it just the one interrogation or were you there for several days; how long a time was it, ma'am?

A. I believe that at that time I was only there one day. I was in from a vacation from the Coast and they had called me down, and I believe I was there just that one day and I returned to the West Coast.

Q. And when were you there next?

A. Well, sometime after December of 1948.

2377 Q. Do you know about when?

A. I have been there so many times, sir, that I have no record of when I actually went back.

Q. Well, did you go there early in '49 and spend some days there?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Did you ever spend any days there?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. I fail to see the materiality. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I presume they are preliminary questions.

By the Witness:

A. I have spent a lot of time there, yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What do you mean by a lot of time? As the Judge indicated, these are preliminary questions, and I am not going to take—

A. There was an occasion when several gentlemen came from Chicago, who were working on this particular matter, and they had me down there in the evenings, and Saturdays and Sundays questioning me.

Q. And about when was that?

2378 A. Oh, that was around—let's see—I believe it was about two years ago.

2379 Q. And that related to things including Shotwell and others?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did it relate to Lubben's income tax?
A. It did not.
Q. Did you come out to Chicago one time?
A. I did.
Q. And was that March 14, 1952?
A. That's correct, sir.
Q. The time of the Grand Jury hearing?
A. That is correct, sir.
Q. You were here for a few hours?
A. I was here for the day, sir.
Q. Have you ever appeared in front of the Grand Jury in connection with Mr. Lubben's taxes?
A. No, never.
Q. He has never been indicted, has he?
A. No, never.
Q. Now, you were the bookkeeper or in charge of the books during this '45 and '46 period, and did you work in connection with the preparation of Mr. Lubben's income tax for this period?
A. I did not.
By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor.
2380 By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Ma'am, what is your present employment?
A. I am an office manager and bookkeeper.
Q. Where?
A. Supera-Vite Color in New York City.
Q. What I meant by "where", it is back in New York; you are not living in California any longer?
A. No, New York City.
Q. Miss Feldman, one of the names that I asked you about last Friday was an account in the partnership General ledger, account 15, called Loans and Exchanges; do you remember that we had some discussion about that?
A. Yes, sir; we touched on it briefly.
By Mr. Kirby: Would you mark that account as Defendants' Exhibit 36 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 36 for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:
Q. I hand you a document which has been marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 36; and is that what you call the Loans and Exchanges account?

2381 A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And that shows that the partnership had some money coming from somebody, doesn't it?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, does it show who the partnership had the money coming from?

A. It does not.

Q. You kept the record, though?

A. Of what?

Q. That exhibit?

A. I don't follow you, sir.

Q. Well, that exhibit, Ma'am, was it either kept by you directly, or by persons under your supervision?

A. No, in this instance, this was kept by the accountants.

Q. Was that kept, as Mr. Lockley says, in the usual and normal course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All right. Now, Ma'am, do you know from whom the partnership had that money coming?

A. No.

Q. Are there some sub totals of amounts owed Loans and Exchanges on that exhibit?

A. Yes, sir.

2382 Q. And by the end of that ledger, which is May 31, 1946—I only want to ask you about one figure, and I hope Mr. Lockley will indulge me in this—was the account owed the partnership $113,750.17?

By Mr. Lockley: I regret that I must object, your Honor, as that exhibit is not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, Judge, there are some little pencil figures at the side, and unless this lady tells us what that means, it is going to be confusing to everybody.

By the Court: Well, the exhibit is not in evidence. It can't be confusing to anybody if it isn't in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: Is the objection sustained, your Honor?

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Miss Feldman, I notice on the left hand side of that exhibit a number of little penciled writings, and so that you can know what I am talking about the earliest one is 7085421, and then there are some 2383 others that follow; are those subtotals to that date;

is that what that means?

By Mr. Lockley: I object again, your Honor. She has testified she didn't keep that record.

By the Court: She can answer.

By the Witness: I am sorry, would you read the last part of that question?

2384 (Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir; that is so.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In other words, the accountants would take that sheet and as they would come to end of a month, or the end of an accounting period, they would strike a little balance and write it in in pencil?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that is what those little figures in pencil to the left of the ink notations mean?

A. That's correct.

Q. And they show the dates as to which they apply, do they, or could you figure that out from where they appear physically on the page?

A. You mean the pencil figure?

Q. Yes.

A. That would be the difference between the debit side and the credit side at any given point.

Q. And you tell the date by seeing where it physically is on the page?

A. Ordinarily.

Q. That's right. And does it show such carges—let me ask it this way, and withdraw that question.

2385 Does it show that throughout the period of that exhibit the partnership was owed money by somebody?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. The exhibit is not in evidence. It is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Were the charges—no, I will withdraw that.

Now, when the partnership ended, so far as Mr. Lubben's immediate connection with it was concerned, do I understand that you stayed with the partnership for a while and handled the books?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And does that include the period of April 30, 1946, to May 31, 1946?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. And does it include the latest of the periods shown on that sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had custody of that sheet up until at least the date of the latest entry?

A. Yes, sir.

2386 Q. Did you ever confer with the auditors about that Loans and Exchanges account?

A. I may have, sir.

Q. Did you ever confer with them about charging that Loans and Exchanges account against Lubben?

A. There would have been no reason to.

Q. The answer was that he wasn't connected with it; is that what you mean?

A. I don't see any reason why Loans and Exchanges account would have to be charged to Lubben.

Q. Did you ever confer with the auditors about charging that against Shotwell?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. Do you know whether that account, or any part of it, was finally charged against Shotwell?

A. Sir, I have no way of telling that. I was not there when the books were actually closed.

Q. But at least you didn't make a charge against Shotwell?

A. I did not, no.

Q. And that record was under your supervision in November of '45, was it?

A. No, it was posted by the accountant at that time.

Q. But your general supervision over the records 2387 included that date of November, '45?

A. That's true.

Q. Was any part of that, do you know, ever charged as advances to Shotwell?

A. I have no way of telling, sir.

Q. Well, it doesn't appear to be so charged from that book, does it?

A. No, from Loans and Exchanges I could not say, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: What did she say last?

(Record read.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Was that what you said, ma'am?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, I want to go to another subject. As I understand it, Miss Feldman, you say that in the proprietorship you would post purchases into a purchases book?

A. This is the single ownership you are speaking of?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. And do I understand that you say that you posted the purchases, in the case of Shotwell, at least, for 2388 the amount of the invoice plus an added amount?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you maintain an inventory of your purchases?

A. Yes, we had an inventory.

Q. And was that kept accurately?

A. It would have to be, sir, since we were manufacturing.

Q. And did it reflect all of your inventories?

A. Yes, sir.

2389 Q. Was there ever a situation in the single ownership where you had left as much as $50,000 out of your inventory?

A. That I had left $50,000 out of—wait a minute, sir. First of all, I don't believe I kept inventories in the single ownership. I think the accountants did.

Q. Well, you posted the inventories to the books, kept some book records of inventories?

A. No, I don't believe it was handled in that manner, sir. I think the accountants kept a check on that.

Q. Where did you keep a record of your inventories?

A. First of all, most of our shipments at the very beginning were drop shipments, sir, and the ones that we did get, we had repackaged. We didn't own our plant in the single ownership until some time late in the year, I believe, when it was really starting to operate.

Q. Well, Ma'am, whenever you did it, you kept inventory records of some kind, didn't you?

A. Sir, at this moment I am at a loss to tell you
2390 what kind I kept. I haven't thought of it in years.

Q. Let me ask, were they accurate or not accurate?

A. They would have to be accurate, otherwise, the accountant would let us hear about it.

Q. Did the accountant ever let you hear about fifty thousand that was left off the inventories by Mr. Lubben in the single ownership?

A. In the single ownership?

Q. Yes.

A. Not insofar as I can remember at this time, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Would you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 37 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 37 for identification.)

2391 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I hand you a document marked Exhibit 37 for identification and ask you if you know in whose handwriting that is?

A. This is Mr. Hausman's.

Q. The accountant?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, will you look at the back and particularly with reference to any questions as to unrecorded inventories—

By Mr. Lockley: For what period of time, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: It is in the single ownership.

By Mr. Lockley: Why, I don't believe there has been any testimony that Mr. Hausman worked for the single ownership.

By Mr. Kirby: No. I think the testimony is that he came in and reviewed the setup of the books in the single ownership, so, he was a pretty good expert on what they showed. He did it eight years ago.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now that you have looked at that exhibit, let 2392 me inquire, did the accountants ever talk to you about an item of $50,000.00 left off the inventory?

A. This is the first time I have ever seen this, sir

Q. Did they ever take up with you the question of whether the books were being kept to leave items totaling as much as $50,000.00 off in order to reduce Mr. Lubben's cash liability? Did they ever discuss that with you?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the conclusion in the question, your Honor; the first portion of the question I certainly have no objection to but I object to the latter part.

By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness: Will you please read the question again?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Sir, we entered our books—we entered in the books as we got our invoices which we paid out our moneys. Any changes for taxes would have to be on accountant's work sheet papers and not on our books.

2393 By M. Kirby :

Q. As to whether or not such changes for tax purposes were made, you didn't do it, somebody else did?

A. No. I had nothing to do with the preparation of those taxes.

Q. Ma'am, I only have one final thing I want to ask you about and I will apologize in advance and indeed I perhaps should seek the guidance of the Court—the witness Moran—you know a Moran that is a brother-in-law of Lubben's?

A. Yes, I know Jimmy Moran.

Q. He testified here and he testified with respect to—he said he cashed four checks for $5,000.00 each one day at Chicago and then he said he took the money out to the plant and gave it to the Shotwell people. Of course, you weren't here, but were you keeping the books—or let me ask it this way: You did examine the bank statements as they came back to General Confections, didn't you?

A. Yes, and both the accountants.

Q. Yes, and you can read them and interpret them for us, can't you?

A. That is correct, sir.

2394 Q. Well, Mr. Moran testified that this happened in the summer of 1946. He remembered he was in shirt sleeves. I would like to hand you the bank statements of General Confections for the period starting in April of 1946 when it opened up and going through to the 1st of November of 1946 when it was too cold to walk around in shirt sleeves and I ask you if you can find any four checks for $5,000.00 clearing that bank account ever during that period?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object. There has been no testimony that that was a General Confections check.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Oh, yes. Both Lubben and Moran—

By Mr. Lockley: It was charged against General Confections but there was no evidence it was from Mr. Lubben's personal bank account or from General Confections' account or from any other account.

By Mr. Kirby: We asked him.

By the Court: I don't remember that. Well, she may answer the question.

By Mr. Lockley: Are those exhibits which you
2395 have handed the witness in evidence?

By Mr. Kirby: I will have them marked.

By Mr. Lockley: Have they been identified?

By Mr. Kirby: I will have them marked.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any testimony, your Honor. No proper foundation has been laid.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: I am asking her—well, let me have them marked.

Would you please mark these Defendants' Exhibits 38-A through 38-M for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 38-A through 38-M both inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I show you a series of bank statements which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits 38 in series and ask you if that is the type of ledger sheet that the Manufacturers Trust Company would send to General Confections each month?

A. Yes, sir.

2396 Q. You have seen them and audited them many times, I suppose?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you look through those and point out to me if you find them, any instance where there are four checks for $5,000.00 clearing on the same or succeeding days?

A. No, sir, I can't find them.

Q. Thank you. I have no more questions.

By Mr. Kirby: These exhibits should be marked 38-A through 38-M for identification.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Miss Feldman, all of these exhibits which Mr. Kirby had identified this morning; that is Defendants' Exhibits 28-A, B, C and D, that series, which I think were the ledger sheets of Two-Star and on those other companies, those were all records regularly kept and maintained by the proprietorship, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And Exhibit 29 for identification, a sheet from the accounts payable ledger, is also a record regularly kept and maintained?

2397 A. Sir, any of the ledger sheets mentioned, they were.

Q. And the same is true, is it not, of Defendants' Exhibit 31 for identification which was the Hausman work sheet made in June of 1945?

A. I am sorry. What was the beginning of that question?

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read it to the witness.

(Whereupon the question was read.)

By the Witness:

A. No, that is not true, sir, because Mr. Hausman was working for Mr. Roth and when Mr. Giglio thought of coming in as a partner, Mr. Roth had Mr. Hausman come in and make an audit of the books for the previous year, but they were not part of our regular record.

Q. I see, but that was due to the fact that that was made in June. As I understood you, that sheet was made in June of 1945 and pertained to March and April of the same year?

A. Yes, but Mr. Roth had sent Mr. Hausman in to make an audit of our books prior to the time that they became partners in the business.

2398 Q. Perhaps I should ask you: Did he make this one, this sheet before or after the partnership commenced?

A. I wouldn't know that, sir.

Q. And the Defendants' Exhibits 32, 33, 34 and 35 for identification, all of which were the books of the various companies, showing or which might show accounts to which charges may have been made with Mr. Lubben in the proprietorship, the partnership, General

Confections, those were all sheets regularly made in the due course of the businesses of those companies?

A. As part of the general ledger, yes.

Q. And the same is true of account No. 15, the partnership ledger pertaining to the loans and exchange account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I think you said to Mr. Kirby and to the jury that you had witnessed payments made to other people on occasion, that is, other suppliers?

A. That is so.

Q. Do you now remember who the suppliers were?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor—

By Mr. O'Brien: I haven't asked their names. I
2399 am merely testing her memory.

By the Court: Do you recall?

By the Witness: Yes, I recall some of them.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you remember how many?

A. Three or four, perhaps four.

Q. Would you say that there were more than two?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That you witnessed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you not asked about that on your deposition and did you not answer there were two?

A. I believe at the deposition I mentioned the people to whom I had seen the money given.

2400 Q. Yes. Do you now remember the amount which you witnessed paid?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not remember at the time of the deposition either, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. So I take it, what you meant is that on the occasions which you had in mind, some representative of the supplier was present and you saw Mr. Lubben give him some money?

A. That isn't what I meant, sir.

Q. What did you mean?

A. There was a specific amount given to the supplier, not the representative of the supplier.

Q. Well—

A. And it was for a particular recap sheet. Which one, I couldn't tell you that at this time, sir.

Q. Did you deliver it or did Mr. Lubben deliver it?

A. Mr. Lubben would have handed them the money in my presence for the recap sheet which I drew up at the time this individual was present.

Q. How do you know the amount of the recap sheet?

2401 A. If there was a check or cash when I drew up the recap sheet and I drew up the recap sheet for the exact amount of the check and I handed it to Mr. Lubben, well, he in turn gave it to a third party, it had to be the same amount.

Q. You mean, he handed them the cash?

A. The cash, the check—if I went to the bank or if my assistant went there and I went and I collected it and found it corresponded with the face of the check, I turned around and handed it to Mr. Lubben and Mr. Lubben turned around and handed it to a third party, why, it had to be correct.

Q. Who were the suppliers with whom you say that occurred?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that.

By the Court: I don't think we need to go into that. It hasn't any possible bearing on this lawsuit.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, with all due respect to the Court, I think it has.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: This lawsuit has to do with the disbursement of the money.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

2402 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. I note an exception.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What is Mr. Moran's first name?

A. Well, I have known him as Jimmie or maybe James.

Q. Did he work for Mr. Lubben?

A. He did not, sir.

Q. Did he work for any of the companies?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Which companies?

A. Not for the companies we were running, no.

Q. Which company?

A. Well, I knew he was working for Haberkorn.

Q. He had no employment with Eatsum or General Confections?

A. No, sir.
Q. At any time?
A. No, sir.
Q. At any time that you are acquainted with?
A. No, sir.

By the Court: If you want to go into the questions as to the names of the suppliers to whom she said money
2403 was paid to, in so far as it may refer to the validity of the books, I think then it is a proper question.

In other words, if you want to find out whether or not that supplier is listed in the books as the one to whom overages were due, I think that maybe it is a proper matter for you to explore, if that is what you had in mind.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the situation there, your Honor, is that there is a considerable ambiguity as to what constitutes the books and in my notion, it is that the books consist of these ledger sheets and things like that, but in this record there are other papers and it has been testified to that a pattern of conduct flowed out of the combination of those things, sometimes loosely referred to as the books. It is said, I take it, that that pattern obtained in the case of these suppliers. Miss Feldman said it and certainly meant to give the inference it must have been so because she witnessed that it happened on these occasions.

2404 Now, that is very material and I have the right to lay a basis for the impeachment of the witness as to that statement through those suppliers and for that purpose, I want their names.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now who were the auditors during the proprietorship, Miss Feldman?
A. The single ownership, you mean?
Q. Well, you call it a single ownership. Without need for duplicating the question, I am sure that whenever we refer to the proprietorship—
A. You mean single ownership.
Q. You mean single ownership.
A. The auditors were Bernard Berey & Company.
Q. Yes, and when you call it a single ownership, is it your impression that no one other than Mr. Lubben ever had an interest in the single ownership?

A. That is correct, sir.

2405 Q. Now, before you were called to the stand to testify on direct, did you have any conversation with anyone concerning what Mr. Lubben's testimony had been?

A. I understand that it was not proper to discuss such things, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. I don't know whether that is so or not, but whether proper or improper, did you have such a conversation?

A. I had no conversations about his testimony.

Q. What is Mr. Roth's first name?

A. Mr. Roth?

Q. Yes.

A. Louis J.

Q. And Hausman?

A. Arthur.

Q. Are they both licensed accountants?

A. Licensed? You mean certified?

Q. Yes.

A. Mr. Louis J. Roth is not certified.

Q. Mr. Hausman is?

A. So far as I know, yes, sir.

Q. Are you speaking of the classifications in New York State?

A. Yes, insofar as I know them, sir.

2406 Q. Do they have it classified as certified public accountant, and public accountant?

A. That I don't know, sir. I believe if they are not certified, they are just a public accountant.

Q. Was Mr. Roth a public accountant?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, when you were at the partnership during that liquidation period of some months, I think, were the books and records there in your custody?

A. In my custody.

Q. Were they still there physically in that office at the time you left the partnership and went to General Confections?

A. Yes, sir. The complete set of books were there.

Q. And during that time, I take it, Mr. Bereu was still doing the auditing?

A. During the liquidation period of the partnership?

Q. Yes.

A. No, he was not.
Q. Who was?
A. Mr. Roth was.
Q. And Mr. Hausman or not?
2407 A. No, Mr. Hausman had discontinued working for Mr. Roth.
Q. Was Mr. Starr there?
A. On and off, yes
Q. For Mr. Roth?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. How many commercial banking accounts did the proprietorship maintain?
A. We had an account with Manufacturers Trust Company.
Q. Is that true also of the partnership?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And General Confections?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. It is also true, is it not, that you may have had some payroll account, or a subsidiary account in some other banks during the periods of these different entities?
A. No. We had a payroll account at the Corn Exchange Bank in the Bronx.
Q. That is, outside of the payroll account in the Corn Exchange Bank in the Bronx, not any of these companies maintained a bank account except at the Manufacturers Trust Company?
A. General Confections did.
2408 Q. Where?
A. I believe there was one—somewhere in Jersey.
Q. There were two General Confections, were there not?
A. Yes. There was one while I was working there, and Mr. Lubben later started another firm under the name of General Confections.
Q. The other one was after the receivership?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now when you say that General Confections had some account other than the Manufacturers Trust, do you mean the first or the second of the General Confections?
A. Now you have me confused. I know there was an account in Jersey. I don't know which company it was for right now, sir.
Q. Would that appear in the books and records of General Confections?

A. I think so.

Q. What sort of a record would reflect the depositor for the company?

A. I believe it would appear in the cash receipts book. There would be a column for that particular bank.

2409 Q. But you can't remember the name?

A. Offhand, I don't remember which one. Garfield Trust, I think.

2410 Q. Was that in New York City?

A. No. In Jersey.

Q. Hillsdale?

A. Sir, I am afraid that I don't know.

Q. Well, on the occasions when you drew or anybody under your direction drew checks to cash and sent them to the bank to procure the money, it would be given to Mr. Lubben—were they always sent to the Manufacturers Trust Company?

A. They were, because they were just a block away from the office at the time of the partnership.

Q. At the time you moved over to Jersey, did you still maintain that account?

A. Yes, I believe the account was still maintained in Manufacturers Trust.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you establish a date for these various accounts, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't think it of particular interest, the time, or I would have been more specific.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you recall when it was when you moved the plant to Jersey from the Bronx?

A. We moved the plant to Jersey at the end of 2411 June or the beginning of July of 1947.

Q. I see. That is beyond the time that we are interested in here. So that all during the year 1946 the plant was up at the Bronx?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And the same is true during 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So it is true then that all of the cash checks to which I have just referred were taken to the Manufacturers Trust to be cashed?

A. They may have been taken to another branch of Manufacturers Trust.

Q. Oh, indeed, because they do have various branches throughout the city?

A. Throughout the city, yes.

Q. But whichever branch it was, it was the same bank, the Manufacturers Trust?

A. So far as I can recall right now, it would have been.

Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Bercu audited your invoices, your sales and your purchases?

A. When he audited them?

Q. Do you remember that he did?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And did he check the books of original entry?

2412 A. Yes, Sir.

Q. Who was doing the posting to the general ledger at the time that you came?

A. Mr. Bercu.

Q. Did he continue to do the posting after you came?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. All the way through?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Neither you nor any of the folks under you did the posting to the general ledger?

A. The first posting to the general ledger that was not done by the accountants, I believe it was done either—from what I notice in the general ledger here, some time in May of 1946—I think that was the first time that my handwriting appears on the general ledger.

Q. So that during substantially all of the proprietorship period, the postings to the general ledger were made by or under Mr. Bercu?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now did that practice continue throughout the partnership also?

A. Yes, sir.

2413 Q. And in the partnership, did you or your assistants do the posting?

A. No. The accountants did the posting in the partnership.

Q. But the records—the number and kind of books which were maintained by the partnership were precisely the same as in the case of the proprietorship, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And there in the partnership they were also audited in the same way by Mr. Bercu or his folks?

A. Well, we had two accountants auditing them then.

Q. Well, nevertheless, Mr. Bercu audited them independently, did he not?

A. He audited them independently and then Mr. Roth audited them independently.

Q. Now on the deposition, Miss Feldman, do you remember my asking you this question:

"Q. Did you have anything to do with the preparation or maintenance of any record of company transactions other than the records which you have already described?"

Do you remember that after some delay you an-
2414 swered that question—

By Mr. Lockley: May I have the page number. Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. It is page—starting the record at page 28.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And you answered that you maintained a personal record?

A. That is correct.

Q. And by that, you were referring to the memoranda and the recap sheets, were you not?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now those memoranda, starting—let us take the proprietorship. The memoranda were made by you in your own handwriting, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is the paper on which you would ordinarily show the date of the shipment, the weight, the item, the overage per pound, or whatever it was that the unit consisted of?

A. That is correct, more or less.

Q. And then you would extend that out in terms of dollars to reach a total with reference to the particular memoranda that you were making at the time?
2415 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now then, how long after that was it that you would pay the invoices by check in the typed amount or printed amount?

A. There was no specific way of doing it. We could issue a check before we paid the overages. In a good many cases we issued after we paid the overages.

Q. Well, I wasn't talking about the recap sheet now, Miss Feldman.

A. You are speaking—

Q. Am I to assume—withdraw that.

Am I to assume that you paid the overages at the time you prepared these longhand memoranda?

A. No. Those memoranda were kept as a running total. At one particular point when Mr. Lubben would say he was going to pay for overages I would stop the memoranda at that point and make up an overage sheet.

A. All right. Then you said, if I can get it a little more exactly, you have an invoice coming in from a supplier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if overage had been indicated, you would 2416 mark that on the face of the invoice?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And then somehow you would pass the invoice through and post it to purchases?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now would you, at the same time, do anything with respect to the payment of that by check or would you wait until the first of the month or the tenth of the month, or whenever it was?

A. You are speaking of the typed amount on the face of the invoice?

Q. Yes.

A. As I said before, there was no definite way of doing it. Some of these invoices called for certain types of terms. If we had the money to pay within the terms, we would pay them within ten days. We might pay them the day we got the invoice. It depended on what our financial situation was at the time.

By M. O'Bhien: All right.

By the Court: We will be at recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

By the Marshal: We will be at recess until two o'clock this afternoon. Kindly remain standing until the 2417 jury files out of the jury box.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause to 2:00 o'clock of the same day, being Monday, September 28, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois,
Monday, September 28, 1953
2:00 o'clock P.M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell
Mr. William T. Kirby

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

2419 BEATRICE FELDMAN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Continued) By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Miss Feldman, I was speaking this morning about the memoranda or recap sheets which, I think, you said became a part of the record when the checks for the overages were drawn and posted. Did you do the posting of those checks, or were those also posted by the auditors?

A. You are referring to the proprietorship now, I gather.

Q. Yes.

A. The actual posting of the check from the bank—from the check book to the cash disbursements book would not necessarily have been done by me. And it also follows that the posting from the cash disbursements book to the accounts payable ledger sheet would not necessarily have been done by me.

Q. No, I appreciate that, although I am a little confused. Maybe I misunderstand just what it is that the auditors were posting.

2420 A. The cash disbursements book and your cash receipts book, and your sales and purchases, and your general journal are what we call the books of original entry. The postings from those books, the totals, at the end of the month, are the postings that go into the general ledger. Those are the postings that were made by the accountants.

Q. I see.

A. From the books of original entry to the general ledger.

Q. So that the cash checks, when charged to cash disbursements and into the accounts payable ledger may have been posted by the regular bookkeeping staff of the company?

A. Bookkeeping staff of the accountant, did you say?

Q. No, of the company.

A. The postings in the books of original entry, yes, were made by the bookkeepers of the company.

Q. And that would include the accounts payable ledger and the cash book?

A. Yes.

Q. The cash authorization slips, were those also made in longhand?

A. Sometimes they were typed, sometimes in long-

2421 hand.

Q. Generally in longhand?

A. I would say so.

Q. During the time that you were with the companies did anyone other than you or Mr. Lubben draw cash authorization slips?

A. Yes, there may have been instances when others did draw cash authorization slips.

Q. While you were with the company?

A. Yes.

Q. If you stated on your deposition that during that time nobody but you and Mr. Lubben drew cash disbursements . . . cash authorization slips, were you incorrect?

A. I don't recall what I said in my deposition, sir, but if I said that, it was with the intent that the only one who signed the cash authorization slips was Mr. Lubben.

Q. Well, I want to be sure of that. At page 44 of the deposition I asked you:

"Question: Was the cash authorization slip likewise made in longhand?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Who made those?

2422 "Answer: Sometimes I, sometimes Mr. Lubben.

"Question: Anyone else?

"Answer: Possibly. Well, there possibly would have been some made up by someone else for the period that I was not working for General Confections, if there were any of those made at that time.

"Question: I mean the time that you were there.

"Answer: During the time that I was there, nobody except Mr. Lubben and myself."

A. Now, are you speaking of cash authorization in general, sir, or cash authorizations for overages?

2423 Q. Well, I am speaking of the same ones you were talking of on deposition which, I take it, were those which had to do with the pattern of payments that you were there describing.

A. Well, let me answer it this way. I believe that on the cash authorizations for the overages, on those accounts that kept a record as described, the cash authorizations were issued by myself or Mr. Lubben. There were other occasions where there might have been cash authorizations issued by Mr. Hankermyer.

Q. Having to do with the same things?

A. I don't believe so, sir.

Q. And then from time to time you would gather the memoranda sheets which you had made and would recap those in typewriting on a typewritten sheet, would you not?

A. That would be the usual procedure.

Q. And I believe you said—by the way, how many typewritten sheets would you commonly make?

A. There was a duplicate, an original, and possibly a third duplicate—a third copy. It would have been an original and two copies.

Q. And one of those would be retained for the 2424 file?

A. That is so.

Q. And when that was done you would destroy your longhand memoranda?

A. Sometimes, sometimes not. Most—I'd say more times than not, I did.

Q. What is your best recollection at the moment as to whether they were always destroyed?

A. Well, sir, from the exhibits that I have seen here, it is evident I couldn't have destroyed all of them, because some of them are here as exhibits.

Q. Is that the reason why you now say that there were some instances in which they were not destroyed?

A. Sir, at this moment I have no recollection of whether I took every single slip and tore it up or not.

Q. That was the common practice?

A. It would be usual, yes.

Q. Do you recall that on the deposition, page 46, I asked this question:

"When they were typed up your longhand entries were destroyed."

2425 And your answering: "Yes."

A. Yes, as a general procedure it would be.

Q. I am asking you now, Miss Feldman, merely if you remember these questions and answers.

A. If you say so, sir.

Q. That question and the answer: "Yes." do you recall that?

A. I don't recall it, but if you are reading from the deposition, sir—

Q. And do you recall being asked:

"Q. Were they all destroyed at one time or on separate occasions?

"A. You mean for all the different slips that I made up?

"Q. Yes.

"A. No. When I typed up the slip, if I found that my typing figures added up and multiplied and agreed with what I had on my pencil notation there was no point in keeping the pencil notation.

"Q. So after each such time you would destroy the pencil notation?

"A. That's right."

Do you recall making those answers?

A. If that is in the deposition; yes, sir.

2426 Q. Were there some instances in which these checks would be drawn without a recap sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And some in which they would be drawn without a cash authorization?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That would be uncommon, would it not?

A. That would be when there was a prepayment of an overage being made, and if Mr. Lubben issued the checks in Chicago, I would have no way of knowing what he issued until he came back.

Q. I say, that would be relatively uncommon?

A. Truthfully, I don't recall at this time how often that could have happened, as to whether it was relatively uncommon or not.

Q. Do you recall at page 47 of your deposition answering:

"There may have been one or two occasions when Mr. Lubben gave me a disposition against overages where he might have drawn a check for a round figure, where, of course, I had no computation."

"Question: Well, that would be very rarely, one or two instances?

"Answer: It probably was several instances along 2427 the line.

"Question: That was not the common practice?

"Answer: No."

Did you make those answers?

A. Mr. O'Brien, are you asking me—

Q. I just want to know if you made the answers.

A. Yes, sir, and I would also like to know whether you are referring to Shotwell in particular, or just general practice?

Q. I am referring to the practice.

A. Well, we paid overages to other people on which Mr. Lubben presumably paid out round amounts.

Q. Miss Feldman, I don't desire to argue, or to call for an explanation. I just want to get accurately what the practice was, and you have told me at the inception of this line of examination that you didn't know whether it was uncommon or common, and so I have read you what you told me last year on the deposition, and I have merely asked you to state whether you made those answers.

A. I stated that it was done at times at the time, right?

Q. Did you also state it was not the common
2428 practice?

A. No, because there was a recap sheet, and there was no need for it.

Q. I didn't ask you why. I simply asked you whether you said that.

A. Yes, sir, if that is what the deposition reads, I said that.

Q. All right.

On the corn syrup, or corn box of the partnership, I think you have said that you had nothing to do with the keeping of the account of that box?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. It is true, is it not, that you had at least one occasion to take off car numbers and to make a check of the cars and bills of lading at Mr. Lubben's request, didn't you?

A. I made a list of all the cars that had come in to be—well, let me put it this way.

I made a list of all the cars that were shipped in on the corn ideal. All I did was list the cars, the dates it came in on, what it weighed, the loss in barreling, and the amount that was actually sold, and if I am not mistaken, I may have put the invoice price on there, but 2429 that is all I had to with that schedule.

Q. All right. All I mean, Miss Feldman, is that aside from that one occasion, you had nothing at all to do with the accounting or auditing of the corn box?

A. There was one occasion where I had to help the gentleman check his figures.

2430 Q. That was Loperfido, or whatever his name was?

A. That is correct.

Q. So that you knew an account was being kept?

A. I knew that there was a cash box, yes, sir.

Q. Now is it your understanding that Mr. Bercu or his staff audited the recap sheets and the entries to the accounts payable ledger in respect to the overages?

A. It is my understanding that all the accountants did so.

Q. So that during the period of time of the partnership at least, those items would somehow be reflected on the audit reports of the accountants?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now what was the situation in that respect during the partnership?

A. I am sorry. I don't follow you, sir.

Q. Were the accountants, that is, the Bercu accountants also auditing the same instruments and the same accounts payable ledger during the partnership time?

A. They audited everything that Mr. Roth did,
2431 with the exception of the corn box.

Q. You are not sure then whether their audit took into account the corn box transactions during the partnership?

A. I don't recall whether Mr. Bercu even knew about the corn box. I know that Mr. Roth did.

Q. And was there also a candy box, to your knowledge, in the partnership?

A. No.

Q. The only one that you know of is the corn box?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Now, as I understand it, your direct testimony, Mr. Lubben told you when you came into the proprietorship that there were over-ceiling transactions in candy?

A. I don't know what the ceiling price was. He told me that there were overages being paid.

Q. Well, I don't want to quibble about the term, whether it was over the ceiling or not, although as I recall your testimony here, Miss Feldman, you said that they were over-ceiling items, but whether the term over-ceiling or overages, Mr. Lubben did tell you that 2432 there were such transactions and that they were to be reflected on the books which you were to keep?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did he tell you that was to be done according to the system prescribed by Mr. Bercu?

A. I don't recall how he told me to do it, but we would—

Q. Well, let me remind you that you testified on direct here that Mr. Bercu instructed you in the system.

A. Mr. Bercu instructed me that all of the over-ceiling payments or overage payments would be reflected on the books of the company.

Q. Did Mr. Bercu tell you that the purchases were being made by Lubben in dual form and that you would receive an invoice at a price and that you were to add to that amount the amount which Mr. Lubben said was overage?

A. I don't know whether I originally got that information from Mr. Bercu or Mr. Lubben, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Well, the answer is you don't recall whether he told you that?

A. I don't recall him telling me on that specific 2433 thing.

Q. Did Mr. Bercu tell you that you were to enter the invoice as a total amount as adjusted in purchases?

A. I imagine he would have.

Q. And in the accounts payable record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he tell you that one check was to be drawn to the order of the vendor for the amount of the invoices, the printed amount?

2434 Q. Did he tell you that that check was to be posted to the debit of the accounts payable?

A. He didn't have to tell me to make a debit for a check that was paid out.

Q. Well, Miss Feldman, I am not interested in what he did tell you. I just would like to have your best recollection as to whether he told you the things I am asking you about.

A. Mr. O'Brien, after the passage of nine years, it would be a little difficult to tell you exactly what he told me.

Q. I realize that, but I want your best present recollection. If you can't say—

A. Mr. O'Brien, I would be unable to tell you that.

Q. Very well. Did Mr. Bercu tell you that as part of that system you were to draw another check simultaneously to cash for the balance of the invoice?

A. Again, I cannot answer that, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. That is fine. You just tell me. I have been speaking of the inception of the matter in the proprietorship. Now ask you whether, when the partnership was formed, Mr. Bercu didn't tell you the same thing about the system?

2435 A. I think I testified earlier, Mr. O'Brien, that I was not sure of how it was handled in the partnership, that there were changes made due to the fact that Mr. Roth was now in the picture.

Q. I appreciate that, but that is hardly my question, Miss Feldman, because you also said that a change occurred at some date—just how far along the line, you couldn't say, but I am asking you now whether at the inception, the very beginning of the partnership, Mr. Bercu did not give you the same instructions in respect to the system by which these things were to be handled?

A. I couldn't tell you that, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. All right. When you got over to General Confections after the liquidation, was Mr. Bercu there or was someone else there?

A. No. Mr. Bercu was not there at the time.

Q. Going back then to the proprietorship, do you know, speaking of suppliers generally, what the system was in respect of the simultaneous checks, one for the printed amount of the invoice and one for cash?

A. That didn't necessarily follow, sir.

Q. Were there instances as to suppliers in which 2436 the checks were drawn simultaneously?

A. There may have been.

Q. Where would that be reflected, on the cash disbursements book or the accounts payable ledger, or both?

A. Both places.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you let me see those again for the general proprietorship, the two books?

I wouldn't know one from the other.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you know?

A. Yes. That is the accounts payable and this is your cash disbursements (Indicating).

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you.

2437 Q. Miss Feldman, let's take the cash book, I think that you have, and look at Gum Products Company—right from the start of the proprietorship, look at Gum Products, look for Two Star, Eiger, Mike Cohen, and also Gertz, and Close, and see if there are any entries—

Let me ask you, would there be checks for the printed amount of the invoice likewise appearing in this book?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. See if there are any entries with respect to the people I have named in which the one check follows the other, or where there are two checks set down, one for the printed invoice, and one for the overage?

A. Would you repeat the names of the individuals that you are interested in, please?

Q. Gum Products, Two Star Confections?
A. Yes.
Q. Eiger?
A. Yes.
Q. Mike Cohen?
A. Yes.
Q. Gertz, and Close, or Urban?
A. Do you want me to start January 1st with 2438 that, '45?
Q. Well, I would think so. I am not looking for any particular one, just see how it looks on that page. You might see a National Process Foods enroute?
A. Here is a check, Close and Company. It is the natural payment—it is in payment of actual invoices, I assume.
Q. Yes.
A. But there is no cash check following it.
Q. I am interested in those in which the two appear together.
A. One here for National Process Foods. You have a check to National Process Foods for $1,906.60, and a check for cash to National Process Foods for $662.64.
Q. Well, that is illustrative of what I mean.
A. That's right.
Q. But without taking the Court's time, I think we can pursue the others ourselves and bring them out later. But on that book, that cash book, in the case that you last mentioned, the two checks show at or about the same time, do they not?
A. That's correct.
2439 Q. Now, can you tell me whether, to your knowledge, there is any place in that book in which that is true as to Shotwell, on any one item?
A. I wouldn't know, sir. I would have to check every book for cash disbursements, for the three years, or two years in question.
Q. Independently of the book, do you have any recollection of any occasion on which checks—or simultaneous checks were drawn on a Shotwell invoice?
A. No way of determining that right now, and I have no recollection, Mr. O'Brien.
Q. That was the only question.
A. I have no recollection.

Q. I appreciate that we can and have checked the books.

A. Yes.

Q. But I want to see what you have to say.

A. Yes. That I don't recall, sir.

Q. Now, when the checks were cashed, you or Miss Seiderer, or whoever else was handling it, gave the money to Mr. Lubben?

A. As far as I know, yes.

2440 Q. And is it correct to say that thereafter Mr. Lubben never presented any receipt or evidence of payment?

A. In reference to overages, no.

Q. Now, you said this morning that in the case of Two-Star there was a fairly consistent practice of recording as purchases items for which there was no invoice?

A. That is so.

Q. And I think you said that in such cases the supporting paper would be a cash authorization slip with either the delivery papers or the receiving papers on the goods?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And was that true, also, to your present recollection, in the case of Purams & Company?

A. That was an overage, sir, if I recall correctly.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you speak up, Miss Lubben.

By the Witness:

A. I say, if I recall correctly, that was an overage payment, not an unbilled shipment.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Not to get too far off the record, Miss Feld-

2441 man, but I hardly think you rate with Mr. Lubben, yet. You haven't been here six days, and you won't be. But on Purams you say that was an overage?

A. I believe that was an additional amount we were paying them at one time there for Jordan almonds.

Q. Were you paying overages to Two-Star also?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Well, then, there is no distinction in that respect, but the thing in common that I am trying to reach is that you recorded items of Purams in your purchase record without a supporting invoice from Purams, isn't that so?

A. Without a supporting invoice?

Q. Yes.
A. No, there were invoices from Purams.
Q. All right. Now, how about Gum Products and Eiger, do you recall —
A. Who?
Q. Gum Products of Boston and Eiger, Joe Eiger.
A. Joe Eiger, as I said this morning, I don't recall.
Q. All right. Well, the one you best recall is Two-Star?
2442 A. Two-Star and one or two others.
Q. And isn't it a fact that on the Two-Star items you had a sheet of yellow paper, a sort of a carbon copy of an invoice?
A. A carbon copy of an invoice?
Q. Yes, just an ordinary scratch paper, with the typewritten part carried through. Do you recall the use of those?
A. That I made?
Q. No, I don't say you made it.
A. That's what I am trying to find out, because the paper doesn't sound familiar.
Q. Do you have any present recollection of such slips, or carbons, being attached to your cash authorization sheet and to the receiving or shipping ticket?
A. I can recall a receiving ticket being attached, which would be a white sheet.
Q. Right.
A. I can recall slips from—well, they were about four inches high and about eight inches long, from one of the trucking companies, which I believe made up part of that record.
Q. As far as your present recollection goes, a 2443 yellow sheet.
A. A yellow sheet—
Q. Well, if you had only the cash authorization slip, and the delivery or shipping ticket, did you consider that good accounting support for the entries which you made?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is purely an opinion.
By the Court: She may answer.
By the Witness:
A. Sir, if I received merchandise, and I have the trucking receipt to show that I got it, and I have a receiving ticket to show that it went into inventory, and I am paying for the merchandise, I don't see how else I could get it on the books unless I made out a cash authorization slip.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. That hardly answers my question.

A. To me it was good accounting practice.

Q. I merely wanted your own opinion as to whether that was good accounting practice.

2444 A. If it was the only way to get it on the books it was good accounting practice. I was accounting for the goods that came into inventory.

Q. Where was the invoice, if you know?

A. The invoice for the merchandise that came in from Two Star?

Q. Yes.

A. There was never an invoice issued for that.

Q. Did you make any inquiry about it at the time?

A. Mr. O'Brien, my understanding when this—when we got these shipments of nut crunch from Two Star Confections was the fact that there would be no invoice issued for this, that we were paying for the entire amount of the original price, plus whatever the overage was, in cash.

Q. We are speaking of the proprietorship now?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if the original invoice was carried in support of a payout from the cash box of the proprietorship, it is my impression that you have no knowledge of that, you know nothing about the operation of a cash box.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. That is 2445 assuming facts which are not in evidence.

By the Court: Well, she may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. O'Brien, I think I said earlier in the day that I know of no cash box in the single ownership.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I think my question shows that I know you said that. I am merely—

Will you read the question so that I get it exactly. I would like an answer to that.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. I don't know how to answer that for you, Mr.

O'Brien. I wouldn't know that there was an invoice and I wouldn't know that there was a cash box, so how—
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. All right. You did say just a bit ago that the only box that you knew of in the partnership was the corn box?
A. That's correct, sir.
Q. And did you not give a statement in writing to the government last—which does not bear a date—did 2446 you not give a statement to the government for use in the preparation of this case?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recall that?
A. I do.
Q. When was it, Miss Feldman, when was it that you gave a statement?
By the Court: Isn't the date on the statement?
By Mr. O'Brien: No, I am sorry, Judge, it isn't.
By the Witness: I think the statement was given two years ago.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it was given about two years ago, the 18th of December, '52.
By Mr. Lockley: '51.
By Mr. O'Brien: '51.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Well, did you not state at that time, Miss Feldman, that during the period of the Eatsum partnership two strong boxes were used for currency in connection with cash transactions?
A. I did, sir. I had found out about it when I was at 253.
2447 Q. Well, in your statement you were speaking of what you knew right along, were you not?
A. In that particular instance?
Q. Yes.
2448 A. I don't believe I was, sir.
Q. All right. Well, then, as of the present time, at least, you do know or believe that there were two cash boxes?
A. I have seen a recap sheet of a box. I believe the recap sheet says Box No. 2 on it.
Q. What was Box No. 1?
A. Well, one was the corn box, and one was a candy box, about which—neither one of which I actually handled.

Q. Is it fair to say that you had nothing to do with the keeping of either box, or with the auditing of the contents, outside of that one incident in which you helped out Lopofido?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And you had no participation in the taking of the audits of those boxes?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. So that when and if such audits exist, they are not your figures?

A. No, sir; they are not.

Q. Now, I want to go back to the proprietorship, and to check one thing, on which I suppose you can't be of much help.

2449 Do you have any knowledge as to whether the profits of the proprietorship cash box were carried into the proprietorship books so as to be reflected as income somewhere along the line?

A. Those partnership books were never—

Q. The proprietorship?

A. The single proprietorship?

Q. Yes, Ma'am.

A. But there was no cash box then.

Q. Well, I appreciate that you have said it, but I want to ask you directly whether you have any knowledge one way or the other as to any of the profits of the proprietorship cash box being carried into the proprietorship books?

A. Since I did not prepare the statement, I would not have made the closing entries, sir.

Q. That is my belief, too.

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. And how about the cash box on General Confections; did you have some familiarity with that?

A. I knew of it.

Q. But again I take it you had nothing to do with the auditing of the contents?

A. Well, when I came up there, there was never 2450 a cash box used after that time.

Q. Well, granting that that is so, did you have anything to do with the auditing of the box that had been used?

A. No, I was not there at the time, sir.

Q. And from your position as bookkeeper and office manager, you would have occasion to observe if the profits of any such box were deposited to the account of the company, would you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from your knowledge, can you state whether or not there were any deposits to the account of the company, either proprietorship, or General Confections, of profits of a cash box?

A. Just a minute, sir.

Q. To your knowledge?

A. We are talking of a cash box in General Confections. How can I answer the question with relation to the proprietorship?

Q. Well, let's split it up. Let's take General Confections first.

Do you have any knowledge of profit from a cash box coming to your attention for deposit to the company's account on the books?

A. I believe there were notations made on sheets
2451 that existed in the black book that such monies were deposited in the books of General Confections.

Q. Are those notations which you saw at some time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you first see them only after the event?

A. After the event, sir.

Q. You had nothing to do with the making of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were not there at the time, or had no responsibility at the time for what was done with them?

A. No, sir.

Q. And it was merely in reviewing the matter, perhaps at the Revenue, or two years ago, that you noticed that?

By Mr. Lockley: Why not ask her when she did notice it?

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. Sure, I just want to get the fact.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When did you notice it?

A. I saw those when I came up there. I knew of those sheets after I got there.

2452 Q. At General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You observed it, and that is all you had to do with it? You took no action about it?

A. Well, the accountants had taken care of that.

Q. Well, I am not interested in who did what, except you. Did you do anything?

A. I had no reason to do anything about them, sir.

Q. I still don't want to know whether you had a reason. I just want to know whether you did anything about it?

A. What could I do about it?

By the Court: Just answer directly whether you did or not.

By the Witness: No, as far as I know, I did nothing about it.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. The answer, I think, Miss Feldman—although I shouldn't instruct you—the answer in that case is no?

A. I just said that.

2453 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, the same is true of the proprietorship, if I understand you correctly. Since you knew nothing about a cash box, you can't tell us whether the profit, if any, was carried into the proprietorship books?

A. I have no way of telling that, sir.

Q. Do you happen to know—well, of course, you wouldn't know, but is there any book you could look at quickly to tell us what the total of the cash sales was in the proprietorship and General Confections during the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I don't believe those records are available, sir.

Q. They would be for the proprietorship, would they not?

A. They would be for the proprietorship but they would not be available for the partnership.

Q. Pardon me.

By the Witness: Would you please read that last question again?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. We should be able to tell what the cash sales 2454 were for the single ownership. I don't know what—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is there a separate account on cash sales, Miss Feldman?

A. There would have been, yes.

Q. I won't stop to look now, but that is where I should look?

A. Yes. There would have been, yes.

Q. And on General Confections, is that record available, the ledger, showing the cash sales?

A. That would be the accounts receivable. I don't know whether those are available, sir.

Q. All right. Now, I take it going to the partnership again—

A. Yes.

Q. —that as to the partnership, you are unable to tell us whether any amounts of cash which were withdrawn from the cash box or boxes by Mr. Lubben were charged to him on the books of the partnership itself?

A. I am afraid I couldn't answer that one, sir.

Q. And when Mr. Lubben testified that his IOU's in the box were charged to him on the books, and that you could tell us more about it because he knew 2455 nothing of bookkeeping, is it true that you can tell us more about it or do you know nothing about the cash box transactions?

A. Just one moment, sir. First of all, you are talking of what, IOU's?

Q. Yes.

A. And then you want to know if they were picked up off the books?

Q. Right.

A. You would have to ask the accountant that, sir.

Q. Does that mean you cannot tell us?

A. No. My own recollection right now, I couldn't tell you.

Q. Is there any record that you know of that you could refer to to be able to tell us whether items taken from the box 1 or 2 of the partnership by Mr. Lubben were charged to him on the partnership books?

A. If the books were available I could tell you that but right now, not having them, I couldn't do so.

Q. Well, then tell me this: Conceding you had nothing to do with it, is it not your understanding that a separate account was kept of the ins and outs of the partnership cash boxes?

2456 A. A separate account?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't follow you, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What was the account that you helped Loperfido work out?

A. That was when he had to figure at one given point and I don't know when this occurred—he found that when he was multiplying the amount of pounds that he had sold in corn syrup by the overage he had gotten, he could not get it to come out right so he asked me to please check his computations to see what the answer was.

Q. And it was Loperfido. Did he have before him and before you an account which he was keeping on the contents of the box?

A. He was working from shipment papers.

By Mr. O'Brien: Have you got that account?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, you see some papers. The papers that he was working on had nothing to do with the books and records that you were keeping, did they?

A. No, because those were papers he had made computations on. I don't know what that was.

2457 Q. That is what I want to get clear. And if you look at Defendants' Exhibit 14-B for identification, I will ask you to state whether it was a record similar to that.

A. I wouldn't know, sir.

Q. Looking at this instrument while you have it, Miss Feldman, can you tell us what handwritings appear on it?

A. Mr. Lubben's.

By the Court: Speak up, Miss Feldman.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Lubben's and someone else's is on there.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is that Hankermyer's?

A. That could be. I am not sure of that.

Q. I notice in paragraph six of this same statement, Miss Feldman, the one given to the Government—well, I think I have been over that. I will withdraw that. That is something that has to do with the cash box.

Can you tell us how much General Confections, how much money General Confections owed Shotwell on its invoices, that is an open account, at ceiling prices for 2458 the shipments at the date of December 4, 1946 when that check for $17,190.00 was drawn and on December 20, 1946, the date that check was paid. Do you recall the check that I mean, Miss Feldman?

A. No, sir, I don't know which one you are referring to.

Q. Is there, among the records that are here, Miss Feldman—can you tell me whether there is a record which would show the balance due Shotwell and those dates in December of 1946?

A. No, we don't have the ledger sheet for that period, sir.

Q. Well, there is in evidence here Government's Exhibit 200, a series of Shotwell ledger sheets which indicate to me that there were substantial balances on those dates. You are a bookkeeper. Will you take a look and see if you can tell from that Government's exhibit what the balance due Shotwell was as of December 4, 1946.

A. According to this sheet, it would be $5,686.—

By the Court: I don't hear you, Miss Feldman.

By the Witness:

A. $5,686.11.

2459 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And then as of December 20th?

A. Well, that would be as of December 11th. There is no 20th entry on here. Oh, wait a minute. This is confused. Well, as it appears on here, at the 20th of December, the balance was $8,349.08.

A. Thank you. The check which I was mentioning, Miss Feldman, is Government's Exhibit 133. I think you have seen it before.

A. Oh, yes.

By the Court: 183?

By Mr. O'Brien: 133, Judge.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. It didn't seem right to me, Miss Feldman. I think I misdirected your attention. Will you look through 1944 instead of 1946. Would you look at the 1946 sheet there and tell us what the balances were?

A. As of what date, sir?

Q. As of December 4th and December 20, 1946.

By the Court: 1946?

By Mr. O'Brien: 1946, yes, sir.

By the Witness:

A. As of December 4th? $38,480.00.

2460 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And December 20th?

A. Forty-five thousand—

By the Court: How much?

By the Witness:

A. $45,015.72.

By the Court: Exhibit 200 is admitted?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. It was, Exhibit 200.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You testified on direct, I believe, Miss Feldman, that as of May 31, 1945, there was an overpayment to Shotwell of the overages so that the proprietorship had a credit, do you recall that—I forgot the amount, but it is Exhibit—withdraw that question.

Can you tell us from any record you had before you on direct how the balance stood with Shotwell as of May 31, 1945 on this so-called overage?

A. I think the ledger sheets are here.

2461 Q. Now which ledger can you tell that from?

A. The accounts payable ledger sheet for Shotwell.

By Mr. Krane: Exhibit 6-A and 13?

By Mr. Lockley: Here it is.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. There are a couple of sheets here. Did you find anything in that book?

A. No. These are the ones (indicating).

By Mr. O'Brien: Now would you read the question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. Well, according to this ledger sheet, there is a $20,000 payment made against overages on the 25th of May.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Leaving a balance of what?

A. May I have a pencil, please?

Q. No, no.

By the Court: I am sorry. I did not hear you.

By Mr. O'Brien: She asked for a pencil.

By the Witness: A pencil and paper, please.

2462 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Without a pencil and paper.

A. May I refer to these sheets that I made up?

Q. No. I am not interested in that.

A. I would have to have a pencil and paper then.

Q. The fact is, Miss Feldman, you can't tell by looking at that ledger sheet what the balance is as to overages of any given date, can you?

By Mr. Lockley: Well—

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. By just looking?

A. Yes, I can, sir. I would have to compute the difference because the account is keyed off.

Q. I don't mean computation. I mean, you can't gain it from looking at the sheet itself?

A. Well, not if I enter a total amount for the overage plus—for the amount typed on the invoice plus the overage.

Q. Well all I want to know is can you tell me right out of hand without a pencil and paper, looking at that sheet, what the overage balance was?

A. The overage balance was—

2463 Q. Well, without making any mental computation.

A. I will tell you—

By the Court: You mean, is it written down there?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is exactly what I mean.

By the Witness:

A. All right. The overage was due on 12,960 spice buttons—32,400 pounds of Cardinals, 13,620 pounds of gum drops. If you take the overage on those three items and subtract it from the $20,000, you have the amount of overage that you prepaid.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. All right. My question is not directed to a computation, Miss Feldman.

May I have them, please?

A. Yes.

By the Court: We will take our afternoon recess now for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now recess for ten minutes. Kindly remain standing until the jury is in the jury room.

(Short recess.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark these exhibits, De-
2464 fendants' Exhibits 39, 40, 41 and 42 for identification?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 39, 40, 41 and 42 for identification.)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I was talking about the ledger sheets, Government's Exhibit 6-A. In fact, there is only one sheet.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The pencil figures on that sheet were not made at the time, were they, Miss Feldman?

A. At what time?

Q. At the time that the ink postings were made?

A. You mean for the item and the overage?

Q. Yes.

A. I believe they were, sir.

Q. Do you know?

A. Well, if it is the item that was on the invoice it would have had to have been, unless someone—

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness: Unless someone went back and 2465 entered them at a later date.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes, of course.

Now, are those your figures, the pencil figures?

A. I don't believe those are. May I see that again?

Q. Surely.

A. No, these are not mine.

2466 Q. All I was interested in, Miss Feldman, was this and not in a computation—but the reason I asked you the question is that when you were testifying on direct for Mr. Lockley, I thought that you were referring to recap sheets or to some side computations which you had made for convenience during the trial here and you said that you could state the balance equally as well from the ledger sheet itself and it was for that reason that I wanted you to tell me right out of hand the balance, without making the computation, and as I understand it, you cannot do that without a computation?

A. You are referring now to the amount due on the balance for the overages on the prepayment of the $20,000.00?

Q. That is right.

A. As I said, if I had taken the items and multiplied them and subtracted from 20, that is it.

Q. That is what I want to know.

A. I think the answer I gave at the time was, at a given point we had keyed off amounts so that your debits and credits for both your checks to Shotwell and your overage payments evened out.

Q. Well, the only point which I wanted to make is 2467 that you could not take any date—that is, I could not call your attention to every date on this sheet and have you tell me what the balance is for such date?

A. There was only one overage payment open on there, I believe.

Q. Well, whether open or not, if I pick the date August 16th, can you tell me right off what the overage balance was?

A. No, because the amount is keyed up to that point.

Q. I don't want to know why. I just wanted to know whether you could do it or not.

Now, look at it again and using the pencil figures or the key-offs, tell us whether it is true that you had a black market credit, according to that sheet, of some $11,000.00 on it as of May 31st?

A. I don't have the May sheet here, sir.

Q. Well, I am sorry. Perhaps this—

A. Thank you. A black market credit of $11,000.00 did you say?

Q. Yes.

By the Court: With whom?

By Mr. O'Brien:

2468 Q. With Shotwell.

A. I would still have to compute the overage of the Cardinals to give you that $11,000.00 figure.

Q. Let me call your attention to the computation already made on the Exhibit B, your statement to the government, and see if that won't save time because I don't think the authenticity of this is questioned.

By Mr. Lockley: I would just like to point out that is not in evidence, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is true. I am just saving time. Miss Feldman has already computed it.

By the Witness:

A. It is $11.205.38, I believe, on this one.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, can you tell me the state of the open account between Shotwell and the company as of that date on their invoices for the printed amounts, the ceiling prices?

A. Yes, sir. We owed for two shipments at that time.

Q. I mean in dollars, what was it?

2469 A. In dollars, $13,151.55.

Q. You still owed Shotwell that?

A. That is correct.

Q. According to this record?

A. That is correct.

2470 Q. Now you testified, Miss Feldman, that when you came to General Confections, which I think was in August of 1946, you found that they had been pursuing the same pattern or practice that had been in effect in the partnership. Do you recall that?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Well, let us put it this way: You said that when you got to General Confections you resumed the proprietorship procedure?

A. Did I say—Did I put it that way? I don't recall what I said at the time.

Q. Well, let us start this way: What is the fact—when you got to General Confections, which was some three or four months after it had commenced to operate, what procedure did you find was being followed in respect of overages?

A. They were not entering the overage amounts on the invoice.

Q. Well, that was the same as the practice at the partnership but different from the practice in the proprietorship, was it not?

A. It was different from the practice of the proprietorship. As to the partnership, as I told you, 2471 I don't have anything available to check with so far.

Q. Did you learn that they had a cash box—as soon as you came there did you learn that General Confections was employing a cash box?

A. I don't know when I learned that they had been employing one, sir.

Q. Well, you did learn it?

A. I did learn it, yes, sir.

Q. And after your arrival, did you continue to maintain a cash box or was the practice abandoned?

A. There was no cash box after I came there.

Q. If there was a cash box or the equivalent, you knew nothing about it?

A. I know nothing of a cash box after I came to work there, sir.

Q. Now, can you tell us why you did not continue to mark up the invoices as you had done in the case of the proprietorship?

A. Frankly, sir, at this date I could not tell you why.

Q. Do you recall whether Mr. Lubben asked you not to?

A. I don't know, sir.

2472 Q. According to your best recollection, did Mr. Lubben, during your experience with the companies, have anything to do with the books as to the total postings or making of original entries?

A. Not as far as I know, sir. There would be no occasion for him to work on the books.

Q You assumed the responsibility for the books?

A. That is correct, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I have Government's Exhibit 65, please, Chuck?

2473 Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 63-B, and I will ask you to state whether you have seen that before, whether you have any recollection of seeing it before?

A. I have already stated that I have, sir, previously.

Q. And under what circumstances did you first see it?

A. This would have been given to me by Mr. Lubben.

Q. Well, now you state that as though it is possible that that occurred. Do you have some independent recollection that Mr. Lubben did give it to you?

A. He would have had to have given it to me, because the notation on the slip is addressed to me.

Q. Is that all you can tell us about the occasion?

A. As to when he actually handed it to me?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir; I couldn't tell you anything more about it.

Q. Independently of the notation on the exhibit, Miss Feldman, you have an independent recollection as to the circumstances under which Mr. Lubben gave you this, if he did?

2474 A. I am sorry. I don't understand you, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. My answer was that I don't understand.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, it is somewhat ambiguous. When I say the notation, Miss Feldman, I am referring to the endorsement in Mr. Lubben's handwriting. Ignore the endorsement in Mr. Lubben's handwriting, and tell me whether you have any independent recollection of receiving this document from Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, I know that he gave it to me, sir. The notation is addressed to me. But anything else I don't think I can tell you about it.

Q. Well, I take it—to shorten it—that the only reason that you can state he gave it to you or you think he gave it to you, is because it must be so since this notation is contained upon it, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you have any personal knowledge as to where it came from?

2475 A. I didn't see it handed to him, if that is what you mean, sir.

Q. I didn't hear you.

A. I didn't see it handed to him, if that is what you mean, sir.

Q. Well, do you have any other personal knowledge as to where it came from, independently of what Mr. Lubben says on the instrument?

A. All I can tell from that, sir, is that it is written on a Shotwell piece of paper, it bears certain notations, and therefore he may have told me it came from Shotwell, independently of the notation, and he may not have. I would be inclined to think he did, because those figures on there check with some other items.

2476 Q. Miss Feldman, I think we can conjecture about it, too, but we must come to you to get any facts independently and outside of this document. Now, have you any to contribute or is that all you know?

A. Mr. O'Brien, all I know is he gave it to me. When, or how, at what time of the day, I don't know.

Q. Now, on the resale of the candies, Miss Feldman, is it true that the proprietorship resold for an invoiced price?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were there some times that it sold for the invoice price, and invoice price and cash?

A. In the proprietorship?

Q. Yes, to your knowledge.

A. Well as far as I can recall, sir.

Q. And in the partnership what is your recollection?

A. Well, I know that it was sold for an invoice price plus cash, but that was on corn syrup.

Q. I am speaking of candy.

A. Of candy, I don't know, sir.

Q. And in General Confections?

A. Yes, I know that they sold for an invoice price plus cash.

2477 Q. And sometimes that invoice, and sometimes that invoice only?

A. Well, I don't follow you again, sir.

Q. I think maybe you misunderstand. What I am trying to ask you is whether on the resale of the various candies to your customers—

A. Yes.

Q. —you always sold on an invoice for some stated price?

A. Yes, sir; as far as I know.

Q. Did you sometimes sell on an invoice and for cash, also?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: This is General Confections?

By Mr. O'Brien: I would gather that is so from what Miss Feldman said a while ago.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. But in the partnership you would say that there were sales on invoice only and not for invoice plus cash to Eatsum?

A. I said that there were sales plus cash on the partnership and I think that most of them consisted of 2478 the corn syrup.

Q. Well, I am inquiring, if you please—

A. Yes.

Q. —only on candies, Miss Feldman.

A. On candies, offhand, I don't know, sir.

Q. Now, yesterday, or on your direct sometime, you identified Government's Exhibits 75 to 91-A. And calling your attention to 7-A, I ask you to note the ink endorsement that the goods be billed at 16 cents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is the significance of that?

A. That was the price at which it was sold to the customer.

Q. To your customer?

A. That's right.

Q. And the same notation appears on 78-A. It means the same thing, does it not?

A. I would assume so.

Q. And on 80-A, 16 cents?

A. I would assume so.

Q. The same thing. And the same with 81-A. Now, as to the remaining invoices within that group of exhibits, do you have any present knowledge as to the 2479 resale basis, there being no such notation on the face?

A. No, sir.

Q. These are all Geenral Confections items, Miss Feldman?

A. Yes.

Q. And I ask you to tell me where would we find, on the General Confections record, a record of the resale prices of the goods received on these invoices?

A. In the sales book. You wouldn't actually have a resale price, you would have the resale—the total of the invoice.

Q. What is the difference?

2480 A. Well, you have to divide the price charged the customer by the number of pounds to get the amount per pound that was charged.

Q. Were they grouped in those postings or were they—I see. You probably had more than one customer for each of these invoices.

A. It could have been one or more than one. And they could have been shipped at different times.

Q. Right. And you would have to take the price and divide it by the number of units to see what the unit price or resale price was?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And I take it the same is true in the case of the other goods shown in the Shotwell invoices contained in the series 103 to 119. Those are Government Exhibits 103 to 119.

A. If they are notations as to sales price; and if not, it would also hold true the same way.

Q. Right. Now, asking about 125-A specifically, 125-A bears an ink endorsement, 28 cents a pound, does it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is that in Mr. Lubben's handwriting?

2481 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And does it pertain to the resale price?

A. I would say so.

Q. On your direct testimony you gave us a computation made in relation to the Government's Exhibits in evidence here as to total overages, do you recall that, I think for the proprietorship and for the others, and for different periods. It isn't important now just which it was. But whenever you gave those totals on overages you were figuring that the unbilled shipments carried an overage, were you not?

A. What unbilled shipments, sir?

2482 By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that was not covered in the question asked of Miss Feldman. The question asked of Miss Feldman with respect to the year 1946 related only to the over invoice amounts, and to the corn syrup. There was nothing asked on unbilled shipments, as to the amounts.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I think that is true, but, admittedly, Miss Feldman was asked as to the total overages, comprehended within the limits of the question, was she not?

By Mr. Lockley: But that didn't include unbilled shipments, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, did it not, Miss Feldman, include overages on unbilled shipments?

A. No, sir; it did not.

Q. All right. So that in any statement that you have made to such a total, you have not included anything as to unbilled shipments, whether the ceiling price or overages?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Now, I would like you again, in the interest 2483 of getting through here without a pencil to look at Exhibit O to your statement to the Government, and tell me whether the computation of the two percent discount was applied against the total, or full price?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, I object on the ground that that is beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: I don't just follow the question, Mr. O'Brien. Are you now referring to some other date that was attached to the statement that she made?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. The document that I have handed the witness is a copy of a schedule that the Government gave me, and I would like to verify the impression I have, that the discount is figured against the total price.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, this is concerning a matter, your Honor, about which we did not question Miss Feldman on direct examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if it doesn't show that, I am not interested. But if it does, I will discuss the matter with the Court.

2484 By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness:

A. The computation on the cash discount here was not mine. That was Mr. Mammel's. My computation is the $27,000 check, and the $322.67 journal entry.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Is there a difference?

A. Yes, there is a difference. In the discount there is a difference.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, may I object again on the ground that this is a matter that was not gone into on her direct examination. It is cross examination on a matter which we entirely avoided during the course of the direct examination.

By the Court: I am somewhat of a loss, not having seen the statement. I am not entirely clear as to what Mr. O'Brien is interrogating about.

2485 By Mr. Lockley: The document she holds in her hand has not been identified and not been introduced in evidence.

By the Court: Well, how is it germane to the direct? Let me ask you that.

By Mr. O'Brien: There are so many things bouncing around, Judge, that I better pick out something that will somewhat define things to address myself to first.

I am impressed with these objections that the questions are not confined to the direct. I think that I am entitled, generally speaking, to a considerable latitude on that and do not have to confine myself literally to the letter of Mr. Lockley's direct.

No. 2, there was testimony here concerning the subject-matter of discounts by a government witness and I am merely trying to ascertain from the bookkeeper who knows the facts what the fact is.

By the Court: I assume that you may inquire, now that the books are in evidence, as to what the facts are.

2486 By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to the inquiry as to discounts. But he is picking out a particular set of transactions which the defense objected to when the government tried to bring out any evidence through Miss Feldman on direct examination, namely, the so-called unbilled shipments. When we attempted to show her the bills of lading you recall there was objection to it.

By the Court: When you speak of unbilled shipments, I confess that I am not clear. Unbilled shipments as between Shotwell and General Confections, or what?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. It is the shipments which were evidenced by the bills of lading and for which no invoices were given.

By the Court: You call those unbilled shipments where there was no invoice then?

By Mr. Lockley: That's correct, your Honor. And on those Miss Feldman was not permitted to testify on her direct examination, at the objection of the defendants.

2487 If he wants to go into a matter—

By Mr. O'Brien: I won't pursue it further.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In figuring your total overages, however, Miss Feldman, you did consider that there were overages on the corn syrup items?

By the Court: I take it you are referring to overages as between—which company and Shotwell?

By Mr. O'Brien: In that case it was Shotwell and General Confections because, as far as the record shows, there were no other shipments of corn syrup.

By the Witness: You are referring to the corn syrup that was entered on the Reserve Trading books?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Yes.

A. I don't know—yes, I did give a figure for the Reserve Trading total of unbilled shipments—of the Reserve Trading overages on corn syrup. I am sorry.

Q. So that your totals do impute or include an overage in respect of the corn syrup shipments?

2488 A. Yes, I included a total for the two corn syrup shipments.

2489 Q. In the record of 1094 Mr. Lubben testified that he couldn't say whether the $67,000.00 item shown on Defendants' Exhibit 13 went into the proprietorship account, and he thought that you might help with that. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 13, which purports to be a bank statement of Eatsum Food Products, and find that item of $67,000.00.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you yourself know whether that check was credited to the account of Eatsum Food Products?

A. Now wait. There were two bank accounts at that time that reflected the $67,000.00 item. There is an old Eatsum and a new Eatsum. There was a deposit in the new Eatsum—

Q. I am speaking of the old Eatsum.

A. Certainly.

Q. And it does reflect a credit to the account of the old Eatsum.

A. Anything that appears on the bank statement appears on the books.

By the Court: You refer to the old Eatsum. Do you mean the old Eatsum that existed before the proprietorship?

2490 By Mr. O'Brien: I think not, what Miss Feldman calls the single ownership.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Right?

A. Yes, that was at the time of the formation of the partnership. The partnership account was the new Eatsum and the single proprietorship account was old Eatsum. So the $67,000.00 was drawn out of the new Eatsum and put in the old Eatsum.

Q. Right. That's all I wanted to know. Will you look at the documents marked Defendants' Exhibits 15-A to 15-J, respectively; and tell me, if you can, in whose handwriting they are.

A. Part of this is in Mr. Hausman's handwriting.

2491 Q. Referring to the first two?

A. No, part of this is not his on the first page. The top half is Mr. Hausman's. The bottom half, I don't know.

Q. All right. Take the next one.

A. The next sheet is Mr. Hausman's. The third sheet is Mr. Hausman's and someone else's.

Q. And the last?

A. That was Mr. Loperfido's handwriting.

Q. Mr. Loperfido is the next in order?

A. That's right.

Q. Then you have three left?

A. These are all Mr. Loperfido's handwriting, as far as I can see.

Q. Now, you are referring to—

A. Except for the balances at the far end, and I don't know whose they are.

Q. All right. Just let me see what we have been talking about here. The ones in Loperfido's handwriting are Exhibits 15-A, B, C, D, E, F and G, are they not, with the exception of the parts that you have excepted, and you don't know whose handwriting those are in, the other parts are in?

A. That's right.

2492 Q. Now, the sheets which you say are Mr. Hausman's handwriting, as far as you can identify the handwriting, are 15-J—rather H, I and J?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Are the Loperfido sheets the same as those which he had when you were assisting him in the manner you described?

A. Just one moment. These are the sheets I made out, that I described earlier as having made a list of cars.

Q. These are the cars?

A. That's right. That is the list of cars of corn syrup that came in.

Q. So that the typewritten part—where I am confused is because you said these were Mr.—

A. Mr. Loperfido's handwriting. I typed the typing on it.

Q. But the typewritten part—and the tape, I suppose, you ran off?

A. The typewritten part?

Q. Is this the tape for the typewritten part?

A. I don't know.

No, the tape is not for the typewritten part.

2493 Q. O. K. The typewritten parts you ran off and the pencil or longhand figures, rather, are his?

A. The longhand figures are his. I didn't run those tapes.

Q. Now, it is true, is it not, that all of the companies during your connection with them were factoring accounts with General Commercial Acceptance Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you able to tell us, Miss Feldman, whether—withdraw that.

Is it true that they were advancing—

By the Court: Factoring isn't too well known to everybody and I don't know that it has been fully explained.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think you are right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Would you state briefly, Miss Feldman, what the factoring operations consisted of, for the benefit of the jury?

A. Well, we needed money, since we didn't have too much, so we would prepare a schedule of accounts receivable every day, and we would turn that over to the factorer. In fact, we were selling it to him. He 2494 would give us 80 per cent of the value of those accounts receivable, less a certain interest and finance charge, and he would keep a 20 per cent balance as a reserve. When we received the checks from these customers whose accounts we had assigned we would send the checks to General Commercial Acceptance and they would return to us 20 per cent of the face value of the check.

I think that covers it.

2495 Q. What you said just applies to your accounts receivable?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. But it is also true, is it not, Miss Feldman, that sometimes you procured advances against inventory items?

A. Yes, sir, that is correct.

Q. For example, if you purchased chocolate, sugar, nuts, or sometimes candy, you would also borrow from General Commercial eighty per cent of the cost?

A. I don't know what they gave us on that, sir, offhand, whether it was eighty per cent or not.

Q. Whatever the percentage was.

A. Yes, sir. They gave us a percentage and we paid it.

Q. They gave you a percentage and withheld the rest and either they would pay the supplier or they would give you the money to pay the supplier?

A. Yes, and they kept track of the merchandise.

Q. Now with that much background on it, I would like to ask whether you know whether General Commercial Acceptance Corporation lent you the money 2496 against the full cost of the goods as shown by your books or against the printed invoice prices of the goods.

A. I imagine and I am not sure of this, that it would be on the invoice price plus the overage because that would be the figure carried on the inventory.

Q. Do you remember—well, I better ask it this way: Did you yourself have anything to do with the transactions with that company? Were there occasions when you handled that?

A. I spoke of Mr. Blumberg, is that what you mean?

Q. Would you sometimes deliver the invoices or pick up or exchange the papers that were involved?

A. You are speaking of loans on inventory now?

Q. Yes, I am.

A. There would be one form. I know the form, but I just couldn't describe it.

Q. We I couldn't either, but there was a form?

A. There was a form, yes, in connection with every invoice.

Q. And would you not deposit with them in the 2497 first instance the invoice that was involved?

A. No, sir, not necessarily.

Q. Would they not obtain from you a trust receipt for that invoice when they gave it back to you?

A I don't know what you mean by "trust receipt."

Q. Well, you spoke of forms. Refreshing your recollection, was there not a printed form of trust receipt which you executed at the time you turned over the invoice by virtue of which they gave you back the invoice and let you carry it away until the transaction was paid off?

A. It wouldn't always have to do with the invoice, sir. We would sign—there was some form of note, if I am not mistaken.

Q. Yes, there was.

A. It was a form of note and this large sheet that carried the details of transactions. In many cases we turned over warehouse receipts to them, not the invoice.

Q. Yes, but without burdening your recollection with the particular forms, the important thing is that you believe that the borrowings were made against the full price?

A. I believe so, sir.

2498 Q. After you left General Confections, did you go out to California, Miss Feldman, as I understand?

A. I did.

Q. And following that, did you at any time go back to work for Mr. Lubben, or any of his companies?

A. I didn't work for them. There was an occasion when he had General Confections in New Jersey, I believe, when I was over there on a Saturday once in a while, and I posted up his books.

Q. When was that, approximately?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor. I object. I think this is going beyond the scope of the direct examination. It is obviously past 1946.

By the Court: She may answer.

By the Witness: It would have been in 1949.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And was that the first time that you went back?

A. Well, I came back to New York in December of 1948, and I don't think this was until some time in the summer, or fall, or perhaps the winter of 1949. I don't know.

2499 Q. Well, at any rate, you wouldn't have been back before—

A. No.

Q. —to work with Mr. Lubben or any of his companies?

A. No.

Q. Did any of your work at that time involve any attention to the books and records with which we are concerned here?

A. I don't know what books I worked on at the time, Mr. O'Brien.

Q. All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit 43 for identification?

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 43 for identification.)

By the Court: Are you jumping?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am.

By the Court: The last I have—

By Mr. O'Brien: Just let it go for a minute. Forget it for a minute, if you will, Judge.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Miss Feldman, looking at the document marked Defendants' Exhibits 39, 40 and 41 for identification, 2500 can you tell me in whose handwriting they are?

A. This is mine, this too is mine, and this too is mine.

Q. All three are in your handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those are records which were made and maintained in the regular course of the business of the company?

A. I don't know what these were made for, sir. I don't know why these were made.

Q. Will you look at Defendants' Exhibit 42, and tell me in whose handwriting that is, again?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. You don't know?

A. No. It may be Frank Loperfido's. I am not sure.

Q. Now that brings me to Defendants' Exhibit 43 for identification. Will you look at the handwriting on that sheet and tell me if you know whose it is?

A. I don't know whose it is, sir.

Q. You do not?

A. No.

Q. While you were at General Confections, Miss 2501 Feldman, starting in August of 1946, I think the accountants, the outside accounts were Sproul and Scholz, were they not?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Do you have any recollection now as to the man that you worked with out of that office?

A. Well, there was Mr. Scholz. I believe Mr. Kirby asked me yesterday about a Joe Meyers. I couldn't recall the last name, but there was a Joe.

Q. I think you did say that. I had forgotten.

Now, do you have any present recollection of their coming to you from time to time during the course of their work and the audit and audit reports of General Confections and asking for explanations as to these cash checks?

A. Sir, if they did—

Q. As to these cash checks drawn for Mr. Lubben?

A. I don't recall anything like that. In most cases, when authorizations for merchandise had come in, they had receiving tickets.

Q. I just want to find out what if anything you know about it, Miss Feldman. Did any of those accountants come to you and tell you they could not find any support for the charges on those checks and ask you to exhibit 2502 evidence?

A. Sir, I don't recall anything like that.

2503 By Mr. Lockley: I didn't hear your answer, Miss Feldman.

By the Witness: I said, sir, I don't recall anything like that.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you remember—I should state it this way: Do you yourself know whether they made any such inquiries of Mr. Lubben?

A. I don't know, sir.

Q. You do not know?

A. No.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, it is about adjournment time. Are you going to have any cross examination, Mr. McConnell?

By Mr. McConnell: I only have a few questions.

By the Court: Is it your desire to start now, or do you suggest we adjourn?

By Mr. McConnell: Does the young lady wish to go back to New York? I don't want to keep her here.

By the Witness: I would like to go back to New 2504 York, Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. McConnell: I only have several questions.

By the Court: If you want to utilize seven or eight minutes, all right.

By Mr. McConnell: I will ask her two or three questions and we will let her go.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Miss Feldman, did I understand in your testimony that you say that the postings to the general ledger were not made by you but by the auditors?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And we have talked a lot here about postings. Can you briefly tell us what you mean by that? What is a posting?

A. Well, at the end of the month in all of the books of original entry there is an analysis made whereby all the debits and all the credits are shown in this analysis and the debits must equal the credits. From this point, the accountants would take their figures and post those amounts to the proper accounts in the general ledger.

Q. And those are not original entries; those are 2505 entries made from books of original entry, are they not?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. But it is a final entry summarizing the transactions which are recorded in other books?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now as I understood it, the ledger that we have here, the books from which those entries were posted, are not here, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. And I take it that the auditors didn't work under your supervision?

A. No, sir, they did not.

Q. They were working on their own. They were auditing your work, though, am I not right?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So when you said that the books and records were kept in the usual course of business, you weren't testifying of your own knowledge, so far as the ledgers themselves were concerned, were you?

A. I would assume if I close the books of original entry that they would post those amounts to the general ledger. You keep the general ledger as a part of a double entry bookkeeping system.

2506 Q. But you are assuming that. It wasn't done under your supervision?

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. That was merely an assumption on your part, that the auditors did do it that way?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now as I understand your testimony, you had no conversation with anybody from Shotwell which authorized you to raise the face amount of the invoices which covered candy shipments, gum drops, and so forth?

A. That is an odd question to ask me because when an invoice reaches an office, you do with it as you please. I had no authorization.

Q. I realize that. You never had any conversation with anybody from Shotwell?

A. I never did, no.

Q. I didn't say that you did. You didn't say it?

A. No, I did not.

Q. It is not your position that you had any authority from anyone directly from Shotwell to raise the invoices?

A. When the invoices come to my office—

Q. Just answer my question.

2507 A. You are asking me a question and I am answering it. When the invoices come to my office, they are my property and when I enter them, when I post them, Shotwell can't tell me not to.

Q. You did that on your own, didn't you?

A. What?

Q. You did that on your own?

A. What?

Q. Raise those invoices.

A. I did that on instructions. I was told to do it.

Q. From whom?

A. From Mr. Lubben.

Q. You didn't get any instructions from Shotwell, did you?

A. I didn't need any instructions from Shotwell. I didn't need any instructions from Shotwell.

Q. You didn't get any from them, did you?

By the Court: Just answer the question, Miss Feldman.

By the Witness: No, I didn't get any instructions from Shotwell.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now you say you got your instructions from 2508 Mr. Lubben, and I understood you to say that you didn't have any receipts for the payments which Mr. Lubben made, but you did have Mr. Lubben's word that he had made the payments, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that the basis of your records—I am not questioning you, you personally as to whether you entered the records or not—the basis of your records was whether or not Mr. Lubben had properly and correctly reported to you payments, is that correct?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. So that when you testified in response to Mr. Lockley's question that these records were true and accurate, the only information you had on that was what you received from Mr. Lubben, wasn't it?

A. Well, they were true and accurate according to the information received.

Q. From Mr. Lubben?

A. That is correct.

Q. You were not testifying from your own knowledge on those transactions?

A. That he had paid the cash to Shotwell?

Q. Yes.

2509 A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: That's all.

2510 Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

I beg your indulgence for the remaining few seconds, your Honor. I would like to let Miss Feldman go, but I still have a few questions on redirect examination that I would like to ask her.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Miss Feldman, I show you two exhibits, 77-A, and 78-A, that were also displayed by Mr. O'Brien, and which say on them, "Biiled at 16 cents", or invoiced for 16 cents.

Now, to whom were those invoices directed?

A. Imperial Candy Company of Youngstown.

Q. That is the General Confections, is it?

A. Well, they were billed to General Confections, and they were drop shipped.

Q. Did General Confections resell them?

A. They did.

Q. Do you know how much General Confections resold them for?

A. They were invoiced at 16 cents.

Q. Was there any further price that General Confections received over and above the 16 cents billing price?

2511 A. I believe there was on Imperial Candy.

By the Court: A little louder, please.

By the Witness:

A, I say, I believe there was on Imperial Candy.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know where Imperial Candy was located?

A. Youngstown, Ohio.

Q. And Mr. O'Brien, I believe, also asked you about factoring and he asked you whether you were loaned the money by the factors on the full price.

Now, did you receive money borrowed from these factors on the purchase price you paid for material, or on the sale price for which you sold it?

A. When we were factoring accounts receivable, we were getting the money on the sales price of the item.

Q. So that the amount you got back from a factor was 80 percent of the amount you sold it for, is that correct?

A. In those instances, yes.

Q. Not the amount that you paid for it?

A. That is correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: I talked about the inventory

2512 price.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right. What about the inventory?

A. I testified to the fact that I thought the loans on the inventory were made on the invoice price plus the overage. I said I believed that was so. I was not sure.

Q. Those were secured, were they, in any way, those loans?

A. When the merchandise was in the warehouse, we turned the warehouse receipts over to the finance company, or the factor company, and they would reduce it as we paid them for certain amounts coming out of the warehouse.

Q. Well, what was the measure of the amount of money that you could get from the factor; was it the amount you paid for the material, was it the market value on it, or was it the amount you expected to sell it for; or do you know?

A. The amount we paid for it.

Q. The amount you paid for on the inventory, and the amount you sold for when you factored your accounts receivable, is that it?

A. That is right.

Q. Is there anything else? You were also asked
2513 about this $67,000 check, the Defendants' Exhibit 13, I believe. Do you know anything further about that transaction?

A. That was one of Mr. Louis J. Roth's brainstorms. Instead of depositing the money for the partnership—for the purchase of an interest in the business into the old account, and then transferring it to the new when the partnership was opened, they put the $67,000, which item represented part of Mr. Lubben's investment in the new company, plus Mr. Giglio's investment in the new company, they then withdrew it to pay up the bills that were due on Eatsum Food Products single ownership. The entry was handled very poorly, and I think that is where the confusion arises.

Q. Does it reflect Mr. Lubben got $60,000 for the sale of Eatsum?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how much he did get?

A. I believe it was half that.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. The records will be the best evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked her if she knows. You
2514 were questioning the validity of the records.

That is all, your Honor, and I thank you.

By the Court: We will recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning, members of the jury.

(Witness excused.)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Kindly remain standing until the jury gets into the jury room.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause to the following day, being Tuesday, September 29, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

2515

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Before Nordbye, J. and J.

Chicago, Illinois
Tuesday, September 29, 1953
10:00 o'clock A.M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley,
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in Chambers, out of the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, you didn't want to be heard on this order, did you?

By Mr. Lockley: I think perhaps for the record, I ought to be heard. I am informed by Mr. Krane that 2516 he has not taken any statement from Mr. Rock, Mr. Sproul, or Mr. Stone. Nor, to the best of his knowledge, does the Government have any statements from them which relate in any way to the Shotwell case.

By the Court: Well, be that as it may, I will sign the order, and if you haven't any statements, I don't suppose there is any compliance with them. I have already signed it.

By Mr. Lockley: So far as I can see, it is the same as all the other orders so I have no objection to giving them statements, but they just don't exist.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am afraid if I ever had any standing with Judge Nordbye, I am losing it; I have so many motions, Judge.

I will tell you, Mr. Lubben spoke of a passport and it was applied for and issued in 1948.

By the Court: This isn't for the record—

(Discussion off the record.)

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, we checked the passport.
2517 We had a lawyer in Washington inquiring into it, and he reports to me there was a passport applied for, both in 1945 and in 1948. I want to get a copy of the passport, and under their regulations or requirements, where it is for use in a case, you may have it, but it takes an order of a Judge; that it would be, to use their expression, in the interest of justice in the case.

There is no regulation, Ed. There is no regulation in the books, and no provision such as you have in the United States Attorney's office, or the Attorney General, or the Secretary of the Treasury for this channel or approach to it.

That is the motion.

By Mr. Lockley: The 1945 one was in connection with a trip he had made down to Cuba for the purchase of Cuban candy. As I recall his testimony, it was that he applied for a passport in 1948.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't recall if he said such a passport was issued.

2518 By the Court: I don't think he said it was issued. I thought he said it was applied for.

By Mr. O'Brien: He said it was issued and he said he had the passport but did not bring it here.

By the Court: Well, that may be. That may be.

By Mr. O'Brien: But this I may say, athough it isn't necessary, but the mere fact that it comes here doesn't make it admissible, unless I am incorrect in my recollection. All I want to do is satisfy their requirements for getting it here. I am not asking counsel to agree that it is competent for—

By Mr. Lockley: I have no objection to it, your Honor, if you have to sign the order.

By the Court: Well, you say there aren't any departmental regulations that we have to observe in order to obtain it?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right. We looked them up last night, Judge, because if there were any such, we would want to do it. I had Mr. Wattling look it up.

2519 By Mr. Lockley: There are state department regulations, I presume.

By Mr. O'Brien: Not applicable to the procuring of papers. They simply say if you have a court matter and there is an order and it is in the interest of justice, the Secretary or the assistant will either give you a copy, or make a statement about it.

By the Court: You don't say anything about the payment of the required fee for the passport here. You merely order the Secretary of State to issue a certified copy.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is true, Judge.

By the Court: Don't you think it should contain that?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will put it in the order, and it will look better.

By the Court: It may be somewhat presumptuous for us to order the Secretary of State to do something without—

By Mr. O'Brien: I think you are right. I see what you mean. If I say, "Upon payment of any required fee."—

2520 By the Court: Or something like that.

By Mr. O'Brien: —that would take care of it, Judge, "Upon payment of any required fee."

By the Court: That is all right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, I want to leave the written motion on the mistrial, and to tell your Honor, pursuant to our talk yesterday, to draw a further statement to the jury. We, all three of us, working, could not contrive any better statement than the Court has already made, if the thing can be remedied at all.

I do not think that the matter which I suggested yesterday be additionally stated—well, when you try to write it out, in any way effective, you just cannot.

And so, we would like to file the motion. We needn't take the time, unless you want to, to discuss it now.

I understand that Mr. Lockley hopes to finish today. If that is true, we would have a gap at the end there, at which we could discuss this, and discuss a couple of pending motions, oral motions that I have.

2521 You remember that one was to strike some of Mr. Lubben's testimony, and I said that I would like to be advised before Mr. Lockley finished, so that I could remind both of you again; and the Court said, "Well, that would be all right." Even if you had finished, it could be taken up without being technical about that.

So my thought would be, if we leave this until there is time to think about it and go forward and then pick it up when we get a gap between your case and ours. It will be all right.

2522 By Mr. Lockley: I think it is more than likely that that is going to come tomorrow. If we finish today, it will be fast work, as I review the case.

By Mr. O'Brien: Whether it be today or tomorrow, I was only speaking from what I heard last night as to the possibility of your finishing.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. Before we finish, there is the matter that we discussed in Minneapolis regarding re-offering Mr. Lubben. Mr. Bookman is in town. He can be reached at the Midland Hotel.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I talk to my people about that?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. I wonder if we can arrive at some sort of understanding as to what the next move is going to be.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. I will do it at noon and advise you after lunch.

Will that procedure be all right, Judge? We will take it up later, the mistrial motion.

By the Court: That will be all right.

2523 (Whereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the jury.)

HOWARD ROESER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Will you give your name for the record, Mr. Roeser?

A. My name is Howard Roeser, R-o-e-s-e-r.

Q. And what is your address?

A. 5850 North Kostner, Chicago.

Q. And directing your attention to about the year 1942, where were you employed at that time?

A. In 1942, the latter part of '42, I was employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. And where were you employed prior to that?

A. With Busby & Oury.

Q. And who are they?

A. A CPA firm in Chicago, public accountants.

Q. Were you doing any work at Shotwell Manufacturing Company for Busby & Oury?

A. Yes, sir.

2524 Q. And what was the nature of that work?

A. The nature of that work was systems and audit work.

Q. Can you describe a little more fully what you mean by systems?

A. Yes, attempting to make a study of the cost procedure in the Shotwell plant at that time and, if possible, to make any changes or recommendations for a better cost system.

Q. And then you went to work for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was when?

A. I believe August of 1942.

Q. And what were your duties then?

A. As a cost accountant.

Q. And did you remain with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And were you with them in the year 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was your duty at that time?

A. In 1945 I was in charge—I was comptroller of the company and in charge of the general books of 2525 the company.

Q. And what are the duties of a comptroller?

A. The comptroller is responsible for the maintenance of the books and the preparation of operating and financial statements and operation of the general office.

Q. Would you say you were in charge of the bookkeeping operations of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you under the supervision of anyone else at that time?

A. Well, under the supervision of the executives above me, which would be the president of the company, vice president, and so forth.

Q. Did you in any manner help or assist in the preparation of the tax returns?

A. No, sir; I did not directly assist in the preparation of the tax returns.

Q. Who did that?

A. The public accounting firm, Busby & Oury.

Q. Now, do you know a man named David Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

2526 Q. When did you first meet him?

A. I am not exactly sure of the exact time. Mr.

Lubben was a broker for the Shotwell Manufacturing Company—I believe that was the first time I met him, and my guess on the time would be 1944, possibly '45.

Q. And did you have any subsequent meetings with him?

A. Prior to that?

Q. No, later.

A. Oh, yes. Yes.

Q. And at any of those meetings was there any money that you saw pass hands?

A. I am not sure the way you mean that.

By Mr. McConnell: I think we should have the time and place fixed, and not have just a conclusion.

By the Court: Yes. I suppose he can answer that yes or no and then you can proceed further.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you answer that question yes or no?

A. A qualified yes. A qualified yes.

Q. All right. When?

2527 A. I'd say in the latter part of 1945 or the first part of '46.

Q. And where did this occur?

A. At the company offices.

Q. That's the Shotwell Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who was present?

A. Well, it is rather hard to distinguish who was present. They were the executive group of Shotwell.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I object to that. The question is who all was present. I think that it is important that if he isn't sure that he say so.

By the Court: Yes. State the names of those who were present.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you recall the first such meeting or circumstance and name who was present at that time?

A. No, sir, I cannot truthfully or fully say at the first meeting who was present. I really couldn't remember that.

Q. Were there more than one meeting?

A. Mr. Lubben came to the Shotwell Company offices more than once; yes, sir.

2528 Q. Did he ever bring any currency with him when he came?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to leading the witness. If we are going to have currency transactions, we should have—

By the Court: He may answer that question. You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Did he ever bring currency; you mean money?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Now, I want you to direct your attention to the first such meeting, if you can, when he brought currency with him; do you recall when that was?

A. No, sir.

May I answer this, we will say, in my way?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. I am not sure that the first time that Mr. Lubben came to Shotwell that I was there or saw him. I mean, the first time that he ever came there. There was a first time when I saw Mr. Lubben in the company office.

2529 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. That is what I want you to tell us about, the first time you saw him?

A. It is rather hard to distinguish the first time from any other time. I'd say on the first time he came to the Shotwell office, where I saw him—and it may have been his first time there, I am not sure—was in connection with the conveyance or transportation of currency.

By Mr. McConnell: I couldn't hear that.

By the Witness: Pardon me?

By Mr. McConnell: I am sorry, I didn't hear a word of it. What was the first time?

By Mr. Lockley: Will you read the answer back, Mr. Reporter?

(Record read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you tell us something of the circumstances of that?

2530 By the Court: Let's find out when it was.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Are you talking again of the same visit; when was this?

A. I am attempting to; yes, sir. I would say it was in the latter part of 1945.

Q. And who was present?

A. That I couldn't definitely say. It would be conjecture on my part, who was present.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the conjecture.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, to the best of your recollection?

A. To the best of my recollection, Mr. Lubben came into the Shotwell Company and visited in Mr. Shotwell's office, which was the executive office of the firm. After his visit in there, he was brought into my office, which was adjacent to this executive office.

Q. By whom?

A. That I do not know exactly. Again it would be conjecture on my part exactly who it would be.

Q. Who occupied Mr. Shotwell's office?

2531 A. Mr. Huebner, Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I object and ask that be stricken, unless it is related to the precise time when this man, Lubben, went in there.

By the Court: Yes, I think so.

By Mr. Kirby: May that answer be stricken?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who occupied the Shotwell office in 1945 at the time of this occurrence you are relating?

A. The three gentlemen I just named, plus Mr. Shotwell.

By Mr. Kirby: Do you mean who was in the office physically; is that the purpose of the question? If so, I object to it.

By the Witness: I didn't understand the question that way.

By Mr. Kirby: I think it is confusing. I object to the question.

By the Court: Yes. I think we should know who was there, not who ordinarily occupied the office.

By the Witness: I answered on the basis of who 2532 ordinarily occupied the office.

By Mr. McConnell: Then I move to strike the answer.

By the Court: I already granted that motion made by Mr. Kirby.

2533 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did it ever come to your attention during the year 1945 that The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was receiving over-ceiling payments of currency for its products?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will object to the form of the question, your Honor. It is both leading and I think it assumes facts which are in question here.

If you want, ask him what he knows about it, fix the time and place.

By the Court: Yes, I think so.

You have one incident now that he has mentioned, the latter part of '45. Can't we conclude with that?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. In the latter part of 1945, then, Mr. Roeser, this incident that you are referring to, can you tell us further what happened at that time?

A. Yes, sir. In this particular thing that you are asking about, Mr. Lubben came into my office, and I am sure that he came in with somebody else bringing him in my office, and a package containing currency was put on my desk.

2534 Q. Do you know how much it was?

A. No, sir; I would have to make a guess because I don't remember what the amount was.

Q. Did you count it?

A. Yes, sir; it was counted in my office.

Q. Well, what is your best recollection?

A. I'd say somewhere around eight thousand or ten thousand dollars. That's conjecture, or a guess, but that is what I believe it was.

Q. And what did you do with it?

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike out his conjecture or guess. I don't think that we should be guessed into—

By the Court: Was that based on some recollection or what?

By the Witness: About an average, sir.

By the Court: What do you mean by an average? Have you any recollection at all as to how much money was counted out the first time that you saw Lubben bring some money or currency into your office?

By the Witness: Not the exact amount. I wouldn't remember back that far. I know it was a substantial sum.

2535 By the Court: Well, then the eight or ten thousand dollars may be stricken and the substantial sum may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were you instructed by anybody to receive the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who instructed you?

A. I don't know who did that. Whoever brought Mr. Lubben into my office on that first visit is the one who instructed me to take the money in.

Q. What did you do with the money after you had received it and counted it?

A. After receiving it and counting it, it was put in—I believe it was put in the company vault, in a cash box in the vault.

Q. Was any record made of it?

A. Yes sir.

Q. What was the nature of that record?

A. Well, the record was a personal record of my own, and kept with the money in the cash box. It was on a columnar sheet of paper, an accountant's type, such as you have there.

Q. Was there any explanation given at the time
2536 you received the money as to what it was?

A. No, sir.

Q. You just took the substantial sum of money and put it in the vault?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the exact description of this record that you kept, what sort of a record was it?

A. It was a running record, as it developed later, after the first transaction, into a running record of receipts and disbursements and balance. It was not a true bookkeeping ledger sheet record. It was a work sheet record.

Q. Will you describe the paper it was on?

A. Yes. As I remember it, it was a columnar work sheet, either four or seven columns, that type. I was in the habit of using it; as a matter of fact, still do.

Q. Did it bear such information as dates and amounts?

A. Yes, sir, it did.

2537 Q. Did it bear any other information?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you referred to later transactions. Do you recall the second time, any subsequent occurrence of this nature?

A. There was a second time, and there were some after that. I don't recall specifically any dates, or when, but there were additional entries on this memorandum work sheet of mine.

Q. How many times did you receive money?

A. I'd say in the neighborhood of—on the basis of what I am trying to recall, the number of transactions on the sheet, being about, oh, two-thirds of the way down the sheet, I'd say there would be eight or ten transactions of that nature.

Q. Do you recall how much money you received at any one of those occasions?

A. Not specifically; no, sir.

Q. Were they substantial amounts on each occasion?

A. In the neighborhood of this figure I mentioned before. I'd deem that substantial and I'd say they were substantial then.

Q. Was it in the thousands—do you recall who was present at any particular occasion when money was 2538 received by you?

A. Anywhere—you mean during that time?

Q. Any one of those occasions?

By Mr. Kirby: I ask that he fix the time and place.

By Mr. Lockley: I am trying to lay a foundation.

By the Court: You may answer.

By the Witness:

A. When money was received by me, when it was brought into my office I always called for the office manager every time that that party would be there, and in addition to that another party would be there, generally our operating vice president.

Q. Who is the operating vice president?

A. Mr. Huebner.

Q. Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And who is the office manager?

A. Mrs. Morrill.

Q. When did you first learn about over-ceiling payments received by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

2539 By Mr. McConnell: There is no evidence that he has learned of them yet.

By the Court: I don't think he has characterized them as such.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did it ever come to your attention at any time that moneys in excess of the invoice prices were being received by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for goods sold?

A. About the time of the cash transactions we have just referred to with Mr. Lubben. The answer is yes.

Q. Yes. And you say that was—

A. I'd say that would be in the latter part of '45, whenever those things started.

Q. And how did that come to your attention?

A. Well, just from general talk in the business, and, of course, things I knew about in the industry at the time.

Q. Did you ever talk to any of the defendants about it?

A. In what way do you mean; directly ask them about it? No.

2540 Q. Did you ever have any discussion with any one of the defendants, Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, or Mr. Huebner?

A. Not specifically with either one, but, in general, I would say yes. After all, I did know that over-ceiling payments, or something of that nature, whatever you call it, were going to be made. I knew that.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the generality of the statement. It doesn't fix the time and place, so far as the defendant Sullivan would be concerned.

By the Court: Yes, I think it should be made more definite.

By Mr. Kirby: May the answer be stricken?

By the Court: It may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Can you be more definite, Mr. Roeser, as to the time and place and the persons present at such time as you learned of these payments?

A. Well, that is quite a long time ago. It is very, very difficult for me to be specific as to the time.

2541 Q. You say the latter of '45?

A. Yes, sir. I would say that that was—if that is the time when this business occurred.

Q. And do you recall ever having discussed it during that time with any one of the defendants?

A. In and around that time it undoubtedly was discussed; yes, sir.

Q. Well, do you remember a discussion?

A. A specific discussion?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, to go back to this record that you kept, how long did you keep it?

A. For as long as I was in that department of the business as comptroller. I was transferred into another department, sales.

Q. When were you transferred?

A. In the early part of February, I believe it was, of 1946.

Q. And what happened to the record at that time, if you know?

A. It was left right in the cash box.

Q. And who at that time had charge of it, if you know?

2542 A. Well, the office manager, Mrs. Morrill, worked directly under me, and that was just left in her hands. The title comptroller was reassumed by a Mr. Graflund of the company.

Q. You stated that the books and records of the company were kept under your supervision and direction. Do you know whether any of the money recorded on this record of yours was likewise recorded on the books and records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. It definitely was not, during the time that I had access and had control of the company books.

Q. Do you know from what records the return for the year 1945 of the corporation was prepared?

A. I would have to answer that with a qualification.

Q. What is that?

A. Well, I was not there when the tax return was prepared. The tax return undoubtedly was prepared from the general ledger, and other supporting ledgers, subledgers of the corporation. There is no doubt in my mind that that is the way they were prepared.

You will excuse me for answering it that way.

2543 Q. Did you have any part in the preparation of the return?

A. No, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit—

By Mr. Kirby: I object and ask to have that portion of the witness's answer which is based upon his conclusion, which I think is the entire answer, stricken. He made it plain, I think, to Mr. Lockley, that he was not there when that was prepared.

By the Court: Yes. The motion may be granted and the answer may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Boeser, I show you Government's Exhibits 1 and 1-A, purporting to be the Shotwell corporation income and excess profits tax returns for the year 1945, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, sir; I have. I have signed this one.

Q. Your signature is on both those documents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall whether you were instructed to sign those returns by anyone?

A. No, sir; I don't recall being instructed to sign 2544 by anyone.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances surrounding your signature appearing on those returns?

A. No, sir. I actually was under the impression, prior to some discussions with your department, and others that I hadn't signed it. So I am completely in the dark on that. I believe you understand that.

Q. Is that your signature?

A. That is my signature, yes, sir.

Q. I think you will find a letter attached to one of those returns, and I ask you if that is your signature, too?

A. Yes, sir; that is.

Q. Did you prepare that letter?

A. I don't know whether I prepared this letter or not. It is signed by me, and it has my initials on the lefthand side. I don't know who the J. S. is. It is a form letter type of transmittal of tax return, of this particular tax return.

On the basis the way it is made up I would have to say yes, I am responsible for that letter.

2545 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If you know, was the money—

By Mr. McConnell: Could I see the letter please?

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me?

By Mr. McConnell: Could I see the letter, please?

By Mr. Lockley: Certainly.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By Mr. McConnell: Thank you.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. If you know, was the money that was reported from Lubben, and put in the box, included in that 1945 return that you signed?

A. Did I know that?

Q. If you know, was that money which you received from Lubben and put in the box included as part of the receipts of the company, of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and reported in the 1945 return?

A. Specifically, I do not know. Again, it would be—I don't believe it was, but I don't know, because I did not check it, I did not check the tax return against the general books of the company.

2546 Q. Well, to your knowledge was any of the money that was put in the vault deposited in the bank account of the company?

A. At what time?

Q. During 1945.

A. No, sir, it was not.

Q. Was it recorded on the books of the company anywhere?

A. In 1945?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. You said Mr. Busby prepared the 1945 return, is that correct?

A. His company did, yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Busby at the time the return was being prepared that this money had been received from Mr. Lubben?

A. No, sir. I wasn't on deck at the time either to tell Mr. Busby that, but the answer to that one is, I did not tell Mr. Busby.

Q. Mr. Roeser, you said you subsequently became the sales manager. Is that the correct term?

A. Yes, sir, sales manager of the company.

Q. In February of 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

2547 Q. Did the Shotwell Manufacturing Company at that time have a quota system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you explain what that quota system was?

A. The quota system was a record made out for allocated merchandise, candy merchandise, to customers of the company on the basis of their purchase in a base period.

Q. What was the base period of time?

A. And then—pardon me?

Q. What was the base period?

A. 1941, 1942 purchases.

Q. All right. Proceed.

A. That is, billings, dollar billings, and then taken at a ratio based upon the Government's, the OPA's allocation of sugar. In other words, 80 percent of that figure, or 60, or whatever the company happened to be getting at that time.

2548 Q. In other words, if a particular purchaser had bought ten per cent of your output in 1941 and 1942 under your quota system, would he be allowed ten per cent of the output in 1945 and 1946? It that roughly the way it worked?

A. Yes, roughly. He would be getting 80 per cent because he would be getting 80 per cent of the sugar. Roughly, that would be the way it worked.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben have such a quota or any of Mr. Lubben's companies, the Eatsum Food Products Company or General Confections?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I want to object to this: It is obvious from the proof already in the record that Mr. Lubben and his companies were not customers in 1941. Therefore, a quota system would be completely immaterial in so far as he is concerned and I object to it, specifically I object to this question about a quota for Lubben's companies.

By the Court: I will overrule it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you answer the question?

A. Yes, sir. In answer to that question, Mr. Lub-
2549 ben was not a customer of the company in 1941, in 1942, and this was not on the quota makeup.

Q. Now—

A. That is to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Lubben did receive shipments in 1945 and 1946?

A. Lubben received—Lubben was the broker for the company in the year we are mentioning now, in 1945. I am almost certain he was a broker by that time and as such, he would be entitled to a quota as a salesman of the company for the territory in which he operated, which happened to be New York, so therefore he got shipments under that quota.

Q. And were those shipments shipped to him directly as a broker?

A. No. No. Definitely not.

Q. Is that the quota shipment for which he received a five per cent commission?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he also get shipments in his individual capacity as a purchaser instead of as a broker?

A. To his companies?

Q. Yes.

A. One or more of them, yes, sir. I believe in 2550 7945—I believe he had some shipments, yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who determined the amount of shipment that Lubben and his companies should get in 1945 and 1946?

A. I definitely do not know who determined that, no, sir.

Q. You were in charge of sales?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would that have been your usual function, to make that decision?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make it?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: It wasn't charged to sales in 1945.

By the Witness: He said in 1946 also. Excuse me.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, do you recall how Mr. Lubben was able to make those purchases?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to leading the witness.

By Mr. Lockley:

2551 Q. Who authorized it?

By Mr. McConnell: We are entitled to know the transactions.

By the Court: He said he didn't recall.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know the amount of gross sales to Mr. Lubben and his companies in 1945 or 1946?

By Mr. McConnell: Well, the purchases would be the best evidence of that. We have books showing every single shipment and the invoices and all the rest of it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Roeser?

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, I was told Friday night.

By Mr. McConnell: He was told Friday night—that certainly isn't in evidence in this case.

By the Court: I suppose you are asking him for a yes or no answer?

By Mr. Lockley: That's all, your Honor.

By the Witness:

A. The answer is yes.

2552 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you take those, please?

A. A record—

Q. I am showing you Government's Exhibits 200, 200-A and 200-B and ask if you have seen those before?

A. Well, I undoubtedly have seen these records before.

Q. What are they?

A. This is an accounts receivable record.

By the Court: Of what company?

By the Witness:

A. Of Eatsum Food Products Company. I have seen them at some time while I was in the employ of Shotwell.

2553 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you look at the next sheet, too?

A. Well, the next sheet is a continuation. The next one is General Confections, Incorporated.

Q. What is the next?

A. A continuation, a sheet on General Confections.

There is another sheet of accounts receivable—others. That is not a general accounts receivable sheet,—for Eatsum Food Products.

And, here is one—I don't know whether this was general accounts receivable, or we will say, accounts receivable—other, or some other accounts under David Lubben.

By the Court: Is it a Shotwell Company record?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: A Shotwell record in connection with Lubben or with Eatsum Food Products, dealings with Shotwell, during the years indicated?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is already in evidence.

By the Court: My notes weren't clear about it, and I asked that.

2554 By the Witness: Here is the year 1944.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. From an examination of those exhibits, are you able to tell the amount of sales to Mr. Lubben and those companies during the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes, sir, you could tell the sales. They could be added up on here.

Q. Is there any one total figure at any point that will give you the total for each year?

A. No. The balances are not kept that way, because there are disbursements and receipts recorded, you know, or a reducing balance. An average could be struck quickly, or it could be added up.

Q. Well, are you able to say, or do you know whether Mr. Lubben was one of the larger or smaller customers of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1945 and 1946?

A. On the basis of the billings stated in October here, it would make him a good, a very good customer.

Q. You mean by that that there was a larger volume purchased?

2555 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know any customers who received a larger volume?

A. Oh, yes. I would say there were customers—single customer, received a larger volume, yes, sir.

Q. What type of customers were they?

A. Well, right now, tapping in my mind would be like the Woolworth Company, and Kresge.

Q. The so-called—

A. Some of our American stores, and Colonial stores. They were large customers of ours that bought a substantial amount of merchandise.

Q. Snydicated accounts?

A. Woolworth's, and the like. There were syndicates and chains.

Q. What was the nature of Mr. Lubben's account? Was he sold through a broker, or was he—

A. I would have to qualify my answer to you.

Q. Tell us, if you know.

A. If, as a broker—I would assume in the territory, Eatsum Food Products, dealing in Brooklyn, New York, would come under Lubben, as a broker at that time. As such, he would be entitled to a commission on sales 2556 to those companies, provided other arrangements had not been made.

Q. What I want to know is this: Did anyone get a commission on the sales to Lubben as a customer, rather than as a broker?

A. That, I can't answer. I would say yes.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. It is an assumption.

By the Witness: I can't answer that one.

By Mr. McConnell: It assumes there were sales to Lubben. The record shows there were sales to three different entities which were not Lubben.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

2557 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Was Mr. Lubben considered a jobber?

A. No, sir.

Q. He was a broker part of the time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with respect to the purchases that he made—and when I say Lubben, I also mean the General Confections and Eatsum Food Products Company, in what category of customer would he fall?

A. As a manufacturer or re-packer, on the basis of what I know about these companies now.

Q. Well, in that category, was he a large or a small customer?

A. In that category he was a good customer. I would say large, on the basis of these figures here.

Q. Going back a moment to the cash in the vault if you know, did any of the defendants know of the existence of that money?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to having this witness testify to what some defendant knew.

By the Court: He may answer that yes or no and 2558 then if you want to pursue it further after it has been answered, you may.

It may just be a conclusion on his part. Can't you find out whether he talked to any one of these defendants and then determine whether or not any one of these defendants were present during these transactions?

By Mr. Lockley: Strike the last answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Roeser, did you ever talk to any one of these defendants about the money that you put in the vault?

A. Yes. Yes, sir. I was instructed by any one—any one of them.

By Mr. Kirby: I object and ask that that be stricken.

By the Court: Tell us who instructed you and we will know who you mean by "any one".

By Mr. Kirby: May that portion be stricken.

By the Court: Let us see what the next answer is. He can answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You say you were instructed. Now, by whom were you instructed?

2559 By Mr. Kirby: Fix the time and place. Let us have the conversation.

By Mr. Lockley: We are getting it one at a time.

By Mr. McConnell: You say he was instructed. You are assuming he was instructed.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Well, it is a little difficult to answer that one directly to you. In the general course of my being in the place, in the Shotwell Candy Company, in the capacity I was there in and always being in contact with Mr. Huebner or Mr. Cain or even Mr. Sullivan, when they came in there always were conversations had. As to the specific conversation, I can't truthfully tell you that I remember any specific one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, did you do—

By Mr. Kirby: On the part of defendant Sullivan, so we won't have the record confused, I move that that answer be stricken.

By The Witness:

By the Court: That answer may stand.

2560 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you put the money in the vault on your own?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You mean nobody instructed you to do that?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to counsel cross examining the witness.

By the Witness: I was told to put it in the vault for safekeeping, or it was given to me for safekeeping.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who told you to put it there?

A. Specifically whom?

Q. Yes.

A. At any—I have—I would have to name any one of four people.

By the Court: Well, if you can't answer that you will have to say so.

By the Witness: All right. I can't answer that specifically.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. On any of the occasions when Mr. Lubben came into your office with money, was he accompanied by anybody else?

2561 A. Yes, sir, several times I believe he was.

Q. By whom?

A. One time—one time by several fellows.

By Mr. McConnell: What time, now?

2562 By the Witness:

A. I don't know whether it is the first time or the second or the third. Mr. Lubben, as I recall it, had been in my office, I would say, at least two times and each time that he was in my office he was brought in there by someone.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who?

By Mr. McConnell: Judge—

By the Witness:

A. Your Honor, I would have to answer it the same way. I don't know whom specifically. I know it would have to be one of the men above me.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to any more. Mr. Lockley has gone up this street and down this street. He is cross examining the witness, his own witness and I ask that the last volunteered portion be stricken.

By the Court: You say you can't remember which one? You can't remember who came in with Lubben?

By the Witness: That is right. I was in association with these men so often and so closely, and this is,
2563 after all, quite a long time ago and it would be difficult. I was under the direction supervision most of the time of the general manager.

By Mr. McConnell: I make a motion to strike. It is not responsive to the question.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you remember if it was any one of the three defendants?

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, he has already answered that.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: I may answer?

By the Court: Yes.

By the Witness: May I ask a question at this stage? Am I permitted to ask a question for clarification?

By the Court: You should answer Mr. Lockley.

By the Witness: I understand, Mr. Lockley—I don't want to particularly name one man if there were several involved and I might name the wrong one. My general 2564 manager was my direct supervisor and most of the directions of my activity around the company came from this gentleman.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please—

By Mr. O'Brien: He is talking about the usual practice. Mr. Lockley asked him about five times and he has been cross examining him.

By the Court: I don't know but that Mr. Lockley is seeking an answer by proper direct examination. You may continue.

By Mr. O'Brien: At least he has answered the questions.

By Mr. Kirby: What I object to is the volunteered statement. Beyond and after the time that he said he doesn't know he makes a general explanation. That is the part I object to.

By the Court: Proceed with the examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you answer the question, Mr. Roeser?

A. I don't believe I did answer it directly.

2565 Q. Will you try?

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the question now?

By Mr. Kirby: He said he doesn't know.

By the Court: He doesn't know what the question is.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you read the question back.

(Question read.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Read the answer.

(Answer read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I don't think you have answered the question yet, Mr. Roeser.

A. No, sir, I haven't. Unless—Mr. Lockley, it is very difficult for me to be specific about this one.

2566 Q. I am not asking you that. I am asking you—

A. In all probability—may I answer it this way? In all probability, Mr. Huebner was the gentleman that brought Mr. Lubben into my office the first time, and we will say some subsequent times.

Q. Not in all probability, but—

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike the answer. He either knows, or he doesn't know.

By the Court: No. I think the answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall if Mr. Cain ever brought Mr. Lubben into your office?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the leading question, and the cross examination of his own witness.

By the Court: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you also dispense any of the money from the box?

2567 A. I was asked to get money from the box, yes sir.

Q. Did you ever turn any of it over to any of the defendants?

A. Yes.
Q. When was that?
A. I would say—when these transactions started, the first occasion would have been then in the last part of 1945.
Q. How long after the money was received by you would it be turned over?
By Mr. McConnell: Let us have the names so we can have something we can cross examine on.
By Mr. Lockley: I am trying to get to that.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness: May I have the question again, please?
(Question read by the reporter.)
By the Witness:
A. Very quickly.
Q. And to whom?
A. Well, generally to the office, Mr. Shotwell's
2568 office, and whoever would be in there at the time and had instructed me to take it out.
Q. I want you to name names, if possible, Mr. Roeser. Who was in Mr. Shotwell's office at the time you took the money in, and when did you take it in?
A. Can this be answered in over the spread of the time that I knew about this?
By Mr. Kirby: I object to that.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Can you remember any one occasion at a time?
A. No, sir, I cannot remember one occasion at a time. I didn't pay that much attention to them, and they are a long time ago.
Q. Did you ever give any money to Mr. Huebner?
A. Directly to Mr. Huebner?
Q. Yes.
A. I would say so, over the period of time there, yes.
Q. Do you remember when it was?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you remember how much it was?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever give any money to Mr. Cain?
2569 A. I don't recall. I don't know.
Q. Did you ever give any money to Mr. Sullivan?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. Was an entry made in the record at the time such withdrawals were made from the box?

A. You are referring not to the books of the company, to this memoranda record?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that record made by you?

A. It was in most cases, yes. I was responsible for it.

Q. Do you recall any of the amounts that you recorded in this record as coming in?

A. Not specifically, no.

Q. Can you recall any of the amounts as going out?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there any other information on the record besides the amount going in and the amount going out, and the date?

A. If there was a balance, yes, that would be on there. That is all.

Q. That is all there was on the record?

2570 A. Yes, sir.

Q. No names?

A. No, sir, not to my knowledge.

2571 Q. You said that you counted the money?

A. I did on a couple of occasions, I verified it, yes.

Q. What did you do on the other occasions?

A. Well, on other occasions the money was either not counted by me or it went in and out immediately without counting.

Q. I don't understand that. What do you mean it went in and out immediately without counting?

A. Well, some money was brought in a package and was never even opened up and went out immediately.

Q. Do you know Mr. Shotwell?

A. Senior? Yes, sir, yes, sir.

Q. Did he come to the plant in 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes, sir, he did.

Q. How frequently?

A. Oh, I wouldn't know how many times—not too frequently.

Q. Well, once a day, once a week, or once a month?

A. Not once a day, no. Perhaps once a week.

Q. How long did he stay?

A. Hours.

Q. Do you know what he did?

A. Yes, sir, I do.

2572 Q. What was that?

A. Generally discussed the business affairs, visited with department heads, things of that nature.

Q. What was his position in 1945 and 1946?

A. I don't know exactly. I am going to say chairman of the board.

By Mr. Lockley: Your witness.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Did I understand you to say you signed these tax returns for Shotwell in the years 1945 and 1946?

A. I believe I only saw—is that a 1945 and 1946 return there? I thought one was a copy.

Q. Tell me whether you signed them both or one or which one.

A. I signed the 1945 tax return and I signed the 1945 excess profits tax return. I don't believe I signed the 1946 return. However, I didn't believe I signed the 1945 one either but I did.

Q. Well, I guess you didn't sign the 1946. I don't see your name on there. Will you look and see if you find it on there?

A. The 1946 income tax return was not signed by 2573 me nor the 1946 amended return. That was not signed by me. That is, the income tax return as amended was not signed by me.

Q. The 1945—in 1945, you were comptroller of this company, Shotwell Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you had charge of all of its books and records?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were charged with the duty of putting on its books and records its receipts and disbursements and showing its net income, were you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was part of your duty in that corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you say that along about the latter part of 1945 there was some money that came in there which was put in a cash box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, what do you mean by the latter part of 1945? Would that be November, October, December, or what time?

A. I would say in October, the start. That is conjecture. I mean, that is what I believe, around 2574 that time.

Q. And you opened up a cash box, is that correct, as comptroller of the company?

A. No, not a company cash box, no. It was a box, a metal box.

Q. In other words, that was not a company box, is that your position?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you did not consider that as part of the company funds or the company assets at that time, as comptroller of the company, is that correct?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what this witness's opinion is.

By Mr. McConnell: He is the comptroller of the company. He signed the tax return.

By Mr. Lockley: It calls for a conclusion of the witness and I object. What he considers it to be is pure conclusion.

By the Court: It may be his conclusion, but I suppose as comptroller he can state whether or not he considered it part of the funds or whether it belonged to the company then.

By Mr. McConnell: Will you please read the ques-
2575 tion to the witness.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. That is correct. There were no billings on the books to indicate that an effort should be made to collect these moneys.

In other words, they were just not on the receivables of the company. There was no accounting there. I was not instructed by anyone that there was any cash coming into the company that would be of a unallocated nature that sometimes occurs in companies where cash is anticipated and you set up accounts in suspense of handling them.

By Mr. Lockley: I move to strike his volunteered answer. It is not responsive.

By Mr. McConnell: He has a right to explain as to why he handled it this way.

By the Court: I think it is responsive.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You knew and had charge of the books and records between Shotwell and Mr. Lubben's company at that time, did you not?

A. I had charge of the records of Mr. Lubben's company?

2576 Q. No. The books and records of Shotwell which had to do with the dealings of Mr. Lubben's companies.

A. The accounts receivable? Yes, sir. That is, the record of the company.

Q. At that time in 1945 that was the Eatsum Food Products Company, was it not?

Where are those ledger sheets?

A. I believe the Eatsum Food Products Company was the first concern he had. After that he had General Confections.

2577 Q. Well, in 1945 the company we are talking about is Eatsum Food Products Company down in Brooklyn, New York, isn't it?

A. I am looking at—yes, Eatsum Food Products.

Q. That is the one you said was a big customer, or a large customer that bought a lot of candy from Shotwell, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you had to do, I suppose—well, I will ask you whether you did have general supervision over the issuance of invoices for the shipment of candies to that company?

Did you have general supervision over the preparation and sending out of those invoices?

A. Yes, sir, as comptroller, I would.

Q. Well, as comptroller, when those invoices were paid and your company received money for the face amount of the invoice, did that close the transaction so far as you were concerned?

A. Paid in full?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that there was nothing due from Eatsum Food

Products after the face amount of that invoice was 2578 paid, so far as you were concerned, was there?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now this record that you made, did you consider that as a company record, or as your own personal record?

A. May I—this memoranda record that was kept in the file?

Q. I am talking about this memoranda record.

A. I consider that my personal record.

Q. And not part of the records of the corporation at all, is that right?

A. No, sir, that is right.

Q. Are you an accountant?

A. Yes. I am not a CPA.

Q. You are a bookkeeper and accountant, and you understand bookkeeping methods, do you not?

A. I did that, yes, sir.

Q. You do now?

A. I have been away from it.

Q. What are you doing now?

A. I am a salesman. I am a sales manager.

Q. At that time you were a bookkeeper. You were more than a bookkeeper. You were in charge of the books, were you not?

2579 A. I was an accountant.

Q. You were associated with the Busby firm, who were certified public accountants?

A. That is correct.

Q. And you didn't tell them anything about any receipts out there which you handled in the manner which you have described here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, why didn't you tell them? You knew they were the auditors for the company, didn't you?

A. I knew they were the auditors for the company. I believe I have answered that in the courtroom just a while ago. I didn't even give it a thought, as I am thinking it out now.

On the other hand, I don't believe I was on deck at the time the books were closed and the statements were going to be prepared, either by the company or by Busby and Oury.

Q. Let me ask you this: You didn't tell the auditors you did sign the tax return for 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why didn't you include this money which you say you handled this way in the tax return?

A. Well, the tax return undoubtedly was brought 2580 in by the auditors. I believe the reason I signed it, I probably was the only one of the executive group on hand in the office at the time. I don't remember the circumstances. I am just guessing this out.

Q. Well, let me ask you—

A. It was shoved under my nose, and I was asked to sign it, and having been in the habit of signing returns, I undoubtedly did.

Q. Let me ask you this: Did you consider this money that you are talking about, corporate income, as an accountant?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, you didn't put in on the books, did you?

A. I did not put it on the books.

Q. So you knew it wasn't on the books, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

2581 Q. You knew the tax return didn't include it?

A. No, sir, I didn't know one way or the other. I didn't even give it a thought. I assumed it was not on the tax return.

Q. You assumed it was not?

A. If I gave it a thought.

Q. Well, did you think it ought to be on the tax return at that time?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. He has already stated he didn't give it a thought.

By the Court: He said he didn't give it a thought.

By Mr. McConnell: The question is the intent of the corporation at the time these tax returns were made. Here is the man who made it.

By the Court: First find out if he gave it consideration at all at the time he signed the tax return.

By the Witness:

A. No. Who did the money belong to?

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. You didn't know it belonged to the corpora-
2582 tion, did you?

A. It didn't belong to the corporation on the basis of the books.

Q. Well, what you knew about the transactions, it didn't belong to the corporation either, did it?

A. No, sir.

Q. And if it didn't belong to the corporation, you didn't consider it as corporate income either, did you?

A. That would be the conclusion. That is true.

Q. You reached that conclusion as an accountant and as a bookkeeper?

A. I would have, yes.

Q. What records of this company did you keep at that time? Did you keep all their books and records?

A. You mean under my direct or personal—

Q. Yes, under your direction as comptroller.

A. The ledger, sub ledger, etc., yes, they were under my direction.

Q. Did you have control and custody of the stock transfer records of the company?

A. No.

Q. Have you seen those records?

A. Oh, I have seen them, yes, sir.

2583 Q. Do you know that there were many stockholders of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I did not know all the stockholders of Shotwell, no, sir.

Q. Did you know there were over fifty in 1945?

A. I didn't know how many there were. I knew some of them but not all of them.

Q. You knew there were more stockholders than Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner, didn't you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Many more?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I am going to ask that these documents be marked, the 1945 list marked 44 and the others Defendant's Exhibits 45, 46 and 47.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you document marked for identification Defendants' Exhibit 44, which purports to be a list of the stockholders of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1945, and ask you to examine that list and state whether or not you can tell if you recognize any of the names as shareholders.

A. I recognize the name of Arnold.

2584 By Mr. Lockley: I object to his reading from the document, your Honor. It is not in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is refreshing his recollection.

By Mr. McConnell: I am identifying it as the list. He is in charge of the books and records of this company.

By Mr. Lockley: As long as he doesn't read from it. You asked him if he recognized the names.

By the Court: He may state if they are listed on there during 1944 and 1945.

By the Witness: Without reading the names off, I know of some of the stockholders that I can name without looking at this.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Look at the list and refresh your recollection and tell us if you will, please.

By the Court: You are asking him to refresh his recollection on a portion of an exhibit not in evidence. Let him go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley: Let him exhaust his recollec-

2585 tion before he looks at this list.

By Mr. McConnell: The Court said he could go ahead.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. All right. Tell us the stockholders you know now.

A. The stockholders I know other than the men you mentioned—

Q. Other than those, yes.

A. Elmer Crane, Emmet Hogan, A. Jones, Stanley Graflund. There is one name I am not sure about. I will leave that out. That's all.

Q. Those are the only ones you knew personally?

A. Yes, or I knew of, that had stock in the company.

2586 Q. Did you look at both? You didn't look at 46, did you? Have you ever seen this stockholder record book?

A. I have seen the stock record books. Yes, it was out for audit.

By Mr. McConnell: You have identified all the books here. Have you got the stock record book of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

By Mr. Lockley: I haven't identified the stock record book. If you want to, it is right over there.

By Mr. McConnell: Let me identify the book, will you.

Will you please mark this Defendants' Exhibit 48 for identification.

(Said document was marked Defendants' Exhibit 48 for identification.)

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Have you ever seen Defendants' Exhibit 48 for identification? I show you a book identified as Defendants' Exhibit 48. Will you tell us whether or not that book is a part of the books and records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company which you had under your 2587 custody and control?

A. That stock record book was not under my direct custody and control.

Q. Who kept it?

A. The secretary of the company.

Q. And who was that?

A. I believe that was Mr. Graflund at that time—probably all the way through.

Q. Have you ever seen the book before?

A. Yes, I have seen the book.

Q. Well, look at it now. Is it in the same condition now, so far as you know, as when you last saw it?

A. So far as I know, yes, sir.

Q. Now, you told us when you first started with this matter of this tin box—when was the last time you had anything to do with a tin box?

A. Well, excuse me. I would say the latter part of January or the first part of February, somewhere in around that period, January or February of 1946.

By the Court: 1946?

By the Witness: 1946, yes, sir.

By Mr. McConnell:

2588 Q. So what you know about this transaction was embraced within a period of October, 1946, to January or February of 1946, is that correct?

A. I would say so.

Q. What did you do with the box in 1946?

A. Well—

Q. If anything.

A. When I left the position as comptroller and moved over as sales manager, it was just left right there in the company vault, so far as I was concerned or knew.

Q. Did you know what the balance in it was at that time?

A. I probably did know at that time, yes.

Q. Well, do you have any recollection now?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you guess any approximate amount? Give us an approximate amount.

A. Yes. I would hazard five or eight thousand dollars.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he knows.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, you got an approxima-
2589 tion out of him, my brother, in your direct.

By Mr. Lockley: And you objected to it too.

By the Court: Well, the answer may stand.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Approximately five or eight thousand dollars, is that it?

A. I would say so.

Q. Did you ever see any shipments of $400,000.00 around that place while you were there?

A. No, sir.

Q. Coming in from Mr. Lubben at one time or any time or any aggregate of time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or $200,000.00?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: We will take our recess now. We will suspend now for ten minutes, members of the jury.

By the Marshal: The audience will remain standing while the jury files out.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

2590 By Mr. McConnell: I have no more questions, your Honor.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Roeser, you said there was an occasion when money came in and you didn't stop to put it in the box; do you recall that?

A. Yes, sir; I did say that.

Q. Did you have occasion at any time during your connection with this box to take money to Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, sir, I did take money to Dr. Doe once.

Q. And the money that you took, was that money which came in and was not recorded in the box?

A. I am trying to remember the exact circumstances surrounding it and on the basis of the way the package was already set, it did not come from the box. It came in and went out.

Q. And it came to you and you took it out?

A. It was given to me and I took it out.

Q. Yes, right. And you took it to Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state how much money that was?

A. No, sir; I didn't see the money at all.

2591 Q. And where was Dr. Doe's office?

A. It was in the Board of Trade Building.

Q. Was that the only time that you yourself paid money to Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, I take it that except for an instance of that sort the moneys that came to you were noted on the record or memorandum which you kept as to both date and amount?

A. That's correct.

Q. And that memorandum was a personal memorandum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that you could keep account of your custody of the money?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And in any instance in which the money was handled so promptly that no custody was required, was it your practice not to record the amount?

A. That's correct, we did not record it.

2592 Q. I think you also said that on occasions you gave them monies, you gave monies to Mr. Huebner; do you recall that?

A. I said something along that line, yes. I don't know the exact—

Q. Well, I don't remember it precisely either, Mr. Roeser.

A. Well, I was pressed to name some particular party, I believe.

Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. Did you know the purpose of the payment to Dr. Doe?
A. Yes, I know what it was for.
Q. What was it?
A. It was for over—
By Mr. Lockley: I object. This is beyond the scope of the direct examination.
By the Court: Well, first I think you will have to lay a foundation as to how—it doesn't appear as to whether he obtained that information from someone in authority, or how he knew, or what he knew about the payment to Doe, outside of being the messenger.
2593 By Mr. O'Brien: I am only asking for his personal knowledge.
By the Court: Well, you are going into something—
By Mr. O'Brien: I will withdraw the question. I will approach it this way.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. At that time, late in '45, and early in '46, Mr. Roeser, were you aware of a corn shortage, or rather, did a corn shortage exist?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And was the payment of the money to Dr. Doe in any way related to that?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he lays a better foundation.
By the Court: He may answer yes or no.
By Mr. O'Brien: Read the question.
(Question read by the reporter.)
By the Witness: There wasn't any question in my mind that it did.
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to that answer.
By the Court: Yes, the answer may be stricken.
2594 By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Well, I think that is true. You could answer that yes or no, Mr. Roeser, whether the payment was related to the corn shortage, if you know?
A. Mr. O'Brien, I learned later that—
By Mr. Lockley: I object to what he learned later, your Honor.

By the Witness:

A. Then I will answer—I will have to answer the question as I did, or just say I don't know.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When did the situation as to the shortage of corn first come to your attention?

A. I think that the shortage was showing up in the industry at the end of the summer of 1945.

Q. Now, at the time that you opened the box, or thereafter, and at the time that you paid, or turned over to Mr. Huebner the money which you mentioned, did Mr. Huebner say anything to you about the corn situation?

A. Specifically, as to whether Mr. Huebner said so, I can't answer you directly. The corn shortage was discussed openly in the executive group.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless he 2595 lays a foundation for a particular conversation.

By the Court: Yes. You have answered the question. The latter portion of the answer may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all, your Honor.

By the Court: Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: No, I don't have any questions of this witness.

By the Court: Any further direct?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Roeser, you were shown the stock book of the corporation. Do you know who had the controlling interest in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

By Mr. McConnell: Well, the books and records will be the best evidence of that.

By the Court: I assume so.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Defendants' Exhibit for identification 48 and ask if you can examine that stock book and 2596 tell me who had the controlling interest in the Shotwell Manufacturing Company during 1945?

By Mr. McConnell: Is that book in evidence?

By the Court: No, it hasn't been offered.

By Mr. McConnell: Then I object to his reading from the book.

By the Court: Yes, sustained.

2597 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know, Mr. Roeser, without reference to the book, who had the controlling interest?

By Mr. McConnell: The Court already sustained an objection that the best evidence is the book.

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, Mr. Roeser, the Shotwell Manufacturing Company was making shipments to Mr. Lubben and his companies, the Eatsum Company and the General Confections, during 1945, is that so?

A. Yes, sir; they were.

Q. And what was being shipped?

A. Candy. You mean specifically what type of candy?

Q. It was candy?

A. Yes, sir; it was candy.

Q. That's enough. Who manufactured that candy?

A. Shotwell did, the company.

Q. Now, you testified on cross examination that you handled this cash box for the period of about October, '45 to January or February, 1946. Do I understand that there were about eight or ten payments; is that your 2598 testimony, during that period of time?

A. I believe that's——yes, I was trying to remember from the number of entries on this sheet. As my memory holds it now, that—yes, there would have been about eight or ten—let's call them receipts or "in" entries.

Q. And did you testify that there were other instances where money came in and went out without being recorded on the books or on that memorandum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What happened to those transactions; was any record made of them?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know from whom the money was received?

A. Specifically, no, but I figured they were from Mr. Lubben.

Q. We only want what you know.

A. All right.

Q. Do you know what happened to it? You said it went out.

A. It went out.

Q. To whom?

A. I don't know.

2599 Q. You don't know?

A. No. Well, just a minute. I did say that I took one package down to Dr. Doe.

Q. I am talking about the others.

A. So that is specifically. There were other conveyances of that type money to Dr. Doe.

Q. Do you know that?

A. Do I know it?

Q. Yes, did you make them?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I object. He is cross examining his own witness.

By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I didn't make it myself nor direct it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know how much money was involved in these payments that came in and went out?

A. No.

Q. You testified that to the best of your knowledge it was nothing like $400,000.00, is that correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. But you have also testified that you don't know how much money was in these packages that came in 2600 and went out?

A. That's correct, sir.

Q. Now, Mr. Roeser, what sort of a safeguard did you have to prevent a charge of pilferage of money from this box by yourself?

A. I had none, with the exception of the counting of the money as it went in, where we were given the money to put in the box, or we were asked to take the money out of the box.

I made certain that always at least one party was on hand at the counting. Beyond that point, everybody was wide open. I had no other safeguard. There wasn't any.

Q. Who was the party on hand?

A. Mrs. Morrill, generally.

Q. Was she always present?

A. I'd say that most of the time, yes.

Q. Was there any control as to the figures you put down, on the amounts received, on your memorandum, any way that could be or was checked by anyone else?

A. In a practical way, no, absolutely not, because I don't know if anybody else knew how much came in.

Q. You stated that this money didn't belong to the corporation, in your opinion. Who did it belong to?

2601 A. I don't know. It belonged, as far as—it was over-ceiling payments. That was definitely in violation of the OPA regulations at the time. It came in that way. Actually, who it belonged to, I wouldn't know.

2602 Q. Did you consider it to be your money?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you didn't consider it yours, you didn't consider it the corporation's; whose did you consider it to be?

By Mr. McConnell: I think this is cross examination, of his witness.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you answer my question?

A. No, sir; I did not answer your question. I find it impossible to answer the question truthfully, or directly.

Q. You don't know whose it was?

A. No, sir; I don't know whose it was.

Q. Would it likewise be true that you don't know if it was the corporation's?

A. It was not on the books as a billing to be collected.

Q. Who instructed you not to put it on the books?

A. Nobody instructed me not to put it on the books.

Q. Did anybody instruct you to put it on the books?

A. No, sir.

2603 Q. Did anybody give you instructions in any respect with regard to the money?

A. Yes, I would say that—I would not only say, I was told this money was coming in, and it was to be kept in safekeeping to be disbursed as needed.

Q. And now, by whom were you told?

A. That is one that I have had difficulty answering, because I can't say any specific party. It would have to be the executives above me.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to who it would have to be. If he can't remember who it was, I don't think he has a right to guess about it.

By the Court: Yes, sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You testified that you made a trip to Dr Doe's office. When was that?

A. I would say that that was in 1946.

Q. And you were given a package to take down there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see what was in the package?

A. No, sir.

Q. Who gave it to you?

A. That I do not know.

2604 Q. Was it a bulky package?

A. It was a large mailing envelope.

Q. Where did you get it?

A. I got it in the company offices.

Q. The Shotwell offices?

A. The Shotwell offices, yes, sir.

Q. Did it come out of this vault?

A. No, sir; not to my knowledge—no, it didn't come out of the vault. That I am sure of.

Q. Did you receive the envelope sealed?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you took it to Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you do with it when you got there?

A. I walked into this dentist's office, and asked for Dr. Doe. I was instructed by whoever gave it to me to ask for Dr. Doe. And I handed him the package, and turned right around and walked out.

Q. Did you see it opened?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you don't know what was in it then?

A. No, sir.

Q. You don't know whether it was money or anything else?

2605 A. I assume that it was money. I don't know. No, I did not see what was in the package.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all, your Honor.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Graflund.

STANLEY GRAFLUND, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Will you give your full name, Mr. Graflund?
A. Mr. Stanley Graflund.
Q. Where do you live?
A. Wheaton, Illinois.
Q. And where are you employed?
A. I am self employed.
Q. Were you at one time employed by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. I was.
Q. When were you first employed there?
A. September, 1930.
By the Court: September?
2606 By the Witness: September, 1930.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Please keep your voice up, Mr. Graflund.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And what was your position at that time?
A. I started as a cost accountant.
2607 Q. And did you subsequently have different positions in the company?
A. I did.
Q. What were they?
A. Head of the cost department; purchasing agent; comptroller; secretary; vice president and secretary.
Q. And when did you become comptroller?
A. I originally became comptroller in 1936.
Q. And when did you become vice president and secretary?
A. 1943, I believe it was.
Q. And what were your duties as vice president and secretary?
A. To keep the corporate minute books, stock records, all the duties pertaining to the secretary and extra duties such as attending association meetings, meetings with the public, more or less of a general nature.
Q. After Mr. Roeser left the comptroller's office in 1946?

A. Correct?
Q. What did you do?
A. I then assumed the duties of comptroller again.
Q. Did you also assume that title?
2608 A. No, sir.
Q. Now, did you at any time in the year 1945 have any conversations relating to the receipt of currency, with any one of the defendants?
By Mr. O'Brien: What year?
By Mr. Lockley: 1945.
By the Witness:
A. I would say yes.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Are you able to place the time?
A. It would be in the fall of '45.
Q. And who was present at that time?
A. Mr. Huebner I believe.
Q. Anybody else?
A. I don't remember, sir.
Q. And do you remember what the conversation was?
A. Simply that moneys had been received from the purchase of raw corn.
Q. Did he say from whom?
A. From Mr. Lubben.
Q. Now, at that time you were not the comptroller, is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Did you personally receive any of this money
2609 during 1945?
A. Mr. Lubben brought in money, which I have placed somewhere in the latter part of '45, which I accepted.
Q. Do you recall whether Mr. Lubben was accompanied by anyone?
A. No, sir; he was not.
Q. He was alone?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you know how much money was turned over to you at that time?
A. No, sir; I don't know.
Q. Did you expect this money?
A. No, sir.
Q. You mean Mr. Lubben just brought it in and handed it to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, can you tell us exactly what transpired then?

A. I received a call from Mr. Huebner stating that Mr. Lubben was going to bring in some money and that I should receive it for the company.

Q. And Mr. Lubben did bring in the money?

A. He did.

Q. Do you know how much?

2610 A. I couldn't tell you the amount; no, sir.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I had it placed in the company vaults.

Q. Did you make a record of it?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Was there any other occasion when Mr. Lubben turned over any money to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. There was only one that you recall?

A. That's right, sir.

Q. When you subsequently became comptroller did you see a record of money?

A. I did.

Q. And can you describe that record?

A. It was a seven column—or a rough work sheet, such as is used by accountants, with ruled lines on it, and this had an opening balance, plus receipts, less withdrawals.

2611 Q. Did it have anything else besides those figures?

A. There were penciled notations of names opposite the withdrawals.

Q. Were there dates?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not clear, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: Were there any dates on the memorandum.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, but I mean did Mr. Graflund say these were his figures or—

By Mr. Lockley: This is the memorandum.

By Mr. O'Brien: —prior figures or current ones?

By the Witness: Will you restate your question, sir?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, when did you first see this memorandum, Mr. Graflund?

A. I would say the early part of '46.

Q. And were you at that time handling the duties of the comptroller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And where was the memorandum?

A. Mrs. Morrill kept the memorandum?

2612 Q. Did you subsequently have occasion to make any entries on it yourself?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, now did you know what the money Mr. Lubben was turning over to you was for?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what was that?

A. For the purchase of raw corn.

Q. Was it in payment of any invoices of Mr. Lubben or any of his companies?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall the denomination of the bills?

A. They were large, fifties, and hundreds, some twenties.

Q. How large a stack was it?

By Mr. O'Brien: What stack are you talking about?

By Mr. Lockley: Of the bills.

By Mr. McConnell: What stack, which one?

By Mr. Lockley: He only testified to one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Am I correct, Mr. Graflund?

2613 A. Yes.

Q. You testified to one?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you recall how large a stack of bills you received at that time?

A. I'd say about two inches, perhaps an inch and a half to two inches.

Q. Was anybody present besides Mr. Lubben?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you do with the money, did you count it?

A. I turned the money over to Mrs. Morrill.

Q. Did you count it?

A. No, sir.

Q. You just turned it over to her?

A. Correct.

Q. What did you tell her to do with it?

A. Put it in the vault.

Q. When was the last time you saw this memorandum sheet?

A. Sometime in 1948.

Q. Do you know where it is now?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know if it is still in existence?

2614 A. My knowledge is—the best of my knowledge is, that sheet is no longer in existence?

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with any of the defendants with respect to that memorandum record?

A. I did.

Q. And which one?

By Mr. McConnell: Where and when?

By Mr. Lockley: Give me time.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Which one?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. Where?

A. At the company office.

Q. When?

A. Sometime around in 1948, in the latter part, or thereabouts.

Q. The latter part of 1948?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you able to fix it any more definitely than that?

A. (No response.)

Q. Do you know when Mr. Krane came to the office of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Mr. Krane came to the offices, I believe it was 2615 June of 1942.

Q. Well, was the record destroyed, or was the record in existence before or after that?

A. It was after.

Q. It was in existence after that period?

A. That's right.

Q. You said you had a conversation with Mr. Cain?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was that before or after Mr. Krane's appearance?

A. It was after.

Q. And what was this conversation about?

A. The destruction of that record.

Q. Can you tell us what was said?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to this as not competent with respect to the defendant, Sullivan.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Kirby: May the jury be instructed that it is not competent as to the defendant, Sullivan?

By the Court: That brings up the same question we had before. We will have to thresh out some of those 2616 problems when the Court—

By Mr. Kirby: But I don't need to be making that same objection then.

By the Court: No.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell us what the conversation was at that time?

By Mr. McConnell: I make the objection on behalf of the corporation, as to conversation.

By the Court: I will receive it subject to the objection. Go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. The conversation was simply to destroy the record.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, who said what?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. What did Mr. Cain say?

A. "Is that paper still in existence, or that sheet?"

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him yes.

2617 Q. What did he say?

A. He said it should be destroyed.

Q. Was there any subsequent conversation, in your presence, relating to that same sheet, with one of the defendants?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was that?

A. Shortly thereafter.

Q. And where?

A. In the company offices.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mrs. Morrill.

Q. And who else?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. And what was the subject of that conversation?

A. That that sheet should be destroyed.

Q. And who said it?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. Do you know what subsequently happened to the sheet?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What?

A. It was destroyed.

Q. Who destroyed it?

2618 A. I believe Mrs. Morrill destroyed it.

Q. Was it destroyed in your presence?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it out. He didn't see it destroyed.

By the Court: The statement that Mrs. Morrill destroyed the sheet, that may be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know of any other records relating to this money, other than the one you have just testified to?

A. No, sir.

Q. You testified there was money kept in the vault at the office. Do you know how much was there at any one time?

A. Not in approximate figures; no, sir.

Q. Was money kept at any other place, to your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that?

A. City National Bank vaults.

Q. In the City National Bank vaults?

A. That's right.

2619 Q. Was that on deposit?

A. No, sir.

Q. Where was it in the City National Bank?

A. In the safety deposit box.

Q. In a safety deposit box?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you know in whose name it was rented?

A. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Do you know how much money was in that vault?

A. Well, the amounts varied from time to time, Mr. Lockley.

Q. Are you able to state at any given time how much there was there?

A. Not with certainty, sir.

Q. Are you able to state the maximum that you knew of at any one time?

A. Seventeen thousand, I would say.
Q. Did you ever get any money out of the bank vault?
A. I did.
Q. Did you receive instructions to do that?
A. I did; yes, sir.
Q. And from whom?
A. From Mr. Huebner.
2620 Q. Do you recall when this was?
A. That occurred at various intervals.
Q. You received instructions on several occasions?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Always from Mr. Huebner?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And in what year?
A. 1946.
Q. Did you count the money when you took it out of the vault?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Are you able to recall the amounts that you took out on the various occasions?
A. Various sums, ranging from two thousand, five thousand.
Q. And do you know what was done with that money?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Or what did you do with it?
A. I took it to the company offices.
Q. And what did you do with it then?
A. It was placed in the vault.
Q. Placed in the company vault?
A. Correct.
Q. Did you ever put any money in the bank vault?
A. Yes, sir.
2621 Q. And at whose instructions?
A. Mr. Cain, I believe.
By the Court: I didn't hear that.
By the Witness: Mr. Cain.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you recall when this was?
A. It was more or less of a standing order.
2622 Q. More or less of a standing order. Was there more than one occasion?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did Mr. Cain tell you on each occasion?
A. No, sir.

Q. Did anyone else ever give you any instructions of that nature, to put money in the vault?

A. I don't recall, sir.

Q. Well, about how many trips in all did you make to the bank vault to put money in?

A. I would say three or four.

Q. Do you recall the aggregate amount you put in, the total amount, on those four trips?

A. I don't recall with certainty, sir.

Q. Well, did you make a record on this memorandum sheet of monies put into the bank vault?

A. I did not make the record, sir, the entries.

Q. You didn't make any entries on that sheet, is that correct?

A. Not myself. I didn't do it myself; no, sir.

Q. Do you know if any of the defendants ever put money in that vault?

A. No, sir.

2623 Q. Do you know if they ever put any money in the vault at the office?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know if they ever took any money out?

A. Not to my knowledge, sir.

Q. Do you have any information of payments made by Lubben other than in Chicago?

A. Only hearsay, sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the answer?

By the Witness: Only hearsay.

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike it, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: He hasn't answered it.

By the Court: Well, it may stand. The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recall the gross amount of the receipts as shown on that record, memorandum record?

By Mr. O'Brien: You mean this record kept by Mrs. Morrill?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Witness:

A. I would summarize it somewhere in the neighborhood of eighty thousand.

2624 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Somewhere around eighty thousand was recorded on the memorandum?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The last time you saw that sheet, was there any balance of cash on hand shown on the memorandum?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall the date of the last entry on the memorandum record?

A. Some time around the end of July, or possibly August of 1948.

By Mr. O'Brien: '48?

By the Witness: '46. I am sorry.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, during 1946, did you have anything to do with the preparation of the corporate income tax return?

A. I did not prepare the return, sir.

Q. Did you sign it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was the return prepared from the books and records of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were those books and records then under your 2625 supervision and control?

A. For what years, sir?

Q. For '46.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government Exhibit No. 2, purporting to be the corporate income tax return for 1946, and No. 3, an amended return, and ask if your signature appears thereon?

A. It does.

Q. Do you know if those returns include, in either gross receipts, or net income, the amount of money received by the corporation as shown on that memorandum sheet?

A. They do not.

Q. Did the books and records, other than the memorandum you have testified to, contain any entries with respect to the receipt of money as shown on the memorandum?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you have any knowledge of any sales made by the corporation during 1946, when you were comptroller, which were not reported on the books of the company?

A. I do.

2626 Q. When did you learn of them?

A. I learned of one shipment in April of 1946.

Q. April of 1946?
A. Around April of '46, yes, sir.
Q. And how did you learn of it?
A. I was informed by our cost man.
Q. Who was your cost man?
A. Mr. Del Monte.
Q. What was Mr. Del Monte's duty, or function in the office?
A. He was the cost accountant, and he also kept the perpetual inventory records.
Q. Did you have a monthly inventory of finished goods in those records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And how was that record kept?
A. I don't understand the question, sir.
Q. What was the nature of the record?
A. It was a running balance showing opening balance, plus production, less shipments, and a new balance for the end of the day.
Q. That was a daily balance, was it?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you also have a monthly balance; was there a monthly balance made?
2627 A. There was a monthly inventory taken to check against the book figures.
Q. What was the purpose of this inventory record?
A. Number one, it was a production control sheet; by it we could gage how many items we had to make, which items were short, which items were long.
Q. Did you also make a physical inventory of goods in the warehouse?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, as an accountant, should the physical inventory compare with the amount in the book inventory at any one time?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, did it ever come to your attention that those two inventories were out of balance?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When was that?
A. Several times in 1946.
Q. Can you tell us what you did at that time?
A. Well, for the first time, I went to see Mr. Huebner.
Q. You went to see Mr. Huebner?

A. Correct.

2628 Q. When was this?

A. Around in April of '46.

Q. Where was it?

A. In the company offices.

Q. Who was present?

A. Just myself and Mr. Huebner.

Q. And what was said?

A. "What's going on"?

Q. What did you say? What did he say?

A. "The inventory is off balance. What is going on?"

Q. Who said that?

A. I did.

Q. And did Mr. Huebner make a reply?

A. He did.

Q. What was it?

A. He stated that an unbilled shipment was made at the direction of Mr. Byron Cain.

Q. Did you examine the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the answer. It is a hearsay statement, as far as Cain is concerned.

By the Court: Yes.

2629 By Mr. Lockley: He is quoting the conversation, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, the conversation will be received. It isn't binding on Mr. Cain, though.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, did you examine the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company at that time with respect to these unbilled shipments?

A. I just took Mr. Del Monte's word for it.

2630 Q. Well, do you know whether these shipments were recorded on the books of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether, if they were unrecorded on the books, such shipments or the receipts from such shipments would be included in the tax returns?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know how payment was received for such shipments?

A. I assume they were made in cash.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the assumption.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know?

By the Court: The answer may be stricken. You may answer if you know.

By the Witness:

A. No, I don't.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. After Del Monte told you of this first occasion when the inventories were out of balance, did you learn of any subsequent occasions when the same thing

2631 was true?

A. There were several times; yes, sir.

Q. And are you able to tell when?

A. In succeeding months. I can't pin-point them.

Q. This is in 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what did you do on those occasions?

A. Also questioned Mr. Huebner.

Q. You went to Mr. Huebner on each occasion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall who was present at any one of them?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was anyone else present besides you and Mr. Huebner at any one of them?

A. Not to my knowledge.

2632 Q. Do you know how those shipments were handled?

When I say unbilled shipments, I refer to shipments for which no invoice was issued by the company.

Do you know how they were handled with respect to the issuance of bills of lading?

A. A blank bill of lading was provided. There was no invoice.

Q. Will you tell us generally what was the practice of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in making up an invoice?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I am not sure, Mr. Lockley—on that last answer, was the witness conscious of a practice, of his personal knowledge of these un-invoiced shipments. You say blank form was provided, and I don't understand whether you are talking of the practice of the company, or all shipments, or—

By the Witness: No, sir; no sir.

By Mr. O'Brien: —or are you speaking of these specific ones?

By the Witness: These specific ones, that is correct.

By Mr. Lockley:

2633 Q. What was the general practice on shipments where invoices were issued? I mean, what was the office practice?

A. We had a standard form. It had ten copies, of which three were bills of lading, Shotwell Manufacturing Company's name was printed on all copies, and the merchandise was billed out and shipped on this standard form.

Q. Now you had ten coipes?

A. That is correct.

Q. What was the original of this copy?

A. An invoice.

Q. And what happened to it?

A. The invoice would be mailed to the customer after the goods had been shipped.

Q. And then what were the remaining copies? There were three bills of lading?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what else?

A. If my memory serves me, there was a duplicate invoice in some instances, that we had to supply, duplicate invoices to customers. There was an accounting copy from which the postings were made on the general ledger. There was a credit department copy for the use in the credit department.

2634 There was a salesman's commission copy, and there was also another copy we used for posting.

Q. Now which of those documents you have mentioned went to the shipping room?

A. The credit department copy. Oh, pardon me—one more was a shipping copy.

Q. All right. Now, which of those documents went to the shipping room?

A. The shipping copy and the bills of lading.

Q. Do you know what happened to them?

A. They left the shipping room after the shipment was made. They came back to the accounting department.

Q. What did the accounting department do with them?

A. Marked them up with the other invoices which were all held in an unshipped order file.

They were all pulled out and matched together, and then the various copies were sent to their various respective places, such as the accounting department copy went to the accounting department, the salesman's commission copy would be mailed out to the salesman, and the 2635 credit department copy would go to the credit department.

Q. Were any of these copies the basis for recording on the accounts receivable ledger cards of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. The accounting copy?

Q. The accounting copy.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at what time was that posting made to the accounts receivable ledger card?

A. It might be two or three days after.

Q. Well, would it be at the time that the invoice was prepared, or at such time as the shipment had actually been made?

A. It was always after a shipment was made.

Q. After the bill of lading and the—

A. That is right.

Q. —copy came back from the shipping room and went to the accounting office, at that time an entry was made showing the amount due to the company on the accounts ledger card; is that correct?

A. That is correct, after the goods had been shipped.

Q. Well, now I will show you Government's Ex-
2636 hibits 146, 147, 148, 149, 151, 152, and 155, and ask if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what connection did you see them, briefly?

A. In connection with the working out of the papers for the disclosure.

2637 Q. Do you know whether there were any invoices issued by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in relation to those bills of lading?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: What did you say?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is your answer?

By the Court: He asked you if you knew and you say no, sir. What do you mean by that?

By the Witness:

A. No, sir. There were no invoices issued.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know whether the sales of merchandise shown by those bills of lading were recorded on The Shotwell Manufacturing Company books?

A. No, sir.

By the Court: No, sir what?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. No, sir what?

A. They were not recorded.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, can you state whether the bills of lading showing the ABC Candy Company as shipper, which are

2638 Exhibits 146, 147, 148 and 149—

A. Yes, sir.

Q. —whether those shipments originated at The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I was told they were.

Q. Well, do you know of your own knowledge?

A. What was—I don't know how to answer it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I can't hear you, Mr. Graflund.

A. I say, I don't know how to answer that question.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Let me ask you this, Mr. Erickson—

A. Graflund.

Q. Pardon me. Graflund. I show you Exhibit 149, and I call your attention to some handwriting which refers to 456 citrus drops, 571 gum drops and 7 spice buttons. Do you know—

By Mr. O'Brien: Before you begin—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you recognize that handwriting, sir?

By Mr. O'Brien: I move to strike his statement that he was told so, unless we get back to it.

By the Court: It may be stricken.

2639 By the Witness: This handwriting, sir?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Yes.

A. I would identify it as Mr. Ericson's.

Q. Mr. Ericson. Who is Mr. Ericson?

A. Mr. Ericson was our traffic man.

Q. What does a traffic man do?

A. Well, I may have to take that back. I don't know whether he was traffic man at that time, or superintendent, because he was promoted and I am trying to fix the date.

Q. In any event, did he have charge of the shipping room?

A. He did, yes, sir.

Q. I also call your attention to the handwritten entries on Exhibit 148—600 citrus drops and 400 gum drops and ask you if you recognize that handwriting.

A. It resembles Mr. Erieson's handwriting.

Q. Is the same true of the Exhibit 147 with the word "Cardinal" on it?

A. I wouldn't be prepared to say on that one, sir.

By the Court: I don't hear you, Mr. Graflund.

2640 By the Witness:

A. I wouldn't be prepared to say.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. How about Exhibit 146?

By Mr. McConnell: Are these documents in evidence?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Spice buttons? Do you know?

A. I wouldn't swear to it.

Q. And Mr. Graflund, did The Shotwell Manufacturing Company manufacture spice buttons and Cardinals and citrus drops and gum drops?

A. It did.

Q. Do you know of any other manufacturer who manufactured those articles?

A. Well, spice drops are manufactured by any number. Cardinal chocolates—

Q. Yes?

A. I don't know. There is a—it is a special brand.

Q. It was a special brand?

A. So far as I know to my knowledge.

2641 Q. I also show you a handwritten word "Del Monte" and what appears to be "Okay". Do you recognize that?

A. It looks to me like Mr. Erieson's handwriting.

Q. Like Mr. Erieson's handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. You testified there was a man named Del Monte who kept the—

A. Cost accounting.

Q. —cost accounting?

A. Yes, sir, that is right.

2642 Q. You said that you were told later on that these shipments were not billed. Was that a conversation with any one of the defendants?

By Mr. O'Brien: Why not ask him who it was with?

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who was it with, if you know?

A. Well, my conversations originally were with Mr. Del Monte, who informed me there was a shortage—

By Mr. O'Brien: I object. He didn't ask you what you were informed.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By the Witness: Will you restate the question?

By the Court: You were asked whether or not you had any conversation with any one of the defendants regarding these unbilled shipments.

By the Witness: Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And those were the conversations you have previously testified to?

2643 A. Yes, sir.

Q. And those were during the year 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, do you know Mr. David Lubben?

A. I do.

Q. Did you ever visit his plant?

A. I did.

Q. How many times?

A. Twice.

Q. When was the first trip?

A. May of 1947.

Q. Were you alone, or did someone accompany you at that time?

A. Mr. Huebner went with me.

Q. Mr. Huebner?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did you do? What was the occasion for that trip?

A. To install a cost system for Mr. Lubben in his plant.

Q. Where was Mr. Lubben's plant located at that time?

A. He had two of them, one in the Bronx and one in New Jersey.

2644 Q. This was in May of 1947 that he had two?

A. Yes, sir, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. You installed a cost system?

A. That was our purpose—my purpose.

Q. Did your visit have any connection with a loan of $75,000?
A. The loan had been made or—
Q. The loan had been made?
A. To the best of my knowledge, yes, sir.
Q. Did you have any connection with that loan?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you examine Mr. Lubben's books at that time?
A. No, sir.
Q. Now, did you make a second trip?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Who instructed you?
A. Mr. Cain.
Q. And when was this?
A. Some time in the latter part of January of 1948.
Q. Were you alone, or did someone go with you?
A. Mr. Busby accompanied me on that trip.
Q. Who is Mr. Busby?
2645 A. Mr. Busby is the outside auditor.
Q. He is the accountant for Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. Outside auditor.
Q. Yes, outside auditor. All right.
Did you have a conversation with Mr. Cain before you left on that trip?
A. I did.
Q. And you say this was in January of 1947?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. January of 1948?
A. 1948.
Q. What was the substance of that conversation? What did he say and what did you say? First, you had better tell us where it was.
A. Well, the conversation was at the company offices, as I recall it.
Q. Now speak up, please, and tell us what the conversation was about.
A. I was to go east to Mr. Lubben's plant. Mr. Lubben was requesting an additional loan from the company, and I was to go east to see about—to examine his books, if any, and see his financial position.
2646 Q. Did you receive any other instructions?
A. Also to pick up whatever papers might be helpful to the company, personal memoranda, or anything else that might be helpful.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Cain's exact language?
A. No, sir, I do not.
Q. He instructed you to pick up whatever personal papers of Mr. Lubben's you could find that might be helpful?
A. That is correct.
Q. Did he tell you to ask Mr. Lubben for those papers?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did he tell you that you should tell Mr. Lubben that you were taking such papers?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you get such papers?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did Mr. Cain further identify the papers that he required you to bring back with you?
A. No, sir.

By the Court: Well, we will suspend now until two o'clock, ladies and gentlemen of the jury.

2647 By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Jury and the Judge leave the room, please.

This Honorable Court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above entitled cause until 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Tuesday, September 29, 1953.)

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Marshal: This honorable court will now resume its session.

2649 STANLEY GRAFLUND, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Graflund, I think I neglected to show you Government's Exhibit No. 1 and 1-A in evidence, purporting to be the corporate income and excess profits tax returns for the year 1945. Have you seen those before?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that your signature that appears thereon?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the preparation of those returns?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know by whom they were prepared?

A. Busby & Oury.

Q. Do you recall the circumstances of your signing those returns?

A. Well, they were signed the 14th day of March.

Q. Was that a part of your duty, to sign the corporate tax returns?

A. Yes, sir.

2650 Q. Had you signed them for other years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Can you state whether the 1945 return bears or contains the receipts in cash from Mr. Lubben which you previously testified about?

A. It does not.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 200-C for identification.

(Said documen was marked Government's Exhibit 200-C for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Graflund, I show you Government's Exhibit 200-C for identification.

By the Court: 200-C?

By Mr. Lockley: "C", your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And I ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that a record that was kept in the ordinary course of business of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it kept under your supervision and direc-
2651 tion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 200-C in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to it. It is outside of the period of the indictment. It concerns 1947.

By the Court: What is it, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: I offer it, your Honor.

By the Court: What is it, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: Perhaps I better have Mr. Graflund tell us what it is.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What does this purport to be, Mr. Graflund?

A. It is a ledger card.

Q. The ledger card of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. What is the nature of the information contained on it?

A. It is a card that is called "Miscellaneous Ac-
2652 counts Others" and on it were recorded sales to various companies.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer it, your Honor, only with respect to those sales which I will develop were recorded between The Shotwell Manufacturing Company and the General Confections in the year 1946.

By the Court: The exhibit may be received.

(Said document was received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibit 200-C.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now I call your attention to the entries dated October 11, 1946, with the heading "General Confections", and ask if you know what that entry purports to be.

A. No, sir, I do not.

2653 Q. For what purpose was that ledger sheet normally used?

A. Well, this general—this sheet, as I recall it, was used to record entries where a creditor had a balance due us rather than the creditor—us owing the creditor.

Q. Would that sheet reflect the sales of raw materials by Shotwell?

By the Court: I didn't understand. Do you mean that it reflects accounts payable from various companies to Shotwell Company?

By the Witness: Correct.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit in evidence No. 157 and No. 159 and ask if those two invoices have any relation to the entry of October 11th which shows a charge of $30,796.98 and the words "General Confections"?

A. Unfortunately this balance is destroyed, Mr. Lockley.

By the Court: I didn't hear you, Mr. Graflund.

By the Witness: The balance is torn out.

By Mr. Lockley:

2654 Q. Here it is written in ink too.

A. Yes, sir.

By the Court: Which exhibit is that, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: This is No. 157, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Then your testimony is that Exhibit No. 157 is recorded on Exhibit No. 200-C?

A. Correct.

Q. And what does that debit charge of $30,796.98 indicate?

A. That General Confections owes us that sum of money for merchandise shipped to them.

Q. And are you able to state whether the merchandise shipped to them is the merchandise reflected on invoice No. 157?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that is corn syrup, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Now, I call your attention to Government's Exhibit 157-A, 157-B and 157-C which are checks of $10,000.00, $10,000.00, and $10,796.98 and ask you if those checks are reflected in any way on Govern-

2655 ment's Exhibit 200-C?

By Mr. McConnell: Checks to who, Shotwell?

By Mr. Lockley: To Shotwell.

By the Witness:

A. There are two $10,000.00 ones and $10,796.98, yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, how are they entered?

A. As a credit to the account.

2656 Q. In other words, these checks paid the account of $30,796.98?

A. That is correct.

Q. I call your attention to the fact that these are checks by the Reserve Trading Corporation. They were credited, were they, against the General Confections' account?

A. That is correct.

Q. Will you examine them and tell me the endorsement that appears on the reverse?

A. It was paid to the order of Merchants National Bank, Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now will you also examine Government's Exhibit No. 159, and see if it has any relation to Government's Exhibit 200C?

A. Yes, it has.

Q. Government's Exhibit 159 is an invoice for $11,268.60. What is the entry, if any, on 200-B?

A. A charge to the General Confections.

Q. And what does that entry reflect or mean?

A. That General Confections owed The Shotwell Manufacturing Company $11,268.60.

Q. And was that for the purchase of syrup?

A. Yes, sir.

2657 Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 159-A and 159-B in the amount of six thousand and $5,268.60, and ask you if they are recorded anywhere on Exhibit 200-C, checks to Shotwell?

A. I see one entry that equals the total of the invoice.

Q. And what does that entry indicate?

A. It is an offset against the charge of $11,268.60.

Q. Does that mean that that invoice was paid?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is the charge in the name of General Confections on the Shotwell ledger sheet, 200-C?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And by whom were those checks drawn?
A. Reserve Trading Corporation.
Q. Were they received by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company in payment of the General Confections account?
A. Yes; they were.
Q. By whom were they endorsed?
A. By the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.
By Mr. Lockley: Will you mark this Government's Exhibit 201 for identification.

2658 (Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 201 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. I show you Exhibit 201 for identification, purporting to be the minute book of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and ask you if you have seen that before?
A. Yes, sir; I have.
Q. Is that a record kept by you in the ordinary course of business?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was it part of your duties to keep such records?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?
A. Yes, sir.

2659 By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 201.
By Mr. O'Brien: What is it?
By Mr. Lockley: It is a minute book of the corporation.
By Mr. O'Brien: Are you offering the whole book?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, I offer the whole book.
Will you mark these Government's Exhibits 202 and 203 for identification?

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 202 and 203 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, this book, your Honor, we have scarcely had time to examine it, so we can't pose all objections now. Indeed, I don't know that I have any special objection.

But, of course, right at the outset, these minutes extend back to before and beyond the indictment period and without the materiality of anything being pointed out in this large book, I can't see any basis for the inclusion of those minutes.

2660 The minutes which are within the period of it, I think we should be entitled, in the case of a volume of this size, to know what it is that counsel is interested in, or else have time to read it.

By the Court: Have you in mind certain minutes, Mr. Lockley? Rather than the entire book?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: Can you indicate to counsel which minutes you want to offer?

By Mr. Lockley: I have laid a foundation for it at this time, your Honor.

I will withdraw my offer until a later time, when I expect to use it then.

2661 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 202 for identification, which appears to be a stockholders' ledger of Shotwell Manufacturing Company, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it kept under your supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it true and correct?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I offer you Exhibit 203 for identification, which appears to be a stockholders' ledger of common stock, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. I have.

Q. Was that kept under yur supervision and direction?

A. It was.

Q. Was it part of the books and records of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

2662 Q. Was it true and correct, to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 202 and 203 for identification into evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection to them for those years, 1945 and 1946. I object to them before and after those years.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, with respect to Exhibit No. 201, the minute book, might I inquire as to whether it will be possible to offer this on rebuttal, since I have laid a foundation for it?

By the Court: Well, I assume so, if it is proper rebuttal material.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you object to these?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, I objected to them, except as to 1945 and 1946, the indictment years. I think, as to those years I have no objection.

By the Court: Are you concerned with anything
2663 more than the stockholders' ledger covering 1945 and '46?

By Mr. Lockley: In only one respect, your Honor, just one account that is not in 1945 and 1946, in a matter which was brought out by defendants on cross examination.

By the Court: A matter that what?

By Mr. Lockley: That was brought out by the defendants on cross examination of another witness.

By the Court: Well, that doesn't tell me anything. I don't know what you are talking about. Tell us what you have in mind in the ledgers outside of '45 and '46 and perhaps I can then hear the objection.

And you didn't indicate through Mr. Graflund, or I didn't follow—203 is the common stock, and what is 202?

By Mr. Lockley: Five per cent preferred stock.

By the Court: Five per cent preferred.

By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection to that, that one entry.

2664 By the Court: Well, then, if you indicate for the record the entry you are offering, in addition to 1945 and '46—

By Mr. Lockley: It is an entry headed Loyola University.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Graflund, I show you Government's Exhibit 203 and ask if you can tell from that whether Loyola University owned any stock in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did they obtain it?

A. July 28, 1950.
Q. Did they own any stock in '45 and '46?
A. No, sir; not to my knowledge.
Q. Now, can you, from examination of Government's Exhibits—

By the Court: So that the ruling may be reflected in the record, I will receive Exhibits 202 and 203 for the years 1945 and 1946, and the entry as to when the Loyola University became a stockholder.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

2665 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 202 and 203.)

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Can you from an examination of these records, Mr. Graflund, tell me who was the controlling stockholder in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company during 1945 and 1946?

By Mr. McConnell: The books and records will speak for themselves on that.

By the Court: No. He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Are there any other records that would be of assistance to you?

By the Court: From an inspection of the stockholder records, he may answer.

By the Witness: There was no one stockholder who had control.

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Well, who were the principal stockholders?

2666 By Mr. McConnell: I don't know how he can lump stockholders to show control. He said no one stockholder had control. This isn't a conspiracy case.

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Who had the great number of shares of stock?

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:
A. Are you speaking as individuals, a single individual, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Any single individual and members of their families, immediate members.

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. Let's have one question at a time. A single individual, and if he wants to add about somebody else specifically later, all right. I object to having two questions lumped that way.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, maybe we can get at it this way.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know how many shares of stock were outstanding in common stock in 1945 and in 1946?

2667 A. In 1945 there were a hundred thousand shares of common stock outstanding. There were 5,000 shares of preferred stock outstanding.

Q. Were they voting shares, the preferred stock?

A. No, sir.

Q. Non-voting. All right.

A. In 1946, in July of 1946—may I refresh my memory on that for a minute?

Q. Yes.

A. In July of 1946 Mr. Shotwell's interest, and his wife's interest, were wiped out. That is, they were canceled out at the sale of the stock.

Q. Do you know who purchased it?

A. The corporation.

Q. The corporation purchased the stock?

A. That's correct.

Q. And how many shares of stock were then outstanding, for the balance of 1946?

A. 63,550, I believe.

By the Court: 53?

By the Witness: 63,550, I believe. I am not quite certain as to that. It is around that figure.

2668 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. From examination of the common stock certificate book for the year 1945, can you tell me how many shares of stock were owned by Byron Cain?

A. Byron Cain personally?

Q. Yes.

A. In 1945 Mr. Cain had a balance of 1,066,717 shares.

Q. And how many were owned by Byron T. and Sally Cain—

A. Byron A. and Sally Cain.

Q. —as joint tenants?

A. In 1945, sir, or '46?

2669 Q. Well, perhaps it would help if you give us the figure for '45 and then the figure for '46 on each account.

A. For '45, the balance was 12,845.288.

By Mr. O'Brien: What do you mean, the balance?

By the Witness:

A. For Byron A. Cain and Sally T. Cain.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't understand the balance.

By the Witness:

A. We arrive at a balance by showing the stock issued, stock surrendered and then the balance.

By Mr. McConnell: What date?

By the Witness:

A. As of December 31, 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you go back to Mr. Byron Cain, individually, and say what he had in '46?

A. Sixty-six point seven one seven shares.

By the Court: Now you are going to '46.

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor, I am having him give Mr. Cain for '45 and then Mr. and Mrs. Cain
2670 for '46. Now he has gone back to Mr. Cain for '45.

By the Witness: Wait a minute. No, I gave Byron and Sally Cain for '45.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, will you give Byron and Sally Cain for '46?

By Mr. McConnell: We don't know what he is talking about now.

By the Witness:

A. Byron Cain and Sally Cain, for '46, 13,175.373.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know who James R. Cain is?

A. James B. Cain, sir.

Q. James B.

A. James B. Cain is his son.

Q. How many shares did he have in 1945?

A. 3,337.74.

Q. And how many in 1946?

A. 3,587.44—point seven four.

Q. Do you know who John H. Cain is?

A. That's Mr. Cain's son.

Q. How many shares did he have in 1945?

A. 3,337.74.

Q. And how many in 1946?

2671 A. 3,587.74.

Q. And do you know who Mary Alice Cain is?

A. Mr. Cain's daughter.

Q. And how many shares did she have in 1945?
A. None.
Q. And in 1946?
A. 3,425 even, no fraction.
Q. Do you know who Patricia Ann Cain is?
A. Mr. Cain's daughter.
Q. And how many shares did she have in 1945?
A. 3,337.74.
2672 Q. And in 1946?
A. 3,587.74.
Q. And do you know who Sally T. Cain, Trustee for Mary Alice Cain, is?
A. Mr. Cain's wife.
Q. And how many shares did that account have in 1945?
A. 3,175 even.
Q. And in 1946?
A. By the end of 1946, sir?
Q. Did she have any at the end?
A. None.
By the Court: Who was that that had that?
By Mr. Lockley: The trustee, a trust account.
By the Court: For whom?
By Mr. Lockley: Mary Alice Cain.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. When you said Mary Alice Cain, that was Mr. Cain's daughter?
A. Correct.
Q. Was that stock sold in 1946?
A. You mean by Mr. Cain, Mr. Lockley.
2673 Q. Was it transferred in any way?
A. It was transferred; yes, sir.
Q. And how?
A. To an account entitled Mary Cain.
2674 Q. Now will you turn to the account of Mr. Sullivan. How many shares did Harold E. Sullivan have in 1945?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I object to it. It is immaterial. Mr. Sullivan bought it and paid for it and he didn't do anything illegal or improper about it. Nor did his family. It is immaterial to this case and I will object to it.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. All right, Mr. Graflund.

A. The question was how much did they have at the end of 1945?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. 3,182.019 shares.

Q. And in 1946?

A. In 1946 there was still the same balance.

Q. And Harold E. Sullivan and Stella M. Sullivan as joint tenants, how many shares did that account have in 1945?

A. None.

Q. And in 1946?

2675 A. 311.655.

Q. And Harold E. Sullivan, Jr., do you know who he is?

A. He is Mr. Sullivan's son.

Q. How many shares did he have in 1945?

A. 5,910.776.

Q. And in 1946?

A. The same amount.

Q. Do you know who Joseph D. Sullivan is?

A. Joseph D. Sullivan is a brother of Mr. Sullivan.

Q. How many shares did he have?

A. Nothing in 1945.

Q. Or 1946?

A. Or 1946.

Q. And Joseph J. Sullivan?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, Joseph Sullivan is a farmer and a cattle dealer who lives in Marengo, Illinois.

By the Witness:

A. None.

By Mr. Lockley: He says he didn't have any.

By Mr. Kirby: It stumps me to know why you want to know about his brother. He isn't on trial
2676 here. He is an adult who is able to take care of himself. I object to it. It is improper.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: May I proceed, your Honor?

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: As to that particular account?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know who Joseph J. Sullivan is?

A. Mr. Sullivan's son, Harold—

Q. That account is in care of Harold E. Sullivan, Sr.?

A. Correct.

Q. How many shares in that account in 1945?

A. 5,910.776.

Q. And in 1946?

A. The same amount.

Q. Do you know who Stella M. Sullivan in care of Harold E. Sullivan is?

2677 A. She is the wife of Mr. Sullivan.

Q. How many shares were in that account?

A. 1945 and 1946, 5,690.366.

Q. Is that true for both years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know who Daisy Sullivan is?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, Harold Sullivan came from a family of thirteen or fourteen children, and I don't think they should be allowed to go into the holdings of the adult members not of his own family. I object to it.

By the Court: If you will make an objection I will rule on it, rather than your making a long statement.

2678 By Mr. Kirby: Well, I guess when you get into a question of a family, you would like to state your position with some firmness. I object to any inquiry as to any member outside his family.

By the Court: He just asked him who he was, and that is all he asked him. He didn't ask him about the number of shares.

By Mr. Kirby: It doesn't make any difference who she is.

By the Court: If that is what counsel had in mind, he had a right to ask him who he is.

By Mr. Kirby: I would beg the Court's indulgence, and ask that the Court instruct Mr. Lockley to first ask, before he embarrasses other people, if this person is a member of Harold Sullivan's family.

By the Court: I will.

Mr. Lockley, I don't think we should go into any stock ownership outside of the immediate family of the defendant.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I don't know who these people are. I was only inquiring of Mr. Graflund as to 2679 what their identity was.

By the Court: You may do that.

By Mr. Kirby: I can assure Mr. Lockley he is not a member of Mr. Sullivan's immediate family.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is Eunice K. Sullivan a member of Sullivan's immediate family, do you know, Mr. Graflund?

A. How would you define Eunice K.?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, he has already enumerated the entire membership of Mr. Sullivan's immediate family, that is, Harold, his wife Stella, his son Harold, and his son Joseph. He has gotten to the end of his rope.

By Mr. Lockley: If he will assure me that those are the members of the immediate family, that is all the questions I will ask on the Sullivans.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you turn to the Huebners? Do you find an account for Mr. Frank J. Huebner?

A. I do.

Q. And it is also for Laurel A. Huebner, joint 2680 tenant?

A. Right.

Q. And how many shares of stock were in that account in the year 1945?

A. 243.162.

Q. And in 1946?

A. The same amount.

Q. And that was all no par common stock?

A. That is correct.

Q. That is the voting stock?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now are you able to say, from an examination of those stock certificates, or that stock ledger book, who had the controlling interest in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company during 1945 and 1946?

By Mr. McConnell: He said that nobody had control. He said no individual had control.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, and Mr. Huebner have control, between the three of them?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that as a conclusion.
2681 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Between the three of them and their immediate families?

A. Frankly, I would like to total them to answer that question.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, might we have Mr. Graflund do that at the recess rather than take up the time of the Court at this time?

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Graflund, going back to your trip to Mr. Lubben's plant, when was the second trip that you said you made?

A. In January, sometime in January of 1948.

Q. And while you were there, did you receive any telephone call from any of the defendants?

A. I did.

Q. And from whom was it?

A. Mr. Cain.

Q. Did he call you or did you call him?

A. He called me.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation?

A. Well, Mr. Cain wanted to know just exactly how 2682 the situation stacked up, just how it looked.

Q. With respect to what?

A. To the financial condition and so on.

Q. The financial condition of—

A. Yes.

Q. Of General Confections?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that what you were there for at the time?

A. Well, that was one reason.

Q. What was the other?

A. And the other was to take up any information or any papers or documents, anything that might be helpful.

Q. With respect to your conversation, what was said at that time on the telephone?

A. Well, Mr. Cain simply asked me how did the picture look.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I told him it didn't look good at all.

Q. And that is pretty general?

A. Well, it didn't justify any more, any further loans.

Q. Was that in connection with an anticipated further loan?

2683 A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much that loan was?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had any figures been mentioned to you at all?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Lubben at that time had a loan which Mr. Cain had guaranteed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know how much that was?

A. $75,000.00.

Q. Did you have any part in the handling of that loan?

A. By that you mean what, Mr. Lockley?

Q. Well, did you examine Mr. Lubben's books before the $75,000.00 loan?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you examine his books subsequently?

A. Just to make that system, serving him, to set up a cost system.

Q. To set up a cost system?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have a conversation with Mr. Cain as to the adequacy of the $75,000.00 loan?

A. Not with Mr. Cain, no, sir.

2684 Q. Did you have a conversation with any of the defendants?

By Mr. O'Brien: I understand him to say he had nothing to do with a $75,000.00 loan.

By the Witness: I don't recall any conversation with the defendants, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You did have a conversation with someone. Who was it?

A. Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you mark this Government's Exhibit No. 204 and No. 205 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 204 and 205 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Graflund, I show you Government's Exhibits

204 and 205 for identification and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. And what do they purport to be?

A. They are entries recorded on what we call journal vouchers.

2685 Q. And were those books kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Were they kept under your supervision and direction?

A. These were not, sir. These are 1945.

Q. Those were 1945. What was your position in 1945 in the plant?

A. Vice president and secretary.

Q. Vice president and secretary. You had nothing to do with the books at that time?

A. Not at this particular moment, no, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark those Government's Exhibits 206 and 207, for identification. Will you please mark these 208 and 209 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 206, 207, 208 and 209 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 208 and 209 for identification and ask you if you have seen those before.

A. I have, sir.

2686 Q. Were those books kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. They were.

Q. Were those kept under your supervision and direction?

A. They were, with the exception of the early part of 1946.

Q. And what part is that? How long?

A. January, and possibly February, sir.

Q. Were they true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. So far as I know, yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 210 for identification?

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 210 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 210 for identification, and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course
2687 of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Kept under your supervision and direction?

A. I know it is 1945, sir. I just want to check it to be sure.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 211 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 211 for identification.)

By the Witness:

A. Yes, sir. With the exception of the two months I I stated; yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is it true and correct to the best of your knowledge?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I also show you Government's Exhibit No. 211 purporting to be a cash disbursement book and ask you if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that kept under your supervision and direction?

2688 A. In 1946?

Q. 1946.

A. Yes, sir, it was.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 207 and ask if that is a book that was kept in the ordinary course of business.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was that a part of the books and records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 206 purporting to be a general ledger for the year 1945 and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Was that a record kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you became the comptroller in 1946, did you find Exhibits 205, 206, 207 and 204, purporting to be the journal vouchers and the general ledger and the accounts payable for the year 1945 in existence at that time?

A. Pardon me. Were those exhibits I have already—

Q. Yes. Did you find these exhibits for the year
2689 1945 in existence at the time you became comptroller in 1946?

A. They were in existence, yes, sir.

Q. To the best of your knowledge they are part of the books and records of the company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Kept in the ordinary course of business?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer them in evidence, your Honor.

By the Court: You offer what?

By Mr. Lockley: Government's Exhibits 204, 205, 206—

By the Court: Well, if you will state what they are so we may have some record as to what you are offering—

By Mr. Lockley: All right. I offer in evidence Government's Exhibits 204 and 205 which are the 1945 journal vouchers for the period January to July and July to December, respectively.

Government's Exhibit 206, which is a general ledger for 1945 and Government's Exhibit 207, which is a cash 2690 disbursements or accounts payable book for 1945.

By the Court: Cash disbursements or accounts payable?

By Mr. Lockley: Cash disbursements or accounts payable. It bears both names on it.

Government's Exhibit 208, journal for January to June, 1946—Government's Exhibit 209, journal for July to December, 1946.

Government's Exhibit 210, general ledger for 1946 and Government's Exhibit 211, which is the cash disbursements or accounts payable book for 1946.

2691 By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, that is quite a stack of books, I am afraid, to get into the record, without some statement as to the materiality or necessity and I would object on that basis. I have nothing specific in mind. I just don't see the materiality.

By the Court: What is it you intend to establish by these books, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, it is my understanding that in order to have my expert witness testify, that the additional cash receipts are not on the books and records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and those books and records must be here in the court room and either available for counsel to examine on cross examination or to be identified or introduced in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it was my thought and my understanding of the ordinary practice that the expert or accountant would take the stand and testify that he had examined the books and that his findings were 2692 thus and so and so long as the books are available in the court room and a reasonable time is permitted us to interrogate him by verification of the books, that is all that is necessary, but it does seem a terrific burden on the record in this case to have all of these books physically in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: If counsel is satisfied for them just to be here and identified as the books and records, well, I will withdraw my offer.

By Mr. McConnell: We have no objection to that. That is the ordinary procedure. Just so they are available. Nobody could print a record of this size.

By the Court: If you are both agreeable to doing it that way, of handling it that way, I suppose there is no objection.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor.

By the Court: In other words, reference may be made by the accountants or other witnesses that Mr. Lockley may put on the stand to those books and as to their 2693 contents, the same as though the books had been formally received in evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory with the government.

By the Court: I gathered that that may be stipulated to by counsel. If there should be any difficulty as to any structural relation, you have a right to bring in your offer.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I have now finished with Mr. Graflund, with the exception that at the recess I would like to have him make the computation of the number.

By the Court: You may reserve your right to recall him. You may reserve your right to examine him on rebuttal or on redirect examination, I should say.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor.

You may examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Graflund, do you have any more accurate
2694 recollection of the date of your visit to the plant in January of 1946?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't recall any testimony that there was a meeting in 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. January of 1948.

A. I would say it was the last week of January, or thereabouts.

Q. Have you checked that in any way or is that just your recollection?

A. Just my recollection, sir.

Q. And you went down with Mr. Busby, did you not?

A. Correct.

Q. How long did you stay?

A. Three days, perhaps four.

Q. Might it not have been one or two days?

A. It might have been, yes, sir.

2695 Q. Did you return with Mr. Busby?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. To Chicago?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. As to the financial condition of General Confections at that time, had you been told that it was seeking a loan of $50,000?

A. I had been told that he wanted additional money. I don't recall whether it was fifty thousand dollars.

Q. Do you have any recollection as to what the amount was?

By the Court: Do you understand the question?

By the Witness: Yes, sir. I shook my head no. I should have said no. I am sorry.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When you got there, did you meet Mr. Lubben?

A. We did.

Q. And anyone else?
A. Did we meet Mr. Lubben and anyone else?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. Mr. Lubben, as I recall, was alone.
2696 Q. Did you check with Mr. Lubben's bookkeeper?
A. Out at the plant?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Was that Miss Feldman?
A. No, sir.
Q. Who was it?
A. A Mr. Tobias.
Q. Did he show you the books?
A. He showed us the ledgers.
Q. Were you able to get from the books he showed you the information that you wanted?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you not remember that you were there a day and a half?
A. It could very well be, sir.
Q. Was that in 1946—withdraw that.
What is your business now, Mr. Graflund?
A. I am self employed.
Q. At Wheaton, Illinois?
A. That is correct.
Q. In the cleaning business, is it not?
A. Correct.
Q. And you have not been with Shotwell for a year or more?
2697 A. A year and two and a half months.
Q. Is it true that in February of 1946, you took over the cash box in the vault from Mr. Roeser?
A. I took over the cash box, sir?
Q. Yes sir, when Roeser went to sales?
A. I exercised the duties of the comptroller.
Q. Well, either you don't understand me, or I don't understand you.
Let us go back chronologically. In 1945, as I understand it, Mr. Huebner telephoned you and said that Mr. Lubben would be in to make a payment of cash?
A. That is my recollection, yes sir.
Q. And Mr. Lubben did come in and he did give you the cash and you caused it to be put in the box in the vault?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now at that time did you know that a cash box was being maintained in the vault?

A. Yes sir.

Q. By or under the supervision of Mr. Roeser and Mrs. Morrill?

A. Yes sir.

2698 Q. And that is where you put that money that Mr. Lubben brought in?

A. That is correct.

Q. I understand that that is the only payment you received or money that you received from Mr. Lubben?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now except for that isolated transaction you had no contact or dealings with Mr. Lubben about cash money in the year 1945?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now you have said that when Mr. Roeser went to sales, you became the acting comptroller of the company?

A. That is true.

Q. Was that about Februay of 1946?

A. I would place it there.

Q. From that time down to sometime late in July of 1946, did you not, together with Mrs. Morrill, continue to handle cash into and out of that box in the vault?

A. I did not handle any money going in, beyond that one isolated case.

2699 Q. Well, now, Mr. Graflund, I do not mean that Mr. Lubben paid you money, but were there not moneys which came in which you, or you and Mrs. Morrill deposited in that box?

A. Moneys which came in?

Q. Yes.

A. I don't understand that question. Moneys came in from other sources?

Q. Cash money. Well, what is it you kept in this box? What is it that was kept in the box in the vault?

A. Money.

Q. Now where did the money come from?

A. Apparently from Mr. Lubben.

Q. Did you ever see any money going into the box?

A I don't recall it sir.

Q. You do not recall seeing money going into the box?

A. The question is a little bit ambiguous to me.

Q. All right. I will try to make it clear, Mr. Graflund. You said that Mrs. Morrill was maintaining a record of the ins and outs to the box.

A. Correct.

Q. And you know that it was a record of ins and 2700 outs?

A. Did I know?

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I was told so.

Q. By whom?

A. Well, Mrs. Morrill.

Q. Well, didn't you see the record?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was the box kept?

A. In the company vault.

Q. Who had the key?

A. Well, I believe Mrs. Morrill had the key.

Q. Was the key also available to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you and Mrs. Morrill also have the combination of the vault?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say that Mrs. Morrill would handle the money physically taken into and out of the box?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. On whose direction would she do that, yours?

A. It depended upon who gave her the money going in. Money coming out, if I asked for the money, she would give it to me.

2701 Q. That is what I was afraid I wasn't clear on. I just wanted to get it from you.

Now, if you were asked for money you would ask Mrs. Morrill in turn and she would get the money and give you the requested amount?

A. That is correct.

Q. And would she, at the same time, to your knowledge, make an entry on her record of the amount of money then withdrawn and the date of the withdrawal?

A. I assume she did sir.

Q. Now during any of the occasions when you obtained money in that fashion, did you pay any of it to Dr. Doe?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to this general line of questioning about the money going in and out, unless Mr. O'Brien can state the time and place and circumstances. He has laid no foundation.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I merely am talking about the procedure and pattern now.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You may answer the question.

Will you please read the question to the witness, 2702 Miss Reporter.

(Question read.)

By Mr. Lockley: I object unless he can lay a foundation as to the time and place on this, your Honor.

By the Court: I think the time and place—well, first he can answer it yes or no and then we can find out the time and place. The time and place then should be set. The question is whether or not he ever took any money to Dr. Doe.

By the Witness: The anwer is yes to that one.

By the Court: I am sorry, I didn't hear you.

By the Witness: The answer is yes to that one.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you remember when it was, Mr. Graflupd, approximately?

A. It was around the turn of the year in 1945 or early 1946.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. There is one thing on which I am not quite clear. Outside of the receipt of this money from Lubben at 2703 Huebner's direction late in the year 1945, did you have anything at all to do with that box until Roeser went to sales?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, then if Roeser went to sales in February of 1946, were you making any pay-outs of the money prior to that time?

A. Prior to the time that Roeser went to sales?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. The only instance I would know of would be Dr. Doe.

Q. You think that was while Roeser was still there?

A. That is my impression, yes, sir.
Q. I see. Do you recall how much money?
A. I don't, no, sir.
Q. Approximately?
A. I would have no way of judging, except by the size of the package, yes.
Q. Well, do you have any recollection, Mr. Graflund, as to what was withdrawn from the box at that time?
A. The box was not under my direction at the time.
2704 Q. Well, let us leave that. Did you have occasion to pay any money out of the box to Keeley?
A. I did.
By the Court: To whom?
By Mr. O'Brien: Keeley K-e-e-l-e-y.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Was that during the time that the box was under your direction?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What is your best recollection as to the number of times that you made such payments?
A. Five or six.
Q. Would Mrs. Morrill bring the money to you for that purpose?
A. I would ask her for the money and she would get it from the vault.
Q. Do you remember whether Mr. Cain went to California during the month of January, 1946?
A. I would say yes.
Q. What is your recollection as to the length of the visit or stay in California?
A. I would say about three weeks to possibly a month.
Q. Was he not there until April of 1946?
2705 A. Was he not there?
Q. Yes.
A. That is, in Chicago?
Q. In California.
A. April of 1946?
Q. I am sorry. I can't hear you.
A. Until—the question is, was he not there?
Q. Wasn't he there from late in January to April in 1946?
A. I know of one occasion when he came back.
Q. Do you mean he returned?

A. To Chicago—oh, 1946.

Q. Yes, I am talking about 1946.

A. Excuse me. I am confused. In 1946.

2706 Q. Sure.

A. It could be, Mr. O'Brien. I am not prepared to state that exactly.

Q. All right. The downtown safety deposit box at the City National Bank & Trust Company, was that opened in '45 or '46 or had it been maintained by the company for quite some years prior?

A. Quite some years prior.

Q. And was it there that the securities of the company were kept?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as comptroller of the company did you have occasion to visit that box from time to time?

A. Correction there. I was not comptroller during the period, early period.

Q. What was the purpose of depositing the cash money from the plant to the downtown box?

A. Well, sometimes the amounts were large and it was felt that they should be put in the downtown vault.

Q. Was it fear of burglary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And from time to time you would take moneys down and from time to time you would bring them 2707 back, as you described?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, the moneys that were paid to Keeley by you, what were they for?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, I object, your Honor, until such time as a proper foundation has been laid as to each instance, the time and the place and the circumstances.

By the Court: Well, generally, he may answer, if that is what you have in mind.

By the Witness: Will you repeat that? I am sorry.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. For the purchase of raw corn.

By the Court: We will take our afternoon recess now. We will suspend for ten minutes.

(Recess taken.)

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you Judge. Will you excuse us just a minute.

Mr. McConnell has a couple of questions. I am through.

2708 By Mr. McConnell: I don't like the way my colleagues limited me to a couple of questions. I am going to have more than that.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Graflund, you are an accountant, are you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How long have you been an accountant?

A. 19—oh—

By the Court: Raise your voice a little bit.

By the Witness:

A. About 1930.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. What are you, a certified accountant, or a public accountant?

2709 A. No, sir; just an accountant.

Q. A public accountant?

A. Not public either.

Q. You are a bookkeeper then?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, you keep books, and you keep accounts, and you were chief bookkeeper for the Shotwell Company, is that correct?

A. That would be about it. If you keep the books yourself—

Q. Well, you know how to keep books, and you knew the orderly procedure for keeping books, and the books were kept under your supervision, is that true?

A. That's correct.

Q. At Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That is correct.

Q. And as an accountant and as a bookeeper you knew what amounts and what accounts should be placed on Shotwell's books, did you not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. I want to clear up one thing which isn't clear to me, and I don't think it is to the jury, either.

2710 I think you said that this box at the plant was opened up some time in the latter part of 1945, is that correct?

A. I said that I had knowledge of the transactions in the latter part of '45.

Q. And you had no knowledge of any transactions prior to that time, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. From any source?

A. That's correct.

Q. And at that time somehow it came to your knowledge there was a box in which cash was being received, or was received at the Shotwell Company, is that true?

A. It came to my knowledge that money was being received, sir.

Q. Yes. And the first time it came to your knowledge, wasn't it, was when Lubben made a payment to you?

A. Not to me, sir; no, sir; before that time.

Q. Well, when was that first payment that was made to you?

A. By Mr. Lubben?

Q. Yes.

A. I placed the date somewhere around December
2711 of '45, sir.

Q. And you are sure of that date, are you?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Are you sure it is in '45?

A. I am not even sure of that.

Q. Well, are you sure it was during the time when you first learned of the opening of the box and the closing of the box in July of 1946?

A. I learned about monies coming in, sir, in the fall.

Q. Of '45?

A. Correct.

2712 Q. And the box, you say, was closed in July of 1946?

By Mr. Lockley: I recall no such testimony.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, do you know when the box was closed?

By Mr. Lockley: If it was closed.

By the Witness:

A. The latter part of 1946.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Was it in July?

A. It would be around July or August, sir.

Q. And at that time you made some sort of a statement of the account, did you not, with a balance of some $3.40 or $4.50?

A. I didn't render any statement, sir.

Q. But didn't you figure up that there was a balance of about four dollars and something at that time?

By Mr. Lockley: He said he didn't render any statement.

By Mr. McConnell: I am asking if he figured up the account and showed a balance of about that much.

2713 By the Witness:

A. I didn't figure up the account, sir, in the box.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Did it come to your knowledge that there was a balance about that time, when the account was closed out, of about four dollars and some cents?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: There is no testimony that the account was closed out.

By Mr. McConnell: He just said it was closed out in the latter part of July or August.

By the Court: It may have come from the janitor. We don't know where it came from.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, what was the payment that you received from Mr. Lubben?

A. What was the payment?

Q. Yes.

A. Do you mean what size?

Q. Yes.

2714 A. I would say it was substantial.

Q. Did you count it?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. If my memory serves me right, I gave it to Mrs. Morrill to put it in the box.

Q. And at that time she was keeping the box, was she?

A. She was the one that handled the transactions; yes, sir.

Q. So that that payment would have to be received at the time she was keeping the box, is that correct?

A. That would be right; yes, sir.

Q. And you think that was in 1945?

A. That's correct.

Q. Now, if Mr. Lubben testified that on October 12, 1946, he made you a payment of $25,929.81, is that true?

A. In October?

Q. Yes, of '46.

A. I know Mr. Lubben made a payment to me. He made one payment. And the date I cannot fix.

2715 Q. Did he make two payments to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified that he made a payment of $13,146.70 to Mr. Huebner and Mr. Huebner—

By Mr. Lockley: What page of the testimony?

By Mr. McConnell: 781.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. —said to take it down and give it to Stanley Graflund and tell him specifically, " 'This is the overage on the corn syrup.'

"Q. Did you do that?

"A. Yes, sir, and I was told not to ever mention anything about candy overages, just on the corn syrup, and I went down and gave it to Mr. Graflund, sir."

Did that happen?

A. No, sir; there was no discussion of any overage of corn syrup when Mr. Lubben gave me the money.

Q. And he didn't give you the 13,000 and the 25,000 in October and November of 1946, did he?

A. I fix the date prior to that time, sir.

Q. Well, you fixed it in 1945, didn't you?

A. That's correct.

2716 Q. And you have no recollection that any payments at all were made to you in 1946, do you?

A. Not to my knowledge; no, sir.

Q. Now, don't you have a recollection that that corn box was closed out in July or August of 1946?

A. It was very close to that date, sir, It might have been a little later. It might have been August.

Q. It was in the summer of 1946?

A. That's correct.

Q. That was about the date that the corn shortage disappeared, wasn't it?

A. That's about correct; yes, sir.

Q. And there was a corn shortage from the latter part of 1945 to the middle of the summer of 1948, was there not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, did you know that because of your connection with the candy business?

A. Well, I know that because it was just general—it was a general topic of conversation all around.

Q. In the trade, wasn't it?

A. That's correct.

Q. And how did that shortage of corn affect the corn syrup business, and the candy business? Just tell us, will you, please?

2717 A. Well, the supplier or the manufacturer could not obtain corn syrup because the corn refiners couldn't get the raw corn at the ceiling prices. So in order for a manufacturer of candy to get corn syrup he, in turn, went out and procured the raw corn for the corn refiner.

Q. And when the refiner got it he shipped it to the—I mean when the elevator man got the higher payment he shipped it to the refiner and you got your corn syrup?

A. I don't know if the elevator man got it. All I know is the ultimate user was the refiner. The steps in between I wouldn't know.

Q. And the refiner wouldn't ship the corn syrup without you shipping corn?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you knew that in your business and you knew that was generally true in the trade, did you not?

A. That's true.

Q. Among your competitors as well as yourself, isn't that right?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when you said, in response to Mr. O'Brien's 2718 question, I think, that the money that you paid out went for corn, that is what you were referring to, wasn't it?

A. Correct, raw corn.

Q. To be used to get corn syrup with which to supply your company with the means of producing candy, isn't that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, you did sign the tax return in 1946, didn't you?

A. '45, also, sir.

Q. '45, too?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And at the time that you signed this tax return you knew that money had been received which had been spent to purchase corn, didn't you?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, with that knowledge, and knowing those facts, and from what you knew as comptroller of that company, did you believe that you were signing a false income tax return?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to the witness's conclusion on that, your Honor.

By the Court: He may answer.

2719 By the Witness:

A. No, sir; I did not

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. And why—tell the jury why you didn't think it was a false return.

A. Because my money was received—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that too, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection. I don't suppose it is for him to determine the legal—

By Mr. McConnell: I know, but it is a question of intent.

By the Court: —questions involved.

By Mr. Lockley: This man is not being prosecuted for income tax evasion.

By Mr. McConnell: But the corporation is.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

2720 By Mr. McConnell:

Q. In any event, you didn't believe from what you knew then that the corporation was filing a false return, did you, at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Nor that you as an agent of the company were, either?

A. No, sir.

Q. Now, you were asked some questions about percentages of stock. In 1945 Mr. Huebner and his family only had a quarter of one per cent of the stock of this company, didn't he?

A. It was a very small figure.

Q. And the whole Sullivan family, including the uncles, and cousins, and aunts, only had about 20 per cent, didn't they?

A. Out of the hundred thousand shares, I placed it at about 30, sir.

Q. About 30?
A. Yes.
Q. How about the Cain family in 19—
A. About 30.
Q. As a matter of fact, the Sullivan family was 20.69 and the Cain family 27.81, wasn't it?
2721 A. Oh, I see.
By Mr. Lockley: For what year?
By Mr. McConnell: '45.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Am I correct?
A. Well, I see what I am thinking of.
Q. Am I correct?
A. I can't substantiate those percentages.
Q. Between them they didn't have control of the company in '45, did they?
A. Between the Sullivan family and the Cain family?
Q. The Sullivan family and the Cain family and the Huebner family?
A. I would say no.
Q. Now, you were around that company how long?
A. 21 years.
Q. Did you ever see any sums around there like $400,000.00 or $300,000.00 on the premises?
A. No, sir.
Q. You were familiar with their bank accounts, were you not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And you checked and audited the bank accounts, did you not?
2722 A. Our auditors checked them, sir.
Q. Well, you had to check on them, too, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. The cash balances?
A. Yes. We reconciled them monthly.
Q. And you knew what your bank accounts were?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You never saw anything in there that wasn't on your books?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never saw anything like that down there in that vault, that wasn't on your books, did you?
A. In the vault, sir?
Q. Yes, in the vault.

A. In the box?
Q. In the box.
A. That wasn't on the books, sir.
Q. I know, but you never saw any money like two or three or four hundred thousand dollars around there, did you?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: I believe that is all.
By the Court: Mr. Kirby has no cross examination, Mr. Lockley.

2723 Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Graflund, did you prepare the computation that you were requested to of the stock?
A. I have them here.
2724 Q. Can you give the results for both '45 and '46 now?
A. Well, in 1945, I show 47,794.162 shares out of a hundred thousand.
By the Court: Owned by whom?
By the Witness: Held by the Sullivans and the Cain immediate families.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. That is, the husband, the wife, and the children?
A. That is correct.
Q. That doesn't include any holdings by brothers and sisters?
A. No, sir.
Q. How about '46?
A. '46, I have 47,417.472.
Q. Out of how many shares?
A. Out of sixty-three thousand odd shares.
Q. Did that give them controlling interest in 1946?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When you testified that you weren't sure of this payment received by Mr. Lubben, do you have any present recollection as to which year it was, 2725 1945, or 1946?
A. I fix the date pretty well in '45, sir.
Q. Do you recall whether it was received by you while you were the comptroller, or while Mr. Roeser was the comptroller?
A. It was received by me, sir.

Q. It was received by you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, do you recall what your official position with the corporation was after that time?
A. I was not comptroller.
Q. You were not the comptroller?
A. No, sir.
Q. So that is how you fix it as 1945?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Well, as I understand it, you weren't officially designated as the comptroller even in 1946?
A. That's correct.
Q. But you were occupying that office, and performing those functions?
A. That's right.
By Mr. O'Brien: In '46?
By Mr. Lockley: Yes, in '46.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, at the time you signed the corporate tax
2726 returns for the years 1945 and 1946, did you know of the amount of money which had been received from the Lubben organ zations?
A. Only to the extent that we had received it. By "we", I mean myself, and Mrs. Morrill, and perhaps Mr. Roeser.
Q. Did you know of any money which had been received by any of the defendants from Dave Lubben, outside of the money which went into the cash box?
By Mr. McConnell: What he assumed—
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. No, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You didn't know about that?
A. No, sir.
Q. So at the time you filed those returns, the only money you knew about was the money that had actually been in the cash box in the office?
A. That's right, sir.
Q. What do you mean when you say the cash box was discontinued?
A. The balance was—it just petered out.
2727 Q. Do you know if there were any payments received after that date?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Could payments have been received without your knowing about it?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. That is hpyothetical.

By the Court: I think he may answer.

By Mr. McConnell: Of course, they could have received without him knowing about it.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Well, they could have been received without my knowledge, true.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You continued to ship merchandise to Dave Lubben after that period of time?

A. Yes.

Q. The corporation did?

A. Yes, sir.

2728 Q. Just one other thing. When you went back to New York or New Jersey—in 1948, was it, in January?

A. That was the second visit.

Q. And you said that you looked at the books—were given the books by Mr. Tobias?

A. That's correct.

Q. What books were they that you looked at at that time, what corporation or entity was in existence?

A. General Confections.

Q. General Confections. There are two, as I understand it, General Confections of New York and General Confections of New Jersey. Do you know which one it was?

A. I didn't know there were two. All I knew is General Confections and we were in the New Jersey plant.

Q. You were in the New Jersey plant at that time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the Eatsum proprietorship books at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the Eatsum partnership books at that time?

2729 A. No, sir.

Q. Did you see any of the General Confections books for the year 1946?

A. The ledgers is what we were looking at.

Q. The ledgers for the year '46?

A. Not '46. No, we were looking at the ledger for the current year.

Q. What you were doing was establishing the financial status of the company at that time?

A. That's right.

Q. And that was in 1948?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: I have just one more question.

Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. In 1946, the latter part of '46, you were having a hard time collecting money from Mr. Lubben, weren't you?

A. The account started to slow up. He became behind in his payments. That is, he became slow in his payments.

2730 Q. By the end of the year he was into you for $47,000.00, wasn't he?

A. I don't recall the amount, sir.

Q. Approximately that?

A. Could be.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By the Court: Anything further?

By Mr. Lockley: Just one thing, your Honor.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit No. 200 and I ask if you can tell me whether that balance of $47,000.00, or whatever it was, at the end of 1946, was paid by Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that. That calls for a conclusion of other years.

By the Court: Overruled.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. At the end of 1946.

A. '46 is the question?

Q. Was that balance due at the end of 1946
2731 ever paid?

By Mr. McConnell: It doesn't make any difference.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to it unless the payment is confined to the year '46.

By the Court: Overruled.

By the Witness:

A. There is '45 and '46. That is the figure you are referring to. And there are cash payments—

By the Court: You will have to speak up if you are going to talk, Mr. Graflund.

2732 By the Witness:

A. The balance was reduced by a combination of both cash and credits to his account.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And what was the balance at the time the account was closed out?

A. Zero.

Q. What is the figure of $665.56?

A. That is a journal entry.

Q. Do you know what that journal entry means?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. It reflects that it was all paid, is that correct?

A. The account was wiped out. I believe the 656 was the portion we wrote off as uncollectable. But I wouldn't swear to that as certain.

Q. With your recollection as to the $656 being an uncollectible bad debt, do you know if the balance of it was paid?

A. The balance of it was paid through two mediums.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you.

2733 Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Do you recall the Haberkorn deal?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a minute.

By Mr. McConnell: You showed how this was paid. I am going to show how it was paid. He went into it. He wanted to show how it was paid, but I am going to show how it was paid.

By Mr. Lockley: If you see anything about Haberkorn on this, Mr. Graflund, you can testify.

By Mr. McConnell: You have got some figures here.

I have got a right to show how those figures are wrong.
By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Do you remember anything about the Haberkorn deal?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the grounds that the ledger sheet has no relation whatsoever to the Haberkorn deal, and it is entirely beyond the scope of the direct examination and the redirect examination.

2734 By the Court: I think he has the right to show how an account was liquidated. You have gone into it.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you determine first whether that Haberkorn account has anything to do with the ledger sheet?

By Mr. McConnell: Let it go.

By Mr. Kirby: That was '48.

By the Court: He has abandoned it.

By the Witness: Am I dismissed?

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By the Court: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: You are through, thank you.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Ericson.

MARTIN A. ERICSON, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Ericson, will you please state your full name?

2735 A. Mr. Martin A. Ericson.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Ericson?

A. San Jose, California.

Q. Are you employed?

A. No.

Q. Were you at one time employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when was your first employment there?

A. About 1921, or 1922, somewheres around there.

2736 Q. With respect to the years 1945 and 1946, what was your position?

A. Superintendent.
Q. You were plant superintendent?
A. That is correct.
Q. And as such what were your duties?
A. In charge of production, shipping, receiving.
By the Court: A little louder, Mr. Ericson, please.
By the Witness:
A. I was in charge of production, of the plant, in charge of shipping and receiving.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Now, with respect to the shipping, can you tell us what was the usual nature of the order going to the shipping room prior to a shipment being sent out; what was the procedure?
A. To send a shipping ticket and a bill of lading to the shipping room.
Q. Who did that?
A. It was done—usually done by the traffic department.
Q. The traffic department would send the shipping ticket and the bill of lading?
2737 A. That is correct.
Q. What was done then?
A. The shipment would be made then.
Q. And then what happened to the shipping ticket and the bill of lading?
A. That would go into the girl who matched up those with the original invoices.
Q. Was that in the accounting department?
A. I believe you would call it accounting, yes.
Q. In 1946 were you in charge of the traffic department, was that part of your duty?
A. Well, in sort of a supervisory capacity, yes.
Q. Now, were there any occasions when the method that you have just described was not employed, in 1946?
A. Yes, there were.
Q. And when was that, if you know?
A. I can't give you any exact dates.
By Mr. O'Brien: I can't hear you, Mr. Ericson. Will you talk a little louder?
By Mr. McConnell: I haven't heard a word.
By the Court: Mr. Ericson, you sort of drop your voice, I think, and that is the difficulty we have in hearing you. If you will bear in mind that when 2738 you drop your voice we lose what you have to say, that will help.

By the Witness:

A. I can't give you any specific dates.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, I show you Government's Exhibits Nos. 148, 149, 146, 147, 151, 152 and 155, and ask you if you have seen those before.

A. Yes, sir; I have.

Q. Where was that?

A. At the plant.

Q. Do you know by whom they were prepared?

A. Offhand I'd say they were probably prepared by the billing department.

Q. By the billing department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know at whose instructions?

A. It may have been mine. I don't know. I don't recall definitely.

Q. And at whose instructions did you instruct the billing department?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, he has first said he is not sure whether it was done by the 2739 billing department. He then has said that he is not sure whether he instructed the billing department. And I submit that where the proof is that unclear it should be stricken. I move to strike it.

By the Court: I suppose that is the best testimony he can give. It will have to stand for what it is worth.

By Mr. Kirby: But if the man doesn't know, I think we ought to have a frank expression of his inability to answer.

By the Court: Go ahead.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know if those were prepared in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company plant?

A. I believe they were, yes.

Q. Well, could they have been prepared any place else?

A. Could they?

2740 Q. Yes. Or do you know if they were prepared any place else?

A. I couldn't answer that.

By Mr. McConnell: You have got two questions now.

By the Witness:

A. I couldn't answer that.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do those bills of lading differ in any way from the usual bills of lading used by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes. They are made in original, where the ordinary shipments are made in carbon.

Q. And are they different in any other respect?

A. It is not one of our standard forms of bill of lading, if that is what you are referring to.

Q. Does your standard form of bill of lading have imprinted on it as part of the form the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do these forms have such an imprint?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know the purpose for issuing those bills of lading?

2741 A. The purpose?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. What is the usual purpose of issuing a bill of lading?

A. The usual purpose, to cover a shipment.

By Mr. McConnell: I object.

By Mr. Lockley: What is it? I didn't hear the objection.

By the Court: I didn't hear your question, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: I asked him what was the usual purpose for the issuance of a bill of lading.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. That is to make a shipment.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. To make a shipment?

A. A receipt from a carrier for shipment being made.

Q. So would it be true that the purpose of issuing those bills of lading was also to make a shipment?

2742 A. That's correct.

Q. And when such shipments were made were they made from the shipping department of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. That's correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the question?

(Question read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. With respect to these particular shipments, do you know whether the merchandise shipped on those was manufactured by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Unless I know definitely—

2743 By Mr. McConnell: I haven't heard any proof that they were shipped. He assumes that they were shipped.

By the Court: Well, the exhibits are in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: They are bills of lading, yes.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I can't tell you what these—only where it is written on the bill of lading.

By the Court: Answer again now, and keep your voice up.

By the Witness:

A. Where the items in question are written on the bill of lading, that is the only ones I could tell you about.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Were those items manufactured by the Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know in whose handwriting the penciled notations are?

A. Yes sir.

Q. In whose are they?

2744 A. Part of them are mine.

Q. Do you recall the purpose of making such notations on the bill of lading?

A. Well, to the best of my recollection, it would be to specify what items went into the car.

Q. What items?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was it your practice with respect to all shipments to write in pencil on the bill of lading the nature of the items that went into the car?

A. No, sir.

Q. And what sort of a document would usually show that information?

A. The shipping ticket.
Q. The shipping ticket?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, was there any shipping ticket issued in connection with these particular bills of lading?
A. I don't think so, no.
Q. Well, now the shipping ticket, after the shipment was made—and I might ask: Were those shipments made?
A. They must have been made, they are receipted for by carriers.
2745 Q. You say the shipping ticket went to the accounting department?
Now, if there was no shipping ticket on these particular bills of lading, do you know if the information went to the accounting department respecting them?
A. Any information respecting the shipments?
Q. That's right.
A. Well, these bills of lading would go to the accounting department.
Q. They would go to the accounting department?
A. That's right
Q. Did they go to the accounting department?
A. If they are handled in the usual manner they would, yes.
Q. Well, were they handled in the usual manner?
A. In so far as the shipping ticket is concerned, no. But in so far as the receipt is concerned, I can't tell you definitely.
Q. In so far as what is concerned?
A. In so far as the shipping ticket is concerned, it was not handled in the regular manner, procedure, but in so far as the bill of lading is concerned, I can't answer you.
2746 Q. Well, how would the accounting department get the information that the shipment had been made on those particular shipments?
A From the information on the bill of lading, I assume.
Q. Does that bill of lading show the dollars and cents?
A. No, sir.
2747 Q. I am still at a loss. Did you send any memoranda to the accounting department to notify them that such shipment had been made?

A. I may have.

Q. Did you?

A. I presume I would. I may have told them, yes, what went into the cars.

Q. I want to know your best recollection. Did you?

A. In so far as this is concerned, I would say yes on those, on those that you have here.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is "this"?

By the Witness: The one I am looking at has three items listed on the bill of lading in my handwriting.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the exhibit number?

By the Witness: Where is that? 149.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now when a shipment was made by the shipping department, it was on the authority of this shipping ticket, is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Which was issued by the accounting department
2748 and went back to them?

A. That is right.

Q. There was no shipping ticket attached to these particular bills of lading?

A. I don't believe so, no.

Q. Then on what authority were those particular shipments made?

A. They were given, probably given written instructions as to what to put in the cars.

Q. What do you mean "they were probably"? Who was given instructions?

A. The shipping clerk.

Q. By whom?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to his testifying as to what probably happened. He doesn't know.

By the Court: Well, if he knows, he may state.

By Mr. McConnell: He is not testifying now as to his knowledge.

By the Court: You may answer the question.

By the Witness: It may have come from me, or it may have come from the traffic department.

2749 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you give such instructions to the shipping clerk?

A. I probably did at times, yes.

Q. And from whom did you in turn get your instructions, if you did?

A. In so far as to what to load in the cars was concerned?

Q. Yes.

A. That would come from one of the officers of the company.

Q. Which one of the officers?

A. It may have come from—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I don't mean to be rude about this, but this is speculation, I think. He says they might have issued instructions on some of them. That isn't proof as to any one of these shipments. And then they are backing up to—well, if he did, who told him? I must object to that last question. It is purely speculation.

By the Court: That is what he is trying to find out.

2750 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did anyone else have authority to issue such instructions besides yourself, Mr. Ericson?

By Mr. Kirby: I object on the ground it is not a question of authority. It is a question of what specifically happened, if he knows.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: Would you repeat the question, please?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did anyone else have authority to instruct the shipping department about shipments?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Who?

A. The traffic manager could have done it, or one of the officers of the company could have given that information.

Q. Now, I want your best recollection as to whether any of the officers of the company ever instructed you to make those particular shipments reflected by the bills of lading?

A. Instructed me?

Q. Yes.

2751 A. Yes, they did.

Q. And who were they? Who was it?

A. I can't tell you exactly. It may have been any one of the three.

Q. Who were any one of the three?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that. He said he can't tell.

By the Court: Well, if he says it was one of the three but he can't tell which one, I think he can answer as far as he can go.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who do you mean by the three?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, and Mr. Huebner.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did anyone else have some authority?

A. No, sir.

Q. Would you have shipped a carload of candy on the instruction or authority of anyone other than Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, or Mr. Huebner?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the question. He is leading the witness.

2752 By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Kirby: He is treating the witness of the Government on direct examination as though on cross. He is asking him purely speculative questions. I object on those grounds.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You may answer.

By the Witness: Repeat the question.

(Question read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you able to state from an examination of those bills of lading whether any of those shipments were full carloads, and would you tell us the exhibit number?

A. Exhibit 147.

Q. Is that a full carload?

A. On the carload—if I recall the correct carload weights at the time, yes.

Q. Any others?

A. Exhibit 151. That is all.

Q. Now to whom did you report then when these 2753 shipments had been made, if anyone?

A. To whom did I report?

By Mr. McConnell: That assumes he reported to somebody.

By Mr. Lockley: I said, if anyone.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is another cross question.
By the Court: He may answer.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Well, did you report to anyone?
A. I probably reported this information to Mr. Huebner.
Q. You say you probably did. Well, do you have any recollection?
A. Well, that is the best of my recollection of the deal.
Q. That you reported it to Mr. Huebner?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you report it orally or in writing?
A. I may have done either one.
Q. At different occasions, do you mean?
A. That is right, because, as I say, some of these, the information is on the bill of lading.
Q. Did you keep a record of those shipments?
A. I think so.
2754 Q. And what was the nature of those records?
A. Simply a sheet of paper as to what went out in the cars, or—
Q. When did you start to keep the record?
A. I presume at the time of the first shipment.
Q. I am sorry. I didn't hear your answer, Mr. Ericson.
A. I said I presume at the time of the first shipment.
Q. At the time of the first shipment. Are you referring to the first shipment reflected on those bills of lading?
By Mr. McConnell: I don't think any presumption should be indulged in here, except the presumption of innocence.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Are you referring to the first shipment reflected on those bills of lading?
A. That is right.
Q. Did you keep any records of shipments other than the record you have referred to on the cars, reflected by the bills of lading?
A. What do you mean by any other record?
2755 Q. Well, did you keep any record of the shipments of Mr. Lubben, or the General Confections, or the Eatsum Food Products Company?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. You did not keep any special records?

A. I don't think so, no.

2756 Q. You say you did keep a record of those shipments shown by the bills of lading. I show you Exhibit 63-B and ask if you have seen that before.

A. Yes; sir.

Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And whose is it?

By the Court: Whose handwriting is it?

By the Witness: It is my handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What does that record purport to be?

By the Court: Is that 63-B?

By Mr. Lockley: 63-B. A, B.

By the Court: Are you sure of that?

By the Witness: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Is that what they call a recap sheet?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, that is what it is, Judge, only it is not a recap sheet, 63-B.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is that record 63-B? What does that purport to be, Mr. Ericson?

2757 By the Court: Now he said that was in his handwriting?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: All right.

By the Witness: Well, it is where shipments were made on particular dates.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Shipments made—

A. I can't—the top ones I have written where they have gone to, but the lower ones I couldn't tell you where they went to.

Q. Are those records of a shipment of merchandise, or is that a record of shipment of merchandise sold to Mr. Lubben or the General Confections or Eatsum?

A. The top ones are shipments that were shipped to, well, in Chicago. I don't know what car. The others—William Barron, I believe he was out on the coast.

Q. Do you know—

A. The other ones I can't tell you where they went to.

Q. Do you know who purchased those shipments?

A. Do I know who purchased them?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

2758 Q. Do you know whether or not that is a record of shipments made or sold—not sent to, but sold to Mr. Lubben or Eatsum or General Confections?

A. I cannot answer that question.

Q. Were you instructed to keep such a record, the record you have there, 63-B?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I will object to the form of the question. It does not appear anywhere that it was a record that was kept and the circumstances have not appeared either.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley: He says it is in his handwriting.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You may answer.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. Well, I believe this record was kept from the notes of shipments made and cars, yes.

Q. The record of the notes of shipments made?

A. Notes I kept. In other words, I kept a record of what went into the cars or what went on the bills of lading.

2759 Q. Was it your normal practice to keep such records?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever keep any other record than the one you have in your hand, 63-B?

A. You mean, in addition to this on the same items?

Q. Yes.

A. I presume I must have to get this information from.

Q. Now the other record that you are referring to, did it have the same information that appears on Exhibit 63-B?

A. It may have been on one sheet or it may have been a combination of notes.

Q. Would it have had more information than appears on 63-B?

A. No, sir, except as to perhaps car number. It went in a car.

Q. Would it have had any additional cars or shipments than appear on 63-B?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the purpose of the record that you have in your hand?

A. The purpose of this record?

2760 Q. Yes.

A. Well, this record was made up and actually, I don't remember what the purpose was.

2761 Q. You just kept it but you don't know why?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to cross examining the witness.

By Mr. Lockley: I am not cross examining him. I am asking him.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you have any recollection as to why you kept it?

A. I presume I kept it due to the fact that there was no shipping ticket made on the shipment.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, when you stand there I don't hear and I am sure the jury can't hear either. We will have to ask to have that answer read.

(Answer read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You said you kept another record besides that one?

A. I kept—I probably—I had to take this from something, and I probably took it from a record. Whether or not it was a complete record on one sheet or whether it was a combination of records which the shipping de-2762 department used for shipping the stuff out—it would be one or the other.

Q. So I understand you had an original record of some sort, is that correct, from which this Exhibit 63-B is a transcript of some portion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, do you recall whether you were instructed by anyone to keep such an original record?

A. No, sir, I don't.

Q. Do you recall the occasion for drawing off this portion of it which is shown on Exhibit 63-B?

A. The occasion?

Q. Yes.

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you told by anyone to do that?

A. I presume—

By Mr. McConnell: He said he wasn't instructed. Now he is asking if he wasn't told. It is the same question. I object.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Someone asked me for this so I gave it to them.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Who was the someone?

2763 A. That I couldn't say definitely. I mean I couldn't say who it is without being sure of it.

Q. What is your best recollection?

A. It would be one of the officers of the company. I will answer it that way.

Q. Do you know which one?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever discuss the shipments reflected by these bills of lading with Mr. Lubben?

A. Did I ever discuss them?

Q. Yes.

A. Only in so far as shipping instructions were concerned.

Q. That is to say—

A. Where the shipments were to be made.

Q. That is where they were to go, the shipments?

A. Yes, that is right.

Q. I call your attention to the fact that on Exhibits 148, 146, 149, 147, the shipper is shown as the ABC Candy Shippers. Do you know any such organization?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know how the ABC Candy Shippers came to be named as the shipper on those bills of lading?

2764 A. It was the same. Where it came from, I couldn't say.

Q. Was it put there at your direction?

A. It probably was.

Q. Well, the shipment was being made from the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, was it not?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you recall any reason why the name ABC Manufacturer or ABC Company was put on there instead—

A. No. Only that they didn't want the name Shotwell Manufacturing Company to appear on it.

Q. Who do you mean by "they"?

A. Again I will say the officers of the company.

2765 Q. Did you have a conversation with any of them with respect to that particular matter?

A. Yes, sir.
Q. And who?
A. I couldn't name any specific time. I don't know the exact time or when it happened, whether there was one person or more than one in the room at the time.
Q. Well, what is your best recollection as to when it was and who was present?
A. Well, if I remember correctly, it was Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner's office and Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Huebner and Mr. Lubben were there.
By Mr. Kirby: What is the time of this, now?
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Can you give us the time?
A. The time?
Q. Yes, about the time of the year.
A. I can't tell you that.
Q. Can you give us the year?
A. It is probably 1946.
Q. And—
A. At the time of the shipments.
2766 Q. Do you know whether it was winter, spring, summer or fall?
A. No, sir, I don't.
Q. Would it be about the date of those shipments? Does that help you refresh your recollection?
A. It would be, yes.
By Mr. O'Brien: What date? What date is that?
By the Witness: The early part of March.
By Mr. O'Brien: You have got dates all the way from March to August, haven't you?
By the Witness: Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Was it some time between March and August?
A. No. It would probably be prior. It would be the early part of March.
Q. The early part of March, all right. Now, what happened at that meeting? What was said?
A. I couldn't tell you.
By Mr. Kirby: Does he have a definite knowledge of who was there?
By Mr. Lockley: He said it already.
By Mr. Kirby: I am not clear, if your Honor
2767 please. Does he have a definite knowledge of who was there?

By Mr. Lockley: He already testified it was Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Huebner, and Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Kirby: I am not sure on it. I would like the witness queried, if he has a definite knowledge of who was there.

Do you have a definite knowledge of who was there?

By the Witness: No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is that your best recollection?

A. That is my best recollection.

By the Court: He said it was his best recollection. He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you tell us what happened at that time?

By the Court: State again whom you stated was there.

By the Witness: Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Huebner, and Mr. Lubben.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And I presume yourself?

A. That is right.

2768 Q. Now what happened?

A. I can't remember that far back, just what transpired at this gathering or meeting.

Q. Do you remember the meeting? Do you recall, did the conversation have anything to do with the particular shipments?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to counsel leading the witness.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I presume when—there I am using the word "presume" again. Yes, evidently the name of the shipper or the name of the shipper or not using the Shotwell Manufacturing Company name at that time came up, yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. It is your recollection at that time you were instructed to use the name ABC Company?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that your best recollection as to what was said?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you recall any other conversation at that time?

2769 A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall any other conversations with any one of the defendants regarding these shipments other than you have testified to?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. You may cross examine.

2770 Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

May I see that exhibit, 63-B, please?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. This 63-B, that is the document that is in your handwriting?

A. That is right.

Q. Is that connected with the unbilled shipments or not, or don't you know?

A. The only ones I can match them with are those. I believe the top two on which there are bills of lading.

Q. But are these—are you saying that these are unbilled shipments, Mr. Ericson?

A. No, I don't say that. I don't know anything about unbilled shipments.

Q. So far as you know, these shipments were covered with regular invoices?

A. They could have been later, yes, sir. They weren't at the time shipment was made.

Q. Well, do you know what these particular shipments are? That is the question. Or don't you know?

A. Do I know what they are?

2771 Q. Yes, whether they are covered by one invoice or another?

A. I couldn't tell you.

Q. Well, it would take some time to check through the different invoices. I don't think we could do that at this hour. Perhaps we could do that during the recess.

Perhaps we should do that during the recess, your Honor.

By the Court: I suppose that you are suggesting that we adjourn?

By Mr. Kirby: That is right. We wasted a lot of time while—a while ago around here, looking for papers, so I think that would be the best thing to do.

By the Court: I don't think the jury would have any objection to that, and I don't suppose I would have any objection.

We will be at recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury, as well as the Judge, file out?

2772 This Honorable Court will now recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause until the following day, being Wednesday September 30, 1953; at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

2773 (Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

Chicago, Illinois,
Wednesday, September 30, 1953,
10:00 o'clock A. M.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America vs. Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al. Case on trial.

By the Court: Mr. Ericson, I think you were on the 2774 stand.

MARTIN A. ERICSON, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and testified further as follows:

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. McConnell.

Q. Mr. Ericson, there was some talk here last night about lawyers talking to witnesses. Have you ever met me before in your life?

A. No, sir.

Q. We have never even been formally introduced, have we?

A. No.

Q. Now, you were testifying about conversations, or meetings, between people out at Shotwell back in 1946. Do you have a recollection of events back that far?

A. In a casual sort of way, yes. Meetings we had quite often.

Q. In a casual sort of way?

A. What I meant to say, we had meetings quite 2775 often so far as plant operation is concerned.

Q. Well, there was nothing unusual about having meetings as to your plant operation, was there?

A No, sir.

Q. And in meetings I suppose you met with the people who were running the business at that time?

A. That's correct.

Q. And how many meetings did you have?

A. The number of meetings?

Q. Yes.

A. I couldn't answer that question.

Q. How do you distinguish any particular meeting?

A. Only by reference to some particular thing, that is all.

Q. By reference to documents?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Well, you were referred to one document here which appears to be in your handwriting, which is Government's Exhibit 63-B. Now, is that the document you used to refresh your recollection, or to fix a meeting in the executive offices in which you thought probably some of the officers were there?

A. I don't believe so, no.

2776 Q. Well, you were asked about that document, weren't you?

A. Yes, sir.

2777 Q. Have you been asked about that document by Government counsel since you left the court room?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you had any talk with Mr. Lockley since you left the court room—

A. No, sir.

Q. —yesterday?

A. No, sir.

Q. When is the last time you talked to Mr. Lockley?
A. I believe it was a week ago Tuesday.
Q. He went over this matter with you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you tell him then that you couldn't identify people who were in conferences back that far?
A. I told him the same as I said in court yesterday, that I assume that—or that it would be the people that I mentioned, that is, the executives of the company.
Q. You told him that was just an assumption of yours?
A. That would be my recollection, yes.
Q. Then did he try to get you to fix it more—
By Mr. Lockley: Just a minute, counsel. There has been no—
By the Court: I don't think there is any occasion
2778 for that question.
By Mr. McConnell: I want to know how he got from an assumption down to a statement.
By the Court: I don't know that it appears that he got from an assumption to a statement.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. Is your testimony still in this case that all you are relying on is an assumption that somebody must have been present?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. His testimony is not that. It is that he is relying on his recollection.
By Mr. McConnell: This is cross examination. I am asking him now.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. In so far as this paper is concerned, as I said before, no, but in so far as the bills of lading are concerned, yes.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. So that the bills of lading which do have so-called unbilled shipments, your testimony as to whom you talked to is just whom you assume you must have talked to, is 2779 that correct?
A. That is correct.
Q. And you have no independent recollection now of meeting and seeing and talking to those men, have you?
A. Of any one individual thing?
Q. Yes.
A. No.

Q. Now, that document that you have in your hand has nothing to do with unbilled shipments, does it?

A. That I can't answer.

Q. Well, you were asked on cross examination here:

"Q. So far as you know these shipments were covered with regular invoices?

"A. They could have been later; yes, sir. They weren't at the time shipment was made."

Did you make that statement yesterday?

A. I believe so.

2780 By Mr. McConnell: What is our next number?

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. McConnell, all of those exhibits are already Government's exhibits.

By Mr. McConnell: They are already in evidence?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, they are. They are in by stipulation.

By Mr. McConnell: Pardon me.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 57, 58, 59, 60, and 62, and ask you if you will look at these documents and tell me whether or not they represent the invoices of Shotwell Manufacturing Company covering the items that are on that written memorandum which you have in your hand, Government's Exhibit 63-B?

A. Yes, sir; they do.

Q. Now, every single one of those shipments that is on your memorandum was billed on regular invoice and the check shows that Shotwell received the money for them, isn't that so?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And received the money by check?

2781 A. According to that; yes, sir.

Q. Now, Harold Sullivan is a lawyer, isn't he; you know he is a lawyer?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he is a Master in Chancery; do you know that?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And he wasn't anybody that was running that plant out there, was he, so far as shipping, and so forth is concerned?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: No questions.

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, any redirect?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien I think has a turn yet.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Ericson, you were just shown Government's Exhibits 57-A, 58-A, 60-A, and B, and 62-A, and you said that those invoices agreed with the entries contained on this sheet in your handwriting, 63-B; is that correct?

A. That is correct, yes, sir.

2782 Q. Now, I show you Exhibit Nos. 146, 147, 148, 149, 151, 152, and 155, which are the bills of lading. Is there any relationship between those bills of lading and those invoices, or that exhibit—or Exhibit 63-B?

By Mr. Kirby: Those are the so-called unbilled bills of lading?

By Mr. Lockley: Those are the so-called unbilled shipments, the bills of lading.

By the Court: If you stand there, we will never hear him.

By the Witness: One of the shipments—one of the bills of lading covers a shipment and whether or not this particular invoice covers part of this shipment, I don't know. I can't say directly.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is the date on the bill of lading?

A. May 22.

By the Court: Speak up, please.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And what is the date on the invoice?

A. October 20.

Q. Would a shipment be made on May 22nd, and 2783 an invoice on October 20th?

A. Shouldn't be; no, sir. These are the same figures, but your dating is different on this, too.

Q. All right. And are you able to state whether there is any relationship between those invoice copies you have, and those bills of lading?

A. No, sir.

Q. No, sir, what? There is no relationship?

A. There is no relationship, as far as I can see.

Q. Do you know what Mr. Sullivan's official position was at the Shotwell plant during 1945?

A. 1945, I believe he was vice president.

Q. And in 1946?
A. The same thing, I believe.
Q. He was vice president?
A. I believe so.
Q. Executive vice president?
A. That is correct.
Q. Do you know what his duties were?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you see him at the plant?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you ever have any conversations with him
2784 relative to the operation of the business?
A. I'd say no.
By Mr. Lockley: That is all, Mr. Ericson.

2785 Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. You have examined these bills of lading and the invoices, haven't you?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. They are not even in the same years, are they?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. McConnell: That's all.
By Mr. Lockley: That's all, Mr. Ericson.
(Witness excused.)

LEON BUSBY, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Will you give your name, Mr. Busby?
A. Leon Busby.
Q. Where do you live?
A. 349 Ridge Road, Kenilworth, Illinois.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. Certified public accountant.
Q. You are a certified public accountant and have 2786 you ever been employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in your professional position?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. When did that employment originate?
A. Shortly after 1942.

Q. 1942, and are you still employed by them?
A. Yes.
Q. What were your duties in the years 1945 and 1946 in connection with your employment with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?
A. My firm prepared audits for the company. They prepared from these audits corporate tax returns, installed accounting systems, prepared budgets and other sundry details that accountants are called upon to do as public contractors.
Q. Did you keep the books for the corporation?
A. No.
Q. From what information did you prepare the returns in 1945 and 1946?
A. They were prepared from the books of account of the company.
Q. Which were kept by the employees of the company?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Did you audit those books of account?
2787 A. Yes, we audited them.
Q. What was the extent of your audit?
A. Semi detailed audit, what we called a spot check audit, selecting various details at random, verifying these details and checking them into control accounts.
A Juror: We can't hear him.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Will you speak up. You can't be heard at the other end of the jury box.
You say it was a semi check?
A. A semi detailed audit.
Q. And that consisted of spot checking?
A. That is right, selecting various detailed data, verifying this data by comparing it with the ledger accounts and other information that we thought was necessary.
2788 Q. As a part of your detail, did you circularize the accounts receivable customers?
A. Whenever we thought it was necessary. We didn't do it every year—from time to time, we did.
Q. Did you do it in 1945 and 1946?
A. I don't recall.
Q. I show you the 1945 and 1946 returns, being Government's Exhibits 1 and 1-A, 2 and 3, and ask you if your signature appears thereon?

A. The corporation income tax return as amended for 1946 was signed by one of the men from our firm but personally, I did not sign it.

Q. That was prepared by your firm, though?

A. That is correct. We are responsible for that.

Q. And was it prepared under your direction and supervision?

A. Yes. The original corporation income tax return for 1946 is signed by me.

Q. I believe that is Government's Exhibit 2. That is correct.

A. The corporation excess profits tax return for the year 1945 was signed by me.

The corporation income tax return for 1945 was 2789 signed by me.

Q. Do you know if the books and records of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company disclosed at that time any receipts in excess of the amounts recorded on the invoices themselves?

A. No, I do not know.

Q. Were you informed at the time you prepared the 1945 return that any such receipts had been received by the corporation?

A. In a general way we were informed that none had been received.

Q. In a general way you were informed that none had been received?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you make inquiry?

A. That is what I mean when I say "in a general way." I made inquiry.

Q. And from whom?

A. I presume the inquiry was directed to Mr. Graflund. We obtained general letters and the signatures on the letters probably will indicate to whom the inquiry was directed.

By Mr. McConnell: I object. If there are letters, the letters would be the best evidence.

2790 By the Court: Yes. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And in 1946, do you know if the books and records disclose the receipt of any amounts in excess of those shown on the invoices themselves?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do the books and records disclose the receipt of any amounts for sales on which no invoices had been issued?

A. I didn't know at that time.

Q. You say that you inquired generally from the corporation.

By Mr. Lockley: Would you please mark these Government's Exhibits 213 for identification and 214 for identification.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 213 and 214 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits Nos. 213 and 214 for identification, and ask you if you have seen those before?

A. Yes, I have.

2791 Q. Were those letters which were received by you in your course of business as a certified public accountant?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom were they received?

A. There are two signatures here, one dated February 8, 1946, which pertains to the 1945 audit, which was signed—

Q. Just tell us, were they received? I want to know, were they received from Shotwell Manufacturing corporation?

A. Yes, they were received from these people.

Q. And did they become a part of your regular files and work papers in connection with your employment with that firm?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibits 213 and 214 in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: I object. They are not competent as to the defendant Sullivan.

By Mr. McConnell: I have no objection on behalf of the corporation.

By the Court: The exhibits may be received.

2792 (Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 213 and 214.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Busby, I show you Government's Exhibits 213 and 214, directing your attention first to the date February 8, 1946, and I ask you from whom was that received? That is, Exhibit 213.

A. I would say it was received from the company.

Q. And who signed it?

A. Howard Roeser, Frank J. Huebner.

Q. And what is Mr. Huebner's title on that?

A. Vice president.

Q. Vice President. Does that refresh your recollection as to whether you circularized the accounts receivable outstanding for the corporation in preparation of that, the 1945 return?

A. From the statement here, we did not circularize them at the end of the year, December 31, 1945.

Q. And at whose request was that?

A. Well, this is a standard circular letter. In most instances it is prepared by our accountants.

Q. It was signed by the officers of the corporation?

A. That is correct. In part, it is designed to protect 2793 us in a limited investigation. The volume of work is too great to be covered in the time limit.

Q. I also call your attention to the last paragraph, and I ask if you will read that, please?

By Mr. McConnell: Is this in evidence? Is this the one you offered?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, I offered both.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you please read it out loud?

A. "Insofar as we are able to determine, we certify that the company is not contingently liable under any purchase or sales contracts at the balance sheet date and that we have abided by all regulations of the Office of Price Administration, War Labor Board, Salary Stabilization Act of 1942, State Labor Laws, and other Governmental restrictions".

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit 214, and ask if that is a letter of the same nature as Government's Exhibit 213?

A. Yes.

Q. Does it relate to the preparation of the tax return for the year 1946?

A. It relates to the preparation of our audit.

2794 Q. Of your audit, all right.

And does that likewise contain a statement that The

Shotwell Manufacturing Company complied with all regulations of the Office of Price Administration during the year 1946?

A. Yes, it does.

Q. Now, Mr. Busby, who signed that letter, Government's Exhibit 214?

A. H. S. Graflund, Frank J. Huebner.

2795 Q. Mr. Huebner signed both, is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now do the income tax returns prepared by you in 1945 or for 1945 and 1946 contain any information not taken off of the books of account of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Not to my knowledge..

Q. Were you at any time during the preparation of those returns advised of the existence of a memoranda record of cash received and cash paid out?

A. No.

Q. Did you know of the existence at that time of a vault with currency in the premises of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No.

Q. Did you know that there was currency in a vault at the bank rented by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. No.

Q. During 1946, were you advised by anyone that there were sales of merchandise by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for which no invoices were rendered?

2796 A. No.

Q. In 1948, did you make a trip to New Jersey on behalf of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes.

Q. About when was that?

A. January 7, 1948.

Q. January 7th?

A. We left here on the 7th.

Q. You left on the 7th. Who accompanied you?

A. Mr. Graflund.

Q. Mr. Graflund. And where did you go?

A. Hillsdale, New Jersey, to the plant of the General Confections Company.

Q. That is Mr. Lubben's plant?

A. Mr. Lubben's plant.

Q. What was the purpose of that visit?

A. To determine whether or not the General Confections Company was in any financial condition that would justify a loan by Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Do you know the amount of the loan?

A. $50,000.00.

Q. And did you examine the books and records of General Confections at that time?

2797 A. In a cursory way. We just looked them over for a couple of days.

Q. Did you return then to Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. What day was it that you arrived back in Chicago?

A. January 10th of 1948.

Q. Did you at that time have a meeting with any of the defendants?

A. The following day.

Q. The following day, Sunday?

A. Sunday.

Q. Who was present?

A. Mr. Cain at first, and then I think Mr. Sullivan came in after the meeting started.

Q. Anyone other than yourself, Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan?

A. No.

Q. Where was it?

A. At Mr. Cain's home.

Q. Where is Mr. Cain's home?

A. Wilmette, Mohawk Road. I don't remember the number—1100 something.

Q. Will you keep your voice up, Mr. Busby. Can 2798 you fix the approximate date of the meeting?

A. At Mr. Cain's home?

Q. Yes.

A. It was the 11th of January, 1948.

Q. All right. Will you tell us what happened at that time? What was said?

A. I told Mr. Cain that I was there for the purpose of reporting what I found at the General Confections Company, in particular with respect to whether or not he should make the loan, and I advised him that the company wasn't financially sound and that he shouldn't make the loan. And later, I told him that one reason for the company being in a bad financial condition appeared to be from some tax difficulty that they were in and that Mr. Graflund had told me about these difficulties.

2799 Q. What do you mean by "these difficulties"?

A. That the General Confections Company had been involved in receiving over-ceiling prices in the black market from the sale of candy.

Further, that a party to this transaction had been reported by Mr. Graflund to be of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and that I thought that something should be done about it.

Mr. Cain told me that he didn't know why anything should be done about it. He knew about the situation, because if money had been paid out from Shotwell, so far as it had been concerned, it hadn't netted any gain from the transaction.

Q. Did he say that the Shotwell Manufacturing Company had received such funds?

A. Yes. He said that they had received it.

Q. At what point in the conversation was that statement made?

A. Well, I can't pinpoint any—

Q. Was it—

A. It was after talking about the financial situation. In other words, I disposed of the financial situation when I first went in and then this came up following that.

2800 Q. You spoke of the financial situation first, that is, the stability of the General Confections?

A. That is correct.

Q. And Mr. Sullivan, did he come in while you were talking about the financial situation?

A. Yes, I think he was there.

Q. He was there then, was he, at the time?

A. I think he came in. I don't know exactly what point he came in.

Q. Was he there at the time Mr. Cain stated that the Shotwell Manufacturing Company had received payments? What did he call them?

By Mr. McConnell: Let us have one question at a time. You have two of them.

By Mr. Lockley: I will ask him first—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. How did Mr. Cain refer to the payments that had been received?

A. Over-ceiling prices.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, can't we have—wait a minute. I object to this. He led these other witnesses all yesterday afternoon. We are entitled to have conversations and we are entitled to first find out 2801 what the witness can tell of the conversation without prompting and leading by counsel. I object to the leading question.

By the Court: The answer may stand.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you continue with the conversation, Mr. Busby?

A. Mr. Cain referred to them as over-ceiling prices.

Q. And then was there any further conversation after that?

A. Why, yes. I told him that I thought the company should file amended returns to disclose these over-ceiling prices and at least get on record.

Q. Are you speaking of amended income tax returns?

A. Yes, income tax returns.

Q. Was any statement made as to the amounts?

A. He said he wouldn't know what amounts were involved, that the company hadn't kept—or anybody hadn't kept any continuing records and that if it could be determined, why, he was quite willing that the amended tax returns be filed because he didn't want to get into any trouble with the government.

He didn't have any idea that he was violating taxes.

2802 Q. Was Mr. Sullivan present at that time?

A. Yes, I think he was there.

Q. He was there, was he, throughout the course of the conversation?

A. Most of it, yes.

Q. Was there any other portion of the conversation that you recall?

A. Why, Mr. Cain wanted to know how to go about filing amended returns and either at that meeting or later, I don't recall, he instructed me to talk to the Internal Revenue Department.

2803 Q. Was it at that meeting—stick to that meeting for a moment.

A. It came up at that meeting, yes.—and find out, get their instructions as to what would be done with respect to clearing up the matter.

Q. And was that the end of your meeting?

A. Well, there was some—he asked me whether we thought we could file amended returns without any repercussion from the Department if it was found out that the company was in violation, and I told him I thought it could be, because the Department had—the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue seemed to be carrying on in a drive to have taxpayers make disclosures of delinquent amounts, where they thought there might be taxes due.

By Mr. Lockley: Your witness, Mr. O'Brien.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Up until the time that you went east with Mr. Busby—or rather, Mr. Graflund—you knew nothing about these matters, as I understand it, Mr. Busby?

A. That is correct.

2804 Q. And was it through Mr. Graflund on that trip that you first learned of them?

A. Yes.

Q. Was it on Saturday that you arrived at Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. Or returned to Chicago?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you call Mr. Cain and make an appointment then, or had you made one before?

A. I called him and made an appointment at that time.

Q. For the next day, Sunday?

A. For the next day.

Q. Sunday, at his home?

A. I don't know whether I called him Saturday night or Sunday morning.

Q. Well—

A. But I called him to make the appointment for Sunday at his home.

Q. So that the precise time is not important, but in any event you went out there on Sunday?

A. That is correct.

2805 Q. And when you got through with your report as to the financial condition of General Confections, such as it was, I understand that you then inquired of Mr. Cain as to whether there had been receipts of overages?

A. I told him that Mr. Graflund had reported to me that there had been.

Q. And did you ask him if that was so?

A. And he said there had been some.

Q. Did you ask Mr. Cain why he had not informed you of it?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said that he didn't think it was any part of the accounting matters for the Shotwell, that the reason they hadn't been recorded was to avoid violation of the OPA regulation, and that the receipts had been paid out and therefore resulted in little or no net gain.

Q. Did he say whether they paid out for materials for the company?

A. Yes, he said they had been paid out to get raw materials to keep the company in production.

Q. And was it his position that monies so paid
2806 out would be deducted from receipts?

A. That is correct, yes.

Q. And that it made no difference, tax-wise, whether the "ins" and the "outs" were reported in the return?

A. That is correct.

Q. What, if anything, did you say to him as to whether it would make a difference?

A. I told him that the deductions, according to the regulation, were not permissible, were not being allowed by the Commissioner.

Q. Did that mean that where the company had paid out cash premiums to acquire goods, under the Commissioner's ruling, as you understood it, such pay outs could not be deducted as part of the cost of the goods?

A. At that time, that is my understanding.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what the witness' understanding of the law is, unless he is discussing the actual conversation at the time.

By the Court: I assume so.

By Mr. O'Brien: I took it that this was.

By Mr. O'Brien:

2807 Q. Is it, Mr. Busby,

A. Yes, sir, this is part of the conversation.

Q. That is what you told Mr. Cain?

A. Yes,

Q. What, if any, comment did Mr. Cain make about that, when you informed him of the Commissioner's position?

A. Well, he was surprised at first.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said that if that was the case, he would follow my recommendation, that we go into the Collector's office, and discuss the filing of amended returns.

Q. Did he make any statement or expression as to the fairness of such position?

A. Yes, he said he thought it was utterly unfair, that they had received income and they paid it out, and there was no gain to it. He didn't know why there was any taxable income.

Q. Now, have you exhausted, for the moment, your recollection of that conversation in so far as the returns were concerned?

A. I told him that I didn't know whether or not there would be any taxable income to the corporation. In 2808 the first place, I didn't know whether the receipts belonged to the corporation.

Second, the question of deductions was under contest, and the ultimate outcome of that, I didn't know, but under any circumstances, the information should be cleared up by filing amended returns.

Q. It was your position then that the thing to do was to get in and get it worked out?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you have any conversation with Mr. Cain at the time as to whether there might, or could be, criminal prosecution?

A. Yes, I told him that in case any violations were developed, why, there could be criminal prosecutions, except for the policy of the Bureau on a disclosure matter.

2809 Q. And did you tell him about the policy at that time?

A. I explained to him that the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Commissioner—well, even the Bureau itself, had followed the policy for some time, but particularly in 1945 and '46 and through 1947, as a matter of fact they were making a drive to have people come in and make disclosures, primarily promising them that there would be no criminal prosecution, in case they did so in time.

Q. And Mr. Cain, did he ask you to go to some agent of the Bureau and inquire about it?

A. Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me a moment, your Honor. That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: I want to ask him a few questions.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. I think Mr. Lockley asked you about whether Mr. Cain admitted receipts of money in this conversation. Now, prior to this conversation you talked to Mr. Graflund, 2810 as I understand it?

A. That's correct.

Q. And the receipts that he was referring to were the receipts that were between a period of, say, October and July, were they not?

By Mr. Lockley: I don't recall any such testimony, Counsel.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, what receipts was Graflund talking about?

A. Well, Graflund was talking about primarily the receipts of General Confections Company, price over ceiling—over-ceiling prices. And the extent of his statement was that Shotwell was involved in the matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: He is talking about General Confections receipts.

By the Witness:

A. In other words, Graflund was telling me about the receipts of General Confections Company from over-ceiling prices.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Well, in this conversation that you had at Mr. Cain's house, Mr. Cain didn't admit to you that he had received $500,000.00?

A. Why, no, he didn't have any idea what the amount was.

2811 Q. And he didn't tell you any amount either, did he?

A. No, he didn't tell me any amount.

Q. And he said he didn't know what the amount was, is that it?

A. That's right.

Q. Well, now, I think you told him in that conversation that according to the regulations at that time, as you understood them and knew them, there would be no deduction for payments out as against payments in, in black marketing transactions.

A. That's correct.

Q. And that regulation was changed later on, was it not?

A. That's right.

Q. So that they did become deductible?
A. They are deductible at this time, since 1948.
By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Well, I had exhausted your recollection, Mr. Busby, but I am glad to hear that you remembered some more of it on cross examination.
2812 By Mr. McConnell: I object to that comment, to his own witness. This is his witness and he is commenting now on—
By the Court: What do you want me to do about it?
By Mr. McConnell: I move to strike it.
By the Court: It may be stricken.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You referred to the voluntary disclosure policy that you discussed with Mr. Cain, so I understand that you told him that if the taxpayer came in and made a disclosure to the Bureau, why, then everything would be forgiven; is that the substance of it?
A. If they made the disclosure within the time the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Commissioner—
Q. Now, do you know what the policy of the Bureau of Internal Revenue was with respect to such disclosures if an agent had already begun an investigation before the taxpayer came in?
A. Yes, I know.
By Mr. O'Brien: I object to the form of the question.
By the Court: I think so. We are going into some 2813 legal questions which I don't believe is a part of the examination of this witness.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you have any such discussion with Mr. Cain as to whether such—on that matter?
A. Yes, that point was discussed.
Q. And what did you tell him?
A. I told him that the disclosure had to be timely.
Q. And what do you mean by timely?
A. Before—
By Mr. O'Brien: I object again, your Honor. It is immaterial as far as this examination is concerned.
By the Court: Well, he may state his conversation with Mr. Cain in that regard.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you explain to Mr. Cain what you meant by timely?

A. Yes, I meant—I told him that the disclosure had to be made before an agent was assigned to the case to make an investigation.

2814 By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Busby. That is all.

By Mr. McConnell: Wait a minute. I want to ask this man one more question.

Recross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. This Company's books were kept on an accrual basis, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you said you prepared—or your firm prepared the income tax return from the books?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you recall that there was a balance due Shotwell from General Confections in 1946, at the end of the tax year '46, of some $47,000 odd dollars?

A. No, I wouldn't recall that.

Q. Well, let me call your attention to these Government exhibits, 200, 200-A, 200-B, and 200-C, which purport to be the account with General Confections, and Eatsum, and calling your attention to the end of the year 1946, can you tell us what those documents show was the balance 2815 due and owing; that is, at the end of the year 1946?

A. There appears to be a balance due of $45,015.72, on the General Confections, Inc.

Q. That is a balance due Shotwell?

A. Due to Shotwell.

Q. Now, those books were being kept on an accrual basis, and you showed that figure upon which to pay income tax, regardless of whether or not Shotwell actually received the money, did you not?

A. That's correct. I would expect that, yes.

Q. So that Shotwell did pay income tax, according to your return, on that $45,000, even though they hadn't received it, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, it wouldn't make a bit of difference in your return, would it, if Shotwell had received $45,000, or that amount of money from General Confections, which was not shown on the books?

A. It wouldn't make any difference from an income position.

Q. From the tax liability standpoint?

A. From the tax liability standpoint, no.

Q. And it wouldn't make a bit of difference from 2816 the tax liability standpoint whether or not that amount was paid in some later year, would it?

A. No, sir; it would not.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is, for the year '46, it would make no difference.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. For the year '46, it wouldn't make any difference in the tax liability—

A. That is correct.

Q. —whether or not it was paid in '47, or '48, would it?

A. It wouldn't make any difference, tax-wise.

Q. Tax-wise?

A. That is correct. No, it wouldn't make any difference.

2817 Q. Now, you were asked about what you didn't know, as well as what you did know. You haven't been in the court room during the trial of this case, you have been excluded under the rule?

A. Correct. I haven't been.

Q. Now, there has been some testimony here by Mr. Lubben that he made payments from time to time to Mr. Huebner, and that Mr. Heubner divided the money up into three piles, one of which he labeled his own, and one of which he labeled Mr. Sullivan's and one of which he labeled Mr. Cain's, which he claimed was overages on Shotwell candies.

You didn't know anything about that, did you?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Nobody told you anything about that?

A. Never heard of it.

Q. Well, if somebody had told you that, and that had been the fact, would it have made any difference in your tax return?

By Mr. Lockley: I will object to that as a conclusion.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
2818 By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Busby, will you look at these ledger sheets again, 200-A, B and C, and tell me if the balance at the end of 1946 was subsequently paid?

A. Yes, the account appears to be satisfied, either by cash entries or journal entries, or vouchers.

Q. And in what year was it subsequently paid?

By Mr. O'Brien: We again note an objection, your Honor, since I think it will show that it is outside the indictment period.

By the Court: You went into it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I went into '46.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may answer, the Judge said.

By the Witness:

A. It appears to be paid—it was paid in 1947 and the first part of 1948.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And was that a part of the taxable income of 2819 the corporation in 1947 and 1948?

By Mr. OBrien: I make the same objection.

By the Witness:

A. I can't answer that from here. I would say yes, from the looks of this.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection.

By the Witness:

A. It looks like it.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. You said, as I recall, on cross examination—you stated that this was taxable in the year of accrual?

A. That's right.

Q. Would it also be taxable in the year in which payment was received?

A. No.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the last question and answer?

(Record read.)

By Mr. McConnell: I have no more questions.
2820 By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Busby.
(Witness excused.)
By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Mammel.

2821 CHARLES J. MAMMEL, a witness herein called on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Mammel, what is your full name?
A. Charles J. Mammel.
Q. And where do you live?
A. 7639 Colfax.
Q. And what is your occupation?
A. United States Internal Revenue agent.
Q. And how long have you been so employed?
A. Thirty-three years and eight months.
Q. And are you a certified public accountant?
A. I am.
Q. And will you please tell us what is your education.
A. My education, after the grade schools, was mostly in night schools from 1905 to 1926. I received sixteen high school credits in attendance at Y.M.C.A. and the Chicago Preparatory School.

I studied bookkeeping, accounting, economics, busi-
2822 ness, commercial and real estate law at the Bryant Stratton Business College, the Y.M.C.A. College, the Walton School of Commerce.

I attended the Armour Institute of Technology where I studied chemistry and engineering—chemistry and electricity, which I think they designated as chemical engineering and electrical engineering, and higher mathematics through calculus.

I had courses in the Treasury Department, mainly on consolidated income tax and excess profits tax and on evidence.

Q. And as a part of your duties in the Bureau of Internal Revenue are you required to examine income tax returns and audit books?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you compute taxes?
A. Yes.

Q. Determine net income?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, as part of your official duties were you assigned to examine the returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the years 1945 and 1946?

A. Yes, sir.

2823 Q. Did you compare the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company with the income tax and excess profits tax returns for those years?

A. I did.

Q. Were the income tax returns and the records in agreement?

A. They were.

Q. Now, have you been present in the court room throughout the course of this trial?

A. I have.

Q. Have you heard all the testimony?

A. I have.

Q. And have you examined all of the exhibits in evidence?

A. I have.

Q. Now, have you computed from the exhibits in evidence and the testimony you have heard what was the amount of premium payments made during 1945 by the Eatsum Food Products Company, sole proprietorship and partnership, to The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I have.

Q. And what was that amount?

A. One hundred—

2824 By Mr. Kirby: I object to that on the grounds that it is based upon an assumption that the matters are facts. It is not a hypothetical question, and it is not in the form which I assume is required. It is a flat statement, supposedly, of the fact, which I don't understand an expert is permitted to give. He can make certain assumptions, certain hypothetical assumptions, but I don't believe he can go beyond that. This does go beyond it and I object to it.

By the Court: You mean that counsel should preface his statement by stating to the witness that assuming that the testimony is true, that upon that assumption whether or not he is able to state the amount of the so-called premium payments, is that what you have in mind?

By Mr. Kirby: That is one of the things. He certainly should do that.

And then, of course, since there is some contradictory testimony in evidence we should know which of the testimony he is assuming is true and which he is assuming is false.

2825 By the Court: Well, I think we should know just what testimony he is taking into consideration when he gives his summary as to the amount of so-called over ceiling payments.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Mammel, do you have work sheets that you have prepared from the exhibits and testimony?

A. I have.

By the Court: Of course, it is understood in making his statement that he is proceeding on the assumption that it is testimony which he relies on that it is true.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I have never heard of a witness, an expert, testifying from contradictory testimony.

Now, ordinarily there is no dispute in the evidence in one side of the case, but here we have Government witnesses who are contradicting each other on payments which were made.

By the Court: Well, let's find out what testimony he is taking into consideration.

By Mr. Lockley:

2826 Q. With respect to the year 1945, Mr. Mammel, will you tell us the exhibits that you examined, and the testimony that you took into consideration in determining the receipts by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in excess of the amounts shown on the Shotwell records?

A. Well, I took in Exhibits 27, 28, 40, 40-B—

By the Court: 40 what?

By the Witness: 40-B and 40-D, for Dan.

By Mr. O'Brien: B for boy?

By the Witness: D for Dan.

By the Witness:

A. —43, 45, 48, 55.

And in the partnership an amount of $5,542.00 and $30,000.00—

By the Court: Wait a minute, now.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Let's see, that is Exhibit 55-A, B, and C, I believe, Mr. Mammel? Or—

A. I am not sure what that is, I didn't put that down. And 63 for the thirty-six thousand and something. That makes a total of—

By the Court: Wait a minute now. I am not fol-
2827 lowing you. You ended with Exhibit 55, and then you made some statement regarding figures. What other exhibits are you taking into consideration?

By the Witness: And 63.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. 63-A is the $30,000.

A. Is that it, 63-A?

By Mr. O'Brien: After Exhibit 55, the only exhibits mentioned are 63 and 63-A, is that correct?

By the Witness: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: And 55-A, B, and C.

By Mr. O'Brien: Also 55-A, B, and C. Mr. Mammel didn't mention them, but Mr. Lockley says they are in there.

By the Court: 55-A, B, and C.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. A, B, and C with respect to $5,542.00?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that on the ground that there was contradictory testimony in the record specifically as to a number of those exhibits.

2828 By the Court: Let's get it straight, so that I know what exhibits you are talking about. You are mentioning one and then Mr. Mammel doesn't mention it, and I am not clear. Will you go over it again?

2829 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. There is Exhibit 55, you said, Mr. Mammel, for $20,000.00.

A. Yes, with the $20,000.00—

By the Court: Let's forget the amounts. Let's get the exhibits, then you can talk about amounts.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Then 55-A, B and C?

A. That's right.

Q. And the No. 63?

A. Yes.

Q. Then 63-A?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now, what was the amount you arrived at?

A. $177,146.23.

By Mr. Kirby: The Court will recall that I had a pending objection which was based upon the fact that there is contradiction in the Government's evidence as to the payments mentioned in those exhibits, and I object to the use of such a summary prepared from contradictory evidence.

By the Court: Well, I don't know what contra-2830 dictory evidence you are now referring to.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, for example, there is a $30,000.00 payment there which supposedly came out of a corn box, and we produced the corn box sheets, and we asked him to find where he got the thirty thousand and he couldn't. That is one.

By Mr. McConnell: I can think of another.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't believe you will find that is in evidence.

By Mr. McConnell: The forty-nine thousand in '46 which the Government's own witness, Graflund, denied ever receiving, when Mr. Lubben said he paid it to him.

By the Court: We are talking about '45 now. Let's not get beyond the year the witness is talking about.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, on '45 there was a payment of $10,000.00 mentioned by Mr. Heitmann. Have you got that included in there?

By the Witness: Well, all of these here were testified to by Lubben as having been paid.

2831 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Does that include a $10,000.00 payment by Mr. Heitmann?

A. It does.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to,—I point out, I shouldn't object to it, I mentioned it before—but I point out that that item, allegedly paid by Heitmann in 1945, is beyond the Government's bill of particulars in relation to their proof of '45 payments and also is contrary to the affidavit in the files here.

By the Witness: I beg your pardon. The Heitmann payment was in '46.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, as to the amount, your Honor, and the time, Mr. Heitmann said he paid the money in 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: That's true.

By the Court: Now, Mr. McConnell, will you please let Mr. O'Brien talk.

By Mr. McConnell: I haven't said a word.

By Mr. Kirby: That's right. It is my fault, not Mr. McConnell's.

By the Court: I am sorry. Mr. Kirby.

2832 By Mr. Kirby: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Unquestionably Mr. Heitmann's testimony is 1945. And these are merely illustrative to show your Honor that it is true that the items are in controversy.

By the Court: Well, the testimony may stand, subject to the objection, and subject to cross examination.

I think we will take our morning recess now. We will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

2833 By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Mammel, will you speak a little more slowly when you are giving numbers and will you also give the numbers in dollars and cents?

A. Do you want both?

Q. Clearing up the matter of the $10,000.00 payment in 1945 that Mr. O'Brien was talking about, have you included as an additional amount the $10,000.00 payment from Mr. Heitmann in your computation for 1945?

A. I have not.

Q. You have not?

A. No.

By Mr. McConnell: What do you mean additional? There is only one.

By the Witness: There was none in 1945.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Is the $10,000.00 payment from Mr. Heitmann included in your computation for 1948?

A. No.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, if I may be indulged—I examined Mr. Heitmann particularly about 2834 that and I read to him from the transcript of his deposition in which he had said at one time the payment was made in December of 1946 and I asked him if that was so and he said it was not so. He insisted it was made in 1945 and I objected to the use of an expert who by himself put this in 1946.

By the Court: We don't know whether it was put in 1946 or not. Let us find out.

By Mr. Kirby: He just said it was put in 1946.

By the Court: We haven't come to 1946. When he makes reference to it, I will hear you. At least, we have determined now that the $10,000.00 payment made by Heitmann is not included in his 1945 computation.

By Mr. McConnell: I object to the whole statement. It is invading the province of the jury.

By the Court: Well, the jury will understand when Mr. Mammel is giving his testimony in summarizing the total amount of the alleged over-ceiling payments or pre-
2835 mium payments to Shotwell, he is assuming to summarize the total amount from certain exhibits and from the testimony given by Lubben and he is assuming that testimony to be true and assuming the verity of the exhibits to which he refers. He has stated that those exhibits and that testimony reflect that $177,046.23 was paid to Shotwell in 1945.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to call to the Court's attention the case of Kirsch vs. United States, Court of Appeals Eighth Circuit in 1949, 174 F. 2d, 595, and I pass up to the Court a book which carries excerpts from it and I ask the Court to be good enough to read the language, particularly starting at the bottom of page 447 of this text, and particularly applicable to our objection here.

Your Honor may lean over and I will point the language that I am thinking of.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Here (indicating), where it refers to contradictory evidence.

2836 By the Court: Well, you can leave that with me, Mr. Kirby, and I will be glad to read it more thoroughly than I can now on the bench, but I will accept the testimony subject to your objection and if later on you want to make a motion to strike, you may do so.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, it isn't clear to me that you had finished your statement to the jury when Mr. Kirby stepped forward with that case. Had you finished your statement?

By the Court: Yes, and if counsel has anything to suggest that I should include in my statement to the jury, I will be glad to hear him.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I would think that in addition to that part of the statement which says that Mr. Mammel is assuming the verity of the exhibits and relying on Mr. Lubben's testimony and assuming it to be true, that it might be proper to point out to the jury that that is merely for the convenience of the Court and the jury 2837 and that the jury are the ultimate judges of the true facts.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: And in no way bound by what is stated.

By the Court: I will be glad to accept the suggestion of Mr. O'Brien, that Mr. Mammel's testimony is merely for the convenience of the Court and the jury and of course, it is for the jury to ultimately say where the truth may be in this case and whether Mr. Lubben has told the truth and whether or not these exhibits have verity. That is a question that the jury will have to determine. That is your function.

Mr. Mammel is merely offering his testimony, as I understand it, for the convenience of the Court and the jury so that we may be able to have an aid and assistance in obtaining the alleged net results as reflected by the exhibits and by this testimony as to the total amount of the alleged payments.

You may proceed.

2838 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Now, with respect to the year 1945, Mr. Mammel, assuming that your computation was correct as to the amount of the overages as just testified by you, what was the amount of the net income received by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in that year?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that, if the Court please, on the ground that the hypothetical question which purports to touch on the net income must be complete in itself.

By the Court: Yes. I don't understand that question.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. I will pass on to 1946.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did your examination of the records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company disclose the receipt of this additional amount of $177,146.23, that you have been testifying to?

A. No part of it is on the books of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

2839 Q. And did your examination of the 1945 income and excess profits returns reveal that that money was included in those returns?

A. No part of it is in the 1945 income and excess profits tax returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. All right.

Now, with respect to the year 1946, assuming that the exhibits which are in evidence are true, and that the testimony of Mr. Lubben is also true, will you tell us what exhibits you took into consideration—or did you determine the additional amount received by the Shotwell Company in 1946?

A. I did.

Q. All right. And what exhibits did you take into consideration in making that computation?

A. Do you want the exhibits and amounts?

Q. Just give me the exhibit numbers, I think.

A. Exhibit 73, 92, 93, 13, 94, 95, 96, 97, Mrs. Krasne for $1,450.00.

By the Court: $1,450?

By the Witness: Yes. No exhibit on there. 99, 112, 120, 122, 124, 126, 133, 158, 158-A, 160, and the un-2840 billed shipments, 146, 147, 148, 149, 151, 152, 155.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the amount determined by you?

By Mr. Kirby: I make precisely the same objection that I made earlier, and I could point out the discrepancies in proof, conflcits of the Government's own witnesses in 1946, as had in 1945.

The Court, I am sure, has the objection in mind.

By Mr. McConnell: I also make the same objection. It not only invades the province of the jury, but it invades the province of the Court in determining the matter of law.

The returns showing the receipts of the corporation—that is a matter of law which this witness presumes to determine in this testimony.

By the Court: I will overrule the objections. He may answer, subject to a motion to strike.

By the Witness:

A. In 1946, the overages without the unbilled 2841 shipments were $211,193.19. The unbilled shipments, $65,532.98, or a total of $276,726.17.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. And from your examination of the books and records of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for 1946, did you find any portion of that amount reported?

A. No part of that amount is in the Shotwell books and records.

Q. Was any part of that amount reported in the income tax return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1946?

A. No part of that amount is included in the income tax return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: I now move to strike the testimony of the witness with respect to his total for 1945 and for 1946, on the grounds which we have already assigned.

By Mr. McConnell: I join in that motion, but I would like to be heard at the end of the case, as I can argue on it before your Honor rules on it.

2842 By the Court: Very well. I will defer my ruling until after the examination, if you have any.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have none. I join in the motion, too.

2843 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Mammel, am I correct in believing that in some instances you used—as to an exhibit you referred to a check to cash, some of the exhibits you referred to are checks to cash?

A. I used all the exhibits in evidence.

Q. And some of them are checks to cash?

A. Right.

Q. And in each case the checks to cash—did you assume the cash was handled by Lubben?

A. Well, I took into consideration all the testimony. Some of it was Lubben's and some other people as well. As a matter of fact, I think Lubben testified on most everything.

Q. I am sure he did, Mr. Mammel.

Now, did you find, Mr. Mammel, any receipt from anybody at Shotwell for this money that Lubben testified he gave?

A. I don't quite get that.
Q. Well, you referred to a number of exhibits.
A. Yes.
Q. Now, do those exhibits which you identified by number—did any of them include receipts from any-
2844 body at Shotwell for that money?
A. No.
Q. Now, what was the earliest exhibit you mentioned in 1945?
A. Well, let's see.
By the Court: The number or the date?
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Well, I would like the number of the exhibit.
A. Well, the earliest exhibit is Exhibit 27 and it covered the first overages.
Q. Well, there was—
A. In the amount of $10,849.00.
Q. Did you include that in your total?
A. I did.
Q. Mr. Mammel, there was no such authorization slip for that, was there?
A. Well, I don't recall that. I didn't think it was necessary to look for those.
Q. Well, your have the reputation of being a very careful man for looking for things.
A. There are only a few in the record.
Q. That is what I was getting at. I don't mean to quarrel with you, but there were very few, is that right?
2845 A. I admit that.
Q. One of them that is missing—there isn't any for this check you mentioned in the amount of ten thousand dollars?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Is the next exhibit you talked about Exhibit No. 28?
A. That is right.
Q. That is just a check to cash, isn't it?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. There is no cash authorization slip to support that, is there?
A. I don't know.
Q. Well, could you refer to some of your memoranda to tell me?

A. Yes, I could, but I will have to get it from the tape.

Q. Oh, you are free to do that.

By Mr. Lockley: Well—

By the Court: Well, Mr. Lockley, if you remember, perhaps we can expedite matters and agree with Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Lockley: I think we can agree that there is no cash authorization slip for that payment.

2846 By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Also 27?

By Mr. Kirby: Also 27?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. There is no cash authorization slip for 27.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And there is no recap sheet of any kind with respect to that Exhibit 28, that is that $6,183.00 check, is there?

A. No. You have got a complete set of books on it.

Q. The question with respect to the memoranda though, is that it doesn't exist?

A. No.

Q. I wondered, is there a memo or recap sheet, Mr. Mammel, with respect to the next item that you mentioned, Exhiibt 40?

A. You mean 40-B?

Q. Well, it is in that series.

A. Oh, 40, 40-B and 40-D are all together.

Q. Those have no memo or recap sheets in evidence with respect to them?

A. I don't recall that.

2847 By Mr. Lockley: They do have, Mr. Mammel.

By the Witness: They do have. I thought they did. I wasn't sure.

By Mr. Kirby: I am going to have to stop and argue with these boys.

By Mr. Kirby: I don't think there is a memo, is there?

By the Court: 40-A, I think they referred to.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: Exhibit 40-A.

By Mr. Kirby: My wife has sharper ears than I have. I can hear Sam telling him there is a cash authorization which is something else again. I asked him if there is a memo.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, there is Exhibit 40-E.

By Mr. Kirby: Is that a memo?

By Mr. Lockley: Are you talking about the recap sheet?

By Mr. Kirby: Is that a recap sheet?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

2848 By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But, Exhibit 40-E, is that connected, in the way you handle it, Mr. Mammel, with the eighteen thousand and the fifteen thousand? You put them altogether?

A. I think those three go altogether on that one recap sheet.

Q. You heard Mr. Lubben testify here, of course?

A. Yes.

Q. Which one was the one that was the pump priming check to get chocolate started to him, do you remember?

A. I don't remember.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to that, if your Honor please. I don't believe there is any such characterization as pump priming check.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You remember the check, you remember his testimony in general, do you?

A. Well, I do, in general, yes.

Q. Do you remember that in 1945 he wanted to get some Cardinal chocolates which were a very desirable

2849 item and in order to start getting some he had to give some money.

Do you remember his telling that?

A. Just faintly.

Q. Now, which—and then, oh, do you remember on my cross examination my showing him he had had before that 60 tons of chocolates, do you remember that?

A. Well, I remember some figure.

Q. Which was the check which was the pump priming check to get the chocolates started?

By Mr. Lockley: I object again to the characterization.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you remember that?

By the Court: By "pump priming" I assume he means the check that was used to get the supply started from Shotwell?

By Mr. Kirby: To get it started, that is right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Which one is this?

A. I don't know. It is in the record. I don't know.

2850 Q. Whichever one it is, you have assumed the validity of Lubben's testimony with respect to that?

A. What else could I do? I am not here to say that Lubben's testimony is correct or not. I am merely taking these figures from the record there and summarizing them. Isn't that right?

Q. You don't say to me that Lubben told the truth or that Lubben lied?

A. Well, I don't know.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. You heard Mr. Lubben's testimony about dividing this money up into piles, didn't you?

A. I sure did.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, I object to that, your Honor. I believe they should restrict their cross examination to the matters which were gone into on direct examination.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, if you summarized it here as to other payments—

2851 By the Court: That was a preliminary question.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all it is.

By the Court: All right, Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Now, are you a lawyer?

A. I am not.

Q. You never studied law?

A. I just studied commercial business and real estate law.

Q. And you got that out of a night course, or what was the name of the place?

A. What was what?

Q. What was the school you went to, this commercial school?

A. Well, the Y.M.C.A.

Q. How long ago was that that you went to the Y.M.C.A.

A. I don't claim to be a lawyer.
Q. No?
A. No.
Q. You don't claim to have any knowledge of law, do you?
A. I have considerable knowledge of income tax
2852 law.
Q. Yes?
A. Yes.
Q. And you have never been—have you been authorized to practice law anywhere?
A. No, I am not a lawyer.
Q. Getting back to that original question, you said that you did hear this testimony about the three piles of money that Mr. Lubben testified to?
A. Correct, I did.
Q. Now are you assuming to tell us that that is a receipt to the corporation as a matter of law?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. This witness is only testifying to computations.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. McConnell: He is also assuming to say, what does the testimony mean so far as receipts to the corporation are concerned.
By the Court: He is assuming in his testimony that the mor y constituted receipts for Shotwell. Now, if there is a question of law about it, the Court will have to 2853 decide it, but not Mr. Mammel.
By Mr. McConnell: I just want to make it clear he is not determining that question.
By the Court: I don't think you need to worry about that.
By Mr. McConnell: All right.
By Mr. McConnell:
Q. You agree to that, too, you are not going to determine the question of law on that issue?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.
By the Court: Oh, I think we may assume that.
By Mr. McConnell: All right. That's all.
By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien?
By Mr. O'Brien: No cross.
By Mr. Lockley: That's all, Mr. Mammel.
(Witness excused.)

WILLIAM M. RUGGABER, called as a witness on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

2854 Q. Mr. Ruggaber, will you give us your name?
A. William M. Ruggaber, R-u-g-g-a-b-e-r.
Q. And where do you live?
A. I live in Deerfield, Illinois.
Q. Where are you employed?
A. I am in the chief counsel's office for the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Chicago.
Q. What is the nature of your employment there?
A. My job is technical adviser.
Q. What is a technical adviser?
A. He advises and assists in preparation, advises and assists attorneys in our office in the preparation of cases for trial.
Q. And in what respect?
A. I am responsible for the tax features.
2855 Q. You compute income taxes?
A. Correct, sir.
Q. How long have you been employed by the Bureau of Internal Revenue?
A. Thirty years this month.
Q. What has been the nature of your employment during that thirty years?
A. About 27 years I have been either at fraud investigation, or as a technical adviser.
Q. What was your education?
A. Grammar school, business college, the army, and then school again after the army, equivalent to the GI training, after World War II, at which time I took a special commercial course for veterans at the University of Wisconsin, majoring in accounting.
Q. Did you get a degree?
A. No, sir. A junior course did not give you a degree. I got a diploma.
Q. Are you an accountant?
A. So far as tax work is concerned, I am, sir. I am not a practicing accountant. I keep no books. I am prohibited from doing that by law.

Q. Have you computed income tax returns under 2856 income tax laws of the United States since your employment in the Bureau?

A. Yes.

Q. I show you Government's Exhibits 1, 1-A, and 2, which are the income and excess profits tax returns of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for the year 1945, and the income tax return for the year 1946, respectively.

Will you examine those returns, please, and tell me whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was on a calendar year, or fiscal year basis?

A. They were on a calendar year basis.

Q. What was the basis on which their records were kept, cash or accrual?

A. Their statement here is accrual basis for the year 1945. The question is unanswered in the 1946 return.

Q. What was the amount of the income and declared value excess profits tax credit claimed for the year 1945?

A. Nine hundred thousand dollars.

Q. What was the gross receipts reported for 1945?

By the Court: Going back a bit, your answer of 2857 nine hundred thousand dollars, that was what, again?

By the Witness: Declared value excess profits credit which is ten percent of nine million.

By the Court: Say that again. Declared—

By the Witness: Declared value excess profits credit.

By the Court: 1945, and it was nine hundred thousand dollars?

By the Witness: Nine hundred thousand dollars, yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the gross receipts reported from the manufacture and sale of candy for the year 1945?

A. Gross sales less return allowances, total $4,764,606.71.

Q. What is the cost of goods sold as claimed on the 1945 return?

$3,406,878.07.

Q. Did the Corporation have any other income other than the sale of candy?

A. Yes, sir.

2858 Q. How much?

A. Well, they had interest income of $799.92;

interest on Treasury notes, $2,975.50; net gain on sale of assets other than capital assets, $20,393.49, and then they had other income and it says, "Schedule attached"—$92,045.33.

Q. What is the other income on the schedule attached?

A. It consists of purchase discounts, salvage sales and miscellaneous in the small amount, that latter one.

Q. How much?

A. Miscellaneous is $213.09.

Q. What was the specific exemption claimed by the corporation for 1945?

A. Are you talking about income tax or excess profits tax?

Q. The excess profits.

A. The excess profits is—was—specific exemption is $10,000.

Q. What is the excess profits credit for 1945?

A. $57,153.23.

2859 Q. Now Mr. Ruggaber, assuming that a domestic corporation doing business in the city of Chicago and the state of Illinois during the calendar year 1945 whose regular annual accounting period was on the basis of the calendar year and whose records were kept on an accrual basis, which corporation claimed an amount of income and declared value excess profits tax credit for the year 1945 the sum of $900,000.00 and assuming that during the calendar year 1945 the corporation had gross receipts derived from the manufacture and sale of candies in the amount of $4,941,752.94 including over invoice cash receipts during the calendar year 1945 of $177,146.23 and assuming that the cost of goods sold amounted to $3,406,878.07 and assuming the corporation had other income totaling $116,114.24 including a net gain from the sale of assets subject to the provisions of Section 177-J of the Internal Revenue Code, amounting to $20,293.49 and assuming further that the corporation was entitled to deductions of $912,778.46 and further assuming that the corporation was entitled to a specific exemption of $10,000.00 and an excess profits credit of $57,153.23, can 2860 you determine the corporation's total declared value excess profits tax, normal tax, surtax and excess profits tax, for the year 1945?

A. I can.

Q. What would it be?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, the integral part of the question is an increase in the gross receipts in the amount assumed by the witness Mammel, and we have a pending motion to strike to which I have called the Court's attention, to what I believe to be a well written expression of the law. That would, if resolved to sustain our motion to strike, defeat this question. This question has the same effect in it that we urged with respect to the Mammel computation and it really doubles the vice because he is now going to compute a tax on contradictory testimony.

Going to the next item of importance in the assumption, it is the question of cost of goods sold. The cost of 2861 goods sold item is assumed in the question to be precisely the same as shown on the return. That is to say, that the raw materials cost Shotwell not one penny more than shown by the return, but the proof is overwhelming that the raw materials did cost Shotwell, through cash payments of raw materials testified to by Government's witnesses, far beyond that. So, it is contradictory to the evidence in that respect and fatally so.

Then, your Honor, I make the further objection that at the time of 1945 there was a tax regulation, that you could make the taxpayer put on his books what he got above OPA prices, but if he paid out more than OPA prices to get materials to run his factory, he couldn't take a deduction for it. That later was defeated by the courts and abandoned after this indictment, incidentally by the Government as to policy.

But the test in that year is not the test under which the jury now hears the case and I make those specific ob-
2862 jections. I regret I wasn't able to follow it closer to make more, but that symbolizes the fact that this assumption, for a critical question of facts, is deeply controverted on their own proof and it invades the province of the jury and certainly is not binding upon the defendant Sullivan, in any event, because very much of the testimony has been specifically ruled to be not competent as to the defendant Sullivan and in no way could they frame a question to either Mr. Mammel or to this gentleman here which would obviate that effect.

By the Court: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. O'Brien: We make the same objection.

By Mr. McConnell: We make the same objection.

By the Court: The same ruling.

2863 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What would the amount be?

By Mr. Kirby: I make the further objection that in all of the years that this matter has been pending, this company has never been told the amount of tax they owed.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the argument.

By Mr. Kirby: And it is improper for such notification to be conveyed to these people and a bill rendered to them at the time of a criminal case. I object. They never had a bill.

By the Court: The objection is overruled.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Will you answer, Mr. Ruggaber?

A. The combined tax on that corrected sum of net income would be $520,069.88.

Q. And how much more is that than the total amount of tax reported on the original corporate tax return of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company and paid by that corporation for the year 1945?

2864 A. $149,430.93.

Q. Now, will you please examine the corporate income tax return for the year 1946, Government's Exhibit 2. Was that return prepared on the basis of the calendar year or fiscal year?

A. That it is.

Q. Is it the calendar year, Mr. Ruggaber?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I believe you previously stated that it does not indicate whether it was on the basis of cash or an accrual basis?

A. The question is unanswered on the blank.

By Mr. O'Brien: What was the answer?

(Answer read.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is the amount of gross receipts reported as derived from the manufacture and sale of candy?

A. I may have to correct something. I had the amended return in my hand. I am sorry. I had the wrong return. I think I will correct myself.

Q. All right. With reference to what question do you wish to correct yourself?

A. Accrual.

Q. It is on the accrual basis?

2865 A. On the original return, the question is answered correctly.

Q. What was the amount of the gross receipts from the sale and manufacture of candy reported for 1946?

A. After allowance for return and allowances, the gross receipts were $5,622,944.09.

Q. What is the cost of goods sold as shown on that return?

A. $3,449,910.40.

Q. Was there any other income reported?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Other than from the sale of candy?

A. Interest on loans, notes or mortgages of $192.97. Interest on treasury bonds of $3,250.00. Net long term capital gains of $735.03. Other income of $67,062.89.

Q. What is the nature of the other income?

A. Purchase discounts, $54,544.15. Salvage sales $11,132.88. Miscellaneous, $1,385.86—$67,062.89.

Q. What are the deductions claimed on the return?

A. $1,041,357.40.

Q. Now, Mr. Ruggaber, assuming that a domestic corporation doing business in the city of Chicago and the state of Illinois during the calendar year 1946 whose 2866 regular accounting period was on the basis of a calendar year and whose records were kept on an accrual basis and had during the calendar year 1946 gross receipts derived from the manufacture and sale of candies in the amount of $5,899,670.26, including over invoice cash receipts and unbilled cash sales during the calendar year of 1946 of $276,726.17 and assuming that the cost of goods sold amounted to $3,449,910.40 and assuming the corporation had other income totaling $67,062.89, including a net gain on the sale of assets subject to provisions under Section 117J of the Internal Revenue Code in the amount of $735.03, assuming further that the corporation was entitled to deductions of $1,041,337.40, can you determine the corporation's total normal tax and surtax for the year 1946?

A. I can.

Q. What would it be?

2867 By Mr. Kirby: I object.

By Mr. McConnell: I make the same objection I made to the other.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object.

By Mr. Kirby: I make the same objection although the figures differ somewhat, but the principles are the same. I would like to inquire of Mr. Lockley, is the Government abandoning the corn syrup charge?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir. That is included in the figure.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to the form of the question. I also object to the amounts that are being assumed are contrary to and do not accord with the bill of particulars furnished the defendants in this case. They widely vary and the form of the question is not proper.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same objection.

By Mr. McConnell: Same objection on behalf of the corporation.

By the Court: The same ruling.

By Mr. Lockley:

2868 Q. What would it be?

A. The correct tax for the larger sum would be $562,168.92.

Q. And how much more is that than the total amount of tax reported on the original corporate income tax return of Shotwell Manufacturing Company and paid by that corporation for the year 1946?

A. $105,155.94.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: I move to strike the testimony of the witness on the grounds already stated.

By the Court: I will defer my ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: I make the same motion.

By the Court: The same ruling.

Cross Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Ruggaber, again like Mr. Mammel, you are not passing upon the truth of any of the testimony here?

A. I am not, sir.

Q. You don't purport to say whether Mr. Lubben told the truth or lied, do you?

2869 A. I am in no position to say that. I didn't hear Mr. Lubben.

Q. Now how much tax did the corporation pay on its 1945 return?

A. It paid combined taxes of $370,638.95.

Q. And it paid a tax of three hundred and seventy some odd thousand dollars in a year when its gross profits, according to the return, were how much?

A. The figure you asked me for was gross profits or gross income?

Q. Well, I would call it profit, but income may be the technical term.

A. Are you talking about receipts, sir, or are you—

Q. How much of what they made did the Government take? That is what I want to know.

A. Their gross sales were five million.

Q. Sure.

A. Cost of goods—

Q. Sure, sure.

A. They had a gross profit of two million.

Q. Gross, yes. How much did the company make in the year, according to the return? That is what I want.

2870 A. Their net profit was $1,202,000—I am sorry. I got it wrong.

Q. You are looking at the wrong one, the wrong year?

A. You are speaking of 1945, aren't you, sir?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: Not all mistakes in connection with income tax handling is criminal.

By the Witness: He reported a net profit of $561,064.42.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So they made five hundred sixty thousand and they paid a tax of how much?

A. Three hundred seventy.

Q. Now in that year you have recomputed the tax and you say now the tax ought to be five twenty thousand?

A. The answer to the hypothetical question was if the income was increased by $177,146.23, resulting in a corrected net income of $738,210.65, the tax on that would be $520,069.88. That is all taxes, normal, surtax and excess profits, which expired that year.

2871 Q. You are not including a penalty or anything?

A. There is no penalty or interest in there.

2872 Q. So that would be five hundred and twenty thousand in tax for 1945?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The year in which the company's return says it made five hundred and seventy thousand?

A. The company return says five hundred and sixty-one thousand dollars.

Q. All right. Now, Mr. Ruggaber, what would be the tax effect if the hypothetical question were changed so that the amount of increased receipts were balanced by an amount of increased payment out for materials? Would there be any difference in tax?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the grounds that the question assumes facts not in evidence.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, we objected indeed to theirs as assuming facts not in evidence and they said it was hypothetical. I am trying to be just as hypothetical as they are and—

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

2873 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Would your answer, Mr. Ruggaber, be different if the cost of goods sold had been higher for 1945?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the grounds that it assumes facts not in evidence.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Any change of any figure would change my tax, yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes, and cost of goods sold that you mentioned, that includes what they had to pay for raw materials?

A. That is the amount the return shows as having been paid for merchandise which they sold.

Q. The expression "cost of goods sold", includes the cost of raw materials?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So that if the cost of the raw materials were to be increased, the amount of the tax due in your hypothetical question would go down?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And as the cost of the raw materials pur-

2874 chased went up, if it came to equal your increase in the gross receipts, there would be no tax due in your hypothetical question, isn't that right?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the grounds that this is again assuming facts which are not in evidence.

By Mr. Kirby: I am only asking about his hypothetical question.

By the Court: He can answer.
By the Witness:
A. Correct, sir.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. And the same thing would be true in 1946?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now, in 1945, and '46, were you in the Treasury Department?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Were you familiar with the regulation with respect to one element of your hypothetical question, that is, what items may be put in under cost of goods sold; were you generally familiar with that?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, it is beyond
2875 the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes, you are now outside of the scope of the direct. I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Did your regulations—I have to pose a specific question, your Honor—in 1945 and 1946 prohibit the taking of a deduction in the item, cost of goods sold, for any over the ceiling payments for raw materials; did your regulation so provide?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Lockley: It is beyond the scope of the direct.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Do you know whether the regulation which you say you knew about in '45 and '46, with respect to what you could put on your tax return, as to cost of goods sold if over the ceiling payments were involved; do you know whether that has subsequently been abandoned?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is be-2876 yond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Court: Yes. The same ruling.
2877 By Mr. Kirby:
Q. As you are testifying on your hypothetical question, Mr. Ruggaber, are you assuming the state of the tax regulations as they existed then or the state of the tax regulations as they exist now, with respect to over-ceiling payments for raw materials?
By the Court: Obviously he must be basing his answer on the years in question. He is not assuming to determine tax in 1949 on the 1945 income.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I beg you to make him answer because he is not going to agree with you.

By the Court: I sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please,—

By the Court: There is no evidence before this witness that there were any payments made for goods sold in addition to that which appears on the income tax statement.

Obviously he is assuming to answer in accordance with the hypothetical question submitted to him by Mr. Lockley.

That is as far as he has gone.

2878 By Mr. Kirby: And I am inquiring whether in answering the hypothetical question he is assuming the state of the law and the regulations as they existed in the tax years or as they exist now. That is what I want to know.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, he is not assuming either one. He is merely answering my question as to the amounts.

By the Court: I don't know that regulations have anything to do with his answer.

By Mr. Kirby: He has to compute the tax some way, and he has to do it under the regulations, and I am merely trying to find out whether the regulations that he used for—

By the Court: Which regulations?

By Mr. Kirby: The Treasury regulations that he used with respect to answering his hypothetical question are the regulations as they exist today or the regulations as they existed in '45 and '46.

By the Court: All that this witness has done is as-

2879 suming that in 1945 there was an additional income of—

By Mr. Lockley: $177,146.00.

By the Court: —$177,000.00, as testified to by Mr. Mammel, and in 1946 there was an additional income of $276,726.17, and on that assumption he has recomputed the tax so as to determine what additional tax should have been paid by Shotwell in the event that Shotwell had received that additional income, isn't that right?

2880 By Mr. Kirby: That is correct, sir. And I am seeking to inquire whether in computing the taxes so computed, it is based on the regulations in '45 and '46, or the regulations as they exist today.

By the Court: Which regulations?

By Mr. Kirby: The Treasury regulations.

By the Court: Pertaining to what?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, specifically, the change has occurred with respect to this item, cost of goods sold.

By the Court: I don't think that that enters into this computation at all, and I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: I am sure we are not in any disagreement on the items involved. You mean it is the regulation.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Ruggaber, in 1946, how much tax did the company pay?

A. $457,012.98.

By the Court: Will you say that figure again, please?

By the Witness: $457,012.98.

2881 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So that in the two indictment years, the taxes that they paid were roughly $827,000.00, is that right?

A. That's right.

Cross Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Witness, did you take into consideration the testimony given in the Government's case that there were monies paid in the form of over ceiling payments for the acquisition of goods?

By the Court: Very obviously, Mr. O'Brien, he did not. It was not incorporated in the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: I understand that, your Honor.

By the Court: Then if you understand it, why ask it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Because I want him to state that on the record, and I want to call your Honor's attention to the fact that that undisputed evidence is in the record, and that therefore the question is properly involved 2882 with this witness, and it doesn't have to await our case.

By the Court: Well, I think it does.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I want to direct your Honor's attention expressly to that.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: So that I assume even in the face of that express direction, if I were to address the same questions as Mr. Kirby did, as to whether the witness computed the tax according to present law, or according to the 1945 or '46 law, those questions would be objected to and sustained?

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Right.

By Mr. McConnell: I would like to ask one question.

Cross Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. As I understand your testimony, all you are saying is that assuming the Government proves and sustains everything that Mr. Mammel assumes, and assuming that everything that counsel put in his question is established, and a verdict is reached by the jury which sustains that question, then you compute this much tax; isn't that all it is?

2883 A. What I am saying is, I am computing the taxes for the years which were in effect—which were law, not regulation, law, the rates.

The rates are different in '45 and '46. They are different today. We don't work on '45 and '46, on '53 law or rates. We have a rate for each and every year, a separate Act.

These are rates which were in effect under the Internal Revenue Code. I am not going into the merits of the income that has been added to here. I am just going into what the tax would be at the rates in effect for the year 1945, and what that tax would be at the rates which were in effect for the year 1946, and had a return been filed at that time showing such corrected income, this is what the tax would be.

2884 By Mr. McConnell: Now, I move to strike that, and ask that I have an answer to the question.

By the Court: I think the answer is fairly responsive. I will overrule the motion.

By Mr. McConnell:

Q. Were you assuming as true what counsel incorporated in his question in making your answer?

A. Am I assuming if that amount of money was given to me?

Q. Yes.

A. Correctly; yes, sir.

Q. That is just your assumption?

A. That is all.

Q. You are not purporting to say whether it is true or false?

A. I am not testifying to the accuracy of those figures. I am testifying to the computations I have made on those figures.

Q. You are not purporting to tell this jury that one witness testified truthfully, or another witness testified falsely, are you?

A. Gracious, no.

2885 Q. That is beyond your province?

A. That is right, sir.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all.

By Mr. Lockley: May we have our recess at this time?

By the Court: We will be in recess until two o'clock.

By the Marshal: The audience will remain standing while the Jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This Honorable Court will now recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above-entitled cause until two o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Wednesday, September 30, 1953.)

2886

* * (Caption—No. 52 GR 143) * *

Chicago, Illinois,
Wednesday, September 30, 1953
2:00 o'clock P. M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in chambers, outside the hearing and presence of the jury:-

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor will recall that Mr. O'Brien made a motion for the production of some 2887 affidavits the other day, I believe you signed an order, and I told you at that time that the government did not have an affidavit of any of the individuals named, one of whom was Ronald Stone.

That was my information from Agent Krane. Subsequently—this morning—I discussed it wtih Agent Twohig, and Mr. Twohig gave me a photostatic copy of an affidavit by Mr. Stone, which he took from Mr. Stone in connection with a case in which Mr. Stone himself is under indictment as a defendant in an income tax prosecution in New Jersey.

Now, that affidavit, to my knowledge, has no reference whatsoever to the Shotwell matter, but rather than take any risk on the matter I would prefer to submit it to the Court.

By the Court: Are you calling Stone as a witness?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

By the Court: Well, then, I don't suppose that—

By Mr. O'Brien: He is subpoenaed, is he not, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: He is subpoenaed at the moment. I think he is.

I hope you realize that many of these subpoenas were put out before I got here and I am not even sure 2888 who all of our witnesses may be on rebuttal.

So I understand that he is under subpoena, isn't that correct?

By Mr. Calihan: I believe it is.

By the Court: Well, do you intend to call him in rebuttal?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I wish I could give you an answer. I frankly don't know. I have no present intention of doing so. It will depend entirely on what develops during the course of the defendants' case.

By the Court: I don't suppose that you are entitled to any statement unless Mr. Lockley will call—states that he will call the party as a witness, isn't that right?

By Mr. McConnell: He has him subpoenaed, your Honor. I don't know what he wants to subpoena him for.

By the Court: Even so, I don't know that it necessarily follows that he is going to call him as a witness. He is about to rest his case. You don't intend to call him in your case in chief?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

By the Court: Well, we will cross that bridge when we come to it. You can let me know at a reasonable
2889 time before the defendants rest whether or not you intend to call Mr. Stone as a witness and, if so, then

I will look it over and determine whether or not it is a document that the defense should see. I think that arrangement should be satisfactory.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir. Thank you. I understand that the original of this is in the United States Attorney's office in New Jersay.

By Mr. McConnell: May I make a suggestion? A lot of these things that we are wasting the Court's time on, if you just take them up with us we would have a lot less trouble in this lawsuit. We would agree to half of this.

By Mr. Lockley: I think it is one of the things that the Court ought to know.

By Mr. McConnell: If you would just tell us about it. You don't have trouble getting along with us as lawyers.

By Mr. Lockley: I have no complaint, Mr. McConnell.

2890 (And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

Mr. Lockley: Mr. Fuller.

ROY E. FULLER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Government, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Fuller, will you please state your full name.

A. Roy E. Fuller.

Q. And where do you live?

A. Evanston, Illinois.

Q. And are you the official court reporter for this district?

A. I am one of the official court reporters for this district.

Q. And how long have you been a court reporter?

By Mr. O'Brien: Excuse me a moment, Mr. Lockley. I want to be heard on this matter, Judge.

By the Court: Yes, I assume that all counsel is 2891 going to do now is to identify a transcript. And Mr. O'Brien tells me he would like to be heard on some matters.

By Mr. Lockley: I will just ask the preliminary questions, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, all right.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Do you understand the method of transcribing and taking down in shorthand?
A. I do, sir.
There was a pending question, I believe, Mr. Lockley, which I didn't have an opportunity to answer.
Q. Yes, sir.
A. As to how long I had been a court reporter.
Q. Yes.
A. Since 1910, actively in Chicago. And before that for a few years.
Q. And do you understand the method of transcribing and taking down in shorthand?
A. I do, sir.
Q. And I call your attention to proceedings taken before Judge Nordbye on November 12th and 13, 1952. Was this testimony taken down in shorthand under your supervision and direction?
2892 A. It was.
Q. And was the testimony recorded at the time it was given?
A. It was.
Q. And do you have a copy of that record with you?
A. I do.
Q. And is that an officially certified copy of the record?
A. It is.
Q. And is the record true and correct?
A. To the best of my knowledge and belief. I supervised the work and proof read the transcript as it was turned out and placed my certificate thereon.
Q. And did you compare it with the original shorthand notes?
A. It was compared by the individual reporters who worked under my immediate supervision and direction.
By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, sir.
My next question, your Honor, would be related directly to the material in that transcript.
2893 By the Court: Well, I gather that counsel don't raise any question as to the authenticity of the transcript to which Mr. Lockley has referred?
By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.
By Mr. Lockley: I believe we have a stipulation informally, between ourselves, on that, your Honor.

By the Court: Does that conclude your testimony, Mr. Lockley, when you have offered certain portions of the transcript?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: And then you are going to rest?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: And you, Mr. O'Brien, would like to be heard on the offer so that I may hear your position in the matter?

Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

I make no point of the absence of the reporter who took it, or any of those things, I am sorry.

By the Court: Did I understand from you this noon hour, that the defense has certain motions that they would like to present to me in somewhat of an extended manner?

2894 By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: And it would take some little time probably for me to hear both sides?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: And your suggestion was—and I assume you had spoken to Mr. Lockley, I am sure you did—that it might be advisable to let the Jury go for the afternoon, so that we might utilize the remainder of the afternoon for the hearing of these motions?

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right.

By the Court: Well, then, Mr. Lockley, I will suggest that I hear Mr. O'Brien's motion with reference to the transcript this afternoon, and you will not rest then, of course, until I have heard the motion.

And that means that whatever additional testimony you have, if it is admissible, will only take a very few minutes, right?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. I don't think it will take long. It might take a half hour.

Ten minutes, perhaps.

By the Court: Are you referring to Mr. Cain's testimony, or are you referring to other testimony?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Cain's testimony only, your 2895 Honor.

By Mr. O'Brien: I suppose, subject to the Court's ruling, you would be through with Mr. Fuller after such part, if any, as the Court prescribed, would be put in evidence?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: And subject to that, counsel is resting?

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct. I would like to read it into evidence.

By the Court: I think we can excuse you now, Mr, Fuller.

By the Witness: Thank you, your Honor.

(Witness excused.)

2896 By the Court: Now, members of the jury, the government is about to rest, except for the reading into the record such portions of this transcript as I may admit. And I take it that will consume only a relatively short time.

And in view of the fact that there are certain motions that I should hear, I think that it would be advisable to let you go for the afternoon and report tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

I might say to you now that I realize this case is taking long, and I realize that it is somewhat irksome for a jury to sit in a case involving many books and records, and much of which may be not entirely clear to the jury at this time. You have been very patient and I appreciate it very much.

I do want you to understand that we have a job to do, all of us. Perhaps I am not any more happy sitting here than you are. I would like to be home myself. But we have a job to do and I do want to impress upon you the necessity of being patient and carrying on as you have done in the past, so that we may give this case the attention that it deserves.

I don't know how long the defense case will take. I am sure they will try to expedite it as much as they 2897 can. And while it may seem that during the trial we indulge in a certain amount of technicalities, in objections, and so forth, nevertheless, the lawsuit has to be tried according to certain rules and time has demonstrated that those rules are sound. And while it may seem somewhat irksome at times, being delayed by objections, in the long run it means that we are trying to arrive at the truth of the matter. And that is, of course, our total object here, to find out what the truth is.

I merely make that statement in the hope that when you come back tomorrow morning, whatever testimony you are going to hear, that may be offered by the defense, that you will give to their testimony the same careful consideration that I am sure you have given to the government testimony.

So you won't need to wait around while we are arguing this motion. I am going to excuse you now till tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock.

The Court will take a recess now for five minutes.

(Recess taken.)

2898 (Thereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Court: Mr. Lockley, I think you might indicate the portions of the transcript that you have in mind so that Mr. O'Brien may be advised and may proceed accordingly.

By Mr. Lockley: On page 143 of the transcript where Mr. Cain was sworn and then on page 152, the last line, and all of page 153.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a moment.

By Mr. Lockley: Are you getting it?

By Mr. O'Brien: 152, the last line?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. All of 153 and 154 down to the question: "Did you tell him that there had been", not including that question.

Page 167, beginning with the question—or the question, rather, "What did you do about assembling the data?" 167. It is page 167, beginning with the question: "What did you do about assembling the data?"

By Mr. O'Brien: Beginning with that.

2899 By Mr. Lockley: Beginning with that. All of page 168 and the first paragraph of page 169.

Page 193 beginning at the top of the page, all of that page, all of page 194, all of page 195, and all of 196 and page 197 down to Mr. Ryan's remark "Mark this Government's Exhibit 1 for identification".

Page 212, the second question asked and the third question asked and the answers, and that is all.

Does your Honor desire any statement as to what that particular testimony relates to?

By the Court: Well, you may make the statements you think are pertinent.

2900 By Mr. Lockley: Well, the testimony at the outset, on page 152, is the questioning of Mr. Cain by Mr. O'Brien, his counsel, and it relates to a conversation with Mr. Busby and the $50,000 loan, and also —

By the Court: What page is that?

By Mr. Lockley: Page 152, and the following page 153, and page 154.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: It relates to a conversation with Mr. Busby, at which time reference is made to the subject of over premium payments.

Page 167 relates to the assembling of information for the preparation of amended returns. That goes over to page 169.

Page 193 is cross examination by Mr. Ryan relating to the accuracy of the income tax returns for the corporation for the years 1945 and 1946, and the two questions on page 212 relate to whether Mr. Cain felt he owed a tax.

The Government's position, your Honor, is that these are judicial admissions made by the defendant voluntarily against interest. He was not compelled to testify. He was represented by counsel at the time.

2901 The cases of Cooper versus United States 5 Fed. 2nd 824,—

By the Court: Again, please?

By Mr. Lockley: Cooper versus United States 5 Fed. 2nd 824 holds that the voluntary admissions of a defendant at a preliminary hearing are properly admitted.

A similar case, U. S. versus Lindsly 7 Fed. 2nd 247 holds that the admissions of an affiant on motions to suppress evidence to show the defendant's ownership of wine and articles designated to manufacture it withheld not grounds for complaint.

A corrollary may be drawn likewise from the situation in Milton versus United States 110 Fed. 2d 556, and in that case a defendant voluntarily went on the witness stand in a former trial and made statements against interest, and the Court held that it is competent on a second trial to prove such statements as admissions voluntarily made and admissions made under such circumstances may be proven in the same manner for the same reasons that admissions made out of court may be proven.

In the case of Wande versus United States, 158
2902 Fed. 2nd 651—

By the Court: 651?

By Mr. Lockley: 651, is another case which likewise holds that testimony at a previous trial was properly admitted where it had some tendency to establish the defendant's guilt.

And in United States versus Alderman, 107 Fed. 2d 497, it was even held that a plea of guilty before a Commissioner might be received in evidence.

2903 In United States vs. Johnson which I believe was a 7th Circuit case, 76 Fed. Sup. 554, affirmed 165 Fed. 2d, page 42. Certiorari denied, 330 United States 852 and a rehearing denied at 332 United States 834 held that grand jury testimony was admissible, to show the defendant's state of mind in the Government's case in chief and which would not be confined to impeachment as long as the testimony was voluntarily made.

The last case, United States vs. Yates—I guess it is Yates, 107 Fed. Sup. 408. It was held that on a new trial the defendant's testimony at the first trial might be read to the jury by the prosecution as either admissions by the defendant or under the reported testimony exception to the hearsay rule. It is the Government's position that the statements given in this particular case are admissions of a judicial nature which come within that exception, the reported testimony exception to the hearsay rule and that they might be used against him on the Government's case in chief without the necessity of using it as rebuttal evidence only.

By Mr. Kirby: Are you offering it against the defendant Sullivan or only against the defendant Cain?

2904 By Mr. Lockley: Well, those are only the defendant Cain's admissions. I would assume it is only admissible against the defendant Cain.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. I am sure it is correct. There may be more limitations but that one certainly exists.

By Mr. Lockley: I might state, though, that I believe it is admissible against the corporation since Mr. Cain was an officer of the corporation and president and the corporation can only act through its officers.

By Mr. McConnell: Then I would like to be heard.

By the Court: Well, let me hear Mr. O'Brien. I assume he wants to be heard.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have been trying to check the remaining pages, your Honor. If I could just take a minute to run through and note those, I could be more coherent about it.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I have the Klein case, if you desire to see it while you are waiting for counsel.

By the Court: You meant the Lindsly case and 2905 not the Klein case.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes. I am sorry, your Honor. That was U. S. vs. Lindsly, 7 Fed. 2d 247, yes.

Your Honor, while we are waiting for counsel may I make reference to one more case, which is Powers vs. the U. S., 223—U. S., at page 303. On page 313 the Court says,

> "The chief objection contended for in argument concerns the admission in the District Court of the testimony of the defendants before the Commissioner."

On page 14 it states:

> "In the present case it doesn't appear that the witness claimed his privilege or was ignorant of it, or that if he had known of it, would not have answered. Indeed, the record shows that his testimony was entirely voluntarily and understandingly given. Such testimony cannot be excluded when subsequently offered at his trial."

By the Court: I take it Mr. O'Brien is going to say, although I haven't heard from him yet, that in the event you are permitted to offer the purported transcript that you have referred to, he should be permitted to offer 2906 other portions which may be explanatory of that which you offer. Have your given consideration to that?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor. I think they have a right to do that on their case.

By the Court: I don't know. That would not be the proper time to give it. That would be a self-serving offer. If it is admissible at all when offered by the defendant, it is admissible only in your case, or the Government's case, in so far as it is explanatory of the portion which you offer. It couldn't be offered by the defendants as part of their case. I merely throw that out for your consideration. I assume that is what they have in mind.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, an explanation of our position then, your Honor, would be that the defendants would not be entitled to offer the testimony of any other witness other than Mr. Cain.

By the Court: My remarks referred only to—

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By the Court: —the subsequent portion of Mr. Cain's testimony which may be explanatory of the portion that you offer.

2907 By Mr. Lockley: Yes. As long as it relates to the material which we bring out on our direct case, I would think they would be entitled to bring out explanatory material, but not on any different subject-matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, as I see it, Judge, there are two things involved here. First is our objection or my objection to the use of the material at all, either in the part that is presented or in its entirety and only if that is ruled adversely to me, does the second question arise, and to whether the additional amount that I desire in on the same subject-matter—that is, Mr. Cain's testimony, and in that category, on the precise subject whether the additional amount that went in in that event, must be put in at this time by Mr. Lockley not either now or distinguished from my putting them in either now or later.

2908 Now, on the first point, the question as to their admissibility at all, in any part, I object, because notwithstanding the general rules to which your Honor's attention has been directed, it is my position that when a disclosure is claimed, and when there is a hearing on it, as was the situation here, all in an effort to suppress evidence furnished only in reliance on the sufficiency of that disclosure, and without any intimation from any Government Agent that the disclosure was not being accepted as sufficient, no such intimation at a time which would have been of any use to these people in enabling them to withhold information under claim of Constitutional rights, because on the record before you at the time there was a little piece about Mr. Mammel's statement that after he was assigned to the case in February of 1949, he had a conversation with Mr. Cain in which he indicated that there was a possible criminal liability.

There is no testimony from Mr. Cain, no testimony from Mr. Lima, no testimony from any of the people who had been there from the summer of 1948, and down to the end of 1948, picking up these various papers.

2909 Now, the situation has not arisen in any case before the upper courts, nor do I find it in any of the district court reports.

But I say in that situation that we do not make such a motion for the suppression of evidence claimed to have been illegally taken, and claimed to have been taken, and sought to be used in violation of our Constitutional rights at this kind of peril.

There is no such decided case.

Now, on the second point, as to whether all of the material, or at least the established part that I have indicated must be put in by Mr. Lockley if he offers any at all, I refer your Honor to Section 2099 of Wigmore on Evidence. Third Edition. In the general part of that, which I will read first, as is always followed, then I will come to the specific part, it says:

2910 "It has already been moved that the idea of completeness involves not merely verbal precision, but entirety of parts. The second branch of the inquiry, therefore, is how far the principle of completeness requires the offering at the same time of all the parts of an oral utterance as a condition of offering any part of it. This inquiry conceives of an utterness as composed not simply of consecutive words, but of clauses and sentences forming connected parts of a single effort to express a general thought having various details. It is understood on all hands that the opponent may in any event afterwards put in the remainder, but the question here is whether the proponent must in the first instance put in all the parts or may select that part which serves his purpose. On this point there is a singular lack of judicial authority. While working out in fair detail the application of the principle of entirety to written utterances

2911 the courts have almost ignored its development in application to oral utterances. We are relegated for information to the general spirit pervading their treatment of other aspects of the principle and are obliged to depend upon implied rather than an expressed rule."

2912 Now, after following these analogies which Mr. Wigmore mentions and having taken up, among other things, admissions, in the sense in which he defines them, and contracts, and notices, and dying declarations, he come to what to many is the separate category of testimony at former proceedings, as to which he says:

"The first consideration above noted is lacking since the cross examination often results in decided modifications of the direct examination. Nevertheless, many topics are often dealt with in a single testimony so that what is needed is only the part dealing with the particular topic on both the direct and the cross examination. The second and third considerations above also are often lacking. Accordingly, the fair rule and the one generally applied judicially is to require the witness to be able to state all the material parts of the testimony on that topic, both on direct and cross examination."

And he cites—he does not cite any case on that. But I do have, however, one case— 165 Fed., 48—the case
2913 really commences, Judge, on page 42, and it is United States vs. Johnson, from the Third Circuit. At page 48 the court says:

"Complaint is made concerning the admission of certain admissions made by appellants Greene and Memaloe. It is said that all of the grand jury minutes should have been given to the jury, if any were. No error was committed in this matter. What was given to the jury was consecutive testimony, not isolated excerpts of what someone said, pulled out of its context. There is no reason why the record should have been unduly cluttered with all the testimony before the grand jury. What was necessary and what the cases cited by the appellants require is that statements made are given sufficiently in their context so that the jury may have an accurate notion of what was said and under what circumstances."

By the Court: Well, how are you at all prejudiced in the event the Court permits you to supplement any offer made by the Government?

2914 By Mr. O'Brien: I see your Honor's point, and conceiving of it—and I also noted what you observed to Mr. Lockley. And regarded in that way I can't see that that makes any difference, and would just as soon do it that way.

By the Court: Whether you read it or whether Mr. Lockley reads it, what difference is it; what difference is it, as far as the effect on the jury?

By Mr. O'Brien: But I object to the use of the material at all for the reasons which I first indicated, and I also want to say a little more on that.

I think that on the pages indicated by Mr. Lockley, pages 153—152 merely shows that Cain was sworn, so there would be no objection to that.

2915 By Mr. Lockley: Let me correct you, please, Mr. O'Brien. 143 is where Mr. Cain was sworn.

By Mr. O'Brien: I see.

By Mr. Lockley: 152 is just the beginning of a question.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right. Well, 143 is where he was sworn. But then 152 through 169—the pages mentioned by Mr. Lockley—he doesn't take them all in there, Judge, but everything from 152 down through 169, that he does take in, has no bearing on the question of intent as it is involved in this case.

The residue, 193 through part of 212, or such of the material comprehended between those numbers as Mr. Lockley referred to, does have something to do with the subject of intent.

Now, what I am trying to point out is that I think his offer, in so far as the intent—or intentional evasion issue in this case is concerned ought to be limited to the material that has to do with that subject, and it should be supplemented by the pages which have been omitted, and which I have marked, to fully take in that subject.

2916 If we are going beyond that, into the question that involves, let's say, admission of receipts, rather than the intent at the time of the tax return, then I think the only way we could balance it out would be to take the pages that I have marked, starting with 155, which he skipped, 156, 7, 8, 9, 60, 61, and part of—that is part of 61, part of 63, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7. All of those Mr. Lockley skipped.

So what I have said in 155 through 160, in full, which Mr. Lockley skipped, and 161 to 167, as to part of each of those pages. That I would want in.

2917 And then I have got 174 to 177, which Mr. Lockley omitted, but which should be in. And I have got 191 and 192, which Mr. Lockley omitted and should be in.

Then I have the balance of page 197, which was omitted by Mr. Lockley. And I have really 198 to 203, inclusive, of which I want only part of 198 and part of 200, part of 201.

And then I have 206 through—no, 206, 208, 210, 211, and the balance of 212, which Mr. Lockley omitted.

Then I would have 213 and 215, each in part.

In other words, your Honor, if my general objection to the admissibility which I have made, and on which I continue to stand, if that be overruled and if Mr. Lockley reads the parts which he has suggested, then we would immediately want this remaining part in. And I do think that under these authorities that he ought to put it in. He ought to read the whole thing at that time and not break it up by reading this and having me stand up and read that. Although I can't say I care too much about it.

By the Court: Well, what have you to say about it, 2918 Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: As to Mr. O'Brien's argument as to the admissibility of the testimony at all, as I understand it, he apparently claims that that testimony is privileged because it was given pursuant to a motion to suppress, on the theory that there had been a voluntary disclosure and that this evidence had been obtained from the defendants in violation of their constitutional rights, if I understood his argument correctly.

Well, when Mr. Cain took the stand, that was a calculated risk. He was not required to do so. He wasn't required to testify. He could have claimed his constitutional right to refuse to answer any questions, and when he failed to do so, why, it would seem unusual that anyone should ignore a record made in a court of law, under oath, and at the same time take into evidence, as we have been here for two weeks, the best recollection of the testimony of witnsses as to what was said to them in the presence of the defendants.

2919 Certainly if an admission is any good at all, an admission made under oath in a court of law ought to be a good admission. And the fact that it was made in connection with a motion to suppress the evidence shouldn't alter its admissibility in any way.

Now, as to the second part of his argument, I have not had the opportunity to see exactly what the subject matter of the pages he refers to applies to. I assume that if they are material to the matters brought out by the Government on the direct or, I mean, at the time that I read such portions of the transcript as may be permitted, then he has a right to come back and read any other portion of the transcript that tends to explain it.

But I have to frankly admit it is a novel suggestion to me that the Government should have to put in part of the defense evidence, which would be in substance what it would be.

By the Court: Well, I don't think the Government is under an obligation to offer any portions of the Cain transcript which it contends is not an admission.

2920 Now, granted, if you had one sentence, or one statement, the Government couldn't take out a few words here and there and offer that. They would have to offer the entire sentence. They would have to offer the entire paragraph.

If a man, for instance, made a statement. It might take a whole page, one statement. It may well be that the continuity of it would be entirely broken, and a distorted effect would be given to certain words, if you plucked out a word here or there, or a sentence here or there.

And I think that is the situation to which Wigmore referred. But where you have testimony by questions and answers, I am quite clear that the one who offers that testimony has a right to offer such portions as the offeror thinks constitutes an admission and hence competent evidence.

And I am reasonably clear that there is no good reason why testimony given on a motion to suppress should not be considered an admission, in so far as it may be an admission. And I am also quite clear that the defend-

2921 dant would have the right to offer such additional portions of the transcript as may be germane, or explanatory of—or material which should be read in connection with the so-called admission.

Now, obviously Mr. O'Brien has referred to a large part of this transcript. It may be that you haven't had sufficient time to analyze it and to determine whether or not you have any objection to the materiality of much that he has referred to.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think, Judge, it is substantially within the same—it is encompassed within the same area. It may be. I haven't any notion one way or the other.

It starts at 152 and runs to 212, omitting certain parts. I start with 155 and run to 215, omitting certain parts.

By the Court: It may well be that Mr. Lockley has no objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is all the same ball of wax.

By the Court: I have merely indicated that he may want to check over the pages that you have referred to in order to determine whether or not he does have any objection to the relevancy, so to speak, of that portion 2922 of the transcript.

By Mr. Lockley: Is it the Court's wish that Mr. O'Brien and I attempt to agree on the portions of the transcript?

By the Court: It is my wish that you go over the portions to which Mr. O'Brien has referred and if you have any objection to it, take it up with Mr. O'Brien and see if you can't agree. And if you cannot agree then you will have to submit it to me for my determination.

By Mr. O'Brien: Maybe we could do it this way, if the reporter—if you would write up the pages that I referred to in addressing the Court, give Mr. Lockley a copy and then he will be guided in checking it.

2923 By the Court: Now, of course, we have the other question. You have already indicated that it is not offered with reference to the defendant Sullivan. There may be a question as to whether or not an admission by a corporate officer constitutes a binding or competent admission as to the corporation.

In other words, is it in pursuance or in furtherance of the business of the corporation, or is it purely a personal matter?

Isn't that something for you to consider, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. McConnell: That is something I would like to argue, your Honor.

By the Court: I am anticipating probably what you had in mind. Mr. Lockley indicated that he thought it was competent as to the corporation. I am suggesting—and I assume that is what Mr. McConnell has in mind—that this is an admission by an officer not in pursuance of the business of the corporation of which he is an officer, but in a matter purely personal to him.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, the bulk of the testimony which Mr. Cain gives relates to the corporate matters, and particularly the preparation of 2924 amended income tax returns.

By the Court: Well, you contend that the motion was not only made on behalf of Cain, but it was made on behalf of the corporation as well?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, yes, your Honor. It was made on behalf of the corporation and on behalf of all the defendants, for that matter, although only Mr. Cain took the stand.

By the Court: Well, Mr. McConnell, have you something to offer on that matter?

2925 By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I think I should state at the outset that the corporation which I represent here is shown by these proofs as an independent entity and not an alter ego of Mr. Cain, Mr. Sullivan or anybody else. It stands here in this court as an individual defendant charged with a criminal act and it is receiving an independent defense in these proceedings and my position with reference to this evidence is this:

I did not propound the evidence that we have in the case down to date. I didn't sponsor it and I didn't bring it but the government has brought evidence into this case from which it appears at this stage of the proceedings that payments were made by Mr. Lubben to Mr. Huebner to be divided up between three individuals. True, they were corporate officers. True, they were dealing with corporate affairs in a sense but no authority has ever been shown by the corporation to put that business into black market operations. No authority has been shown, express or implied. The invoices which were made out were perfectly legal invoices and what happened, if it happened, happened over and above the legal obligations which were created by the corporation in the handling of its af-
2926 fairs in a perfectly legal, ordinary way in giving invoices for the price of its goods sold.

Now, we reach a state, where, as I say, I haven't sponsored this evidence. It is brought in and it is here, but it is claimed and it is charged that Mr. Cain and Mr. Huebner, and with Mr. Cain I think there was further evidence offered, I believe, of some jewelry purchase sent to him individually where he is, by this evidence mixed up in individual transactions which undoubtedly—

By the Court: You were attempting to have me receive evidence this morning with reference to the offset of all these premium payments being received by the corporation on account of payments made for raw materials.

By Mr. McConnell: Not at all. Just the ones that were received within a very, very limited period and that's all. That's all we were talking about. We were talking about nothing else.

By the Court: I haven't been clear as to the position of the defense. You didn't make a statement. I think that has caused some confusion.

By Mr. McConnell: We have never had a chance to make a proper statement yet.

By the Court: I had the impression that your posi-
2927 tion was that all of the Lubben over-ceiling payments were utilized by the corporation for raw materials.

By Mr. McConnell: Not at all. Not at all. Our position is that No. 1: That this corporation never received over-ceiing payments outside of the very particular period which I was very careful to eliminate—to accentuate, and to confine with these witnesses, namely, October, 1945, to July or August of 1946. That is the limit, we say, of any payments being received at all by this corporation.

2928 Now, there are hundreds of thousands of dollars here which Mr. Lubben assigns to the individual profits of the defendants, the individual defendants. That is the Government's evidence. That is not my evidence. That is the Government's evidence.

That is the setting up and the context in which this matter comes up. Here we have a defendant who is charged with that, charged with that on Lubben's books apparently, and he, Lockley, takes the position that the corporation should be charged with the admissions that an officer makes, where he himself is under a tax, where his interest is adverse to that of his corporation.

Now, it is perfectly true that an officer with no adverse relation to his corporation can make admissions which bind its principals, but he is in a fiduciary relationship to that corporation, he is sitting there as a man duty bound to represent its interests, and nobody else's interests, and for that reason, and for that reason alone, his admissions are binding upon a corporation because of his duty to a corporation.

But, where it appears, and where it happens as in 2929 this case, by the Government's own evidence, that the man has an adverse interest different and distinct from that of the corporation which he represents, then that law does not apply and the law is clear on that. There isn't any authority to the contrary. I have got the cases on it.

By the Court: Has the Government offered any evidence that any money received by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company was used for the purchase of raw materials?

By Mr. McConnell: The Government offered witnesses on cross examination who admitted that in that particular period, in that limited period,—and Graflund was one. He said he got money and he went out for corn. He testified about going over to Dr. Doe to make corn payments. Roeser was doing that, too. He admitted it was being paid for corn during that limited period of time.

That is what the case breaks down into now, up to this date. Of course, we haven't had an opening statement. I never had a chance to advise the Court or the Jury on my position in this case.

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien told me he waived it.
2930 I assume he spoke for all of the counsel. He is the only one that made that statement with reference to the opening statement.

By Mr. McConnell: I understood him to say it was reserved until the close of the Government's case.

By the Court: Well, put it that way if you want to.

By Mr. McConnell: I didn't understand we were waiving it.

By the Court: You have a right to make an opening statement at that time.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court. You have a right to make it.

By Mr. McConnell: I am not complaining about it. I am just saying I have never had a chance up to this time. I am not blaming anybody for it. I am just explaining why your Honor does not have my position, because I have never stated it.

By the Court: All right.

2931 By Mr. McConnell: Now, it is well established as a principle of corporate, or agency, law that the statement of an officer or agent is not binding on the corporation where the officer or agent has an interest adverse to that of the corporation. 2 Fletcher, Cyclopedia of Corporations, Section 734.

Kenner versus City National Bank 46 S.W. 2d 46, 51-52 (Tenn. 1932).

In this case, one Haun, the cashier of a bank padded a list of receipts to cover some defalcations. Somebody outside attempted to use that as admission against the bank. The Court said:

> "In the case before us, it is obvious that Haun padded this list of notes to conceal his defalcations. Such list of notes, therefore, was a self-serving declaration on the part of Haun to hide his fraud, and there would be no justification for holding defendant bank bound by an admission of this nature."

The case of Wheeler versus Home Savings and State Bank, 188 Ill. 34, 39 (1900).

In this case, one Singer was general manager of a 2932 corporation which owned warehouse receipts for a substantial amount of whiskey. Singer was in debt to the defendant bank. When the bank pressed for payment, Singer stated that he had loaned money to the corporation and that he would take the warehouse receipts in payment and in turn pledge them to secure his loan.

In due course, Singer appeared with the receipts and told the defendant bank that he had received them in satisfaction of a debt owed him by the corporation. Later the plaintiff, as assignee of the corporation, sued to recover the receipt. Held, that the corporation and its assignee were not bound by Singer's representations that the corporation had conveyed the receipts to him. Said the Court:

> "Singer was dealing with the bank in his own interest, and not as the officer or agent of the company. The bank could not, therefore, treat his representations so made in his own interest and against the interest of the company as the representations of the company."

There are a lot of other cases—Moores versus Citi-
2933 zens' National Bank of Piqua, 111 U.S. 156 (1884); Germania Safety-Vault and Trust Co. versus Boynton, 71 Fed. 797 6th Cir. 1896); Manhattan Life Insurance Co. versus Forty-Second and G. St. Ferry R. Co., 34 N.E. 776, 777 (1893); State Savings Bank of Ionia versus Montgomery, 85 N.W. 879 (Mich. 1901); Dixie Industrial Co. versus Bank of Wetumka, 92 So. 786, 788 Ala. 1922.
2934 I have some other cases in my other brief. The point I make is perfectly clear. Here is a man who has his own interest to protect. His interests are absolutely different and distinct from those of the corporation. He is making admissions on all moneys which the proof showed or will show were not received. He makes them for some reason of his own in those proceedings and to bind the corporation, it seems to me, is a violation of the rules of evidence. Where you are binding a principal by an agents' interest who is trying to protect himself, the corporation had no independent representation there.

By the Court: The admissions he allegedly makes in the testimony are to the fact that all of the moneys he received were turned over to the corporation and the corporation used the moneys to furnish raw materials.

By Mr. McConnell: I know, but that is the admission he makes. That is what I say.

By the Court: There is nothing adverse in the so-called admissions.

My Mr. McConnell: There isn't if he has an interest in putting that money in the corporation as against 2935 himself. He hasn't there. He certainly has a most adverse interest in the world in that situation and that is what the proof tends to show here up to this time—that he got the money and put it in his pocket. That is what the Government has been trying to prove here.

I say, I did not sponsor that proof. It came in by the Government and there it is. I am representing the corporation. They are seeking to bind me with an agent or an officer who is making the statement adverse to the corporation, in the sense that it puts receipts in the corporation's hands, but their proof shows it went into his pocket. If that isn't adverse, I don't know how it could be adverse. That is the present state of the record.

I submit, on that showing that we are not bound by Mr. Cain's admissions. We are an independent entity. We are entitled to have the protection of our own situation against admissions made by fiduciaries which helped him and not us. I submit that this admission, that this evidence, is not admissible against this corporation.
2936 By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, it seems almost too obvious to require mention that a corporation cannot act by itself but only through its officers. The officers here were the officers in control, both from a practical point of view and from the stockholding point of view. They handled all of the details of the business. It was testified to by various witnesses on the stand.

Now, I see no adverse interest between the individual defendants and the corporation. The indictment charges all of them collectively with attempting to defeat and evade the corporate tax. Now, if the corporation received money which it didn't report on its income tax return and they were partly responsible for that failure to report, why, then both they and the corporation—they acting for the corporation—are guilty of attempting to evade the tax by filing that false return.

Now, the Government offered no evidence whatsoever of any payments having been made out by the corporation for any raw materials. Some such testimony was brought out on cross examination. You will recall that Mr.
2937 Graflund stated that he took some money down.
He didn't know how much. Mr. Roeser stated that he took some money—he thought it was money, to Dr. Doe. He didn't know for sure it was money. He took a package down there and he assumed it was money.

Now, that is the extent of the so-called payments which have been brought out to date.

By Mr. O'Brien: Don't forget Mrs. Morrill's testimony.

By Mr. Lockley: I do forget what Mrs. Morrill's testimony was.

By Mr. McConnell: She said she paid it all out on corn for raw materials.

By Mr. Lockley: There is some statement by Mrs. Morrill but we have yet, in any event, to get any times, places, dates, names or amounts and what record there was kept was destroyed at the instruction of Mr. Cain himself after the investigation had begun, as Mr. Graflund here testified the other day.

Now on cross examination it was brought out that there was a shortage of raw materials and that that 2938 shortage of raw materials was affecting the corporate business so that the defendants went into the black market in order to buy raw materials.

Well, if this was money which went into the defendants' pockets, why were they spending it out as a part of the corporate business so that they could continue the corporate operations? Why did they go out and buy raw materials for the corporation if this wasn't part of the corporate business? It is an inconsistent position, your Honor.

2939 I think Mr. McConnell takes the position that the corporation admits it received certain moneys between October, we will say, of 1945 and January, 1946, and that was the only money the corporation received and that money was all utilized for the purpose of buying raw materials. He contended any other amount they received went into the corporate funds.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, that is the first time Mr. McConnell has made such a statement and I am glad to hear that that much, at least, is now being conceded, but I would like to point out further with respect to the activities of the individual defendants and their relationship to the corporation, that they caused this additional money to be kept off the corporate books, the regular books and records. They are the ones who caused a record to be kept of it. It was kept by the corporate employees. They caused the money to be kept in the corporate safe and in the corporate safe deposit box down town.

Now, it seems a fair interpretation that the officers of the company would not be so utilizing the premises and the employees of the corporation unless they were 2940 engaged, at least in part, in corporate business. It may be that a fair interpretation with respect to all of this money is that the corporation received a part and that the defendants received the balance.

I don't think that is something impossible to ascertain, but what the defendants received individually is of no significance here. The question was, was it corporate income and was it reported on the books and records of the company and in its income tax returns, and it is the Government's position it was corporate income. I think the admissions that they have now given tend to support that position.

By the Court: Well, I take it, from what you said, Mr. Lockley, it is the Government's position that any admissions made by Mr. Cain and this other witness to which you refer are admissible and competent not only as to Cain but also as to the corporation, is that right?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: I will reserve my ruling on that until I have determined just what portions of the transcript will be received after I am informed as to the results
2941 of the conference you have with Mr. O'Brien.

Now, then, what other motions are there? I think it might be understood that while you are proceeding somewhat informally, that with these motions, they may be heard by the Court with the same force and effect as though made after the Government had formally rested. We are utilizing the afternoon for this purpose, even though you may have some additional testimony.

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory with the Government.

By Mr. O'Brien: It is agreeable with us, Judge. It is our understanding that the only residue of evidence is what may go in from this book.

By the Court: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: That is correct.

By Mr. Kirby: The first matter that I want to take up is to make a motion to strike certain of the testimony of Mr. Lubben.

I am referring to testimony at pages 601 to 605. That testimony was the testimony which was given one day and he came back on the next day and said that he wanted to change it. He said that he had invoked divine guidance and that he had been mistaken the day before. He 2942 expressed, as a general conclusion, as to the nature of his conversation when he came back this next day, but I call the Court's attention to the fact that the testimony as originally given was that he had in February of 1946 three checks and that he went to Harold Sullivan's office to talk abou. those three checks with the names cut out.

2943 When he came back the next day he changed his testimony and said that it didn't have anything to do with those cashed in February, that it was later, in September and October in connection with his delay in paying his bills about which he talked to Mr. Sullivan.

The Court will recall that we have several times asked one or another here, "Wasn't there a default in Mr. Lubben's paying his bills toward the end of 1946?" And we said, "Were they finally paid?" And we had gone over to the ledger. That is an entirely different subject the question of his defaulting payment in September and October, a wholly different subject than the subject of those checks.

Therefore, when Mr. Lubben did make it plain it was a completely different subject and all of that, when he came back again, just so the record is plain, I now move to strike in its entirety the conversation which he himself abandoned with respect to those three checks, and which is contained at pages 601 to 605 of the transcript.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if your Honor please, the testimony at page 601 and 605 of the transcript, I be-2944 lieve that that relates to the change of his testimony, or was that his original testimony?

By Mr. Kirby: It is the testimony that he abandoned that I now want to be abandoned from the record. This is the original testimony that I am moving to strike.

By Mr. Lockley: I see.

By Mr. Kirby: I am not moving to strike what he said the next day.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I believe that the only portion of that which should be stricken is the part he subsequently corrected, and that was with relation to the date of the conversation.

By Mr. Kirby: The entire subject matter was different, your Honor.

The first conversation was the three checks with the holes in them. That was in February. And when he came back, he said that wasn't what he was talking about at all.

For instance, at page 603 he said:

"Answer: And, sir,—well, he didn't want to accept the check."

He is talking about the checks and so on.

Then you will recall he said he had gone to Mr. Huebner with the check, and Huebner said to go and talk to 2945 Cain about the checks, and Cain said to go down and see Sullivan, and so he went down and saw Sullivan about the checks.

When he came back the next day and he changed his story, and he volunteered—"I am trying to clean the record up"--

By the Court: What did he say?

By Mr. Lockley: Page 755.

By Mr. Kirby: 753.

"Your Honor, I would like to correct a little testimony that I gave yesterday, and I feel that I am in error in the—"

and so on.

And then he goes down and says:

"Yesterday when Mr.—when the prosecution here gave me three checks on which the names were cut out, I remember the transaction as giving the checks to Mr. Huebner, and I thought that was the time I had gone to see Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan, but that wasn't the time, sir. I went to see him on another time, but it wasn't in regard to those checks, around February 19th, it wasn't at that time, sir.

"I did go, however, to see Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan 2946 on another date. The exact date I don't remember, but I went there, to their offices."

And then Mr. McConnell interposed:

"Did I understand you to say that these conversations with Mr. Cain and Mr. Sullivan did not take place as you testified to?"

And then:

"By the Witness: Sir, the conversation—the conversation I had with Sullivan did take place, but it did not take place on that day. The conversation with Byron Cain was a conversation where I went, and I believe it was respecting sole payments, where I was bringing the cash money home, and it was not with reference to the checks."

And then Mr. Lockley asked:

"Question: Did I understand then that you actually had the conversations?

"Answer: Oh, yes, I had the conversation and I had the conversation with Mr. Sullivan, and I had a conversation with Mr. Cain.

"Question: But you were in error as to the time?

"Answer: Yes, sir."

2947 Then he says later on:

"Sir, I spoke to him, but it wasn't at the time"—he is talking about Sullivan now—"but it wasn't at the time of the three checks, at the time we had these checks come back, or the money wouldn't be taken in checks."

He is eliminating that subject that the money wouldn't be taken in by checks.

"The checks were returned to me by Mr. Huebner."

2948 And then Mr. Lockley asked:

"Q. Has anything transpired since you were on the stand yesterday that more nearly refreshes your recollection as to what the time of those meetings was?

"A. Yes, sir. To the best of my recollection it was some time around September or October of 1946, and I believe, sir—I remember, sir, that it was—there was a time when we were having a little difficulty getting up the payments, the cash payments in time, and that is the time, to the best of my recollection that I talked to Mr. Huebner and Mr. Sullivan.

"Q. Is your testimony changed in any respect other than the conversation instead of taking place I believe you earlier said, around February, that it took place later in the year?

"A. Later in the year, sir, but it wasn't in regard to the checks. The checks, I remember Mr. Huebner came and gave me the checks back and said that they decided they didn't want to take them.

"Q. Well, have you arrived at this more refreshed 2949 recollection just through your own mental processes, or have you had something that you have seen that helps to refresh your recollection?

"A. Sir, I have seen nothing, but each day and each night I ask for divine guidance to remember as correctly as I possibly can.

"This happened back in 1946 and I am trying very hard and I don't want to say anything that is not true. I am doing the very best I possibly can.

"Q. Now, is there anything else that you have testified to that you wish to change in any respect?"

And so on.

In other words, my position to the Court is that the subject matter is so completely changed that what is left in the whole record should be stricken.

By Mr. Lockley: Are you through, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: On that point, yes.

By Mr. Lockley: With respect to that, your Honor, I agree with Mr. Kirby, that that portion of the testimony which relates to the date of the meeting and 2950 the reference to the checks should be stricken. I don't know that we entirely agree as to the pages of the transcript that he desires stricken.

By Mr Kirby: Well, the portion that relates to the checks is between 601 and 605.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to striking the portion on page 604. Well, at the bottom of page 603 I asked:

"Q. Was there any conversation?"

And on page 604 the answer was given:

"A. Mr. Sullivan asked me, when I talked to him, how I was keeping any record of my cash payments and was I marking this on my book—I mean, what was I doing."

"Q. And what did you tell him?

"A. I said, 'No, sir; we were selling merchandise for cash,' and we were getting the cash payments and giving it to him.

"He said, 'Are you sure this is not appearing on your books any place?'

"I said, 'No, Mr. Sullivan, it is not.'"

And then I said:

"Was that a true answer?"

He said, "No, sir, it was not because had I told"— 2951 And then Mr. Kirby objected and then he was asked:

"Q. Will you proceed with the conversation?"

And he said:

"Sir, so—he said, 'Well, Dave, you know how it is. You have a place in New Jersey, a farm in New Jersey. This money I have been using in my farm.'

"And if I recall correctly that day he told me—he said, 'I am getting a new driveway,' or something, 'put in.'

"And he said, 'That is the only way I can do it today, with the tax situations the way they are.'"

Now, that portion of the testimony beginning at page 603 and proceeding to page 605 does not relate to the three checks. It related to the conversation which Mr. Lubben subsequently testified he had but that he had in the later part of the year rather than in February as he had first believed.

2952 By Mr. Kirby: Well, it is a completely different conversation he said took place. He has the general expression that the same things were said but you can't, by a general expression that they were alike, say that they were alike. That is why I move to strike it.

By the Court: The motion is denied.

By Mr. Kirby: And now, your Honor, at the conclusion of the government's case I hand up a motion of Harold Sullivan for acquittal. Would your Honor like me to proceed with my argument about that now or shall we take a short recess?

By the Court: Well, I can stay a bit longer.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. You will recall that in April of 1953 when we were up in Minneapolis with Mr. Cunningham, Mr. Cunningham made this estimate of the case with respect to Harold Sullivan: He said, "And I might say this, your Honor, and I don't suppose I am telling the defendants a thing, facts that they don't know, but without Lubben's testimony, the evidence in so far as one of these defendants is concerned is practically nonexistent."

Now, save for that one matter, confused as it is and which I felt should be a subject for a motion to strike to eliminate as much confusion as possible—save for 2953 that one matter, there is no competent evidence in this record with respect to this defendant Sullivan or his guilt of this charge at all.

First, I am going to address myself to what I conceived to be and what I am sure the Court knows to be the proper rules on a motion for acquittal under Rule 29(a).

The rule specifically says:

> "The Court on motion of a defendant or of its own motion shall order the entry of judgment of acquittal of one or more offenses charged in the indictment or information after the evidence on either side is closed if the evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction of such offense or offenses."

In the Encyclopedia of Federal Procedure they speak of that rule and they say:

"A jury cannot find the defendant guilty unless it can and does reasonably determine that the facts exclude every other hypothesis than that of guilt, and unless there is substantial evidence of such facts, the jury cannot reasonably so determine, and the Court 2954 should order a judgment of acquittal. Nor can a jury render a verdict of guilty where the only reasonable conclusion it can make is that the evidence is as consistent with innocence as guilt, and in such a case, a motion for acquittal properly lies."

2955 Even before that rule, Judge Sanborn in the Isbell case, 227 Federal, 288, spoke on the practice of granting defendant's motion and he said:

"At the close of the evidence in every trial by jury the question of law, not whether the weight of the evidence sustains the claims of the plaintiff or the defendant, but whether or not there is any substantial evidence to sustain the claim of the plaintiff unnecessarily and unavoidably arises and the duty rests upon the trial court to direct a verdict for the defendant if there is no such evidence."

Then with respect to the criminal case in front of the Court he said:

"It was essential to his lawful conviction that there should be proof beyond a reasonable doubt that he was knowingly taking"— and this was liquor—

"into the Indian Territory. There is a legal presumption that he was innocent until he was proven to 2956 be guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. Evidence of facts that are as consistent of innocence as guilt is insufficient to sustain a conviction unless there is substantial evidence of facts which exclude every other hypothesis but that of guilt. It is the duty of the trial judge to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the accused and where all the substantial evidence is inconsistent with innocence as of guilt, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to reverse a judgment against him."

In this Circuit they said, in Ex Parte U. S. where Judge Stone up in Madison had, at the close of the government's case, directed out certain of the defendants and the matter was appealed—as a matter of fact, they took Judge Stone all the way to the Supreme Court to undo what he did and it was sustained in every court, but in the Seventh Circuit, they said in 101 F. 2d, 870:

"There has been no encroachment on the proper province of the jury. The essence of legal power is to take the case away from the jury where there 2957 is an insufficiency of evidence to sustain the conviction. The court has inherent power to invoke these procedural aids in its effort to administer criminal justice."

In Wright vs. U.S. in the Eighth Circuit, 227 Federal 855, the Court said:

"The burden was upon the government to make this proof and evidence that is as consistent with innocence as with guilt is insufficient to sustain a conviction. Unless there is substantial evidence of facts which exclude every other hypothesis but guilt, it is the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury to return a verdict for the accused."

Now, in Nocola vs. United States, an income tax, at 72 F. 2d, 780, the Court said, speaking of one of the defendants:

"Unless there is substantial evidence of fact which exclude every other hypothesis than that of guilt, it is the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury 2958 to return a verdict for the accused."

The same ruling is passed in Circuit—in the 1952 case, a tax case, United States vs. Yeoman-Henderson, 193 F. 2d, 867.

2959 Now, another tax case is Yoffe versus United States 153 Fed. 2nd 570:

"Unless there is substantial evidence of facts which exclude every other hypothesis than that of guilt, it is the duty of the trial court to instruct the jury to render a verdict for the accused, and where all the substantial evidence is as consistent with innocence as it is with guilt, it is the duty of the Appellate Court to reverse a judgment of conviction."

Now, the Courts have said repeatedly in prosecutions under this 145 B of the Income Tax Law that one of the things which must be proven is a willful, personal, individual intent to defraud the Government of its tax, and the leading case is the Supreme Court case in U. S. versus Murdock 290 U.S. 389. They say, speaking of the word "willfully" that is used in this sense of the statute under which Mr. Sullivan is being prosecuted:

> "But when used in a criminal statute it generally means an act done with a bad purpose; without justifiable excuse; stubbornly, obstinately, perversely."

2960 In Lurdling versus the United States, 179 F. 2nd 419, another income tax case, they speak of the facts under which the prosecution is here being brought, and they say:

> "Such filing"—that is, of a tax return—"is unlawful, however, only if made willfully, with knowledge of the falseness and with intent to evade taxes. There is no presumption that may be drawn from the act itself—both knowledge and willfulness must be established by independent proof."

So far, does it go in the case of a corporation where an attempt is made to fasten liability upon an officer, and I will say here to the Court that Harold Sullivan became a vice president of this company on the first of July of 1946. He was not a vice president of this company in the year 1945 at all. The Government introduced the corporate minutes. They show the election of officers both for 1945 and 1946. They are in evidence. There isn't the slightest question about it. He was not vice president of the corporation at the time, in 1945, at the time the 1945 return was signed and filed at all.

2961 But, sir, to go along to this case now in Florida, United States versus A. L. Anderson. It is in Volumn 15, American Federal Tax Reports, page 822.

2962 There an attorney connected with this corporation signed the return himself, but he made a defense on a motion in front of the trial Judge that there was no competent proof in front of the Grand Jury directly showing that he had signed and filed such a return, and knowing personally of its falsity, and they did that extraordinary thing they opened the Grand Jury minutes and quashed the indictment against the man because there had not been proof of his personal knowledge of the wrong.

It said that the defendant was secretary. He was a lawyer, this man of the corporation, and had signed a tentative tax return for the corporation showing a probable final tax and so on. And the bookkeeper testified that he talked to the man. The bookeeper said he took the return over to him, and he had him sign it, and he knew it was going to be final. And then it said:

"There is no other evidence that the Court can discover in the record which remotely tends to charge Mr. Anderson with the falsity of this tax return, and the Court was of the opinion that the indictment 2963 was returned without sufficient evidence before the Grand Jury to justify the return of such indictment, and solely upon this ground granted the motion to quash the indictment."

Speaking of corporate officers, let me say briefly—let me briefly make a reference to the case, or the decisions with reference to them.

In Fletcher Cyclopedia, it says:

"The general rule is that where the grand charge involves guilty knowledge, or criminal intent—"and we have just seen that that is the essence on the decision on 145-B of the Internal Revenue Code—it is essential to the criminal liability of an officer of the corporation that he actually and personally do the act which constitutes the offense, or that the acts be done by his direction or permission.

"A corporate officer without regard to his position is ordinarily not criminally liable for corporate acts performed by other officers or agents of the corporation."

On the Phelps and Dodge case, in 139 Fed. 2d 393, it says:

2964 "The ordinary doctrine is that the Director merely by reason of his office is not personally liable for the acts of his corporation. He must be shown to have personally voted for or otherwise participated in them."

In U. S. versus Korland, in 44 Fed. the Court says:

"The principle that I have in mind is there is no criminal responsibility of a principal for the act of his agent unless the principal knowingly and intentionally had been advised or encouraged the criminal acts committed by the agent."

2965 The rule is generally stated in Corpus Juris Secundum, Volume 19 at 363, as to corporate officers, and they say:

"They are ordinarily not criminally liable for a corporate act performed by others or agents and at least where the crime charged involves guilty knowledge or criminal intent it is essential to criminal liability on his part that he actually and personally do the acts which constitute the offense or that they be done by his direction or participation."

In American Jurisprudence, under Corporations—13 American Jurisprudence at Section 1100, they say:

"An officer of a corporation no matter how great his responsibility is not, as a general rule, criminally liable for the acts of the corporation performed through other officers and agents who are not acting under his direction."

Now, the Supreme Court in discussing what is meant by substantial evidence, has laid down the rule, that 2966 appears the first time in Consolidated Edison case, in 305, U.S. 197, where the Court says:

"Substantial evidence is more than a mere scintilla. It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion."

Having in mind what some of those cases have said, it will only take me a second to cover the entire record with respect to the proof as to the defendant, Sullivan.

At page 317 Mrs. Morrill identified Sullivan physically.

At page 319 she said he didn't spend much time at the plant.

Mr. Lubben took the stand and at page 417 he identified Harold Sullivan physically.

At page 493 and 500 and 502 he said he sent flowers to Mrs. Sullivan, and that he had gone to dinner with the Sullivans, with the Cains, with the Berrys, with the Hankermyers and a number of other people.

The next mention—and the only mention of a conversation of Harold Sullivan by Lubben is this one at 2967 page 601, which has been called to your attention a short time ago, in which he said that he had these three checks, and he went to see Harold Sullivan, he talked to Harold Sullivan about it, and then he came back and said that that had not happened, that it was many months later and about a different subject that he was there.

The next reference to Harold Sullivan in the record by anyone appears in the testimony of Roeser, the comptroller of the company, and one of the signers of the tax return, who said he had never talked about the matter of either the over-payments, the unbilled payments, the income tax or anything with Sullivan.

The next witness was Graflund, the secretary, and later the acting comptroller, who signed the returns. And Graflund said he had not talked to Sullivan about any of these payments, about this cash, about the returns or any such thing.

2968 The next thing that happened was Ericson. Led by Mr. Lockley he said that he assumed the persons who told him about unbilled shipments must have been the executives, and when asked who the executives were he said that the executives were Cain, Sullivan and Huebner, and that they met with him and with Lubben. Today on the stand he said he was simply making an assumption and that he had no knowledge that there was such a meeting. He assumed that there must have been. And when asked if he could testify that it did happen, he said, no.

The next reference, and the concluding reference in the entire record, because the Court certainly has ruled that these conversations that took place out of Sullivan's presence are not binding upon him, the next reference, and the only reference that remains is the testimony of Busby this morning, where Busby said that in 1948 when he came back after first learning of these over-ceiling problems and asked for a meeting with Cain that Sullivan came there. There is absolutely nothing in that meeting as to what Sullivan said or did not say. There is no participation at all.

2969 And let me call your attention to the case of United States vs. Cole, a District Court case which appears in 90 Fed. Sup. 147, and it says there—that is an income tax case.

By Mr. Lockley: That is an estate tax case.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the property had been held in an estate at one time, and there was a question whether it came out of the estate and went to this person or to that person. But the real question in issue was who was liable for the income tax on the stuff that came out of the estate. There was an estate involved, but it was an income tax case .

But what is said would be good law, I submit, and perfectly applicable to the Busby testimony. The Court said:

> "But we cannot base criminality solely upon something that was done after the return had been made, unless it is of a character to show conclusively the existence of the criminal purpose at the earlier date," citing United States vs. Renny Ice Cream Company, 16 Fed. 2d, 353-357.

2970 So that as to the Busby testimony, where he said that as he came to talk about the matter with Cain, Sullivan came there, too, in 1948.

2971 To that this rule applies.

That is not anything to base criminality on, because his hearing the story in '48 is not proof that he knew the story when the tax return was filed in early '46 and early '47. And as they said in this income tax case—I will read it again:

> "But we cannot base criminality solely upon something that was done after the return had been made, unless it is of a character to show conclusively the existence of the criminal purpose at the earlier date."

And certainly the Busby proof does not.

Now, I have recounted for the Court absolutely ever single mention in this transcript of Harold Sullivan, even including the identifications of him that were made by witnesses that said yes, he is sitting over there.

Heitmann, I guess I didn't mention. He identified him and said he was sitting over there. And after doing that, I want to refer again to the rule that is adopted in a tax case, Lawton vs. Commissioner of Internal Reve-

2972 nue, 164 F. 2d, 380, where they say, again from that Consolidated Edison case from the Supreme Court, with an approval:

> "Substantial evidence is more than a mere scintilla. It means such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion."

In the Appalachian Electric Power case, in 93 F. 2d, 985, they say:

"* * * substantial evidence is evidence furnishing a substantial basis of facts from which the fact in issue can reasonably be inferred; and the test is not satisfied by evidence which merely creates a suspicion or which amounts to no more than a scintilla or which gives equal support to inconsistent inferences."

2973 And there are many cases that say the same thing. The summary of them is given by a District Court case in 67 Fed. Sup. 397, which says:

"In the Federal Court substantial evidence rather than a mere scintilla is necessary.

Now, if the Court please, the record I have reviewed for you, and it comes down to this, that except for the changed testimony of Lubben on that one point, there isn't even a scintilla which says that Harold Sullivan knew, and that Harold Sullivan willfully and admittedly and with a malignant heart was trying to defeat the Government of its taxes, and that is the test applied by Section 145 B.

The words of Mr. Cunningham I repeat to you again. He said:

"Your Honor, and I don't suppose I am telling the defendants a thing, facts that they don't know, but without Lubben's testimony the evidence in so far as one of these defendants is concerned, is practically non-existent."

2974 Now then, we do have Lubben's testimony. Not five cents does he say he ever gave Harold Sullivan. The only time he ever mentioned there was anything to do with him, he got up on the stand, and the next day voluntarily asked to take it—and to take it out of there, and he admitted no such conversation about that subject, the cash payments ever took place.

Now, if the Court please, I know that counsel urge matters upon the Court each day of the Court's life, and I don't want the Court to—and I know the Court won't—think I have omitted a shred of evidence which exists with respect to the defendant Harold Sullivan. You have everything, and I humbly beg your Honor to grant the motion of acquittal, because the Government must make its proof.

The Government came in knowing it practically had no case against Harold Sullivan. They were on notice before that if the proof existed, they should bring it in. They knew all along it didn't exist. And at this stage of the game, with no rancor toward Mr. Lockley at all—

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Kirby.

2975 By Mr. Kirby: —none at all. But I think it is the plain fact that they have not produced substantial evidence of the crime charged here, willful intent, and knowledge of intent on the part of the defendant Sullivan.

By Mr. Lockley: If the Court please, I am pleased that Mr. Kirby doesn't hold me personally responsible for all this.

2976 I may be presumptious, your Honor, to attempt to tell you what your duties are with respect to granting a judgment of acquittal at the close of the government's case, but I would like to quote very briefly from the Yeoman and Henderson case, which Mr. Kirby has already referred to, at 193 F. 2d, 867. And the rule is laid down there that:

> "When a motion for a judgment of acquittal is made the sole duty of the trial judge is to determine whether substantial evidence, taken in the light most favorable to the government, tends to show the defendant is guilty beyond a reasonable doubt."

Citing Bell vs. The United States, Fourth Circuit, 185 F. 2d, 302, at page 310.

> "The rule is well stated in Curley vs. U. S., Court of Appeals, D.C., 160 F. 2d, 229 at page 232, as follows:
> " 'The true rule, therefore, is that a trial judge, in passing upon a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal must determine whether upon the evidence,

2977 giving full play to the right of the jury to determine credibility, weigh the evidence, and draw justifiable inferences of fact, a reasonable mind might fairly conclude guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.' "

forth relating Mr. Sullivan. There is the testimony of Mr. Lubben which I read just a moment ago and which relates to Mr. Sullivan's concern over whether Mr. Lubben was keeping any records of these cash transactions and which, I believe, Mr. Lubben stated that the meeting was occasioned by the fact that he was somewhat late in making his payments of the over-ceiling amounts.

There was the testimony of Mr. Ericson that Mr. Sullivan was one of the members present at the time that a decision was made that the words ABC would be used on the unbilled shipments rather than the name of the Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

And, of course, there was also the testimony of Mr. Busby this morning that Mr. Sullivan was present at the conference he had in Mr. Cain's home at the time he returned from New Jersey.

2978 There is also evidence, of course, that he was a vice president—and Mr. Kirby says in 1946. He was, however, a director during all of these years. And he was a substantial stockholder. And he was one of the officers in control of the company.

2979 Mr. Ericson and Mr. Graflund both stated that they would only move with the instructions of one of those three individuals.

Now, to be sure, there has been no actual delivery of money made into Mr. Sullivan's hands. But I don't conceive that as a necessary element of the Government's case. The question is whether that income should have been reported on the return of the corporation and whether Mr. Sullivan knew that it was not being reported. In other words, whether he knew that the corporation was receiving income which was not going on its income tax returns. If he did that and if he had any part in keeping that additional receipts off the books of the company from which the returns were prepared, then he was as responsible for filing or causing to be filed the corporate returns as if he had made them and signed them himself, in so far as the law is concerned. The fact that Mr. Busby did the preparation of the return is an immaterial matter. They—and I mean Mr. Sullivan and the other two defendants—caused the return to be filed incor-2980 rectly by keeping these additional receipts off the books from which they knew that the returns would be prepared.

As to the wilfulness, I think it is axiomatic that it need not be proven by specific acts of evidence but that it may be inferred from all of the facts and circumstances in the case. There are so many cases on it, your Honor, that I had even failed to find any—to take the trouble to look any of them up.

In any event, it appears that the evidence considered in the light most favorable to the Government here, together with all the inferences that may be drawn, such as the inferences that there were three piles of money, and that there are three defendants who were in charge of the corporation, all of those inferences, together with the actual facts testified to are sufficient to warrant sending the case, as to Mr. Sullivan, to the jury for their verdict.

By Mr. Kirby: The Court specifically held that that testimony about the three piles of money was not binding and therefore not even competent. And I don't think Mr. Lockley can argue that.

Talking about the returns, the only two people that 2981 signed the returns that testified were Roeser and Graflund. And I don't think that an inference that he caused a false return can stand in the light of Mr. Graflund's and Mr. Roeser's flat testimony that they didn't discuss these matters or these cash payments, or return, or any part of it, with Sullivan.

There is an express negativing of that and the argument does not overcome that negativing, as it exists in the record here.

2982 He talks again about Ericson. Ericson I think completely said—he asked him a question on redirect, he got up and said, "Well, what was Mr. Sullivan there?"

He said, "Well, he was the vice president."

And he said, "Did he handle some of the affairs of the company?"

And he said, "Yes."

He said, "Well, Mr. Ericson, did you ever talk any of the affairs of the company over with him?"

And he said, "No."

I don't mean to deprecate Mr. Ericson, but he was down in the stock room, Judge, and that was an absolutely true answer when he said that he personally didn't handle anything with Harold Sullivan.

Now, I think it would be—having in mind that I have read conscientiously the cases that say the quantum of proof that must exist and that it must be substantial, and it must be inconsistent with anything except the theory that the government has proven its case against this man, namely, that he personally—not that he was one of the three, but that he personally, wilfully and 2983 maliciously and with a malignant purpose, intending to defeat the government of its revenue, did something. There is no proof of that at all. And to then say they will bottom their whole case on that abandoned testimony of Lubben proves, I think better than I can argue, that there is nothing but a scintilla and that they should not be permitted to go further when only a scintilla exists.

By the Court: Well, I will announce my ruling in the morning on the motion.

Are there any other motions to be made?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

I had pending, if the Court please, a motion to strike Mr. Heitmann's testimony as to the $10.000.00 payment in 1945. That motion arose at page 1812 of the record—

By the Court: Well, I haven't been favored with a record. I have had to plod along with my own record.

I remember the testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I have a copy of the record which, your Honor, may be available to the Court.

By the Court: You lawyers probably need it more than I do, I think. Later on, when I have to refresh some of my notes—I may have to have access to the transcript.

2984 By Mr. O'Brien: When I say that, Judge, I don't mean just this one. I mean the record in general. We will be perfectly happy to supply it.

What I mean now, if the Court please, at that time it wasn't wholly established that the Government had otherwise proved the full limit of its bill of particulars in respect of the year 1945.

By the Court: Well, it occurred to me, when you made your motion—supposing, however, that the jury find that some of these payments are not sustained, what about their right to utilize the so-called Heitmann payment? Your position is that if you accept the Heitmann payment, you exceed the amount disclosed in the bill of particulars; is that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is one point, yes, sir.

By the Court: Well, you are assuming that the jury will find that all of the so-called overage payments outside of the Heitmann payment will be sustained.

By Mr. Lockley: May I interrupt, your Honor?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: The $10,000 Heitmann payment
2985 does not exceed the bill of particulars, according to the question that I asked of Mr. Mammel this morning. The amounts which I asked Mr. Mammel—the amounts which he testified to as income for the year 1945, are in exact agreement with the bill of particulars, and the $10,000 which Mr. Heitmann testified to is either included in the $30,000 lump sum payment, which was not evidenced by any check, or if it is not in there, why, the Government has simply not included it as an additional $10,000.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is carried in the year 1946. I think Mr. Mammel said—

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir; it is not carried in either years, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: The point is that Mr. Heitmann testified to a ten thousand dollar payment, not a partial payment, ten thousand dollars, and already without that, they have the precise amount of the bill of particulars in their proof.

Now, I think that the reason behind the provision in the rules, for a bill of particulars, is to prevent just that. It may be that a District Judge, or Court, enforcing those rules, could compel them to state every item of their proof that would make up the total amount.

2986 By the Court: Let me ask you—I haven't seen the bill of particulars—

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Do the amounts which Mr. Mammel testified to, as to the so-called over ceiling payments of 1945 and '46, exceed the totals disclosed by the bill of particulars?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, not what Mr. Mammel testified to, according to their present claim, but what Mr. Mammel testified to in respect of the year 1945 excludes any possibility of this additional $10,000.

By the Court: He said he hadn't included the so-called Heitmann ten thousand dollar payment.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's right. That's the first part. Now, the second point is, Judge—and I think that this is an overlapping point—as I said, Mr. Cunningham filed with the Court—and it is already of record here—an affidavit on which he granted the Government's last continuance, representing that during the year 1945 Mr. Lubben made 100 percent of the payments, and that in the year 1946, Mr. Lubben paid eighty-three point some percent of the amounts, and others paid the difference as against a total of $300,000.

2987 By the Court: May I interrupt?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I don't see that there is much purpose in spending a great deal of time on this Heitmann payment. I will deny your motion now with the right to renew it again at the close of the defendants' case. If your position then seems sound I will be willing to reconsider any temporary ruling that I now have made.

By Mr. Kirby: While you were talking about that memo question I did want to ask the Court whether we might see and have our accountants check the sheets which Mr. Mammel said he was referring to, showing the different payments in the exhibits.

It is really the only way we can check it. If we could look at the memorandum he referred to. And I think that is not an unusual request.

By Mr. Lockley: If you Honor please, though, the material that he referred to is in evidence. Certainly they were entitled to get it while he was on the stand. But it seems to me that their request comes somewhat late.

By the Court: It should have been requested at the time that Mr. Mammel was on the stand.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, it wouldn't be the first time
2988 I have been late asking for something, Judge. Do you think that is enough ground to turn me down?

By the Court: Well, I am listening to Mr. O'Brien now.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: At page 577 of the record—well, I am sorry, I can't direct you to the record page now, Judge. I have been misinformed about it. But there is a check in evidence, offered by the government, in the sum of $36,148.00—rather there is a payment alleged of $36,148.00 which is related to an item on a bank statement under date of November 27, 1945, statement of the Manufacturers Trust Company.

Now, the record—when I find it—contains a general statement that that amount was paid. There is no testimony to connect that payment up with Shotwell or any one identified with Shotwell. And, consequently, I wanted to move to strike that statement that the amount was paid.

I say I don't want to dwell on it here, but I want to have all these things in the record at the one time.

Now, I have a broader motion to strike, which, in 2989 the interest of time, I would like to cover by the memorandum, which I now hand to the Court, because in the memorandum I state the precise testimony that we would like stricken, I state the testimony which we do not ask to be stricken, and then proceed with the discussion of the reasons.

I will give Mr. Lockley a copy.

I don't see that it adds anything, any assistance for me simply to read this, and present it at this time, your Honor. You are taking the one motion under advisement. It is late. I don't think we would want to interrupt the jury tomorrow, and if it is agreeable to the Court I would like to leave it with you in this form. Would that be agreeable, Judge?

By the Court: Yes.

2990 I was just reflecting on the suggestion that we might resume a little earlier tomorrow morning and dispose of some of these matters before the jury is called, and that would give Mr. Lockley a little time to look over your memorandum and see what statements he had to make in that regard.

By Mr. O'Brien: What time would your Honor direct?

By the Court: Well, how about nine o'clock?

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. McConnell: I have a motion that I want to make, too.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, I have one more motion which I think I shall present in the same way. It is a motion for acquittal—this does not include Harold Sullivan who made a separate motion, but it is a motion for acquittal of the remaining defendants as to Count 1. And I have a short memorandum in suport of that, giving a copy both of the motion and of the memorandum to Mr. Lockley.

I don't think I handed your Honor or Mr. Lockley the formal motion to strike.

(Document handed to the Court and counsel.)

2991 By Mr. O'Brien: And with that, if the Court please, I will yield to Mr. McConnell.

By Mr. McConnell: If the Court please, I have a written motion for acquittal for the corporation, which is presented under the rule that Mr. Kirby referred to.

I want to make this quite short, if I can. Generally speaking, it follows along the line of the previous motion that I made, or objection that I made with reference to the Cain testimony.

Apparently I have a genius for not stating my position clearly, and apparently Mr. Lockley thought I was making some admissions about what my admissions admit or don't admit on that case.

I have argued this case at this stage on the Government's proof, on what they have presented here, and what their proof has shown down to date. We haven't offered any evidence yet in this case and I haven't made any admissions that I know of with reference to anything in the case except that for the purposes of this motion I am taking the Government's proof as submitted as true, which I am bound to do, as a matter of law, anyway.

I not only take it as true, but as Mr. Lockley pointed 2992 out, with the inferences which go with it.

Now, briefly, my position on this is this: That when the Government produces a witness who testifies in a manner to show that the moneys which are the subject matter of the litigation are not received by a corporation, which is an individual defendant, but are received by the officers of that corporation as individuals and leaves no doubt about it, so far as his conversation with Huebner is concerned, conversation from which the inference of implications are plain and clear and anybody can understand, that it was intended by Lubben and understood by Lubben, and, according to Lubben, understood by Huebner that these premium payments which were made on behalf of Shotwell's goods were going to Mr. Huebner and someone else.

That conversation was not binding on individual defendants, but certainly was sufficient to show that Mr. Huebner was not dealing on behalf of the corporation, with reference to those moneys, according to the Government's own witness.

Now, your Honor will recall that I took Mr. Lubben, on his cross examination, over every single one of his 2993 payments and he said that every payment that he made —and an affidavit was referred to here by Government counsel—that one hundred per cent of the payments that were made were made by Mr. Lubben in 1945 and eighty-three per cent of the payments that were made in '46 were made by Lubben.

2994 I took him very carefully over his cross examination and he identified every single payment that he made as being made by him to Huebner and that Huebner piled up the money in three piles, skimmed off something for the horse races, and said, "This is for Byron, this is for Harold, and this is for myself."

Now, that testimony is not binding on the individual defendants, but, if true, this corporation had no representation at all, which wasn't adverse to it, in this transaction, from the beginning to the end. The independent stockholders, who are not charged with any crime, who are not charged with any fraud, who owned this company and its assets, to whom Huebner had a fiduciary relationship, to whom Lubben knew of a fiduciary relationship.

On that testimony, standing there on the Government's own statement, we have a conspiring together by Lubben and Huebner to deal with the merchandise, to deal with the assets of this corporation for their own benefit.

That isn't my contention. That isn't my evidence. That is the Government's evidence.

2995 And this man Lubben came in here and did everything he could to put this money in the hands of individuals as distinguished from this corporate entity. Now, if this were an alterego of these defendants the Court might very well say, and counsel here might very well say, "Oh, well, it is all the same thing. You look right through the corporation and you look right back to the same people that were getting the money."

If this division of money was three ways among three individual stockholders who owned equal and proportionate amounts of the corporate stock, you could very well say that it is a dividend, a distribution.

Huebner had less than one per cent of the stock of this corporation. Such a contention is not even possible under the situation that presents itself here now on this record.

So far as 1945 is concerned we have every single payment made under those conditions by Mr. Lubben, according to the Government's own testimony, which it sponsors, which it brings forward here and says this Court should rely on.

2996 Now, what is the legal situation? We have two cases in this circuit dealing with this specific matter. United States against Chapman, 168 Fed. 2d 997.

By the Court: Again, please.

By Mr. McConnell: 168 Fed. 2d 997, certiorari denied. 335 U. S., 853, United States against Empire Packing Company, 7th Circuit, decided in 1949, 174 Fed. 2d, 16, certiorari denied; 337 U. S. 959—

By the Court: 174 Fed. 2d 763?

By Mr. McConnell: No. Pardon me. 174 Fed. 2d 16, certiorari denied by the Supreme Court.

2997 In that case the Empire Packing Company was a meat packer. Chapman was its president and owner of all its preferred and 50 per cent of its common stock. He was in complete charge of operations including selling and had final authority on all corporate matters. And during the periods involved he instructed certain employees to collect over-ceiling prices from customers. These payments were turned over to Chapman, and in one or more instances they were charged and collected by Chapman himself. None of them were reflected on Empire's books. Certain fraudulent substitutions of lower grades of meat for those having higher ceilings and subsidies did appear in the books, but without showing the falsity of grading, weights and quantities.

Sans, vice president and treasurer and office manager, who was kept in ignorance of these matters and who prepared subsidy claims against the government, certified for Empire to the observance of price ceilings and to the truth of false entries.

The first case was the indictment and conviction of Chapman for attempting to evade a large part of his individual income tax by returning $90,124.00 gross income instead of $282,115.00 actual gross income.

2998 Among other defenses Chapman asserted that the excess income must be attributed to the corporation which sold the meat and not to himself, relying on CIR vs. Wilcox, 327 United States 404, and arguing that since the embezzled money belonged to the corporation and was not taxable to the embezzler, therefore it was taxable to its owner and not to him. But in affirming the conviction the court said at 1002:

"'Here there was no question but that the corporation received full payment for all meats sold by it and the additional income to appellant resulted from what was in effect a premium for such sales by the corporation."

Next, Empire and Chapman were indicted and convicted for filing the false subsidy claims and the treatment of this case had to do with the filing of false—it hasn't anything to do with the income tax return.

The other case is the Sherin case. That was a Tax Court case, 13 TC 221, decided in 1949. Berger, president, and Sherin were owners of Berger & Sherin, Inc. Berger was in charge of sales and unknown to Sherin arranged

2999 with their salesman Biehl to charge new customers over-ceiling prices in the form of brokerage commissions, to be divided between them ninety per cent and ten per cent. Berger and Biehl were never authoried by the corporation or Sherin to receive any amounts over contract sales price and the corporation's books did not reflect any excess prices. The matter first came to light through OPA inspectors, and Sherin remonstrated but dropped the matter for the good of the corporation. The issues were:

(1) Was Berger & Sherin, Inc., taxable on the excess prices, and was its failure to report them fraudulent? That is our question here.

(2) Was Berger's individual return fraudulent in failing to report the excess prices?

Answering the second question yes,—namely that Berger's individual return was fraudulent—and the first question no, the Tax Court said, page 228 and 9:

"The respondent argues that Berger's activities in respect to the Biehl agreements and the performance

3000 by the corporation were in his capacity as president of the corporation and that, therefore, the corporation is responsible for such actions on his part for the tax consequences thereof. We do not agree with the respondent. The corporation, as such, never authorized the illegal arrangements. It never received, directly or indirectly, any of the fruits of such transactions. Albeit Berger owned fifty percent of the corporate stock, Sherin owned an equal amount, and, on learning of Berger's action, he repudiated the illegal agreements. The corporate entity may not, in these premises, be disregarded. It has often been said that command over the income is a primary test of taxability. Here the corporation never had command over the illegal commissions. In accepting from Biehl ninety per cent of the excess payments, Berger acted for himself as an individual and not on behalf of Sherin, the other stockholder. Certainly it cannot be said on the record here that he intended to act for the corporation, 3001 nor may any doctrine of estoppel be invoked to close the corporate mouth."

3002 "The action of the respondent in including the sums of $26,905.50 and $74,502.50 in the corporation's income for the years 1941 and 1942, respectively, is disapproved."

That case also is applicable on the matter I was arguing about, the action of Cain in making the disclosure with reference to a matter in which his own income tax was involved, whereby he admits payment on behalf of the corporation, where he had an adverse interest and where you can't disregard the corporate entity.

Now, if the government's case is true, if the facts which they have presented to you here are true, this corporation has never had any independent representation at all. It has been a captive corporation from its inception in these matters.

And in 1945 over 60 per cent of the stockholders had no connection whatever with any of these individual defendants. And in 1946 over 33-1/3 per cent of them had no connection with them whatever and certainly were entitled to have independent representation and not have the corporation charged with criminal liability for the acts 3003 of officers acting under situations of that kind.

Now, some cases have arisen where a defendant has come in and tried to take positions of that kind where he is directly attacked. This position is raised by the government. We didn't raise it. We sat here and their proof came in here, on occasion after occasion, where Lubben was trying to establish that this was not a corporate transaction and never was a corporate transaction.

3004 And you Honor will recall in the cross examination of the meeting down there at the Riviera I brought out from Davidson that he had said at that time that there was no occasion for the corporation to make a disclosure at all because it wasn't a corporate transaction, it was a transaction that he had with Huebner and the individuals.

Now, that is the state of the record down to date, except for this. Lubben said that in 1946 he came in and made two payments on corn syrup. And he said that he talked to Huebner and Huebner told him that Graflund was getting suspicious but to go down and tell Graflund and make these payments and say nothing about candy payments.

Now, there again, if you can believe that, Shotwell Company had an officer who wasn't disclosing anything to the comptroller of the company. And Lubben knew it.

And they tell Lubben—or Huebner tells Lubben, according to Lubben, to go down and pay it to Graflund. And Graflund is produced here as a government witness and Graflund says on cross examination it never happened. He never took those corn syrup payments in 1946.

3005 So we have, on the state of this record, one government witness produced by the government, contradicted by another one, both under oath.

And on that kind of evidence I say that no conviction could stand as against this corporation where the government's own witnesses deny these transactions which have been brought forward in this court.

Now, I say the government is bound by its own proof. They can't impeach Mr. Lubben. They have produced him and sponsored him. He told these things.

I am not admitting that they are true. I am saying that that is their proof and that is the state of the record as it stands today.

And on that record they have not proved that this corporation got any income, they have only proved that payments were made to individuals under circumstances which lead only to the implication and the inference—the only possible inference and implication a jury could draw from that testimony at this stage of the case is that these men divided that money up, some of it went to the horse races, and the rest of it went in their pockets. And what did the corporation get out of that with which to pay income tax?

3006 Now, where is the corporation on that position? It couldn't recover the money. On the black market payments, the law in Illinois is clear. The law in Illinois is clear that the corporation had no rights. The corporation could never recover that money from those officers. A black market payment, an illegal transaction cannot be recovered by a corporation, or by a party who is seeking to recover.

So it was nothing which we could accrue on our books. Even if we had known about it we couldn't have accrued it.

The case is Samuels against Oliver, 130 Illinois 73, pages 85 and 86. The court said:

> "It would seem self-evident that the agent who merely aids the principal in the prosecution of an illegal business cannot recover for services or money advanced by him in the conduct of the business. The master or principal should not be permitted to recover against the agent for moneys received by him in the course of such illegal business."

So here we have a situation where this corporatioon couldn't accrue anything against their officers. It 3007 couldn't recover it. And you can't accrue, unless you have got a legal liability which you can enforce, which is enforcible. And that is the state of the record so far as this corporation goes, and against these individuals, so far as these payments are concerned.

3008 Now, over and above that, looking at the overall situation, I can't see how—I say this with all due deference—this Court can allow a verdict to stand against a corporation which is held captive by officers, if they are guilty of the things the government charges they are in this case. Unless we are going to forget all about corporate entity, unless we are going to say that if you have the misfortune to have fiduciaries representing your business who want to feather their own nests, that they can thereby get you into a situation where you are guilty of a crime, if the law is going to make that advance step, we have gone way beyond anything there is in the books to date on the liability of corporations for acts of its officers.

Why, 60 per cent of these stockholders had nothing to do with this transaction, or any of these transactions. They never authorized any black market operations. They never authorized these men to do any of these things that they are charged with doing. They had money invested in this company. And, in effect, the government is going to say, "We will have a tax liability against this corporate entity," and they will have if they get through here with the 3009 criminal indictment and get through here and convict this corporation of crime, for money which they never received and which the government, if it believes its own proof, knows they never received.

And that is the state of the record that we have with us today.

Now, there were some transactions testified to by some of the government witnesses—Gladys Morrill and Mr. Graflund, and they were limited and boxed in a limited period of time. And if that is all there was in the case the government wouldn't be prosecuting the case, I am sure of that. They have gone far enough into it to know what those transactions were.

Mrs. Morrill said everything that came in in that period of time went out for the payment of corn or necessary materials. If it did, it was cost of goods sold and deductible.

That is the government's own witness, conclusion or not. They produced the witness and the witness so testified. They don't have to detail it. They didn't cross examine her. They let her leave the stand with that statement. And that is what she said.

3010 Now, that takes care of everything that has come into this corporation. Whatever came their own witness took out, as a cost of goods deduction. And there can't be any questions at all, black market or no black market, that is, the cost of obtaining materials, raw materials, to operate the business was deductible against income.

Now, there is one further point. If there is any money left over, by inference, or otherwise, shown to have been received by this corporation—I don't think anybody saw my point, I tried to make it with the accountant, he understands it—on an accrual basis, there was $47,000.00 of income which should—if it came in, should have been applied to that General Confections account. And if the officers were honest, were fulfilling their duty to the corporation as fiduciaries, they would have so been applied. And it made no difference in the tax liability one way or another, because the item had been accrued. And what they did with it in later years might cause some tax liability to whoever did it, but it had nothing to do with 3011 the year '46.

By the Court: What have you to say about Mrs. Morrill stating that as office manager she was well aware that the books only recorded the amounts received on the invoice and that no record was made on the books of the company of any overage payments?

By Mr. McConnell: She knew that, but she limited her testimony to transactions within that time she was keeping the books and she said as to those transactions they all went out.

But she was captive there, too, on the basis of what has been shown here, if these men really were doing the things that the Government says they were doing.

3012 And the proof shows that the corporation received no monies at all, as it stands today, except the period of time that Gladys Morrill refers to, and as to that money, it went out in the cost of goods sold. And as to the other period, even on the Government's proof, the corporation received no income.

Insofar as criminal intent is concerned, at this stage of the case I can't see how this corporation—

By the Court: She says she was aware of some fifty or sixty thousand dollars cash, doesn't she?

By Mr. McConnell: She was aware of some fifty, sixty thousand dollars in cash, which she says was paid out, and if it was, there would be no tax liability.

By the Court: What makes you say that?

By Mr. McConnell: That is because there could be no tax liability if the money was paid out on the cost of goods, because it was deductible from income under the regulations, and so acceded to by the Treasury Department.

By the Court: Paid out on the black market?

By Mr. McConnell: Yes, if it was paid out on the black market, there could be no tax liability.

3013 I have got the cases on it.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to inject, to comment that there is no evidence that that was the case.

By the Court: I was just inquiring.

By Mr. McConnell: Sellinger is the case, 11 Tax Court

776, case decided in '48, acquiesced in by the Commission:

"Over ceiling payments for raw materials are properly a part of the cost of goods sold for tax purposes."

So she had no intent to defraud anybody if she knew they went out on the cost of goods purchased, for the purpose of the corporation. There was no income tax due, if that was the fact, and she says it was.

And the accountants that were put on the stand say the same thing, that the income and outgo washed itself out, so far as they were concerned.

Now, I say I have argued this case on the record to date, and on the proofs that the Government has adduced, not proofs which I have shown. And that is the way the record stands.

And I submit on that record that there should be an 3014 acquittal for this corporation.

By Mr. Lockley: I will take just a moment, your Honor. I am somewhat intrigued by Mr. McConnell's statement that the Government placed money in the hands of Mr. Huebner, but we didn't place any in the hands of the corporation. I don't exactly know how that can be accomplished, unless you do it through the officers of the corporation, as was done here.

Now, the evidence is clear that that money came in to the corporation's cash box, or at least a portion of it did.

Mrs. Morrill's testimony was that it came in, but she says the money that came in went out; "We spent it to get raw materials that were hard to get, and that made more candy. It increased the candy sales, and we paid the taxes on candy sales."

And she was asked on cross examination:

"So that your transactions actually produced a higher income tax?"

And she answered: "Yes."

3015 Now, if then the evidence that was brought out by the defendants themselves on cross examination is to be deleted, this was most clearly a corporate transaction. It was done for the purpose of increasing the business of the corporation, and they not only paid more tax, but if they paid more tax, they had to earn more income, and if they earned more income, these defendants and the other stockholders got it. Which could be more a part of the corporate operations than that, it is impossible to describe.

Furthermore, it is clear that the products involved were corporate products here. It was candy that was manufactured by the corporation, or it was corn syrup that was stored by the corporation, and it was all sold by the corporation.

They argue that these defendants, the individual defendants didn't get permission of the corporation. Well, that is a ridiculous thing. It is silly to suggest that they should hold a stockholders' meeting for the purpose of legalizing their activities in the back market, and spread such a record, such a meeting on the minutes. They were, in effect, the corporation. These three stockholders were in a position whereby they could order the corporation to 3016 do anything at any time. In effect, all they did—their actions were the actions of the corporation, and their actions in receiving the money from Lubben were the acts of the corporation, and the fact that some of that money got into the corporate cash box, and that records were kept by the corporation employees, and that there was testimony about those employees—everybody knew that there was such money floating around in those years—is further evidence it was part of the corporation's activities.

I don't see how you can segregate the two sets of defendants, the individuals on the one side, and the corporation on the other. All of them operated together. What one did, in effect the other one did, and the corporation is inextricably bound up with the activities of its principal officers and directors.

By the Court: Well, gentlemen, I think we have to conclude, at least until tomorrow morning at nine o'clock and I will then hear Mr. Lockley as to any further observations he wants to make on Mr. O'Brien's motion, which has been delivered by him, and further on any differ- 3017 ences which you may have with Mr. O'Brien as to the portions of Mr. Cain's testimony that should be received in evidence, at which time I will make a ruling on the various motions that I have taken under advisement.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor.

By the Court: Mr. Kirby, may I retain the check book which you let me take over the evening?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. If it would be any convenience, why don't you keep it in Chambers.

Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein in open court, outside the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court is now in session, pursuant to adjournment.

By the Court: I suppose the first matter which we should take up this morning is the question of the 3019 proffered evidence, Mr. Cain's testimony on the motion to strike.

By Mr. Lockley: May I designate a further portion of the transcript, your Honor. It is page 226, the third question and answer from the bottom, and also all of page 227, except the last question. I have gone over the portions of the transcript which Mr. O'Brien designated last night.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you kindly read me the first statement, Miss Reporter?

(Whereupon the statement was read.)

By Mr. Lockley: With respect to that portion of the transcript on page 155, I have no objection to that, but from 155 on, that is to say, pages 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, they all relate to entirely different matters. They do not explain any portions of the original admissions. They refer to new subject matter, namely, such matters as to whether an investigation had commenced and what they should do about it. They are exculpatory and self-serving in nature. They are not explanatory, nor are they retractions. They relate in part to a meeting at Mr. Sauber's office, and in part to a meeting with Special Agent Krane—that is later.

3020 By the Court: Well, of course, I am unable to follow you, Mr. Lockley. I don't have before me the pages you refer to.

Now you have to start all over again.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

The Government has designated the last question on page 152, and all of page 153.

By Mr. O'Brien: May I make a suggestion, that in turning the pages, Judge, it may help as Mr. Lockley goes on, to have it designated in some way. I have marked my own on the left hand side of the page, according to what Mr. Lockley wants, and on the right hand side of the same page, as to what I would ask for. Mr. Lockley has indicated the last question on page 152. I have the middle portion of that page, starting with the words, "By the Witness", and then down through the words "16,000".

By the Court: Have you any objection to that?

By Mr. Lockley: No, your Honor.

The Government continues on page 153 for the full page, which relates to a conference that Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Cain had with Mr. Busby, and 154, at which time they admit that they were thoroughly familiar with the matter of premium payments.

3021 Mr. O'Brien desires, I presume, the balance of page 154.

By Mr. O'Brien: I hadn't asked for it. Let me see. No, I haven't asked for that.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. O'Brien then desires page 155.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I desire the portions starting with, "Mr. Sullivan," the paragraph starting with "Mr. Sullivan", and running down through the next to the last answer on that page.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, that is only one paragraph of an answer to a question. I would suggest that the whole question and the whole answer be put in, if part of it is to be put in.

By the Court: Well, all right.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have no objection to that, if it is what you want.

By Mr. Lockley: Then at the bottom of page 155, we start talking about another matter. Now they are talking about the discussion that may be had lasted a week, and then subsequently on page 156, a discussion with Mr. Busby at great length that the matter be discussed with other people, and with somebody in the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

3022 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, the part that I asked for on page 156 starts at the top of the page and runs through the answer "None", about the middle of the page and also the question at the bottom of that page.

By Mr. Lockley: That has to do with whether or not an investigation of Shotwell had been commenced. I see no admission of any sort there.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if I might suggest that the subject is commingled here somewhat inextricably and also counsel had Mr. Busby on the stand for that part of the conversation and he went into the question of what was a timely investigation and I feel we are entitled to it. I don't need much of it but I think we should have that much.

By the Court: The mere fact that Mr. Lockley may have had him testify on the stand doesn't enter into it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I appreciate that is true, but nevertheless that portion—

By the Court: I will sustain Mr. Lockley's objection to that portion.

By Mr. Lockley: The next portion, the beginning at the bottom of page 156 and going over to page 157 has to do with the question of voluntary disclosure.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it has to do with the tax too.

3023 By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: 158, likewise, is the question—

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I don't think we can cut this conversation up into subjects in any such way. The fundamental question that is here is the man's intent, and everything that he had in mind at the time that was connected with it. Now, what they told him and all of the circumstances under which he made these statements are essential to determine what he really thought and what his intent was. I don't think we can say that just because it can also be said that it laps over into this matter that it is to be excluded.

By the Court: You are seeking now, however, to bring in the question of whether or not there was a timely disclosure and that is not an issue before this jury.

By Mr. O'Brien: I wouldn't say that, on the parts that I have indicated, Judge, on page 157.

By the Court: Which portion have you in mind?

By Mr. O'Brien: The witness says:

"They would probably assess a tax and we would pay the tax and that would be that."

3024 And down in the middle it says:

"Did he tell you before going into the policy what the effect of the failure to put those items in the return might be?"

By the Court: No. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: And page 158 relates to the further matter of the disclosure.

By Mr. O'Brien: 158 I am not interested in.

By Mr. Lockley: You are not. All right, 159 then has to do with—

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not interested in 159, either.

By Mr. Lockley: You are not interested in 159. 160—

By Mr. O'Brien: And 160, on the matter of intent, the next to the last question and the answer to it, I should like to have.

By the Court: Which question, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: The next to the last question on page 160, starting "Following that did you tell Mr. Busby"—

By the Court: What do you say about that, Mr. Lockley?

3025 By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, it is not explanatory in any way. It is exculpatory. It isn't an admission, nor is it a retraction of an admission. It is purely a defensive matter which the defendants can bring out themselves, if they desire to put Mr. Cain on the stand.

By Mr. O'Brien: What do you mean by admission, Mr. Lockley? Maybe I am under a misapprehension. What is it that you are offering—what is it that you claim is admitted by the testimony that you want to put in?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, as to the first part—

By Mr. O'Brien: Just in sum total, what are the admissions that you have in mind?

By Mr. Lockley: That Mr. Cain knew that there were over ceiling premiums being received by the corporation during this period of time, that they amounted to around four hundred thousand dollars, that he never handled any of the pay outs, so-called, himself, and that they were all done by the officers and employees of the corporation.

And, furthermore, what record there was of those pay outs had been destroyed, and that he knew the returns were false and fraudulent at the time they were filed.

3026 By Mr. O'Brien: That is just the point, that finally comes out reluctantly.

I am telling your Honor that they have two purposes in the admissions. The first is ostensibly the only one, but the second one goes to the question of intent, the intent of willful evasion.

So that matters that are pertinent to either of those things, we are entitled to have in.

The part that I want, at the bottom of 160, has to do with just that.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection as to the portion of 160 to which you have referred.

3027 By Mr. O'Brien: May I ask your Honor at this time whether that is on the basis that it is not in itself related to the issue of intent or whether it is on the basis that your Honor has—

By the Court: I don't think it bears a reasonable relation to the portion of the transcript offered by the government.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, not to delay on it, but is it your Honor's thought that the matter of disclosure as it bears upon the issue of intent in the case is terminated through the hearings which you had or that it is open before the jury here on the issue of wilful intent?

By the Court: Well, I will cross that bridge when we come to it. Whether you may offer evidence, affirmative evidence, on that point is a matter that I will consider when it is offered. I am merely considering now whether the portion to which you have referred bears a reasonable relation by way of explanation or modification to the portion offered by the government. I don't feel that it does. Therefore I have to sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I note again, your Honor, that the government's portion goes also to the matter of intent, and the question of intent is affected by what the tax-3028 payer afterwards did. And this is part of what was afterwards done.

By Mr. Lockley: As I understand it, your Honor, the basic problem here is to put into evidence the matters which the government considers to be admission against interest, and it is a question, in so far as the defense is concerned, to put in any additional matters which would tend to explain or modify those admissions.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of course, that is what we are talking about.

By Mr. Lockley: But to go beyond that—Well, with respect to page 161 that is a—

By Mr. O'Brien: You want to put in admissions as you conceive them on the subject of intent, but you don't want the other testimony which bears on the same subject, and which is part of the same testimony at this trial, on a hearing. I mean the hearing of November.

By the Court: Well, you may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 161 is a continuance of the Sauber conference, the arrangements for a voluntary disclosure.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, page 161, again, is the last question and the last answer on that page.

3029 By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 162 relates to an attempt to fix the time.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: The only thing I am suggesting on 162 is the top question and the top answer.

By the Court: Say that again, please.

By Mr. O'Brien: The first question and the first answer on 162 I should like to have.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: 163 relates to a meeting at Mr. Sauber's office, which is again beyond the scope of any of the material that the government has offered previously.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

3030 By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to say, for the record, if the Court please, that it is my position that the whole subject matter of disclosure, as revealed by the parts of the transcript that we are discussing, has to do with the issue of intent, or wilful evasion, and that since Mr. Lockley is including in the portions which he tenders claimed admissions on the matter of intent, I am entitled to have everything which is related to that, whether by way of disclosure or otherwise, incorporated.

By the Court: I will overrule the objection to it.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 164 is a continuance—

By Mr. O'Brien: 163, I was interested in the last question only and in the answer at the top of page 164.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Were you interested in anything more on 164?

By Mr. O'Brien: And after that colloquy in the middle of the page, Judge, the question—we are speaking of 164—
the question, "What if anything," etc., and the answer.
3031 By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien: And the last question and answer, part of which answer is on that page, and finished off at the top of the next page.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien: On page 165, the middle paragraph, "I said the only thing we could do"—down through the word "price", on page 165.
By Mr. Lockley: Well, this again relates to a conversation with Mr. Sauber, which has not been brought out at all on the portion of the transcript which the Government has sought to introduce up to this point.
In any event, that is only one paragraph out of an answer three paragraphs long.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if you want the others, you are free to offer them.
3032 By Mr. Lockley: Well, the government objects to that one paragraph, your Honor.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Lockley: 166 is a continuation of the conference with Sauber.
By the Court: It merely relates the conversations that he had with Sullivan.
By Mr. Lockley: That is right.
By the Court: I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. Lockley: And then comes another portion that the government desires to offer at the middle of page 167 beginning with "Assembling the data". He says they started out to make a compilation and they came up on page 168—the substance of it, they came up with a figure of something like $400,000.00, and then how they arranged the payoff or payouts and on page 169 it took less than a minute and he knew they weren't any good and couldn't substantiate them. It is just the first paragraph on page 169.
Did you have anything further you wanted on that page, Mr. O'Brien?
By Mr. O'Brien: I have nothing on 169, but on 167 I wanted the top paragraph, that is the one that concludes—the one that starts on the preceding page and concludes at the top of 167 and I wanted the next paragraph.

3033 By Mr. Lockley: That all relates to the conference with Mr. Sauber.

By Mr. O'Brien: Why, certainly, but the conference with Mr. Sauber is essential to understand what was done in the background of the supposed admission.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I believe, Mr. O'Brien, you skipped page 174.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, on 174 I wanted the question and answer, that is, the second question on that page and the answer to it.

By Mr. Lockley: That has no relationship to the compilation of the data. It relates entirely to whether or not the defendants had knowledge or notice that an investigation was being conducted. It is entirely new subject.

By the Court: What portion of 174 does Mr. O'Brien refer to?

By Mr. Lockley: That is the question, as I understand it "At any of those times".

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: —"from begenning to end did you have any intimation or notice from any agent, or from anyone else, for that matter, that a conduct of that 3034 investigation was for any purpose other than to ascertain the amount due as Mr. Sauber had told you?

"A. No."

That relates to their notice of an investigation being conducted.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: On page 175.

By Mr. O'Brien: It has to do again with the circumstances under which the supposed admission was made.
3035 By the Court: What portion of page 175?

By Mr. O'Brien: Nothing on 175.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: On 176, the bottom of the page, starting with the question:

"Question: Did they ever tell you what amount they had determined to be due?"

And running from there to the bottom, and the answer at the top of page 177, and the next two questions and answers on 177.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, there again, your Honor, it is entirely a new subject. It has to do with whether they knew the amount of income tax due, and whether the Government had ever notified them of that. So far as I can see, it has no relation to any admission. It is neither an explanation or a retraction of it.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: 191 is the next page.

By Mr. Lockley: The whole page, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: The whole page.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, the first portion has to do with the conversation with Mr. Sauber. The other portion of that has already been ruled out.

3036 The question, "Did Mr. Busby tell you in your conversation on January 11 that there was any requirement for a disclosure other than those mentioned in the published policy"—

By Mr. O'Brien: That has to do—

By Mr. Lockley: I don't have any objection to those two questions.

By Mr. O'Brien: It has to do with the premium payments.

By the Court: Well, I don't think any portion of it is admissible. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: And I wanted all of 192.

By Mr. Lockley: Now, that has to do with Mr. Krane's first visit to the premises of Shotwell.

By the Court: Same ruling.

By Mr. Lockley: Page 193 begins the cross examination by Mr. Ryan, and that includes the admissions that Mr. Cain knew at the time the returns were filed that they were false, and it goes over to pages 194 and 195, 196, and to the center of 197.

Now, I understand that Mr. O'Brien wants the balance of page 197.

3037 By Mr. O'Brien: You have all of 194?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, all of 194, all of 195, all of 196, and to the center of page 197.

By the Court: Is that what you are offering?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

3038 By the Court: Mr. O'Brien suggested that the remainder of 197 be offered, is that it? Do you want to offer an affidavit that he made?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, it doesn't go to that. Mr. Ryan is interrogating him about the affidavit and what I am asking is Mr. Ryan's question, the first paragraph of Mr. Ryan's question.

By the Court: Do you want to offer just a question?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it goes on the next page, Judge, 198, where Mr. Ryan says, "Directing your attention then to the last page thereof and to the language"—which he quotes, I wanted the question at the bottom of 197 and then continuation of that question on page 198 and the answer to it on 198. That is, the answer "That is my statement under oath and it still stands."

That has to do intimately with the subject matter with which Mr. Ryan is interrogating.

Mr. Lockley. Well, I have no substantial objection to it, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: At the bottom of that page is a further question by Mr. Ryan starting "Now, then, 3039 directing your attention", and so on. I wanted that question and the material on page 199 starting at the top and running down through the answer "That is correct," along in the last third of the page.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I have no objection.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: On page 200 I want the first question and the first answer which again is intimately connected with the subject matter at hand. The first question starts, Judge, "Did you tell him to tell the official", and the answer, "He reported back that the Government told us that we did owe taxes."

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I think we have the same objection to that, that we are going back to the voluntary disclosure meeting with Mr. Sauber which the Government has not attempted to introduce through this transcript.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is a mere accidental thing. The real essence of it, Cain's condition of mind as to whether Cain thought that there were taxes owing or whether it was merely that the Government said that there were.

By the Court: What are you offering, the first 3040 question and answer?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.

By the Court: Nothing more?

By Mr. O'Brien: Nothing more.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is not sustained, is it, your Honor, on the basis that there is more than that which should be included?

By the Court: Well, at least I am contending that the offer is not germane to the portion offered by the Government.

3041 By Mr. O'Brien: On page 201. Of course, my mind goes back, your Honor, to the time when this testimony was admitted over my objection and your Honor took the position that it was a question of Cain's state of mind and let in this cross on that basis.

Now, this is right part of that cross.

By Mr. Lockley: It is not—

By the Court: I am merely ruling on what is offered.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, on paoge 201, the next to the last question—well, put it this way: Both questions, the two questions at the bottom of 201 and the intermediate answer there or intervening answer, plus the answer at the top of 202.

By Mr. Lockley: We appear to be back on the same subject again of advising Mr. Sauber.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: On 202, the second question and the answer—well, really on 202, all of the balance starting with the second question going on to the bottom of the page.

By Mr. Lockley: All of that relates to the conversation.

By the Court: With Mr. Busby.

By Mr. Lockley: I can't tell whether it is with 3042 Mr. Busby or whether it is with Mr. Sauber.

By Mr. O'Brien: Regardless of who it was, Mr. Ryan was exploring Cain's condition of mind. That is the pertinency of the offer.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, he is relating to a conversation here: "Did you tell him to tell Mr. Sauber?"

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: On 203—what I have offered on 202 carries over to the top of page 203 and then the answer and then the next question and answer which is the first new question on 203. It is all a part of the same material.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, the same objection applies then to the—

By the Court: The same ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: And the question and answer in the middle of the page, at 203, starting with "Well, in sending him over to Mr. Sauber—" et cetera, page 203.

By Mr. Lockley: Well. we are back on that question of Mr. Sauber again, in making a disclosure. Frankly, I hardly see how an act which took place sometime in 1948 can have any relevance to a man's state of mind in 1946 and 1947. If Mr. Cain had a false intent at 3043 the time those returns were filed, in 1946 and 1947, the crime was complete at that time and what he did in 1948 doesn't intend in any way to forgive or excuse the crime. I hardly see how this has any relation to his wilful intent.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is one of the things I am curious about, as to whether it is either the Court's position or counsel's position that what happened in the way of disclosure in 1948 has no bearing on the issue of intent at the time the returns were filed. If there is any such thought, I would like to have a ruling on it.

3044 By Mr. Lockly: Well, your Honor, this isn't a prolonged inquiry into—

By the Court: Well, I have ruled on it.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir. Where do we go on 206, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: On 206—on 206 the first question and then the answer from the middle of the page reading, "It had to be because I left here on the 23rd or the 24th of January." And then the question and the answer at the bottom of the page.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, as to the—

By Mr. O'Brien: And the answer ending at the top of page 207.

By Mr. Lockley: As to the first portion offered, why, it has to do with the time.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By Mr. Lockley: Fixing the time only, which is—

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is necessary to understand the last question and the first part.

By the Court: Well, it relates to conversations with Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Busby.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

3045 By Mr. O'Brien: And on page 207, the middle paragraph reading, "I said 'We stand willing and able' ", etc.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, sir, I have no objection to that.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: It is lifted out of context. I would like to have an exact description again by Mr. O'Brien as to what portion that is.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think I described it as the middle paragraph of the page starting with the words "I said 'We stand willing and able' ", etc.

By Mr. Lockley: Well. that being the case I would offer the first paragraph, which begins, "After all, I was a business man".

By the Court: That may be received.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

On page 208 about the—well, it is the first question "Whether you owed the tax or not, is that right?" And the answer and the next question and the answer and the next question and answer. In other words, the first, second, third questions on page 208 and the answers to them.

By the Court: Well, what do you say about that,

3046 Mr. Lockley?

Mr. Lockley: Well, I am trying to understand exactly what it means. It doesn't have any significance to me. It is lifted out of context and I don't see that it relates to any particular matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: It relates to the man's thought and intention. Mr. Ryan asked, "Whether you owed the tax or not," and he said, "Whether I owed—I expected to be assessed for them."

"Q. But to the extent that they would be deductible you would consider that you didn't really owe the taxes, even though"—

And then,

"Q. —even though you might be in a position where you would have to pay?

"A. That is correct."

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I don't have any objection then.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't have any objection to that portion of it, but I will offer the balance. Let me see.

I will offer the next question and answer which concludes "under the terms of the Revenue Act I was guilty of fraud."

By the Court: On what page?

3047 By Mr. Lockley: That is on page 208.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: Have you finished?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then I take the next question at the bottom of 208, Judge, and ending just before the colloquy on page 209.

By Mr. Lockley: Leave out the colloquy?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And then the answer and the question and answer following it on page 210.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Okay?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then on page 211, the answer, the question and answer, really, yes. At the top of 211, starting with "We told Mr. Sauber that unquestionably we owed taxes, that is right, under their rules."

3048 By Mr. Lockley: Well, this relates to another conversation, or I presume it is the same conversation with Mr. Sauber.

By Mr. O'Brien: The same one, but it is on the same subject.

By Mr. Lockley: But it relates to—I see no reference to the state of mind. They speak of their moral position, not their legal position here or their intent. I don't know what they mean by "We morally owe no taxes."

By the Court: It may be received.

By Mr. Lockley: It may be received? All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: On page 213.

By the Court: What page, please?

By Mr. O'Brien: 213.

By Mr. Lockley: First, if you please, Mr. O'Brien. I have two questions in the middle of page 212.

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, yes.

By Mr. Lockley: They begin:

"Did you feel you owed a tax?"

And the answer:

"Yes, I felt we owed a tax."

And the next question and answer.

3049 By the Court: 218?

By Mr. Lockley: 212, your Honor.

By the Court: I know, but are we now on 218?

By Mr. Lockley: Is that where you go next?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, in that case, I would want the following questions and answers, a question on 212, Judge, right after what Mr. Lockley said—the question?

"Morally and legally?"

And the answer, and then the question and answer following.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I have no objection, your Honor.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: That goes to the top of page 213, Mr. O'Brien; right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I didn't carry it that far. I had—it seemed to me repetitious. I had just this part. (Indicating).

By Mr. Lockley: Oh, all right.

By Mr. O'Brien: And then on page 213, the first—the matter starting with, and including the first question.

By the Court: On page two hundred thirteen?

By Mr. O'Brien: 213. The first question, down 3050 through the last answer on the page. It is on the same subject matter.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, this seems to be going to the question of whether they paid their taxes, and whether they owed their taxes, and whether there was a moral obligation, and a legal obligation—it seems to me to be getting—

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is a direct part of the same thing.

By the Court: It goes to how far on page 214?

By Mr. O'Brien: No, I didn't reach 214, Judge: It starts on page 213 with the first question, and goes down through the last answer on the page.

By the Court: It may be received.

By Mr. O'Brien: 214, I wasn't interested in. 215 I am not interested in. The first two questions and the first two answers—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment. If we are going to include all of that on page 213, I would like to include down to the answer, "That is right, I meant—that is what I meant."

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, on page 214.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

3051 By Mr. O'Brien: Well, now, where does it conclude?

By Mr. Lockley: It concludes, "That's right." With the answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: With the third answer on the page. All right.

By Mr. Lockley: That's correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Then on 215, first two questions and answers.

By Mr. Lockley: No, I don't have any objection to those.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien: On page 218, the bottom question, ending on the top of 217, and right down through the answer at the middle of the page, "That's right, he said it was the government policy that over-ceiling payments could not be deducted."

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien. Would you show me where that is?

By Mr. O'Brien: Starting at the bottom of 216, down through this (Indicating).

By Mr. Lockley: Well, we are going back to the conversation now with Mr. Sauber. I think that that is in—

By the Court: I didn't follow, Mr. O'Brien. Where did you start from on 216?

3052 By Mr. O'Brien: At the very bottom, the question starting—

By the Court: "Which meeting—"

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir. And running down through the middle of the next page.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have just one more. That's 217—and I think that is the last.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, your Honor, if I may be permitted I would like to offer an additional portion on page 226, beginning with the third question from the bottom of the page, extending to all but the last question and answer on page 227.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I don't see that—how far do you go, to the bottom of the page?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, right here (Indicating).

By Mr. O'Brien: Through the next to the last answer?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. Is that in?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By the Court: Now, Mr. O'Brien, which is your last page?

3053 By Mr. O'Brien: My last one was 217.

By the Court: And what portion of that?

By Mr. O'Brien: I will have to go back. It is right from the top down to the middle of the page, down to the question, "Now, in your conversation with Mr. Sauber—"

By Mr. Lockley: I believe, your Honor already ruled that was out.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, your Honor had ruled.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

3054 By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think so. I thought the Court had admitted that, because I hadn't marked it off. We passed it.

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, I objected on the ground that it related to the meeting with Mr. Sauber, that it has to do entirely with conversation, it has no relation to the state of mind, it is not an admission.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Did you have anything further?

By Mr. O'Brien: I am just looking. You added something since last night.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By the Court: I suppose it would be perfectly proper for either counsel, when this testimony is read, to state, for instance, that Mr. Sauber is a representative of the Internal Revenue Department, or such explanatory side statements that may aid the jury in knowing about the identity of the parties referred to. Otherwise much of this will be entirely unintelligible. And that refers both to the portion read by Mr. Lockley and the portion read by defense counsel.

I merely make that by way of comment.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

3055 By the Court: Now, gentlemen, before the jury comes in there are some observations that the Court wanted to make for the record now on these motions that the Court took under advisement.

On the motion made on behalf of the Shotwell Company that none of the statements made by Mr. Cain in this proffered testimony on the hearing—on the motion to suppress is admissible as to the corporation because it is contended that the testimony indicates that Mr. Cain's interests were adverse, and therefore anything stated by Mr. Cain was in his individual capacity and not as an officer of the company, I call attention to counsel, however, that the motion to suppress was made on behalf of all the defendants. Mr. Cain took the stand and was offered as a witness by all of the defendants in support of the motion to suppress. The corporation was represented by counsel at the hearing when Mr. Cain took the stand as a witness and counsel for the corporation actively participated in the proceedings.

3056 There is nothing in the proffered testimony of Mr. Cain which has any indication of any adverse interest by him as to the Shotwell Company.

In fact, the contrary appears.

Under these circumstances, it would appear that the Court could not limit the offer as to Mr Cain, but insofar as his statements constitute competent evidence, they are admissible not only as to him, but as to the corporation as well.

And in this connection, it may not be amiss to point out the Court cannot at this time determine the factual issues as to what may have ultimately happened to any of the overage payments which the Government contends were delivered by Lubben to Huebner. There is testimony that Huebner stated, or intimated at least, that the money was divided among the three individual defendants. There is other testimony which may support that statement.

On the other hand, there is testimony, especially in the proffered transcript of Mr. Cain, as well as elsewhere, 3057 that some, if not all, of the overage payments were used by the corporation to purchase materials for the manufacture of its product.

The records of Eatsum and General Confections, so far as they are available, indicate that these overages were due Shotwell by reason of merchandise sold by Shotwell to Lubben's companies. The monies due Shotwell were delivered to an officer of Shotwell as an obligation of Shotwell, not by way of a personal debt to the officers.

Therefore, this Court cannot at this time usurp the functions of the jury in determining on this record the ultimate disposition of any of the overage payments. If Lubben made the payments, as he states, in discharge of an obligation to Shotwell, the mere fact that an officer of the company who received the payments stated that the three individual defendants were going to divert the payments for their own use, does not necessarily negate the fact that the debt to the corporation was discharged.

Lubben's records did not indicate any personal debt to Cain, Huebner, or Sullivan. The checks drawn to cash were for the purpose, according to his statements of 3058 obtaining currency to discharge the debt to Shotwell.

Insofar as the defendant Sullivan is concerned, and his motion for acquittal, the Court must consider the testimony in the record as to him in the most favorable light in support of the charges made in the indictment. Whether on this record the Government has established his guilt of the offense charged beyond a reasonable doubt, is for the jury to determine.

Lubben's testimony as to his conversation with Mr. Sullivan is not denied or controverted in the record. The Court cannot say on this record that such testimony should be disregarded. The mere fact that Lubben changed his testimony as to the time when the alleged conversation took place does not justify a motion to strike the entire testimony.

3059 Lubben contends that everything he related in his first testimony regarding the conversation is true, except as to the time when it took place. None of this testimony, or any of the reasonable inferences to be drawn from other facts and circumstances disclosed by the evidence are controverted.

The Court is well aware that there must be more than a scintilla of evidence involving defendant Sullivan in order to justify a finding of guilty. Whether he intentionally and wilfully with guilty knowledge intended to defraud the Government of any income tax due from Shotwell for the years 1945 and 1946, as charged, is, at this time, at least, a question for the jury to determine and not for the Court to decide as a matter of law.

The Court has given due consideration to the motions of the defendants to strike certain testimony given by the witnesses Lubben, Krasne and Feldman, and also the respective motions for acquittal which have been filed by the various defendants. Some of the observations which the Court has heretofore made are pertinent to these 3060 motions. After due consideration the Court is of the opinion that the motions should be and they are denied and exceptions reserved to the particular defendants whose motions are hereby denied.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, we have one more motion which we said we would take up at this time, and that is the motion for the mistrial, and in which I expressly request that the jury be polled in the manner that the Circuit has prescribed.

By the Court: All right.

You may call in the jury.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I wonder if we might have a short recess before that is done. Five minutes would be enough.

By the Court: We will take a recess for five minutes.

(Short recess.)

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had in the hearing and presence of the Jury:)

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, I have some added motions that need to take place out of the presence of the jury.

3061 By the Court: Well, I have had no notice of those motions. I think you had better defer with the presentation of them until an appropriate time.

By Mr. Kirby: It would not be possible to present them at any other time.

3062 By the Court: May I see them?

By Mr. Kirby: Of course, the only thing that is going to happen now, they are going to read that transcript, is that all?

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. Kirby: That is the next thing to happen. All right.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Fuller.

Shall we have the formality of having Mr. Fuller on the stand?

By the Court: I don't think so.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

At this time, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I desire to read from the transcript of a proceedings held before his Honor Judge Nordbye on a motion by the defendants to suppress evidence on November 12 and 13, 1952.

Certain portions of the transcript have been designated by the government and certain portions by the defendants. Mr. O'Brien and I have agreed that in order to make it as understandable as possible I will read all of those portions. Mr. O'Brien will please check me to make sure I have them correctly, as far as he is concerned.

3063 The defendant Byron A. Cain was called as a witness—

By the Court: You will have to raise your voice, too, Mr. Lockley, if you want the jury to follow what you read.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By the Court: And read slowly so that they may follow your statements.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

"BYRON A. CAIN, one of the defendants herein, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:"

The questioning by Mr. O'Brien, the answers by the defendant Byron Cain.

"Q. Do you recall, Mr. Cain, any occasion or occasions or an occasion late in the year 1947 or early in 1948 when Lubben asked your company to lend General Confections $50,000.00?

"A. I do.

"Q. Is it true that you sent Mr. Busby east to investigate the financial position of General Confections, Inc.?

3064 "A. I did.

"Q. Is it true as he said that on his return, and on January 11, 1948, he reported to you at your home?

"A. That is correct. Mr. Sullivan came over to my house.

"Q. Harold Sullivan was present, too?

"A. That's right.

"Q. And will you state briefly what his report was?

"A. He told us—

"Q. His advice.

"A. He told us that his financial condition was very bad, that $50,000 wouldn't do him a bit of good in his judgment from a cursory examination of his books, therefore, we would be very silly to enter into such a loan.

"Mr. Sullivan and I were businessmen. We didn't make the loan.

"Q. At that time, did Mr. Busby speak to you and Harold Sullivan on the subject of premium receipts and premium payments?

"A. He did.

"Q. You were thoroughly familiar with those 3065 at that time, were you not?

"A. We were.

"Q. Prior to that time, prior to January of 1948, did Busby know anything about them?

"A. Not a thing.

"Q. Did he inquire of you if it was true that there was such a payment?

"A. Yes, he did.

"Q. And of Harold, too?

"A. Yes, he did.

"Q. What did you tell him?

"A. I told him what had gone on in the company, that we had been taking over ceiling prices, and we had been making trade bids."

By Mr. O'Brien: Deals, that should be. It is corrected in my copy.

By Mr. Lockley: Is it corrected?

"—trade deals. We had taken over ceiling payments from Lubben, and his various companies over a period of a couple years, and he promptly became exercised about it, and said, 'We must make an amended return.'

3066 "Mr. Sullivan and I told him to go down and make whatever arrangement was necessary with the proper authority to make such amended return.'

"Q. What, if anything, was said as to the reason for your failure to incorporate those items in the 1945 and 1946 returns?

3067 "A. Well, our reasons, of course, were very apparent. We were in violation—

"Q. No, what was said.

"A. We told him that we were in violation of the OPA and subject to triple penalty, if we were, and we certainly didn't want to put that on our tax return. That was No. 1."

On page 167 of the transcript Mr. Cain is still under questioning by Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: It really starts on 166.

By Mr. Lockley: It is my understanding of the Court's ruling.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. Lockley: For your understanding, there is a gentleman named Mr. Sauber, who is an employee and an official of the Bureau of Internal Revenue who will be referred to.

"Q. What did you do about assembling the data that you told Sauber you would assemble pending the arrival of the agent?

"A. We started out to take a compilation. We were primarily interested in over-ceiling payments 3068 to us, anything that could be charged to us. That is the only thing we were interested in.

"So we started out to assemble that data and, as things usually do, the agent didn't appear, and he didn't appear, so it dragged.

"The minute he appeared everybody went to work on it again.

"Mr. Busby, I think, had a man working on it continuously from about, oh, January, February, right on through, but then we put the whole staff on it, Mr. Huebner, and the whole gang of us got to work, Mr. Sullivan, and we assembled what would give him something to go by and we told him that.

"Q. What did you assemble?

"A. We got the invoices that had been shipped to Lubben and through Mr. Huebner's memory we tacked the highest price that we in our judgment had ever been charged on over-ceiling and we considered no trade deals, no straight deals with the fellow at all. Every single invoice we considered that we got some kind of a cash rebate on.

3069 "Q. Whether you did or not?

"A. Whether we did or not, whether it was a trade or not, and then we finally came up with a figure of something like $400,000.00. We said, 'Here it is.'

"And then they were in a dilemma about what to do about the payouts, and I said, 'I will tell you what we will do about it. Give me a piece of paper.'

"I said, "Busby, work it backwards.'

"I wrote it down this way—'There is your payouts.'

"It took me one minute, less than a minute, and I knew they weren't any good, and we couldn't substantiate them, but I threw them in for what they were worth. I hoped they believed that we paid out something."

And now Mr. Cain is under cross examination by Mr Ryan, who was an assistant United States Attorney.

"Q. Now, Mr. Cain, before you sent Mr. Busby to New York and before he returned and told you 3070 that he learned you received over-ceiling payments you knew, of course, that you had received over-ceiling payments?

"A. Certainly.

"Q. Did you consider prior to that time that Mr. Busby talked to you the effect of these over-ceiling transactions and the corporate tax liability?

"A. Yes, we had.

"Q. You had considered it. Was it your thought it would affect your tax liability to increase it or that it would remain constant in spite of these transactions?

"A. Well, at that time we didn't know.

"Q. Well, at the time that you filed corporation tax returns for the year 1945 did you consider that they were honest tax returns or an honest tax?

"A. They couldn't have been.

"Q. You mean that you considered at the time that the corporate return for 1945 was filed that it could not have been an honest tax return?

3071 "A. That's correct, inasmuch as it didn't reflect our total income or total expenses.

"Q. Did you consider at the time the corporation tax return for 1945 was filed that it did not show the total of net taxable income?

"A. Restate that."

And the question was re-read.

"A. I would say yes to that statement.

"Q. That you considered it did not show the total of net taxable income."

The Court said: "I don't think the witness answers the question. He nods his head."

And the witness replies:

"I said yes, your Honor.

"Q. So when the 1945 tax return for the Shotwell Corporation was filed you considered it to be a fraudulent return?

"A. Inasmuch as it did not reflect the total income and total expense it was fraudulent, yes.

3072 "Q. And in that it did not reflect the total, in your opinion, the total tax due the Government, is that right?

"A. In the opinion of the Government, yes.

"Q. I mean, in your opinion. I am not questioning about the opinion of the Government. In your opinion?

"A. In my opinion, I would never give the Government any money unless they told me I owed it to them, so I would have to take the Government's opinion on taxes.

"Q. My question is, when the Shotwell corporation tax return for the year 1945 was filed, did you consider that you had omitted from it some of the net taxable income, the net taxable income that was in fact received by the Shotwell corporation?

"By the Witness: Yes.

"Q. Well, then, you considered the 1945 to be a fraudulent return, is that correct?

"A. That is correct, inasmuch as my modification of the answer previously.

"Q. What modification is that?

"By the Witness: Read it back to him, Mr.
3073 Reporter.

"Q. Well, did you or didn't you consider it a fraudulent return?

"A. Yes, it was a fraudulent return inasmuch as it did not reflect the total income and expense of the company.

"Q. Well, would you consider a return fraudulent if it showed all of the tax that was due from the taxpayer, even though there were inaccuracies in it?

"A. Yes.

"Q. You would consider it fraudulent?

"A. Yes.

"Q. Did you consider the 1945 tax return of the Shotwell corporation was fraudulent because it did not reflect all of the net taxable income of the corporation and all of the tax due the United States?

"A. I would say yes to that question.

"Q. Did you consider the 1946 tax return of the Shotwell corporation fraudulent, as not reflecting correctly the total net taxable income of the corporation for that year, and the total tax due?

3074 "A. Yes.

"Q. Now, then, when you called on Mr. Sauber in company with Mr. Busby, did you tell him that the Shotwell corporation had filed false income tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. Yes, I guess I did.

"Q. I show you, Mr. Cain, a copy of an affidavit, which has just been marked Government Exhibit 1 for identification, which purports to be a copy of an affidavit that you made in connection with, or in support of the motion to dismiss. I ask you to look at it and see if that is the affidavit that you made, if it is a copy of the affidavit?

"A. Are you trying to say that because I say 'Omissions and misstatements'?

"Q. No, I am asking you, Mr. Cain, if that is a copy of your affidavit?

"A. Yes, this is a copy.

3075 "Q. Directing your attention then to the last page thereof and to the language:

"'Affiant further avers that although he and his associates have steadfastly maintained' that the defendant corporation owes no tax over and above the sum of $370,638.95 which it paid for the year 1945, or over and above the sum of $457,012.98 which it paid for the year 1946, the activities of said agents aforeand were of such embarrassment * * *.'

"Is that your statement made under oath?

"A. That is my statement under oath, and it still stands.

"Q. Now, then, directing your attention to a conference that has been testified to which you had with Mr. Busby when you returned from New York in January of 1948"—

By Mr. O'Brien: When he returned.

By Mr. Lockley: Pardon me.

"—when he returned from New York in January of 1948, at that time he asked you about these overceiling transactions that the Shotwell Company had had, is that correct?

"A. That's correct."

3076 "Q. At that time did you tell him that the Shotwell corporation had made false tax returns for the years 1945 and 1946?

"A. At that time I told Mr. Busby that we had omitted this over ceiling receipts and over ceiling payments.

"Q. Did you tell him?

"A. No, I did not.

"Q. You did not tell him, that, you did tell him, did you, that you had over ceiling receipts, that you had received over ceiling payments, and that you had paid out over ceiling payments, and that roughly they balanced or washed each other out?

"A. That's correct."

This is a portion of an answer by Mr. Cain:

"After all, I was a businessman. I got involved—"

By Mr. O'Brien: Where are you now?

By Mr. Lockley: Page 207, Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: How about 201?

(Discussion between counsel.)

By Mr. O'Brien: 206?

By Mr. Lockley: 207.

3077 This is on page 207 of the transcript.

"After all, I was a businessman. I got involved in this thing through no particular desire on my part. I wanted to build up a business, and so I wasn't surprised nor was I disappointed.

"I said, 'We stand willing and able to pay any amount of tax that is assessed against us, and we are anxious to get the job done. If we find that we have money coming back, or we feel that we have money coming back, we will use every means to get it back, but we are ready to pay it right now.'"

Further questions by Mr. Ryan and answers by Mr. Cain.

"Q. Whether you owed the taxes or not, is that right?

"A. Whether I owed—I expected to be assessed for them.

"Q. But to the extent that they would be deductible, you would consider that you really didn't owe the taxes, even though—

"A. You mean my own mental reservation on it?

3078 "Q. —even you might be in a position where you would have to pay?

"A. That is correct.

"Q. Well, then, you wouldn't have considered yourself guilty of any fraud at that time, is that right?

"A. I don't understand this fraud thing all the time, Mr. Ryan. Under the terms of the Revenue Act I was guilty of fraud.

"Q. Well, the statute involved provides that anyone who attempts to defeat and evade the payment of any tax imposed under the particular chapter wilfully attempts to defeat and evade, is guilty of what we call tax evasion, and that is the fraud to which we have reference, I have reference, in asking these questions—the wilful attempt to defeat and evade the payment of taxes, and on the basis of what you say your attitude was when you talked to Mr. Sauber you didn't consider that you were a wilful evader, is that right?

"A. That is a long question, isn't it?

3079 "Well, I was certainly an unwilling evader.

"Q. Well, you mean in the sense that your evasion was incident to something else, or in the sense that it wasn't wilful if there was evasion?

"A. Mr. Ryan, if it hadn't been for the fact that the OPA was in effect and we had to do things in violation of that law, this tax case never would be. We would have reported every penny of income that ever came in to the company."

"Q. Well, then, you say that you did tell Mr. Sauber that the corporation owed taxes unquestionably?

"A. We told Mr. Sauber that unquestionably we owed taxes, that is right, under their rules.

"Q. How do you reconcile that with your affidavit in which you say that at all times you have maintained throughout these proceedings that the corporation owed no taxes?

"A. Well, we morally owe no taxes. If we took 3080 in money and spent the money we owe no taxes, but under your rules we do owe taxes.

"In other words—"

By Mr. O'Brien: That is as far as he goes.

By Mr. Lockley: And then to page 212:

"Q. Did you feel that you owed a tax?

"A. Yes, I felt that we owed a tax.

"Q. Morally and legally?

"A. My answer still stands. I felt that I owed a tax."

The next question—

By Mr. O'Brien: The next question.

By Mr. Lockley: (Reading):

"Q. Did you make any distinction between the feeling that you owed it legally and the feeling you owed it morally? You made the distinction a little while ago, that is the reason I ask.

"A. Yes, I would make a very definite distinction between a moral obligation and a legal obligation."

Excuse me.

3081 "Q. Did you mean what you said to him?"—which refers to Mr. Sauber—

"A. Yes, I meant that we wanted to pay the taxes.

"Q. That you owed the taxes?

"A. I really meant that. I meant we wanted to settle this thing.

"Q. What did you mean in your affidavit when you say:

"'That at all times in your proceedings you and your associates have maintained that the corporation owed no taxes'?

"A. Well, I am going over to the moral side of it now.

"Q. Well, do you mean when you spoke to Mr. Sauber you were speaking legally, and when you spoke in the affidavit you were speaking morally, is that what you mean?

"A. And when I spoke to Mr. Sauber and explained the case to him from the moral angle he understood just that.

3082 "Q. Well, of course, Mr. Cain, a taxpayer either owes taxes or he doesn't. There is a distinction between owing taxes and considering yourself in a position where though you don't think you owe them, you can't prove that you don't.

"Do you understand that distinction?

"A. That is right.

"Q. Now, if I understand you correctly, you meant that you owed the taxes in fact, and you said so to Mr. Sauber.

"Is that right?

"A. I meant that I owed the taxes, and couldn't prove that I didn't.

"Q. You owed them, and you couldn't prove that you didn't?

"A. That is right. I meant—that is just what I meant."

And now on page 226:

By Mr. O'Brien: Page 215?

By Mr. Lockley: Did we leave something out, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: At the top of page 215.

By Mr. Lockley: 215 of the transcript.

3083 "Q. Did you feel, did you believe that the gross receipts unreported you had received exceeded the gross disbursements unrecorded?

"A. At the time I made the disclosure?

"Q. Yes.

"A. I don't believe I knew the status of the situation at that time."

And now to page 226.

"Q. To whom did you pay any of the money that you say was spent for the purpose of procuring materials over ceiling?

"A. I didn't pay any of it to anybody.

"Q. What did you do with it?

"A. I never handled a penny of it.

"Q. Did you ever receive any of it from Mr. Lubben?

"A. No.

"Q. Personally?

"A. No.

"Q. Who did?

"A. Oh, various people in the company.

"Q. Well, who would they be?

"A. Mr. Huebner, I think Mrs. Morrill received 3084 some, Mr. Graflund, Mr. Roeser, and possibly one or two others.

"Q. Well, who might the others be?

"A. I would have to refresh my memory on it.

"Q. But you did not?

"A. I never did, no.

"Q. Did you ever see any of the money?

"A. I think on one occasion I might have seen the money.

"Q. That is, between the time it was received and paid out?

"A. You mean did I see it between the time it was received and paid out? Oh, I would think so. I was President of the company."

At this time, your Honor, the Government rests.

And Thereupon The Government Rested Its Case In Chief.

3085 By the Court: Mr. O'Brien, the matter to which you refer, I haven't forgotten it, but I wanted to write up the matter more carefully. I want to refer to it more carefully than I can orally that way. Some time during the day I will ask the jury the question that you have in mind. You may proceed.

By Mr. Kirby: I have certain motions. Has the Government's case rested?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Court: May I see the motions, please.

By Mr. Kirby: I would like to discuss them out of the presence of the jury.

By the Court: Haven't I just passed on this motion?

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By the Court: I thought I had.

By Mr. Kirby: No. It involves a little something else, your Honor. If your Honor please, the times stated on which it is made—I don't mean the hour, but—

By the Court: Well, we could take our morning recess now and I will hear you in chambers on it. We will take a recess for ten minutes.

3086 By the Marshal: The court will recess for ten minutes. Will the audience please remain standing while the jury files out.

(Whereupon a recess was taken.)

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in chambers, outside the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Court: I merely suggested we take it in chambers, thinking we might expedite the matter. I notice you have two motions, one for acquittal of defendant Sullivan and the other for severance.

By Mr. Kirby: I mean the two motions jointly, that is to say, the defendant Harold Sullivan and—

By Mr. McConnell: This motion doesn't concern me, I don't think.

By the Court: I am sorry. I didn't hear that.

By Mr. McConnell: This motion doesn't concern me.

By the Court: I don't think it does.

By Mr. Kirby: The defendant, Harold Sullivan, wishes to put the case to the Court now on a motion for acquittal at the conclusion of all the evidence as to the defendant Sullivan. That is, the defendant Sullivan is not 3087 obliged, as I conceive it, to introduce any evidence in his defense at all. He may rest, and it is up to the Government to prove beyond all reasonable doubt his guilt. He needn't adduce evidence at all.

By the Court: Does he rest?

By Mr. Kirby: He asks leave to make these motions to rest, for an acquittal upon resting, that is, the conclusion of all the case, and that if that motion for acquittal be not granted by the Judge, then we must tender that issue to a jury.

Then we want a severance so we can go to the jury with the case, if it exists as to Harold Sullivan. We don't want to be put in the position, your Honor, of having an enormous amount of further evidence come in, which, as we understand it, wouldn't add or detract to the quantum of proof against Harold Sullivan now. That quantum of proof, we have indicated, is extremely limited. It turns, as your Honor's memorandum this morning indicated, solely or principally upon that Lubben statement about that one conversation and of course the proof which would go on in the balance of a long trial would cover many 3088 fields, much misunderstanding, and it couldn't be cured by an instruction to the jury to disregard that evidence with respect to the defendant Sullivan. It is not possible, as we see it, for the defendant Sullivan to be granted the rights he asks for, that is, to rest his case, to have the motion for acquittal at the conclusion of all the case passed upon by the Judge and also to have a fair passing upon his guilt by this jury if we have to sit here and listen to all the rest of the case because you can't clear that out of the minds of the jury by an instruction.

3089 By the Court: As a practical matter, I don't have in mind as to what you have in mind as to how it would be handled.

By Mr. Kirby: Harold Sullivan would rest.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby: And then I would ask for the Court's review again in the Court's mind of the rules as they apply at the conclusion of all of the evidence. That is to say, there is now no evidence to go to the jury whatever.

By the Court: Assuming I denied your motion, what then?

By Mr. Kirby: Then we want to go to the jury and argue Harold Sullivan's guilt or innocence to the jury right now.

By the Court: I know of no such procedure.

By Mr. Kirby: How can we possibly get a fair—

By the Court: Your motion for a severance isn't timely. If there was any merit to your motion for a severance, it should have been made before we started the trial.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, although we had that hint from Mr. Cunningham in Minneapolis, that the proof would be extremely sketchy, nevertheless, until we see what it is, we don't see that we have to arrive at a point 3090 that we can decide whether to rest or not and now we have come to the point where we can see the quantum of proof and that is the earliest time we can make such a motion.

By the Court: You certainly have a right to rest, if you want to, at the end of the government's case. There is no way I can force you to offer any testimony and if you want to rest now, you certainly have that right but I know of no way that a severance can be granted at this point of the trial, a severance such as you have outlined to me. You suggest that if the defendant Sullivan rests and you make a motion for acquittal on all the evidence and I deny it, then you contend that you should go to the jury at this time and have the jury consider the guilt or innocence of the defendant Sullivan and we disrupt this trial as to the other defendants until that issue has been determined.

By Mr. Kirby: I see no other way to do it.

By the Court: I know of no such procedure in a criminal trial.

By Mr. Kirby: It would be highly prejudicial to Sullivan if there was—if he had to abide all the remaining events of the trial and you couldn't possibly cure that by an instruction.

3091 By the Court: I know of no such procedure in a criminal trial.

By Mr. Kirby: I will concede it is unusual.

I will call the Court's attention to the only two references I have found and reading from a Nebraska case, Cole vs. Fenton, 174 NW 509—during the course of trial, one of several defendants withdrew his plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty.

Then in that State, in the State of Nebraska, it was necessary to have the jury pass upon the punishment so that he, even though he had pled guilty did have a question for decision by the jury.

And they said this:

"When one of two defendants jointly charged with murder enters a plea of guilty even if it is entered in the progress of the trial and there had been no request for separate trials, the practice regularly would be to proceed with the trial as to the defendant not pleading guilty separately and not take the evidence as to the degree of the crime of the defendant pleading guilty in and as a part of the trial of

3092 the other defendant, but if neither defendant asks for such a separation and if the evidence against both is taken together, the parties so consenting to that matter of procedure cannot afterwards contend that for that reason the judgment finally rendered is absolutely void."

In other words, that man, if he had asked for a separate jury to pass upon that question of the burden of punishment that he was to have to meet, he would have been entitled to it, but having consented to go along, he waived it.

By the Court: Well, the motion of Harold Sullivan for acquittal at the close of the government's case is denied and exception is allowed, and the motion of Harold Sullivan for severance is likewise denied and exception is allowed.

By Mr. Kirby: How would the trial be conducted now?

By the Court: I don't know. You haven't rested as yet. I don't know what you are going to do. You have a right to offer evidence on behalf of defendant Sullivan or you have a right to rest.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. But my question is, if 3093 we rest, your Honor, how would the trial then be conducted?

By the Court: I assume that the trial would be conducted as to the remaining defendants, in so far as they then desire to offer evidence. I haven't given any thought to just all of the possible problems that may arise, but I know of no way that we can go to the jury now on the question of the guilt or innocence of the defendant Sullivan before the conclusion of the entire proceedings.

3094 By Mr. Kirby: But that, I submit, would defeat his right to have the evidence considered separately and entirely as against himself, if he rests at this time.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to observe that it might be highly prejudicial to the other defendants to submit Mr. Sullivan's case to the jury, particularly if a verdict of guilty were returned.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the Government put these people together at a time when they admitted that the case against Sullivan was weak.

By the Court: Was what?

By Mr. Kirby: Was weak.

Here is a man, Judge, and I appreciate your ruling this morning—who has had an honorable lifetime, and yet the whole, the whole of his life, in effect, is to be ruined simply by one statement later substantially withdrawn.

I just can't feel that the Government should press that. I don't feel the Government should press his position here in this regard, and I again ask the Court to think seriously about the motion for acquittal for this man.

Heavens, Judge! That is so little, to ruin a man's 3095 life, or to expose him to the risk of ruin, with a witness that actually contradicts himself. It is really a weak case, and I think Mr. Lockley—isn't that true?

By Mr. Lockley: I have no question in my mind as to Mr. Sullivan's guilt. The evidence to support it, from a legal viewpoint, might not be overwhelming, but I have no question whatsoever but what he is guilty of the crime charged.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the evidence—

By the Court: Well, gentlemen, I don't think we have to have any further discussion about that. I have ruled on the motions which have been presented.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, all right, your Honor.

(And thereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in open court, in the presence and hearing of the jury:)

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now resume its session.

By Mr. Kirby: Having in mind the specific ruling that I requested in Chambers, without having to repeat it in the presence of the Jury, I except to the ruling. I feel that in view of the ruling I cannot take the risk that I 3096 indicated in there, and that I must proceed.

By the Court: Very well.

By Mr. Kirby: But, I think the status of the record and what I asked leave to do, is amply plain, is it not, your Honor?

By the Court: So far as I know.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes, thank you.

By the Court: You may proceed, gentlemen, with your opening statements.

And Thereupon, The Defendants To Maintain The Issues In Their Behalf Offered And Introduced The Following Evidence:

And Thereupon, Mr. McConnell Addressed The Jury In Opening Statement On Behalf Of The Defendant, The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By Mr. McConnell: May it please the Court,—
By the Court: Mr. McConnell,
By Mr. McConnell: —and ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

We now come to our statement of the case. The Government made an opening statement at the time they opened their case, and I think Mr. Lockley pointed out, and I want to say the same thing, that what I say to 3097 you about this case in this opening statement is not evidence. What I may suggest is the law in this opening statement is not law, and the facts are within your province, and the law is in the Court's province; and the only point and purpose of this opening statement is to get before you the position of the particular defendant that I represent in this litigation.

3098 I represent the Shotwell Manufacturing Company which is an Illinois corporation. It has many stockholders, as the proofs will show. In 1945, I think, aside from the individual defendants, the stock holdings of this corporation were approximately 67 per cent, which was held by outside interests, independent, who are not charged with any criminal wrongdoing or who are not charged with anything in the way of income tax evasion.

In the year 1946 the situation was somewhat different but not greatly different. The Shotwell interests had been bought by the corporation and that stock had been turned in to the corporation.

So, I stand before this Court and jury in a position distinct, I think, and independent from individual defendants. Not that they may be antagonistic at all, but nevertheless, on the record, I am not representing an alter ego of the individual defendants; I am representing an individual corporation which has distinct and independent interests, and which will come to you asking a verdict at the end of this case, independent and distinct from any of the interests or contentions of any of the individual 3099 defendants.

Now, this corporation gave its officers no authority, express or implied, to engage in black marketing operations of any kind, character or description. The proofs will show that there was no such authority given its officers and certainly such authority could not be implied.

However, the officers of this company faced with a situation in the latter part of 1945 and 1946, did certain things and performed certain acts which violated OPA regulations.

The proofs will show that along the latter part of 1945 there developed an acute situation in the corn syrup market. The proofs will show that this corporation, in order to exist at all and in order to produce and supply candy to its various accounts, had to obtain the necessary ingredients of its candy, corn syrup.

As I say, in the latter part of 1945, extending up through June, July and possibly into the early part of August of 1946, there was an acute shortage in corn syrup and it was occasioned for this reason, as the proofs will show, that the ceiling price which was placed upon raw corn

3100 was so low that the farmers refused to ship that corn to the elevators and the elevators that were holding it for farmers refused to ship it to refineries at the ceiling prices. The refiners which made corn syrup could not pay a premium without violating OPA prices, so they refused to produce and couldn't produce, as a matter of fact, corn syrup without the corn and they required of the trade and particularly, as the proofs will show, of the Shotwell Company that if the Shotwell Company wanted corn syrup for use in the making of candies, it would have to supply to the refineries, raw corn—the refineries not caring how it was obtained, simply stating that as a condition upon which they were willing to grind the corn and make corn syrup and ship it to the Shotwell Company so they could conduct their business.

Now, in that situation, the proofs will show the officers of this company were faced with the situation of either going out into the corn market and buying raw corn at over-ceiling prices and shipping that to the refineries or being unable to proceed with the manufacture of candy in the Shotwell situation.

3101 And the proofs will show, I believe, that that situation was universal in the candy industry at that time.

Now, with that background, I want to be specific about what the position of this corporation is with reference to this proof. It is the contention of the Shotwell Company that it did not at any time, regardless of what statements its officers may have made in different situations, and I am going to get to those statements in my opening statement—that it did not at any time receive the shipments of money which Mr. Lubben has claimed that he paid to Mr. Huebner.

The time that I am talking about as to the purchase of raw corn to be sent to refineries, is limited to a period starting in October of 1945 and ending in July or possibly the first week of August of 1946.

It is the contention of the Shotwell Company that they received outside that period not one single dime from Mr. Lubben or from anyone else and that no money went into the treasury of that company—no money went to that company, no money went where it could be dis-3102 tributed to stockholders for dividends; that there simply was no money received out of that particular period of time.

Now, it is not clear how much that money amounted to but the outside limit would be what Lubben assigned to it on his books and records, although it is the position of Shotwell that Mr. Lubben's books are unreliable.

We will show by proofs that they have been falsified. We will show by proofs that he had every motive in the world to lay money off here as against us to protect his own income tax situation and that from this position and that position, by bringing in people who dealt with him, who were shown on his books, he paid money to, and that they didn't get money—that his books are impeached.
3103 So part of our proof will be the impeachment of the bookkeeping record which has been displayed before you by Mr. Lubben and by Miss Feldman, and we will show Miss Feldman knew nothing about this matter at all, had no knowledge of it at all, knew nothing of it from her own knowledge, and took only the position of accepting the statements which were given her by Mr. Lubben.

Now, from the point of view of the corporation, there is a most unusual situation presented in this case, and I can understand how the jury would be confused by it, because I am confused by it, and I stand here representing an independent entity, a corporation. We are met with the proof of the Government that the monies which were paid in all instances, except in a few instances, I think, from Mr. Lubben's testimony, were monies paid to Mr. Huebner, with the description of their being divided into three piles: One for Mr. Cain, one for Mr. Huebner, and one for Mr. Sullivan, and something for the horses.

Now, that is the Government's proof. It isn't my proof, but I stand here with that proof before me, represent-3104 ing the corporation in this case. The defendants deny those payments. The defendants, the individual defendants say "No, we did not." Mr. Huebner says, "We did not." He says, "I did not get that money. I did not make any such statement." That is what the proof will show, as I understand.

The corporation, therefore, stands in the middle of that dispute. The Government sponsors one version which would mean the corporation would never get the money, and the defendants take the position that they didn't receive the money; that Mr. Lubben lied, that he falsified, that he is assigning to this corporation and to its officers, money which they never received. That is an issue of proof which this jury will have to decide when all the evidence is in, as to whether this corporation received any money outside the period that I have mentioned, and whether or not, if they should by the largest stretch of the imagination believe the testimony of Mr. Lubben about this division of money—whether under that showing a corporation could be assigned and held as having received 3105 the money for its stockholders.

All right. Along in 1947, or 1946, the latter part of July, ceilings went off corn. There came an open market. The black market was ended. There was no purpose for a black market after that date. There is no reason for this corporation to receive any receipts for corn after that day. There is no reason for engaging in any black market operations whatever.

Nevertheless, the Government claims that monies were received after that time. The proof will be shown—and one payment I remember was about twenty thousand dollars, four $5,000 checks, which were supposed to have been cashed out in a south side bank—the proof will be offered to show that that is utterly false, that no such transaction took place, that no such transaction could have taken place.

3106 There was proof offered by Mr. Lubben of the two payments which I think total $49,000 on corn syrup, which he said Mr. Huebner told him to take down and give to Mr. Graflund; and Mr. Graflund, the Government's own witness, denied that he ever received so much for the payment which came for the corn syrup, the corn market. And when the black market on corn went off, it seems to me that that part of the proof is pretty well negatived by the Government's own situation.

Now, after the black market went off, Mr. Lubben was a black marketer. There is no question about that, and the proof will show it beyond any question. He was one of the biggest black marketing operators in the country. The proof will show he testified as such before the Kefauver Committee. He claimed that and made no bones about it.

He started out with Burry Biscuit Company as a sort of an employee. First he was with Kroger, at $150 a week. Then he gets into operations where he buys out Burry Biscuit Company, and pays $157,000 for it, I believe, in one year's work.

3107 There is no showing how he got the money. Anyway, a black marketer. As the black market ran out, he went broke, no more black market transactions, so ostensibly his corporations went insolvent.

Having finished with the black market, Mr. Lubben changed and turned to blackmail.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By Mr. McConnell: Well, the proof will show it.

By Mr. Lockley: The nature of his statements is argument. There is no opening statement here. It is a closing argument.

By the Court: I think some of your statements are more in the nature of argument instead of being an opening statement.

By Mr. McConnell: Blackmail isn't an argument. I will show that.

By the Court: Confine your statements to what you intend to prove.

By Mr, McConnell: I intend to prove that, after the close of the black market, that Mr. Lubben started out to blackmail the officials of the Shotwell Company.

3108 Bear in mind, he owed us $47,000 at the end of 1946 on his open account, on invoiced items.

And then he called Mr. Cain, I believe, one of the officials of the Shotwell Company in the early part of '47, and told him he intended to expose his OPA violations, unless he was given $75,000. I believe it was $125,000 that he wanted. Yes, it was.

Mr. Cain met with him, knowing what Lubben could do with his business and his customers and so forth—it would be disastrous possibly, from a business point of view.

So, he met with him and negotiated and agreed to guarantee a loan for Lubben at the Sterling Bank, and Mr. Cain personally guaranteed that loan, and Mr. Lubben received $75,000.

It wasn't more than a few weeks until he was back and he wanted $50,000 more. That was refused. Later, at the end of 1947, he again attempted blackmail, I believe, on several occasions, and in 1948, he attempted to extort further money from the officials of the Shotwell Com-
3109 pany. There was first the meeting down in Hillsdale.

At that time, Mr. Huebner was shown a package, a paper purporting to show transactions which had occurred at a time and a place which Mr. Huebner knew could not have occurred, beyond the period we have been talking about here, beyond the period in November, or October, of 1945, up to 1946.

3110 At that time, the proofs will show that Mr. Lubben was threatening to take those papers to the Internal Revenue Department and charge that Shotwell had received not only the amounts which could be assigned and allocated to the period I am talking about and which went out as cost of goods sold or goods purchased, but the further period in the early part of 1946 and on beyond 1946.

The officials of the company were then faced with the situation of meeting proofs supposedly kept by Mr. Lubben, where they had no records; where he purported to have records of these transactions, and they were faced with the difficult situation of whether to yield to his blackmail or not.

The proofs will show that they didn't. They went through with a deal on the Haberkorn Company which was referred to in the government's case. We will show that in that conversation, Mr. Lubben said, "I am never going to pay the $75,000.00 note", he said, "I am never going to pay the $75,000.00 open account" and he suggested the Haberkorn deal. And the result of it was that the corporation bought Haberkorn for $101,000.00, so the corporation ended up with the Haberkorn Company 3111 which the proofs will show was practically worthless and for which it paid directly or indirectly through offsets of one kind or another on the books and records of the company, some $101,000.00.

There was a later meeting. Not content, Mr. Lubben sought a meeting with Mr. Cain at the night club, the Riviera night club and the proofs will show that that meeting—far from the way Mr. Lubben stated it—that at that meeting, Mr. Lubben said that unless he received $125,000.00, he was going to go to the Revenue and have these men indicted for Internal Revenue violation.

And he said he had a passport all ready; that he was ready to leave the country; that he would take his passport and he would go to South America. To that, Mr. Cain said, "We have already gone into the United States government and made a disclosure of any tax liability of any possible amount there could ever be in this situation and we are not interested" and the proofs will show that Mr. Lubben attempted to argue there was no disclosure on the part of the corporation; that the money had gone to the individual officers and he was talking about their individual income tax liability.

3112 And then after that meeting, the proofs will show that Mr. Lubben went to see the attorney and tried to reinstate the negotiations and tried again to make a deal whereby he would use his passport and go if our people would pay him money and the answer was no.

Again he sought out a Mr. Kramer up in Boston. The proofs will show he came up there and in Mr. Kramer's office said, "I must have $125,000.00" and Mr. Kramer said, "I won't pay you. I haven't got the money. Call Mr. Cain."

And he called Mr. Cain on the telephone and Mr. Cain said, "We have made a disclosure of this matter and we are not interested" and the proofs will show that then Mr. Lubben turned to Mr. Kramer and said, "You are guilty." He tried to collect blackmail from him.

The proofs will pose a question of credibility as between Lubben on the one hand, who will be shown to have falsified his record, who will be shown to have testified falsely in this case, who will be shown to have been impeached on his testimony on material matters and that his records were impeached on material items and

3113 amounts—that raises a question of credibility as between the witnesses you will hear on the defense and those that you have already heard from the government.

3114 Now, the corporation faces in this case—and I want my position to be understood by the jury—the corporation faces in this case admissions which were made in certain so-called disclosure hearings, made by the officers of this company under the point of a blackmail gun where the officers, in desperation, were making any admissions, as the proof will show, which they thought would cover and obviate any possible objection that the Government could have as to the amount of tax so that they might pay their taxes, in any amount, and get away from this blackmailer and go back to their business of selling candy.

I want to make it clear to the jury that I do not and I will not attempt in the proof of this case to condone black marketing, income tax evasion or any of those things, but this corporation has a right to be indulged the presumption of innocence which the Court told you must be indulged until all the evidence in this case has been heard and then considered by you people.

Now, there is one thing that is obscure and it hasn't been clear from the statements, and that is this: The amount of over-ceiling payments that Shotwell made 3115 to obtain necessary materials for its business was a deduction from any income it received and there could be no income, and therefore no income tax evasion by Shotwell if the payments which it made equaled the payments which it received. That, I am sure the Court will instruct you on, because it is a matter of constitutional law that you cannot tax a man except on his net income and not his gross income.

We will show that the people who dealt with us and Shotwell believed that from all their knowledge of this situation there was no net income available in that corporation and that they didn't return it because it didn't exist.

True, it should be on the tax return, but we are not indicted and we are not charged with any charge except evading tax and the Government, and the Court I am sure will instruct you, must show that this corporation had income tax which it owed the Government and which it did not return, or that it is not sufficient according to the receipts and disbursements which were on the return. They must show there was a net income

3116 tax which was due and owing the Government as a result of the proofs in this case.

Now, there is one other thing. As I pointed out at the beginning, it is a difficult position for me to develop because it is only supported by the testimony of Lubben, who I know from what I have seen and what the proofs will show, cannot be relied on—that is, that there were payments made to some officers of this company which never got to this corporation. If that is so, it is not income, and I am sure the Court will instruct you that if it is shown by the proof that that income went to individuals, it is not income that went to this corporation and cannot be considered as part of the net income of this corporation. If that happened, which, as I say, in view of Mr. Lubben's credibility, I cannot sponsor and I cannot believe—but if the jury came to that position and believed Lubben's testimony, that there might be some claim that the Government had against individuals, but the claim before this jury, as I understand it, and I am sure the Court will instruct you, is simply this: That this corporation, as a corporation, as a distinct 3117 entity—this is not a conspiracy case—that this corporation received net taxable income which it did not show in its returns and which it deliberately intended not to show in its return in order to evade its income tax, and the officers, in so far as they are indicted here are simply indicted as performing acts for the corporation to obtain and reach that end result. They are not indicted and not charged with putting money—

By Mr. Lockley: I object to this portion of the argument, your Honor, on the ground that it relates to a legal argument. It is not an opening argument in the sense that it says what he intends to prove. He is already anticipating your Honor's instructions and is talking about what they are going to be.

3118 By the Court: I don't think it is proper to tell the jury that the individuals are charged with evading their taxes. It is the corporate taxes that you are concerned with.

By Mr. McConnell: That is all I am doing, your Honor.

So, I say, I ask, in hearing this case, that this jury follow this evidence to determine as between these witnesses; particularly between Lubben, who is the Government's case—

By the Court: Don't argue your case, Mr. McConnell. Make your statement as to what you intend to prove. You are indulging in personal observations, and they are not proper in an opening statement.

By Mr. McConnell: And Mr. Lubben on the one hand, and our defense witnesses on the other.

And thereupon Mr. O'Brien addressed the jury in opening statement on behalf of the defendant, Byron A. Cain:

By Mr. O'Brien: May it please the Court?

By the Court: Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury:

3119 During your absence, we have been intent on motions and legal matters, and it is a little bit difficult to get my mind back to the precise and detailed facts that we shall want to prove upon the defense of this case.

I think it is true, at the outset, that I should note this is not an action against any of the individual defendants, nor particularly against the defendants Cain and Huebner, for whom I appear, on account of their individual income tax returns. Those are in no way in question in this proceeding. The thing which is in question is the income tax return of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company for each of the years 1945 and 1946.

And the question is whether the corporation either alone or aided by the individual defendants, failed to report the net taxable income with the intent and willful intent of defrauding the revenue.

Now, on that issue, I think that the testimony and evidence which we shall adduce before you will show, as Mr. McConnell has pointed out, that any receipts, any payments which were made to the corporation, which 3120 were income to the corporation were received during the period October, 1945 down to approximately the end of July, 1946.

That being so, we think that the proof will show, in one way or another—which it is unnecessary to take your time on now—but which you will see as the proof comes in, that these proofs will show Mr. Lubben did not pay the amount of money which he said he did. Nor did he pay it over the length of time that he said he paid it.

The proof will, of course, in that connection also show what is wrong with the books and memoranda and papers which Mr. Lubben relies on to support his testimony, and the proofs will show in detail through his dealings with others, and right from the books themselves, what was wrong, but more particularly, I think, we shall be able to bring evidence before you which will take up specific items that have been brought up, specific checks alleged to have been cashed, and used for payment to us, where when we unravel and bring to you the detail of that proof which we have painstakingly gathered 3121 from records and data in the east, you will clearly see that it just isn't true that the proceeds of any such checks were ever paid to anybody in Chicago, anybody of interest in this case.

Next, as to the money which was received by the corporation, and during the period which I have bracketed—I think you will see from the evidence that we adduce, that there was nothing secret, nothing surreptitious or clandestine about the situation on that money.

The evidence, contrary to what has been claimed here, will show we did not have greedy people standing by waiting for that money, hovering over those who had custody of the money, hastening the procedure of getting it in and getting it out, and calling on them to account for the money of which they had custody.

3122 On the contrary, the evidence will show that the moneys which came to the corporation were handled physically by the lower or next lower level of officials and employees. There was no secret about it, the evidence will show. There was neither any direction to them to keep an accounting of the moneys. Such notations that were kept, the evidence will show, these people kept on their own and for their own protection, so they would have a record from time to time as to what they had done with the money.

The proof will show that notwithstanding that they did that, the record was never examined, never audited by any of the defendants nor by anyone for them, but that it continued and was maintained and kept down to the time that the corn came into good supply and the operations terminated and that they were then disposed of without anyone ever having called or questioned any item on that record, any of the amounts of money which were handled by these folks.

Then the proof will show that the moneys which so came in, went out and that they went out—when I say that they went out, I mean they were paid out, paid
3123 as premiums to procure the materials that were necessary in the manufacture of the candy and without which the plant would close and no candy at all would have been made and no income would have been derived and no tax would have been paid.

The materials were procured. We will show you by the evidence in considerable detail, but we hope not to drag it and detain you longer than necessary, but within that, we will show you in considerable detail what made that market, just exactly where the corn came from, what we and everybody else who needed it had to do to get it and I think we will show you finally, by evidence of public audits of the United States of America, that the United States of America had to pay far more money per carload for corn and did pay it, than we will ever claim to have paid here, and during the same period.

And everybody else, from the United States of America down, the proof will show did the same thing. Else, they got no corn syrup or other corn products from these refineries.

And so it was that the moneys which came in, came 3124 in for that purpose and that particular situation. They were disbursed for that purpose. That box was closed. That will be shown by the testimony. You don't have to take the words of the men here, but the lower echelon of employees, none of whom, with the exception of Gladys Morrill, is employed by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

When that box was closed, when the transactions broke, there was some $14,500.00 plus in that box, but the evidence will show that back in the early days when the corn syrup shortage became acute, when they needed money and didn't have it on hand to get that corn, that they procured and borrowed the sum of $14,000.00 which was put into that box in cash and consequently when the party was over, when the corn was in supply, when no such operation was any longer necessary, they took the $14,500.00 from the box and they used it to repay the loan which theretofore had been made, leaving a matter of a couple of dollars and a few cents as a balance in that box, and that money that was there went into the company's bank account, was credited on the proper record to accomplish what I have just told you—to show the 3125 repayment of that loan.

Now let me make one further thing clear, if I may, in the matter of the proof. I think the evidence will show here that nobody on our side enjoys having been in a black market situation. Nobody boasts about that. It may be that under conditions, all of us to some extent, so that we will understand, have been forced to, or have been chosen to do things which were violative of that law, but the evidence and the testimony will show here that no one was peculiar on that.

3126 Shotwell had 16,000 customers, as the evidence will show, and not a single customer was charged over the ceiling for any of that candy, and the Government does not so contend. The evidence will further show that the only customer of Shotwell, and the Government has shown to emphasize the size—but you ladies and gentlemen have heard the evidence here on the total sales of the company, and the evidence will show in proper perspective the relationship and proportion of the transactions of Lubben in comparison of the total sales of the company.

In short, I think the evidence will show that neither this company nor any official connected with it, was engaged in a black marketing operation as such, gouging the public, or engaging in any kind of a transaction.

Finally, although they were relegated to this man Lubben, to whom they were initially introduced, as you have heard, I think the evidence will show that their feelings about black marketing, even under that kind of pressure, were such that it is precisely that which led them to the east rather than here.

3127 And then when these occurrences arose which Mr. McConnell has called to your attention and which I need not repeat, and more precisely, when Mr. Busby got back from the east and asked some of these men whether there had been any over ceiling receipts and over ceiling pay outs as he had heard from Mr. Graflund, on his trip east, when he asked him that, they readily told him.

3128 He further asked him, the evidence will show, "Well, why didn't you tell me?"

Mr. Cain responded that he was not told because—and they were not put on the books because to put them on there would have been to convict them of violations of the OPA and render them liable to criminal prosecution and to treble damages, civally, as well.

But I call the jury's attention to the fact again, on the matter at issue, that we are not here trying an OPA case. This is not a charge of violation That is not the charge that the Government brings. We are not proud of it, but we are not here on that charge.

Now, when Mr. Busby got back and told them this, Mr. Cain said to him, "What difference does it make? Why should we embarrass you? It makes no difference taxwise, because the moneys that were received were paid out as part of the materials that we had to buy to make the goods."

So if we had five dollars in premium receipts, we had five dollars in premium disbursements for those goods and one balanced and washed out the other. If they were 3129 both put in the tax return it would not have increased the amount of the tax by one dollar.

But Mr. Busby, the evidence will show, said, "Oh, that is where you are wrong. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue rules by his regulation that you cannot deduct the amounts which you paid out over ceiling to acquire corn or any overceiling payments. You can't deduct it, so you would have to pay tax on the receipts."

The evidence will show that Mr. Cain said, "That does not seem fair. We never thought that. We never thought that we were defeating the revenue of one dime of tax. We thought they were in balance and that they would be deductible. But if you say that that is the Commissioner's ruling, then what are we to do?"

And Busby told him the policy of the Bureau, the published, promulgated policy under which anyone who had made any errors or omissions in his tax return was invited to come in and tell them about it and assured that if they did they would be immune from criminal prosecution, but that they would be liable to pay, civilly, such proper assessment and penalties as the Revenue 3130 might properly assess.

Mr. Cain said, "You go on right over there and tell them about it, and tell them the nature of the transactions, find out that that policy is still in effect, find out that that still can be done."

And the proof will show that Busby did just that. He went and found out and came back and reported.

And Cain sent him in. And they didn't care what the amount was. They wanted to get a bill, the proof will show, they wanted to pay it. They didn't want to have any argument. They were willing to—and, in fact, in one way the proof will show they did take the very maximum that you have heard stated from Lubben right here. They didn't want to argue about the matter with the Revenue. They didn't want to say, "We didn't get this or we didn't get that," something which would take years to determine, whether they did or didn't. The very questions that you ladies and gentlemen of the jury have to decide now.
3131 Rather than that, Cain said, "Pay them. Pay them at the very utmost of the possible claim that that man can assert."

And that is the position they took. And then as the matter went on, the agents came. They came to look at their books. They investigated. They had been doing it, the evidence will show, ever since '48. They never got a bill, the evidence will show. They never heard what amount it was the Government claimed until this indictment was brought.

Contrary, the evidence will show, to the promise of immunity the proceedings went on, notwithstanding their willingness to pay and notwithstanding their compliance, as the proof will show, with that invitation and all the terms of it.

Now, I submit that the central issue will be, and the proof will therefore concern itself with the question of what receipts did this corporation have, what income was there to the corporation; what was done with it; was it paid for the cost of goods.

And if it was, there is no tax, whether the receipts—either the receipts or the pay-outs, or both, were 3132 omitted from the returns, I know the Court will instruct you in that event, makes no difference.

Thank you.

And thereupon Mr. Kirby addressed the jury in opening statement on behalf of the defendant Harold E. Sullivan:

By Mr. Kirby: I represent Harold Sullivan. And there hasn't been in the proof very much about him at all. The proof shows, and we will call it to your attention by reading it from the corporate minute books, that Harold Sullivan became the vice president of this company on the first of July of 1946. The proof will show that the 1945 tax return had already long since been made up and filed.

One of the counts in the indictment as to which the jury will be asked to pass in the question of whether Harold Sullivan individually, personally, wilfully, did acts to produce a false return of the corporation.

3133 Now, I want to say that that is one of the things that in all good conscience you should bear in mind, that of persons connected by the Government in an indictment the proof must be considered separately and weighed separately as to each. And I say that particularly because at the end of the Government's case there is only the one conversation which Mr. Lubben first said he had with Sullivan and then, after seeking divine guidance, as he expressed it, he retracted the next day.

But, nevertheless, we have the problem, all of us in the defense, of somehow making our proof on this issue of whether what happened, happened because of a criminal intent to evade income tax laws. It isn't a question, so far as the jury is concerned, what the era was, but I don't think you can decide whether what was done was done with a criminal intent to defeat the income tax unless you do, and the proof will attempt to let you relive that era.

Now, already you have been told much of the factors that would motivate people in business in those days, and I am just going to go quickly through a little 3134 summary of my own on behalf of the defendant Sullivan of what were some of those problems.

Harold Sullivan, you will understand—the proof will show, is a lawyer. He is a man whom I said is one of thirteen children. I confused the size of his family with my mother's family. He was one of seventeen children.

The proof will show that he was in overseas service in World War I, that he came back, that he married Stella, that they had two boys, that he has practiced law honorably and with the respect of the community all his life, and that a candy company called the Shotwell Candy Company, run by a man by the name of Alfred Shotwell, was in very poor shape, that Harold Sullivan knew of that, and that he and some others tried to work out some method whereby the company might be put back on its feet.

The proof will show that they made an agreement with Alfred Shotwell under which they had a right to buy him out for a given figure.

The proof will show that they went in, they brought some more energetic methods to the business, and the business did revive.

3135 The proof will show that they then tore up the old agreement with Mr. Shotwell for the price at which they were to buy him out and they wrote a new agreement and they bought him out at a vastly higher price and kept him on as chairman of the board until his death. Indeed, he was chairman of the board during the years '45 and '46.

3136 The proof will show that nothing in Harold Sullivan's conduct in the acquisition of this business, or his relations with Shotwell, indeed nothing in the man's life, has ever been characterized as criminal, or malignant, or as vicious. And unless you find he had that intent in these proceedings, you must acquit him.

But this company that they picked up was a company that depended basically upon three raw materials. And they were chocolate, sugar and corn syrup. All were under the OPA.

Now, what did that mean? Well, the proof will show that it meant a very, very great deal. In the first place, the sugar. It was rationed and it was hard to get at any price, if you wanted to get it in quantity.

Secondly, chocolate was extremely difficult to get. Cocoa beans, the raw ingredient of chocolate, they were rationed.

You have already heard, I might remark—Lubben testified they had to give one fellow ten thousand dollars in cash—that was the fellow the time they bought Haberkorn—Lubben said he gave the fellow ten thousand 3137 dollars to just keep the chocolate coming, not for the chocolate. He just gave the salesman ten thousand dollars to keep him friendly.

Another thing about chocolate was that in order to get chocolate, you had to supply sugar to the chocolate makers. And the proof will show that Shotwell furnished hundreds of thousands of pounds of sugar to the chocolate makers in order to get chocolate from them, hundreds of thousands of pounds of sugar, which Shotwell had to procure.

The proof will also show that in this class of hard-to-get, and black market items, chocolate—Lubben was one of the country's great chocolate black marketeers. He has already testified as to one carload that he got for Shotwell.

We will show proof of more, and we will show proof that when he got that other chocolate for Shotwell, he did it only on the demand that he get candy at ceiling in return.

And that is what he got. He got us chocolate, and he got candy at ceiling in return.

But we are now faced with the charge that not only did he get the bargain that he made, namely, we got 3138 chocolate, and we would send him candy, but he has now on his books said in addition that these checks to cash that he took and had in his own pocket, he is now testifying he gave us that, too. The chocolate, and the cash, too.

We have got to meet that. Harold Sullivan, he is one of the defendants. We have to come in and meet that. And we will, on our proof.

3139 Then there was a big black market period in sugar, too. He at one time, the proof will show, when there was 535,000 pounds of what is called turbinato sugar—it is a very, very poor grade of sugar—it will show that he made arrangements for us to get the 535,000 pounds of turbinato sugar, and insisted that he get candy at ceiling if he got us the 535,000 pounds of turbinato sugar, for which we paid.

Well, the proof will show that we did get the sugar, that we paid the supplier for the sugar, we used it, and we did send Lubben, as he asked; the candy, and we sent it to him at ceiling. We also had to send the sugar man some candy. We had to sell it to him at ceiling.

And now we are faced with the proof that not only we did that, but that there were a lot of checks made out in New York, and cashed at that time, and put in Lubben's pocket, and he gave us that, too. And we have to meet it as best we can.

And, representing Harold Sullivan, I tell you that in the proofs we will show that he did get us that 535,000 pounds of sugar, we did pay the supplier for it, we did give him the candy he bargained for, and that the 3140 rest of this is a lie.

Now, the corn syrup market you have already had mentioned to you. Mr. Lubben was not only one of the leaders in that, but he had as his partner a man by the name of Michael Cohen.

Michael Cohen, the proof will show, is a worthy successor to his father, who was the greatest of the corn syrup black marketeers in World War I. And Michael Cohen—quite an engaging fellow, he will be a witness here, quite an engaging fellow—oh, very frank about it. I think he is proud of his father. And I will say this, you will like him. I rather like him myself. He is in that business. But at least he is honest about it. And we don't think Lubben is.

But, anyway, in corn syrup the same thing happened in World War I. The same thing happened in World War II.

Incidentally, the proof will show that in World War I the government also had a—

By the Court: We are not going to go into World War I in this case.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I certainly can only go to it from memory, but there will be some proof about those 3141 matters, Judge.

Basically, the problem, so far as corn syrup is concerned, is going to be a little plainer when we get into it, but basically you use corn syrup really more than you use sugar in candy. That isn't a shoddy thing to do. That is just a good thing to do. The proof will show its importance to the manufacture of the products called for by Shotwell's product schedule.

And it will also be shown that they were making for the government and for the Army candy in which they needed to use corn syrup, but could get no allocations. They had to go and get it on the open market as best they could.

3142 But the corn syrup market was influenced, the proof will show, by a peculiarity of the OPA law.

The OPA, the proof will show, had one price for corn and then, of course, they had a price for hogs. And the price that the OPA had for corn was so low that a farmer could make a lot more money by not selling his corn, but feeding it to his hogs and selling the hogs and getting the price for pork that he could get.

The net effect of that was, and the proof will be very clear on it, that the corn just didn't move off the farms.

The proof will show that in Chicago, the great central corn market of the whole world, that there were days on end in '45 and '46 when not one single carload of corn was available for sale on the floor of the Chicago Board of Trade, not one, that whole building.

And you couldn't buy a car of corn on the open market. And that went on for days and days and days. Some months on the great Chicago Board of Trade, the proof will show, there weren't as many as twenty cars of 3143 corn sold on the open spot market in the whole month.

And that will illustrate the disappearance of corn from the market.

So what happened? The proof will show just automatically the corn products refiners, they had to close down. They didn't have the corn.

So then what happened? Well, the only way you could get corn off the farm—and whether this is decent or indecent, it is the truth—was to pay the elevator man or to pay the farmer something in cash.

And the proof will show that the reason there was no corn coming on the open market was because it was all being picked up out in the country for cash.

Now, Mr. O'Brien already briefly mentioned this, but I want to stress it. And that is that we—and I, in defense of Harold Sullivan, in explaining about this am not conjuring up something, but the proof will show that not only was anybody that wanted—

Let me pass that for a minute. Let me follow the transaction down.

The corn products refiners, they said to their cus-

3144 tomers, like Shotwell, they said, "You want corn syrup. You have to have corn syrup if you don't want to close down. Well, you have got to move the corn in off the farm. We can't take all the money it would take to keep us running and buying that corn out on the farm. If you can get it and get that corn sent in to us then we will give you a part of the syrup we can grind from it. Not all of it, mind you, but a part of it, at ceiling. You get us the corn at ceiling. You can have a part of the grindings at ceiling."

That is what they said. It is in writing. We will produce it in writing. No doubt about that at all.

So how did you get it? Well, there were men that came around. There were men in that business. Sometimes you could identify them by name. Many a time you could not. Those men, they would go out and they would get these different cars of corn. They would get the bills of lading on them and then they would come in and they would sell for so many hundred dollars a car and they wouldn't take a check. They had to have cash. They would sell you the right to have that go to the refinery.

3145 Then you would have to go to the refinery, after you paid that fellow the cash, just the over-ceiling price, pay him in cash, that would go to the refinery, and then the refinery would let you have some corn syrup.

3146 Now, Shotwell did that. There isn't the slightest doubt about it that they did it.

Now, then, I will say—and Mr. O'Brien already hinted it—something else. The proof will show that the Government did it, too. The Government was in the back market bigger than Shotwell. The proof will show that the Government went out and by an official order they took some money from one agency and they gave it to another agency and they said to that agency, "You go out and buy fifty million bushels of corn"—this is at the time that this indictment period relates to—"and you buy it at ceiling plus thirty cents a bushel, black,"

And they did it, to ship it across the seas. And that is what it says in the order. And we will bring you a certified copy of that order right here.

Thirty cents a bushel amounts to $540.00 a car. And the Government was paying $540.00 a car, black.

What were the sizes of the transactions so far as the company was concerned? The actual consumption of this company in the short and black market products in 3147 1945 and 1946 will be shown. The corn syrup that they used in those two years, and this was a sizable operation, was 16,361,626 pounds.

Sugar was 11,996,824 pounds.

Chocolate was 7,054,440 pounds.

Or a total used by this company in the two years in question of 35,411,890 pounds of critically short and black market materials.

Where can you get the money to keep your business alive, where people demand cash from you or they will not supply this thirty-six—

By the Court: I wonder if you would try to close by twelve-thirty?

By Mr. Kirby: I will.

—the thirty-six million pounds.

Well, Shotwell did not go into the black market on the selling end with their sixteen thousand customers. But there was a fellow by the name of Lubben introduced to them, and that was a black day. Lubben was introduced by one of Shotwell's most responsible and finest representatives, a man who had been a vice president of a big chocolate company, and he introduced Lubben as a 3148 fellow that could get them chocolate.

Well, Lubben could get them chocolate, he could get them sugar, he could get them corn, he could get them corn syrup.

And the trade deals where he said, "If you can get me the candy I will get you the materials," they went on until finally there came a time when the corn market was so terrible that they couldn't work it out with these trade deals, and then was the first time a dollar in cash came in.

And then it was paid out.

3149 Now, everything that Shotwell did with this cash was a violation of the OPA. And let's assume for a minute that Shotwell took in ten thousand dollars, so they could get some cars of corn, so they could get some corn syrup and live up to their Government contracts.

Suppose they took that ten thousand and they paid it out for raw materials, and put it right on the books, and the OPA fellow came in and saw that. Shotwell would have to pay $30,000 in penalties to the Government for what they did.

So it would have been a never-ending spiral. If you put it on your books and let the OPA see it, you never could have gotten in enough money to both get your raw materials, and pay their triple damages. It would have been impossible.

So it didn't go on the books. But in an income tax proceeding that doesn't make the slightest bit of difference. The proof will show that for a time it made a difference. The proof will show that the government had a regulation which was that if you took in over the ceiling money, 3150 if you took it in, you had to pay a tax on it. But if you paid out over ceiling to get the raw materials, you couldn't take a deduction on it. The fellow that got it had to pay a tax on it, but as far as you were concerned, it was just like you never paid it out at all. You couldn't take a deduction.

But that other fellow who got it, he had to pay a tax. The Government, up to the date of the indictment in this case, the proof will show, was enforcing that rule. Since the date of the indictment, the Courts have beaten them so often on it that the rule has been abandoned.

So that now, no matter what the Government's position was up to the time of the indictment, it is now true, under the law, as Mr. McConnell and Mr. O'Brien have said, that the money which we had to pay out to get these materials, is a deduction, and if it equals the amount that came in, there is no conceivable tax.

And if there is no tax, there simply cannot be a conviction of the corporation, or of Harold Sullivan.

3151 Now, I have indicated—and I am about through, that of necessity—and one might say following the lead of the Government, which was in the black market itself—they endured Lubben. He is the only one they endured, but they endured him. But in the OPA violations they didn't want to get hit triple damages, so it didn't go on the books.

You and I would think, as indeed they did, that as far as the income tax is concerned, it washed it out. Gladys Morrill said, "We got more materials. We made more candy. And the candy we sold we paid a tax on. It actually helped the tax thing, because it kept us going."

But they learned one day from this fellow, Busby, that the Government put on, that that wasn't so. They learned that the Government had this rule that the over-ceiling money that they took in they had to pay a tax on, but the over-ceiling money that they paid out they couldn't take tax, and they opened their arms and they said, "We don't a credit for. The Government was going to make that other fellow pay, but they couldn't get credit. Busby told them that. Then for the first time, the proof will show, they 3152 knew there was a tax question involved.

And the proof is already in the record that they went right straight to the Government, immediately, the minute it became apparent that there was a tax question involved. The minute they were told the Government takes this position, it stunned them. It would, naturally, that if you got it over the ceiling you have got to pay a tax on it, but if you paid it out over the ceiling it doesn't make any difference. You can't have a deduction on it.

Well, the first thing they did, when they heard that, they went running to the Government, because the Government had announced, as the proof will show, that there had been a lot of black market transactions in this country and they felt that the Government should be paid some accuse you. It isn't a moral question. It was a war question. Our arms are open. If you are in it, come in and tell us and we won't prosecute you."

So the first time they heard that there was a tax question involved, and that anybody was taking this posi-
3153 tion that I have outlined, they went right to the Government, in accordance with the Government's announced position that they should do that.

And now Harold Sullivan, whom I represent as best I can, he is met with the situation. There is no proof against him. We are going to have to go through a lot of embarrassing proof about a respectable group of men being in the black market. It is embarrassing. But I hope the jury will keep in mind that this is an income tax case. If they ever had all the black marketeers in jail you wouldn't have room fo. them.

And the proof will show that every candy company in the country was in the black market, handling cash, and that there is only one little company, Shotwell, in the whole United States as to whom the Government has ever made an income tax fraud criminal case against them.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, now, your Honor, I object to that. In the first place, it is an improper and inaccurate statement.

By the Court: You must know that, Mr. Kirby. You are arguing a matter and injecting into an opening

3154 statement matters that are entirely foreign to what is proper in an opening statement.

By Mr. Kirby: That was not the intent.

By the Court: We will recess until two o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Judge and jury file out of the court room. This honorable court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon a recess was taken in the above-entitled cause until 2:00 o'clock P. M. of the same day, being Thursday, October 1, 1953.)

Chicago, Illinois
Thusday, October 1, 1953
2:00 o'clock P.M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And Thereupon the following proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:

By the Court: I might say this to the Jury before we commence this afternoon. You will remember that last Friday I referred to an article which appeared in 3156 one of the newspapers regarding the alleged civil tax liability of one of the defendants, and I called to your attention that the proceedings mentioned were pending in the Tax Court in Washington, and were in no way related or connected with this case which we are now trying.

And I called to your attention that the headline of the news item might be misleading in that it referred to the Shotwell case, and I stated to you that if any of you had read the article you should disregard it, and entirely remove from your mind any inference or suggestion that the proceeding in Washington had any connection or relation with the matter we are now trying.

Counsel for the defendants now suggest that I ask the jury whether any of you ever read this article. Therefore, for the record, I would like to know whether or not any of the jury did read this article.

If so, will you raise your hands?

By a Juror: I just read it, but didn't—

By the Court: Did the reading of this article in any way prejudice you against any one of these defendants?

3157 By the Juror: No, sir.

By the Court: Do you feel that you can give each one of the parties a fair and impartial trial regardless of anything that may have been stated in that article?

By the Juror: Yes, sir.

By the Court: You may proceed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Was there anyone else who raised their hand?

By the Court: I didn't notice anybody else.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just the one gentleman.

By the Court: That is all.

You may proceed.

EDWIN DANE BOOKMAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Edwin Dane Bookman.

Q. What?

A. Edwin Dane Bookman.

Q. Are you sometimes known as Eddie Dane?

A. That's right.

3158 Q. Where do you live?

A. San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Q. With Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir, that's right.

By Mr. Kirby: I wonder if the Reporter will mark these exhibits Defendants' Exhibits 49 to 52, inclusive, for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 49 to 52, inclusive, for identification.)

3159 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Dane, do you recall that under an order of court we took your deposition down in Puerto Rico at the same time we took Mr. Lubben's?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall of a general nature the testimony that you gave there?

A. That is right.

By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Dane, so the jury may hear your answer.

By the Witness:

A. Yes, I do.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I guess I have been calling you Mr. Dane, do you mind?

A. It doesn't make any difference. Whatever you choose.

Q. Whatever I like.

A. That is correct.

Q. All right. Well, Mr. Dane, when I questioned you down there, I think your testimony was that you became the purchaser of all of the assets of Mr. Lubben's New Jersey real estate, business and so on, is that right?

3160 A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I would like to object to the nature of this examination. Counsel is so used to cross examining that I am sure he has forgotten he is now leading his witness.

By the Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Kirby: I think you are right. I will drop the leading. I don't mean to do it, really.

By the Court: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And is the purchase that you made the purchase which is covered by this deed to you and assignment which is marked Defendants' Exhibit 51 for identification?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, to any testimony along these lines, as to the purchase of any property by Mr. Dane, unless it is shown that it has some relevancy to the issues here. I believe the testimony was this happened in 1948 or 1949.

By the Court: Well, I assume this is preliminary.
3161 He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. I believe it is.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. And at the time that you made that purchase, was it subject to a mortgage?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. To Byron Cain, or don't you know?
A. No, I don't believe it was subject to a mortgage to Byron Cain. I am not sure.
Q. Well, you bought the property, though?
A. I said it was subject to mortgage but to whom, I am not sure.
Q. All right. I show you—how much was the mortgage?
A. I don't recall the figure.
Q. I show you a document marked Defendants' Exhibit 49 for identification, and ask you whether you know whether that is the mortgage to which the property was subject when you bought it, if you know.
A. I really don't know.
Q. That appears to be a mortgage to Byron Cain?
A. It looks like it, I guess.
3162 Q. I show you a document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit for identification No. 50, and ask if you know Janet Moran?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. And who is she?
A. The sister of Mr. Lubben.
Q. And what did she have to do, so far as you know, with the mortgage at the time you bought the property?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. I fail to see the materiality or the relevancy of it.
By the Court: He may answer.
By the Witness:
A. Well, I know that she held a mortgage. I am not sure if it was at that time or before or later.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. You mean, you are not sure whether it is at the time you bought it or before?
A. No, I am not.
Q. Was the mortgage on this property you bought paid, do you know?

A. The mortgage to Mrs. Moran?
Q. Yes.
3163 A. No. I don't believe it has been paid.
Q. Now I show you a document which is marked Defendants' Exhibit No. 52 and ask you if you have ever seen that before.
A. Yes, I have seen it.
Q. In fact, you signed it, didn't you?
A. I did.
Q. I believe the name of Nebbul, Incorporated. You have heard that name before?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Is that Lubben spelled backwards?
A. Yes, sir, it is.
Q. And you conveyed the property, did you, to this Nebbul, Incorporated?
A. That is right.
Q. Were you paid anything for the conveyance?
A. I was given a qualifying share of stock in Nebbul, Incorporated.
Q. A single share?
A. Yes, a qualifying share. I don't recall just if it was one or two shares, or what it was.
3164 Q. That is what you got for the conveyance?
A. That is right.
Q. Lubben had the rest of the shares, did he?
A. That, I don't know.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, there is nothing improper about that transaction. I object on the grounds that I fail to see the materiality of it.

By the Court: I don't know that I do, but I guess counsel has a right to make reference with reference to it and then he can offer it and we can determine whether it is material.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Are there any other documents that you know of that you signed in connection with the conveyance to Nebbul, Incorporated, other than this one you just had in your hand, Defendants' Exhibit 52?
A. I don't recall if there are or not.
Q. And the property that I am talking about, does that include—what does it include, Mr. Dane?
A. That includes two dwellings and a factory and a garage and I forget just what the acreage was.

Q. And the equipment of the factory?

3165 A. And the equipment of the factory, yes.

Q. And all of that came to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And that is what you conveyed to Nebbul, Inc. for one share of stock?

A. I believe it was, yes.

Q. Now, this Janet Moran, Mr. Lubben's sister, did you ever pay her any money in connection with this transaction?

A. The mortgage, do you mean?

Q. Did you pay her any money at all?

A. I don't recall whether there was any money paid to Mrs. Moran or not.

Q. Do you know a lawyer by the name of Sam Davidson?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. He handled all this?

A. Yes, sir, I believe so.

Q. How long have you lived with Mr. Lubben?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to the materiality of that statement.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Since about 1944, I believe.

3166 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In New York and then in New Jersey and then in Puerto Rico?

A. That is right.

Q. In connection with General Confections, Inc., the New York corporation, did you ever handle their books or records?

A. Never.

Q. When they moved to New Jersey they took books and records with them there. Did you handle any of the books and records then?

A. No.

Q. Did you do any work for them?

A. I had done work, off and on for either Mr. Lubben or General.

Q. What do you mean off and on?

A. Well, when that was—when they were getting the factory ready, I helped paint the place and things like that. I mean, I didn't punch a time clock. I did not work in the factory.

Q. Well, were you working at some other occupation?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to that.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

3167 By Mr. Lockley: I don't see what materiality it has.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, did you have anything whatever to do with the storage or the keeping of the books?

A. No.

Q. Now, we do not have on General Confections, or the government doesn't have and we don't, an accounts payable ledger. Now, as the purchaser from the receiver, did you ever get an accounts payable ledger?

A. I do not believe so, but I am not sure.

3168 Q. Another book that is missing in Mr. Lubben's books is the purchases book. As the purchaser from the receiver, did you ever get that record?

A. I do not believe so.

Q. Do you have some reason for saying that, some particular reason?

A. Well, any books that were received should have been there. I don't recall seeing those books.

Q. Did you ever see them?

A. No, I don't believe I ever did.

Q. Did you ever turn them over to Lubben?

A. No.

Q. Another book that is missing is the cash disbursements book of Mr. Lubben's company. As the purchaser or the receiver, did you ever see that?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. At any place, either at Mr. Lubben's home—you were living at Mr. Lubben's home, weren't you?

A. That is right.

Q. Did you see it around there?

A. No. I didn't.

3169 Q. Did you see it in the office?

A. No.

Q. In the chicken barn?

A. No.

Q. You didn't get it from the receiver?

A. No.

Q. That is true of all the others?
A. That is right.
Q. Now before it went into receivership, you had the physical custody of the books and records?
A. Before it went into receivership?
Q. Yes.
A. I wouldn't know.
Q. Well, you lived there, didn't you?
A. I did not live at the office. I believe the books were all in the office.
Q. That is just the next building to where you did live, isn't it?
A. That is right, but I was very seldom in the office.
Q. You were away in the home?
A. That is right.
Q. Taking care of that?
A. That is right.
Q. Now, who had custody of such books as Mr.
3170 Lubben had, someb y in the office, or Mr. Lubben, or who? You were there.
A. I would imagine the bookkeeper or somebody in the office.
Q. Did Mr. Lubben have them?
A. No.
Q. Was he there?
A. Well, yes, he was there.
Q. And you were also there, but you have absolutely no memory of what happened to those books?
A. I know nothing about the books from General Confections of New York.
Q. Did you ever see Mr. Lubben destroy them?
A. I certainly didn't.
Q. Or take them away?
A. No.
Q. But as far as you know, the last place you ever saw them was in the office of General Confections before the receiver?
A. Before the receiver.
Q. That is right. And you didn't get them?
A. No.
Q. When you purchased everything from the receiver?
A. No.
3171 Q. Mr. Dane, you have been living with Mr. Lubben since 1944?

A. Thereabouts.
Q. And your work has been in the theatrical line?
A. That is right.
Q. Are you a chorus—
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I just objected to that a few minutes ago.
By the Court: Yes, the materiality of that.
By Mr. Lockley: And he is continually leading the witness. This is your witness.
By the Court: I don't think it is material.
By Mr. Lockley: It is not cross examination.
By Mr. Kirby: I will ask you this:
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. During the indictment period of 1944 and 1946, what work were you doing?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to that for the third time.
By the Court: He may answer.
You may answer.
3172 By the Witness:
A. Theatrical work.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Of what kind?
A. Singing, dancing, acting.
By Mr. Lockley: I object on the ground it is irrelevant.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. But the books now that existed in the indictment period of 1945 and 1946—the one thing I want to get clear with you, the last you know of them, Lubben had them, is that right?
A. No, that isn't right.
Q. What is right?
A. They were in the office the last I knew of them. I knew nothing of them, actually.
Q. You what?
A. I knew nothing of them, actually.
Q. Well, they were in the office?
A. I suppose so, You need books to run an office.
Q. You mean Mr. Lubben's office?
By Mr. Lockley: I object to his arguing with his own witness.
3173 By Mr. Kirby: That is my last question.
By Mr. Kirby:

Q. You mean Mr. Lubben's office?

A. Yes. Not his private office—outside.

By Mr. Kirby: I now offer as material particularly to the transactions which were involved in the $75,000 mortgage at the Sterling Bank—that is the mortgage which is covered by Exhibit 50—no, 49, and the assignment of it, to Janet Moran, that was tied into the Haberkorn deal, your Honor, which is No. 50, and then the transfer to Mr. Dane also of the assets covered by that, which is Exhibit 51, and then his conveyance back to this Lubben Company, which is Exhibit 52, and I offer all of those as a connected chain of events in the documentary fashion.

That is all of this witness.

By the Court: Well, is there any objection to the exhibits, counsel?

By Mr. Lockley: I have never seen them before, your Honor. If I may have your indulgence a moment, I would like to look at them.

3174 By Mr. Kirby: There are a couple more questions that I overlooked.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to them on the grounds they are immaterial.

By the Court: You have objected to the foundation, and to the fact that they are—

By Mr. Lockley: You mean that they are photostats instead of originals?

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, I will not quibble, no, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: They are certified in the case.

By the Court: Complete your examination in the case.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, Mr. Dane, going to the period of General Confections in New York and the Eatsum, that was in 1945 and 1946, that was when you started to live on this farm?

A. I believe about that time.

Q. And Mr. Lubben bought it?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. And did you see Mr. Lubben pay contractors 3175 and others with large sums of cash?

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the leading nature of the question.

By the Court: Let him complete it and then you can make your objection. Complete your question.

By Mr. Kirby: It is completed, I think. I think, if the reporter will read it—

By Mr. Lockley: By that time he has completed his testimony too. I object on the ground it is a leading question and on the ground it is immaterial.

By the Court: Let the reporter read the question.

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. No, I didn't.

By the Court: Well, the answer may stand.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Lubben pay for items in the way of purchases of machinery and things around the farm or the house with cash?

A. No.

By the Court: When are you talking about, what 3176 period?

By Mr. Kirby: During the indictment years.

By the Court: He doesn't know what the indictment years were.

By Mr. Kirby: 1945 and 1946. That is when they were spending that money.

By the Court: You have to state the years.

By Mr. Kirby: All right.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. I mean 1945 and 1946.

A. I don't believe I ever did. It is so long ago, I don't know.

Q. You might have?

A. No, I don't say might have. I say I don't believe he ever did that I know of.

Q. Did you see him pay for any of those contractors' bills or for any of the work or the machinery or the furniture? Did you ever see him pay for any of that with a check?

A. I didn't handle the checks, so I don't know. I didn't pay them. I don't know what they were paid with.

Q. Let me inquire about—did Mr. Lubben, yourself and some others take a trip to Haiti?

3177 By Mr. Lockley: I object on the ground it is immaterial.

By the Court: Well, it may not be. I don't know. He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Not with others. Mr. Lubben and I went to Haiti.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Just the two of you?
A. Yes.
Q. When?
A. Gee, I don't remember the year.
Q. It was earlier than 1948, wasn't it?
A. It could have been, or it could have been a little later. It was about that time. I don't remember just when it was.
Q. How long did the trip last?
A. About three weeks.
Q. There was nobody else along?
A. No.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all.

By the Court: Have you any examination, Mr. Lockley?

By Mr. Lockley: No, sir.

3178 By the Court: Apparently that's all, Mr. Dane.

I can defer my ruling on these exhibits until I have looked them over and hear counsel later as to the materiality. I am not entirely clear on them.

By Mr. Kirby: Your Honor, you might even want to defer them until there are other witnesses that tie into that Haberkorn transaction and the whole question of whether it was or wasn't blackmail.

By the Court: All right.

(Witness excused.)

WILLIAM BELLANDI, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. William Bellandi, B-e-l-l-a-n-d-i.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Bellandi?
A. I live at 806 South Portsmouth Avenue, Westchester.

3179 Q. And what is your occupation?

A. At the present, I am the auditor of the Mid City National Bank, Madison and Halsted, Chicago, Illinois.

Q. And for how long has that been true?
A. Two and a half years.
Q. What was your position with the bank in 1946?
A. In 1946 I was a receiving teller.

Q. Do you know a James Moran?
A. No, I don't.
3180 Q. As auditor of the bank, would you briefly describe your duties?
A. Well, my duty is—well, I say watch dog for the board of directors, to conduct audits of various departments and also I am custodian of the records of the bank.
Q. During the year 1946, how many paying tellers did that bank have?
A. We had two regular paying tellers and an extra one on a Friday and a Saturday.
Q. Did the bank, in the year 1946, make a practice of microfilming checks?
A. Yes, we did.
Q. Are the microfilms of checks made in 1946 still available?
A. No, they are not.
Q. In so far as the cashing or payment of checks is concerned, did the paying tellers in the year 1946 maintain a record of checks paid to the trade?
A. Yes, they did.
Q. What is that record called?
A. The teller's sheet.
Q. Have you brought with you the teller's sheets, the paying teller's sheets for that year?
3181 A. Yes, I have.
Q. Is it true that we requested you to inspect the teller's sheets, that is, the paying teller's sheets for that entire year to see if on any day there was a record at your bank of the payment of four $5,000.00 checks?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you inspect those records for that purpose?
A. Yes, I did, personally.
Q. Did you find among the teller's records whether four $5,000.00 checks were so cashed on any given day?
A. I did not find any evidence to substantiate that fact that four checks were cashed.
Q. Did you look to see if there were four such checks on a given or a succeeding day?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And with what results?
A. I could not find any evidence to that effect.
Q. Now, in the course of your search, did you examine the daily paying teller's sheet of each of the paying tellers who were there in the employ of your bank in the whole of the year 1946?

3182 A. Yes, I did.

Q. What if any practice did the bank have in the year 1946 with respect to returning to the Treasury Department a form pertaining to transactions in cash checks?

A. If they were large, unusual transactions, the teller concerned would fill out a form which in turn was forwarded to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Q. Did you, in your search, find any record of such a sum pertaining to four $5,000.00 checks in the year 1946?

A. No, I did not.

Q. And the teller's sheets which you examined, will you state directly whether they do or do not disclo.e these four $5,000.00 checks to which I have referred?

A. To my knowledge, they do not disclose it.

Q. And by your knowledge in this case, you mean the knowledge that you gained from the inspection of those sheets?

A. That is correct.

Q. And the sheets are here available—

A. They are.

Q. —for use if use is desired?

A. They are, sir,

3183 By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Bellandi, is it?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. Do you have all of those sheets with you which you referred to, the teller's sheets?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. I understand that you were a receiving teller and not the paying teller?

A. I was a receiving teller, yes.

Q. Are you familiar with what the practice was on the paying tellers?

A. Yes, sir, I was. I was relieving during vacation periods in the paying cage and I had been with the bank for a long time, so I have a good knowledge of what occurred or what the practice was in the paying tellers' cages.

Q. What was the nature of this record that the paying tellers kept? Just what information did it contain?

A. As to the checks cashed, they would run them up on a so-called teller's sheet, and that record in totals
3184 which, in turn, is turned over to the clearing house and they are processed from there to the other banks they are drawn on.

3185 Q. What I mean is this: Would each individual check be entered on that teller's sheet if it was exchanged for cash?

A. Yes.

Q. Suppose there was a situation where there were four checks totaling $20,000.00; would the entry be four $5,000.00 items or one $20,000.00 item?

A. It would be the practice and it is the policy of the bank in that case, of putting four $5,000.00 items on.

Q. That is the practice and policy. Do you know if it was invariably followed?

A. To my knowledge, I believe they followed that closely.

Q. How many of the days' records did you examine?

A. The entire year of 1946.

Q. For 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you do that?

A. Oh, I started four days ago or so and—

Q. And how long did it take you?

A. In all it took me, I would say, about eight or nine hours.

Q. And you were able to go through the total
3186 amount of the paying sheets with the entries on them. How many entries a day would there be?

A. Each teller, sir?

Q. Yes.

A. Oh, it averaged two hundred.

Q. Each teller averaging two hundred and there were two and sometimes three tellers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I suppose around 250 bank days a year? Am I correct?

A. Approximately, it would be that.
Q. And you went through all of those?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Do you know a man named Eddie Urban?
A. I know him, yes. Not too friendly, but I know him as a customer.
Q. Do you know who he is?
A. Yes.
Q. He is a customer of the bank. Do you know if he was in the habit of cashing checks at the bank?
A. What kind of checks?
Q. I mean, checks for cash?
A. During that year or any year?
3187 Q. During the year 1946.
A. As I say, I wasn't in the payers' cages at the time and what his habits were during 1946, I wouldn't know.
Q. So that there might have been a teller in the payer's cage who was friendly to Mr. Urban who would have cashed those checks without your knowing about it, is that so?
A. Possibly.
Q. And he might not have made a record of it on this record you refer to?
A. No, it could not be possible that way.
Q. Well, how is that?
A. Because any check that cleared through our bank has to be recorded in order to account for it on our general ledger.
Q. Well, if this was a check on an out of town bank, woud that make any difference?
A. No, it has to be recorded on the teller's sheet at all times.
Q. Well, what is the purpose of the teller's sheet?
A. Well, for one thing, to record the transaction of the day and to also balance the cage.
3188 Q. So that if the entry isn't on the sheet it doesn't balance out for the day?
A. That is correct. The teller would be out that amount.
Q. How much money is usually kept in each one of the teller's cages? In 1946, I am referring to all the time, to that year.
A. It is hard to say, but I would say approximately $70,000.00, $75,000.00.

Q. Seventy or $75,000.00?
A. Yes.
Q. So that a teller could make a payment of $20,000.00 from his cash on hand without the necessity of obtaining it from any other department of the bank, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Was it possible that a teller might have reported on this sheet two $10,000.00 items instead of four $5,000.00 items?
A. No, I can't see where he would do something of that nature.
Q. Well, is it possible?
A. Well, yes.
Q. Is it possible that he might have made an entry
3189 of one $20,000.00 item?
A. Well, it wouldn't be the practice of the bank. It is possible.
3190 Q. Is it possible?
A. But I also checked on that type of entry.
Q. To either any two ten thousand dollar items?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you look for them?
A. Yes, sir. I had that in mind at all times.
Q. You looked for any combination that might add up to $20,000?
A. Yes.
By Mr. Lockley: That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: Just one question.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Whenever any cash was paid out of that cash, out of the $70,000, you said the teller might have there, it would have to be accounted for by an entry on the sheet, is that right?
A. Yes.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Bellandi, how many $10,000 entries did you run across in the course of your examination of these pages?
3191 A. Well, offhand, I can't say.
Q. Well, you found some, did you?

A. A few, not too many.
Q. Did you find any $5,000 entries?
A. We had several $5,000 entries on different dates, yes.
Q. Did you find any $20,000 ones?
A, No, not in a lump sum of $20,000.
By Mr. Lockley: All right, thank you, Mr. Bellandi.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all, sir.
(Witness excused.)

3192 FLORIAN A. GROENWALD, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. Florian A. Groenwald.
Q. And, Mr. Groenwald, you are president of the Mid-City National Bank of Chicago?
A. I am.
Q. And have been for how long?
A. Since June 6, 1946.
Q. And would you tell the jury briefly your duties as president of the bank?
A. Well, as president of the bank—
By the Court: Speak up, Mr. Groenwald. Face the jury so that they can hear you.
By the Witness:
A. As the president of the bank, I am the presiding officer at the board meetings. Of course, I am the chief officer of the bank. We have our discount committee, whom we present our loan applications to. And being the president, it is just the top man in the organiza-
3193 tion, who knows all about the policies, the programs and the entire workings of the institution.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. In your bank, Mr. Groenwald, I assume you have a number of departments?
A. Oh, yes.
Q. Including a commercial department?
A. Commercial department.
Q. Which is the one through which checks are deposited and paid?

A. That's correct.

Q. And from your experience have you become and are you familiar with the practices and procedures which obtained in the year 1946 in that department?

A. I am, sir.

Q. What, if any, rule or procedure did the bank in that year have in respect of the cashing of checks for strangers?

A. We have a very simple rule, and that is not to cash checks for strangers.

Q. Do you know James Moran?

A. No, sir.

Q. You never met him—or have you ever met him, 3194 to your knowledge?

A. I don't know the man.

Q. Is the Shotwell Manufacturing Company a customer of your bank?

A. No, sir.

Q. And was it in 1946?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are any, or either, of the defendants, Harold E. Sullivan, Byron A. Cain or Frank Huebner customers of your bank?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or were they in the year 1946?

A. I would say no.

Q. What was the procedure of your bank in regard to the cashing of cash or currency checks in the year 1946?

A. What was the procedure?

Q. Perhaps I better be a little more specific. In the case of the presentation for payment of a check payable to cash or to currency in a large amount, what was the procedure in 1946 that the presentor of the check would be compelled to follow to get that money?

A. That's correct. And that is not only in 1946, but 3195 it has been the procedure of the bank for many, many years, as long as I have been with the institution, that where a large check—when I say a large check I mean a check, say, over $500.00—is presented for cashing, that the tellers—in the first place they have strict instructions that they are not permitted to cash checks on another bank without an officer's O.K.

Now, the procedure at that time would be, if a check were presented for O.K. to an officer at an officer's desk, that it was the duty of that officer to escort the person or persons cashing the check to the teller's window, and at that time the cashing of the check would be performed, or the money would be paid out.

But we have had a strict rule, and it has been a rule of the bank for many years, that where a large check is presented for cashing that the officer must verify by direct contact with the teller that he approved or initialed the check. Now, the reason for that is that forgery of an officer's O.K.—that is the reason for it.

3196 Now, in the event an officer would neglect to do it, then it would be the teller's duty to contact that officer who approved the check, who initialed the check, on the house phone and verify his okay on the check. Does that answer the question?

Q. And what, if anything, would be required in the way of an endorsement of the check by a person presenting it for payment?

A. Well, there again, we have a rule and it is, I imagine, followed by most banks, that where a check is payable to cash it must be endorsed by the person who receives the cash, and in the case where the person might be identified by some one, or at the request of a customer of the bank that we cash the check, that person naturally would have to endorse the check, in the presence of the officer who is approving the check.

Q. And would that mean, Mr. Groenwald, in such case as you last mentioned that there would then be two endorsements, the one introducing or vouching for the man, and the man receiving the money?

A. The person receiving the money and the person vouching.

3197 Q. Is there any distinction, in so far as those procedures are concerned, between checks drawn on your own bank and checks drawn on other banks?

A. Oh, yes, there would be a distinction. In the first place, a check on our own bank, drawn on our own bank, we can verify the signature of the maker, we can verify the signature of the endorser, if it is a check payable to cash, we can verify the amount, as to the goodness of the check, and so forth. So there is a distinction.

Q. And none of those things would be true in the case of a check drawn on another bank, particularly a foreign bill of exchange?

A. That is correct.

Q. By foreign bill I mean, of course, one drawn at one place, one state, and payable in another.

A. That's correct.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Groenwald, did you just begin with the bank in June of 1946?

A. No, I started in 1919.

Q. You became president on that date?

3198 A. I became president on that date.

Q. Are you familiar then with the personnel problems of the bank?

A. I am.

Q. You were having a bit of difficulty in 1946, weren't you, in keeping your employees?

A. We all have had difficulty, not only in banking, but all lines.

Q. Did you have quite a bit of turn-over in your employees?

A. Well, we have had turn-over.

Q. Now, you told us what your policy and instructions were. Despite the instructions respecting the cashing and endorsing of checks, might not a teller have broken those rules?

A. That is entirely possible, unbeknownst to the management.

Q. I want to show you three checks, which are Government's Exhibits Nos. 133, 158 and 160, and ask you if those were cashed at your bank.

A. I will take them one at a time, is that correct?

Q. Yes. Will you read off the number.

A. Is this the number?

Q. You speak up, please.

3199 A. I am asking you the number.

Q. It is right here. It is No. 133.

A. No. 133, that is a check drawn by the General Confections, Incorporated, David Lubben signing, $17,190.25 the amount, payable to cash, dated December 4, 1946. On the reverse side it has the endorsement, David Lubben, and the inscription "Okay to cash only, Edward T. Urban," and an officer's okay.

3200 Q. And who is the officer who okayed it?
A. Rudolph G. Had.
Q. What was his position at that time?
A. Assistant Cashier.
Q. Assistant Cashier?
A. That's right.
Q. Now, will you look at the others?
A. Exhibit 156, check dated October 12, 1946, payable to cash, $10,000 in amount, drawn by Reserve Trading Corporation, David Lubben signing, endorsed David Lubben, also the inscription, "Okay to cash, Edward T. Urban", and the initial "B", which is the initial of Mr. Frank Bush, formerly an assistant cashier of the bank.

By the Court: The question was whether or not they were cashed at his bank. I don't know that that has been answered.

By the Witness:
A. Yes, these checks were cashed at the bank.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. All right.
A. This doesn't have an exhibit on it. Oh, yes, on the face.

160, check dated November 7, no year, drawn in
3201 favor of cash, $14,146.70, drawn by Reserve Trading Corporation, David Lubben signing, endorsed David Lubben, and the inscription, "Okay to cash only, Edward T. Urban."

And that check likewise okayed with the initial "B". That would indicate that Mr. Frank Bush, former assistant cashier of the bank, okayed the check. And that check was cashed at the bank.

Q. Now, if the statement was made that these checks were not cashed by Mr. Urban, but the money was given to somebody else, would you say that was wrong?

3202 By Mr. O'Brien: I will object to that, if the Court please. That is no part of the direct, there is no connection.

By the Court: I don't suppose he has any personal knowledge of what took place.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. You have no knowledge of whether this particular money was handed to Mr. Edward T. Urban or to anybody else?

A. I wouldn't have any way in the world of knowing.
By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you.
By Mr. O'Brien: Just one question, Mr. Groenwald.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Each of the last three checks which were handed you, Government's Exhibits 133, 158 and 160, was, in fact, endorsed by your depositor, Urban?
A. That's correct.
Q. And was likewise endorsed by the man who got the money, Lubben?
A. I would say so.

3203 Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. May I show you again. Whose endorsement appears last?
A. Mr. Edward T. Urban.
Q. Who then would get the money.
A. If I understand the endorsement on that check, Mr. Urban endorsed that for the accommodation of the prior endorser.
By Mr. Lockley: All right.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. So Mr. Lubben got the money?
A. Naturally I suppose that. I would say.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You don't know?
A. Knowing bank procedure, I would say that.
Q. You don't know?
A. I don't know, but you asked me the question what I thought about it.
By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you, Mr. Groen-3204 wald.
By Mr. O'Brien: Thank you, sir.
(Witness excused.)

RUDOLPH G. HAD, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Had?
A. Rudolph G. Had, H-a-d.
By the Court: H-a-g?
By the Witness: H-a-d.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Where do you live?
A. 5834 South Sawyer Avenue.
Q. Chicago?
A. Chicago.
Q. And are you, too, connected with the Mid-City National Bank of Chicago?
A. I am.
Q. In what capacity?
A. Assistant cashier.
3205 Q. And was that also your position with the bank in the year 1946?
A. That's right.
Q. You are in the commercial department of the bank?
A. That's right.
3206 Q. Did your duties as assistant cashier in the year 1946 include the O.K.-ing of checks for payment?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Including those presented to the paying tellers?
A. Yes.
Q. I show you a check which is marked Government's Exhibit 133 and ask you to examine it and to state whether it bears any indication of your approval?
A. It bears my O.K.
Q. On the front or reverse side?
A. On the back.
Q. By initials?
A. H.
Q. And is the significance of that initial endorsement that you were approving the payment of the check by the paying teller?
A. By the endorsement on the back of the check.

Q. Yes, sir. That is what it means, is it not?
A. Correct.
Q. And prior to the time that you affixed your approval was the check exhibited to you either by the teller or by Mr. Edward—what is it, Edward or Edwin?
3207 A. Edward T. Urban. It was presented by him.
Q. And did you observe Mr. Urban make his endorsement?
A. I did.
Q. And also the endorsement of Mr. David G. Lubben, which appears above?
A. It was an unidentified person.
Q. Who was with Mr. Urban?
A. Mr. Urban.
Q. What happened from there on, what did you do after you had marked the check "Approved"?
A. I immediately took the check to the teller's cage.
Q. You carried this check over yourself?
A. To the teller's cage and told the teller that I affixed my O.K. on there and immediately returned to my desk.
Q. Is there anything on this check to indicate who the teller was?
A. Payer No. 2.
Q. And that would indicate through your records which teller had paid the check?
A. That's right.
Q. Is it true that the daily teller record of teller
3208 No. 2—is that what you call him, teller No. 2?
A. Payer No. 2.
Q. Paying teller No. 2?
A. That's right.
Q. —would reflect an entry in this amount, seventeen thousand one hundred ninety dollars and a quarter; do you understand the question?
A. I didn't understand that last.
Q. Well, it is pretty long. Let's withdraw that and let me ask you this.
When the teller paid this item would he make an entry upon any record in his cage?
A. He would make a listing on his teller's sheets.
Q. Descriptive of this check and its amount?
A. Just the amount he would.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir.
You may cross-examine.
By Mr. Lockley: No. Thank you, Mr. Had.
By the Court: That is all.
(Witness excused.)

3209 EMMET HOGAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Emmet Hogan.
Q. Where do you live, Mr. Hogan?
A. I live in Los Angeles.
Q. You used to live in Chicago?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Where did you live?
A. I lived at 5517 Lakewood.
Q. For how long?
A. Approximately three years, I believe.
Q. Are you married, Mr. Hogan?
A. Yes.
Q. Any family?
A. Yes, I have four children.
Q. And your wife and four children and yourself live now in Los Angeles?
A. Los Angeles.
3210 Q. Did you used to work for the Shotwell Company?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And when did you go to work for them?
A. I believe it was January of 1943.
Q. And how long did you work for them?
A. Well, I resigned February of 1946, but I continued on for three or four months to break in my successor.
Q. Well, what type of work did you do at that time with the company?
A. I was a sales manager.
Q. And that would be true in 1945 and for part of 1946?
A. Yes.
Q. And then who succeeded you?
A. Howard Roeser.

Q. Howard Roeser has already appeared here. He had been in the comptroller's office?

A. Yes.

Q. And so in early '46, he took over sales and you went to California?

A. Yes, I moved there around the middle of the year.

Q. And what position did you take in California?

3211 A. I became the West Coast representative for Shotwell.

Q. Now, did you know a man by the name of Lubben when you were working in Chicago for Shotwell?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. When did you first see him?

A. I really don't know when I first saw him. He was introduced to me in our office shortly after he was appointed as our New York representative. I am not clear as to that date.

Q. The exact date?

A. No.

Q. Well, you were sales manager, and you knew something of the territory he had and what work he was or was not doing?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. In early 1945, as sales manager, did you have any conversations with Mr. Cain about the performance of his work, by Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. About when was it?

A. As clearly as I can recall, it was in March or the early part of April in 1945.

Q. Where?

A. In Mr. Cain's office.

3212 Q. And what was said between the two of you about Lubben?

A. Well, I recommended that we replace Mr. Lubben as our New York representative.

Q. Fire him?

A. That's right.

Q. And what did Cain say?

A. Well, Mr. Cain said that he did not want to make a change at the present time because Mr. Lubben was securing for us certain raw materials which were very scarce and which we needed to stay in business, that he was shipping those raw materials to us at ceiling prices, and that we were paying for them with finished goods at our ceiling prices, and that for the time being he did not want to disturb that relationship.

Q. And were those what was known in the trade as trade deals?

A. That's correct.

Q. And explain in the trade during those OPA days what was meant by trade deals.

A. Well, many companies who had quotas of scarce goods in those days in some cases were not able to use them and they—I think the word for it was tolling—

3213 they frequently tolled those goods, which was, according to my understanding, a legitimate procedure. In our case, we were getting these—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, just a moment, Mr. Hogan. I object, your Honor, to the generalities, unless he is able to state some specific circumstances in which these trade deals he refers to actually occurred and of which he has particular knowledge.

By Mr. Kirby: I am asking about the course of the trade generally in those OPA periods, your Honor.

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By the Court: Yes, unless he refers to some specific deals that throw some light upon the issues of this lawsuit.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. And have you covered the substance of the conversation about these deals with Lubben between yourself and Cain?

A. Yes.

Q. So you weren't able to get him fired?

A. That's right.

3214 By Mr. Lockley: I didn't hear any testimony about any deals.

By Mr. Kirby: When he tried to get Lubben fired Cain told him he couldn't fire him because Lubben was trying to get some raw materials for candy.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Isn't that what you said?

A. That's correct.

By Mr. Lockley: What deal?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did Mr. Cain go further in detailing what the trade deals were than you have told us about?

A. He only mentioned that the raw materials involved were chocolate, and in some cases sugar, and as far as I can remember, in some cases, it was either skim milk or condensed milk, something like that.

Q. And was there a product called sweetened condensed milk?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he mention that?

A. Yes, to the best of my recollection.

Q. And am I correct in believing that sweetened
3215 condensed milk contained 42 per cent sugar?

A. I couldn't answer that question.

Q. Well, it was heavily sugared.

By Mr. Lockley: Let him testify. If he knows he will tell you.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Well, was it a product in which the sugar content was important?

A. That was my understanding, yes.

Q. And so far as the Shotwell Company is concerned, what use did they have for sweetened condensed milk?

A. I believe we used it in the manufacture of chocolate goods.

Q. And was sweetened condensed milk also used by chocolate manufacturers?

A. I believe so.

Q. Was that mentioned by Mr. Cain?

A. Well, the item was mentioned but its use was not discussed.

Q. After that attempt by you to have Lubben fired, did you make any more attempts one way or another about Lubben's activities?

A. Well, I had recommended that we fire Lubben on more than one occasion, but in this particular occasion
3216 I was more insistent than others because I had found out certain things in New York which led me to believe that he was doing our company harm in that market.

3217 Q. Did you take the matter up again with Mr. Cain?

A. I don't think I took it up after that. I am not sure, however, whether that was the first time I discussed it or whether it was the second time.

Q. Mr. Hogan, do you recall—or did you ever hear of a Dr. Doe?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Is there a real live person by the name of Doe?

A. Well, I had contact with a man whom I believe was a Dr. Doe.

Q. And where was his office?

A. In the Board of Trade Building.

Q. And when was that?

A. I don't remember the date. It undoubtedly was either in January of '46, before I resigned, or some month subsequent to that during '45, but I have no idea other than that when the exact date was.

Q. Well, you resigned and went out to California to work for Shotwell out there early in '46?

A. Yes. Well, I resigned in February. I didn't leave until—I don't know whether it was April or May, but I am sure that my contact with Doe was prior to my resignation, because from that time on I spent all my time traveling with Howard Roeser, breaking him in as my suc-

3218 cessor.

Q. And where did you find this—how did you find this Dr. Doe?

A. Well, I was given an envelope to deliver to him in the Board of Trade Building.

Q. Who gave it to you?

A. I hesitate to mention specifically names, because I am not sure whether it was one of three persons, or one or two of three persons. To the best of my recollection, the envelope was consigned to me outside my desk. I was getting ready to go downtown on an errand of my own and one or two of these men came up and asked me—

Q. One or two of which men?

A. Well, there were—I don't like to mention any name in connection with this unless I am sure, but there were either Frank Huebner, Sam Graflund or Howard Roeser. It was one of those three men, or there may have been two men involved at the time. I can't remember.

Q. All right. It was one of those people in the office?

A. That's right.

Q. And you have later learned the envelope had 3219 money in it?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. You were told that?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. Do I understand you were told that?

By the Witness:

A. Not at the time, no.

By Mr. Lockley: You learned it later?

By the Witness: I was told it later.

By Mr. Lockley: I move that his answer be stricken, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes, the fact that he learned it was money may be stricken as hearsay.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. They gave you something?

A. Yes, they gave me an envelope.

Q. What did it look like?

A. Well, it was an envelope. It contained—I can't tell you what it contained, but I naturally was suspicious that it—

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object to what his suspicions were.

By the Court: Yes. If you can't tell what it con-3220 tained, you can't tell what your suspicions were.

By the Witness:

A. I didn't open the envelope and I didn't see what was in it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But did you press it?

A. Well, I held it in my hand.

Q. And did it have some softness?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. Now, then, where did you go with this envelope?

A. I went down to the Board of Trade Building and I consulted the directory in the Board of Trade Building, because the Doctor's name—or the room number was not on the envelope, and I saw a Dr. Doe listed after a room number.

Q. Now, wait a minute. You are inside the Board of Trade Building, right over here?

A. That's right.

Q. And you look at the board and you are looking for the name of Dr. Doe?

A. Yes.

Q. Was one there?

A. Yes, absolutely.

3221 Q. So then what did you do?

A. I went up in the elevator to the room number of Dr. Doe. And I walked in the outer office, and as I did so, a man came out of the inner office. And I said, "Dr. Doe?" And he said, "Yes."

And I handed him the envelope, and he said,—I don't know whether he said thank you or not, but I mean that is the extent—I wasn't in his office more than the time it takes to tell about it.

Q. Did you ever take any money—wait a minute, now. Excuse me. I have got to withdraw that. I will have an argument with my brother here. Of course, I think anybody going to a dentist's office has to have a good reason, Judge.

Mr. Hogan, were you ever in Dr. Doe's office on any other occasion?

A. No, I never was.

Q. You never saw the man on any other occasion?

A. No.

Q. When you came back to the plant, did you say anything about whether you did or did not want to make any more such trips?

3222 A. Yes, I did. I said that I didn't want to be involved in any errands of that kind in the future.

By Mr. Lockley: I would like to have the time and place of the conversation, if you please.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. When was it?

A. Immediately after coming back from making that delivery.

Q. Who did you tell that to?

A. It was—the party or parties who had originally given me the envelope, one of those three men, or two of those three men.

By the Court: I think we will take our afternoon recess now.

We will suspend for ten minutes.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the Jury, as well as the Judge, leave the court room.

By the Marshal: This Honorable Court will now recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

3223 By Mr. Kirby: I have no further questions of Mr. Hogan.

By Mr. O'Brien: I have a question, but as a matter of procedure, Mr. Lockley should perhaps interrogate him first.

By Mr. Lockley: You may proceed, Mr. O'Brien. I will cross examine him all at one time.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the last question and answer? Well, the other Reporter has left and I will go on recollection.

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Hogan, you say you were going downtown on an errand?

A. Yes.

Q. The errand was to Dr. Doe?

By the Court: I have difficulty hearing you. I am not so sure it is my own hearing. I think you should bear in mind the jury may have a little difficulty.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think you are right. When I
3224 get tired, especially, my voice goes down. I know there have been times when it was a little hard to hear you too.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Hogan, were you going downtown on your own account?

A. Why, yes. That is what I meant by an errand.

Q. Where were you going?

A. I was going into Finchley's to buy a suit.

Q. That is somewhat near to the Board of Trade Building. Now, as I understand you, when you got back and immediately upon your return, you said you did not want any similar or further assignments?

A. That is correct.

Q. Can you tell us just what that conversation was?

A. Well, I remember—

Q. Tell us precisely what you said about it.

A. Well, I said that I did not know what was going on and I did not want to know what was going on and I did not want to be involved in any more errands of that kind.

Q. What, if anything, about it was there that you knew which caused you to make that statement?

3225 A. Well, I would have had to be a lot more naive than I am if I didn't recognize—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. Your Honor, I object to his state of mind at the time.

By the Court: Oh, I think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I didn't want your state of mind and I don't think I inquired for it, but my question, Mr. Hogan, was:

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was it that you knew which led you to make that statement?

A. Well, the circumstances under which the envelope was given to me, there was a certain amount of hush hush about it. As I drove—as I went downtown and began thinking about it. I had left the office in a hurry. I was going down on my own errand and I wanted to get back out there. I didn't give it too much time at the time, but I rode on the L and began thinking about the circumstances and I began to get more and more uneasy as I walked in the office and gave the envelope to Dr. Doe. The whole thing to me seemed to be very unusual.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to what it 3226 seemed to be to him. If he can't tell us exactly what happened and what was said—

By the Witness:

A. I have already told you what was said. There was nothing further said at that time, to the best of my recollection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you know at that time that the company was buying or paying premium money for corn?

A. I did not know of my own knowledge, no. I had heard—

Q. Had you heard anything of that sort?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. It is hearsay.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am not asking him—

By the Court: You are asking him now what he heard. It certainly can't constitute admissible testimony.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you yourself have any such knowledge?

By Mr. Lockley: He already answered.

By the Witness:

A. No, I did not.

3227 By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Hogan, you were in the sales department, as I understand it?

A. That is correct.

Q. Well, as part of your duties in the sales department, did you have anything to do at all with the acquisition of raw materials?

A. No, I did not.

3228 Q. You had only to do with sales?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now did you have quotas in The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For your brokers at that time?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did David Lubben have a quota?

A. Yes, he did.

Q. Had he a quota—or rather, had he bought from you in 1941 and 1942?

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, that would be objected to as beyond the scope of the direct examination.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I think—

By the Court: If it is not connected with the direct, the objection is well taken.

By the Witness:

A. I probably answered this first question.

By the Court: I think I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, he stated he had 3229 recommended—

By the Court: The objection is sustained. You may proceed.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, when you told Mr. Cain you thought Mr. Lubben should be discharged, wasn't it because he was disrupting your quota arrangement?

A. No.

Q. That had nothing to do with it?

A. I don't quite understand the question. What I should have said probably was that the territories had quotas. See, our territory had quotas based on the usage in that market in pre-war years, and if we appointed a new broker to a territory, he automatically came into possession of quotas that belonged to the territory. The quotas did not belong to the brokers. They belonged to the customers in the particular territory, and the broker was assigned those territories each month for distribution.

It is part of my duty to see that customers got what was coming to them.

Q. You also had quotas for principals as well as brokers?

3230 A. By principals, you mean—

Q. People who bought for themselves rather than for resale to somebody else? I mean people who bought for themselves rather than as employees of The Shotwell Manufacturing Company?

A. I didn't—the only quotas that we had were for customers. Now we had jobbers as customers. We had five and ten-cent store syndicates. We had department stores, and in most cases the buyers of those groups knew what they were entitled to because they had kept track of what they had bought from us in years when materials were not scarce. The brokers in a particular territory, in order to facilitate distribution for the customers, we would set up brokers who serviced those particular customers, and he would send in orders against his quota for these customers, and we would ship them out to the customers.

Is that clear?

Q. Yes. Did you also have house accounts?

A. Well, we considered—yes, we had house accounts.

Q. And were there quotas for house accounts?

A. Yes.

3231 Q. Did Mr. Lubben have a quota?

A. When I say house accounts, I mean accounts which our brokers did not have any control over.

For example, when I went to New York, I called on the buyers of the various syndicated items. Those were house accounts.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben have such a quota?

A. Not to my knowledge.

3232 Q. Now you also referred to a conversation with Mr. Cain when he told you that there were some trade deals. Do you have any personal knowledge of a single trade deal with Mr. Lubben?

A. I don't believe I do.

Q. That was all what Mr. Cain told you, is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. When you went to Dr. Doe's office, are you able to tell us what sort of envelope you took, the size of it?
A. I really don't remember.
Q. You don't remember the color of it?
A. I can't even remember that. I can't remember.
Q. Do you remember what you did with it when you carried it there? Did you put it in your inside pocket, or did you carry it in your hand?
A. I believe I put it in my pocket but I am testifying about an incident that occurred six years ago, and I have given it very little thought in the interim and certain details completely escape my mind. I couldn't identify the doctor. I couldn't remember what he looks like, but other things are easy to remember. For instance, his name 3233 is such an unusual name that it is hard to forget a name like that.
Q. When you received the envelope, was it sealed?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you see anybody putting anything in it?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. Was it still sealed when you gave it to Dr. Doe?
A. That is right.
Q. Had you opened it in the meantime?
A. No.
Q. Did you see Dr. Doe open it?
A. No.
Q. You didn't see what was in it?
A. Of my own knowledge, no.
By Mr. Lockley: That's all, Mr. Hogan.

Redirect Examination by Mr Kirby.

Q. Mr. Lockley was asking about some quotas and allocations. That was in your department?
A. Yes.
Q. And you had a secretary that handled it, handled the books and kept track of those?
A. Yes, I did.
3234 Q. Was there some difficulty with Mr. Lubben in connection with that?
A. Well, he tried to bribe my secretary on one occasion to increase the amount of his allotments.
Q. You blocked that?
A. She came in and told me what happened.

By Mr. Lockley: Were you present, Mr. Hogan?
By the Witness: What?
By Mr. Lockley: Were you present, Mr. Hogan?
By the Witness: No, I was not.
By Mr. Lockley: I move that the answer be stricken.
By the Court: It may be stricken.
By Mr. Kirby: He was in charge of the allocations about which they just inquired.
By the Court: He is relating something somebody told him.
By Mr. Kirby: The girl worked right with him and under his supervision.
By the Court: Yes, but that is hearsay.
By Mr. O'Brien: Have you finished?
3235 By Mr. Kirby: That's all, Mr. Hogan.
By Mr. O'Brien: I have a question.
By Mr. Kirby: All right.

Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Hogan, what was it that you found in the New York market and Mr. Lubben's handling of the accounts which led to the suggestion which you made to Mr. Cain?

A. Well, in the first place, he was not calling on the trade regularly. The customers that I contacted when I went into New York where they did know him were almost universal in stating that he was not doing the job for us and the thing that brought it to a head at that particular time was a very good customer of ours who told me that Dave had come into his office with a sheaf of thousand dollar bills and had told him that he was going out and buying—

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any more recitation of hearsay by this witness.

By the Court: I will sustain the objection. The answer may be stricken.

3236 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What if anything else was there that you had in mind or know of your own knowledge, Mr. Hogan?

A. Nothing that I can recall. I mean, he just didn't measure up to the status of a representative in a market as important as New York.

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Hogan, in 1945, was it necessary for a salesman to go out and sell candy?

A. Not to dispose of goods, no.

By Mr. Lockley: That is all.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

MICHAEL COHEN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. Michael Cohen.

Q. Where do you live, Mr. Cohen?

3237 A. 275 Linden Boulevard, Brooklyn.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. Right now?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I am in the ve ding business.

By the Court: They don't hear you, Mr. Cohen. You will have to raise your voice.

By the Witness:

A. Vending the five-cent drinks.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was your business in 1945 and 1946?

A. Buying and selling.

Q. What commodity?

A. Syrup, chocolate syrup, cocoa. There may be one or two other things I can't think of—corn sugar.

Q. Corn sugar? Is that dextrose?

A. That is right.

Q. Was your office at the same place at that time?

A. My office in 1946?

Q. Yes.

A. It was 204 Franklin Street, New York.

3238 Q. Did you do business in your own name, or in the—

A. My own name.

Q. —trade name?

A. No, my name. That was my boy's business.

Q. What was his company's name?

A. What was what?
Q. What was the name of his company?
A. Cold Trade and Cold Food Products.
Q. Was there also a Commodity Trading Company or Corporation?
A. I didn't get that.
Q. Did you also have a Commodity Trading Corporation?
A. No. I dealt with them, but I never had it.
Q. Did you know the principals or owners of the Commodity Trading Corporation?
A. Was that in Wall Street? If you give me the address, I can remember.
Q. Yes, it was in Wall Street.
A. Was that Bettencourt?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes, I know him very well.
Q. Was that Mario Bettencourt?
3239 A. Yes, that is right.
Q. Do you know David G. Lubben?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And when did you first meet him?
A. Oh, I guess in 1944 or 1945.
Q. What was the condition of the market in 1945, as to the supply of corn syrup?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, unless this man is qualified as an expert witness.
By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is a good objection.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Let me ask you, Mr. Cohen, during the year 1945, one of the commodities you were dealing in was corn syrup, was it not?
A. We were dealing in corn syrup, yes.
Q. Were you dealing in tank truck or carload lots?
A. Both kinds.
Q. And also in smaller lots?
A. Yes.
Q. And for how long prior to 1945 had you been dealing in corn syrup?
3240 A. Before 1945?
Q. Yes, sir.
A. I don't think I dealt with any. It was either 1944 or 1945.
By the Court: Mr. Cohen, when you face him, I am afraid the Jury can't hear you. Face straight ahead.

By the Witness: If the lawyers will speak a little louder—I am a little hard of hearing myself.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You were dealing in corn syrup in 1944?

A. Yes.

Q. And in 1945, how extensive were your dealings?

A. How much what?

Q. Well, what volume of business were you doing?

A. I don't remember—in 1946, it was a big volume, and 1945 was small.

Q. Taking the year as a whole, it was small?

A. 1945, yes.

3241 Q. Was there a time in 1945 when your dealings grew bigger?

A. 1946 it grew bigger.

Q. What time in 1946?

A. What was that?

Q. What time in 1946?

A. And what?

Q. At what time in 1946 did that grow noticeably bigger?

A. Maybe the twelve months.

Q. During the whole twelve months?

A. Maybe twelve or eleven, I don't remember.

Q. When did you first notice it in 1946?

A. When I got orders.

Q. Did you have a good many orders for corn syrup in 1946?

A. Yes.

Q. Where would you buy the corn syrup, generally speaking?

A. Whoever sold it to me. I have no direct contract. I bought from Lubben. I bought from a lot of people.

Q. Did you buy from Eiger or did you sell to Eiger?

A. No. We were together. I was partners with 3242 him that certain time in 1945.

Q. In the year 1946?

A. In 1945.

Q. In 1945 you were partners with Eiger?

A. That is right.

Q. What was the name of your firm?

A. Eiger Trading Company.

Q. And while you were with him, you also bought corn syrup?

A. Yes. In a small way, yes.

Q. And while you were doing that, were you also buying for your own account separately?

A. No. We were together. When I was with him, we did everything together. I was with him five or six months or less.

Q. During what year?

A. 1945.

Q. How long did that continue before you took off on your own?

A. Well, we only got together about five months and then I went for myself.

Q. I see. Now, when you went for yourself, where would you buy the corn syrup, from what sources?

A. From Lubben and from anybody who had it.

3243 Q. When you say "Lubben" do you include any of his companies?

A. Naturally, Eatsum Food Products, that was Lubben's.

Q. The Eatsum Food Products?

A. Yes.

Q. What other sources for corn syrup did you have?

A. To buy or sell?

Q. As a buyer.

A. Well, from jobbers, big supplies from out of town, Philadelphia, Chicago and other places.

Q. In the year 1946, you were buying heavily?

A. Very heavily.

Q. Do you remember, Mr. Cohen, what the ceiling price of corn syrup was?

A. Approximately six cents, six and a half.

Q. And in the purchases which you were making in 1946, what was the price that you paid?

A. I used to pay, six, six and a half cents a bill and five and a half cents cash, sometimes seven and a half cents cash. Certain people I paid more and certain people I paid less.

Q. Were you able, in the year 1946, to buy corn syrup in any quantity at six cents a pound, just six cents 3244 a pound?

A. Just six cents a pound?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I couldn't get a half an ounce.

Q. Is it true that in all of the syrup you bought during the first half of the year 1946 that you paid—withdraw that.

I must confess I have forgotten what you said the ceiling was. Was it six cents or five cents?

A. It was six and a half cents.

Q. Six what?

A. Six, six and a half, something like that.

Q. It ran about six or six and a half?

A. That is right.

Q. And five and a half cents—

A. The cash.

Q. Was cash overage?

A. That is right.

Q. Over the ceiling?

A. Over the ceiling.

Q. So that the market price at that time was about twelve cents?

A. The market price was six and a half cents but they wouldn't give me any.

3245 Q. That is the ceiling price?

A. That was still the market price.

Q. Sir?

A. That was the market price.

Q. What was the market price?

A. Six and a half cents, but they didn't sell it for that.

Q. Could you buy any at that?

A. No.

Q. If you bought it, you paid twelve cents?

A. Twelve, thirteen and fourteen cents and sometimes sixteen cents in some cases.

Q. As high as sixteen cents?

A. That is right.

Q. That is sixteen cents a pound?

A. That is right.

Q. Do you recall, did you have any dealing in corn, raw corn?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell us what the ceiling was on raw corn in 1946?

3246 By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object to this line of testimony unless there is some relationship to the Shotwell Manufacturing Company. What Mr. Cohen did has no relationship to what Shotwell did.

By the Court: Unless they are seeking to establish the market price.

By Mr. O'Brien: Of course that is what I am doing, Judge, yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: I think there is a better way of doing it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I doubt that very much. We certainly are here to prove it as to the OPA, to prove it as to the people in it. That is the way to prove a market. That is what I had in mind doing.

By the Court: Well, if you can do it so far as the testimony is concerned, proceed.

By Mr. O'Brien: Would you read the last question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. About two and a half cents or something like it a bushel—two twenty-five a bushel or two and a half 3247 a bushel.

By Mr. O'Brien.

Q. And what did you pay for the raw corn?

A. Well, here is what I worked out—

By Mr. Lockley: I object. What happened in his case no relationship to what Shotwell may have paid.

By the Court: I don't think we are concerned with what Mr. Cohen had to pay in his operation.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was the market price on raw corn?

A. The market price was approximately two and one half dollars a bushel, but a farmer would not sell it to the refineries for the price so the refineries came to Michael Cohen and Dave Lubben and said, "You get us corn and we will get you corn." So I paid the farmers fifty to one hundred cars, to the Penick & Ford people.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the answer as not responsive.

By the Court: Yes. Wait a minute, Mr. Cohen.

By Mr. Lockley: I move that it be stricken.

3248 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. What was the price of the corn?

A. I told you about two and a half dollars a bushel.

Q. If I understood you correctly, that was the ceiling price?

A. That is right, OPA ceiling.

Q. Yes, but what was being paid for raw corn in 1946?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Lockley: I don't see the materiality.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I have a right to prove the market.

By the Court: Well, what he may have paid for raw corn—

By Mr. O'Brien: I wasn't asking him what he paid.

By the Court: You certainly were asking him.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the last question?

(Question read.)

3249 By the Court: How would he know what other people paid for raw corn?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I will ask: Were you familiar with the market in corn, raw corn, and corn syrup in 1946, Mr. Cohen?

A. Pretty near, yes.

Q. Do you know what the dealers in raw corn and corn syrup were paying?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: What dealers?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In the year 1946?

By Mr. Lockley: I object again, your Honor.

By the Court: Well, what area?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. In and about the city of New York.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I fail to see where that has any relevance to the company doing business in the city of Chicago. I would also like to know where the corn originated, whether in Idaho, Iowa, or Nebraska or Illinois. It make a great deal of difference.

3250 By the Court: I think if there were dealings above the market price on raw corn, it would be a matter of barter between who was buying and the one who was selling.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, that isn't true. There was a market.

By the Court: Well, you will have to establish an area which would throw light on any issue that may arise here.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Speaking of syrup, Mr. Cohen, did you ever have occasion to get syrup from the refineries?

A. No.

Q. Did you have any dealings yourself with the refineries?

A. Yes, when I was with Excelsior Company. I have dealt with them for twenty years.

By Mr. Lockley: I object. Mr. Cohen, you have answered the question.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't know that he has answered the question.

By Mr. Lockley: He said yes.

By the Court: I didn't hear the answer.

3251 You will have to have it read.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you please read the answer.

(Answer read.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When was that, Mr. Cohen?

A. When I dealt with them?

Q. Yes.

A. My father was in business for fifty years, with Excelsior Company. We bought corn products under Corn Refining Company.

Q. During the year 1946 did you buy corn syrup in Iowa?

A. Lubben did. With Lubben, we bought.

Q. You both bought?

A. Yes. We had that deal with the corn.

3252 Q. Yes, sir. Was that through the Reserve Trading Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Or Trading Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was the deal that you are speaking of?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, to any deal he may have had with Reserve Trading Corporation.

By the Court: Yes. The objection is sustained.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. You did, however, in your deals with Lubben or Reserve Trading Company have occasion to procure corn or corn syrup?

A. Yes. Yes, sir.

Q. From what source did you procure it?

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor. I object. I fail to see the materiality of what Mr. Cohen did.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am trying to show the man's experience and then I will ask him the question.

By the Court: You mean the area where he may 3253 have purchased it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. We bought it from Penick & Ford.

By the Court: What? I don't hear you.

By the Witness: Penick & Ford, Hubbinger. They are both in Iowa, one in DesMoines and one in Grand Rapids, Iowa.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Cohen, who were the refineries that you can recall which were then refining corn?

A. I just named the two of them.

Q. Can you name any others that you remember?

A. Yes. The Clinton people.

Q. What was their name?

A. Well, we had deals with them. We gave them chemicals.

Q. What was their name?

A. Clinton Refining, Clinton, Iowa.

Q. And how about the Corn Products Refining?

A. Never dealt with them this way.

Q. Or Union Sales?

A. Union Starch, you mean.

3254 Q. Union Starch. Your dealings were with Penick & Ford and Hubbinger?

A. That is right.

Q. Were you, in connection with those transactions, buy raw corn in the market?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, to what this witness did. I fail to see that it has any materiality.

By the Court: Well, if it is for the purpose of establishing a so-called market price—

By Mr. O'Brien: That is right.

By the Court: I take it, I understood the testimony here is you contend that the Shotwell Company purchased raw corn. I assume what they paid for it is what we are concerned with and not what somebody else paid for it.

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, I don't understand that that is the way to establish the market price. The market price—

By the Court: Well, we are not primarily concerned with the market price. I suppose you are concerned with what Shotwell paid for raw corn, isn't that right?

3255 By Mr. O'Brien: In that connection we are concerned with the market price from time to time.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, the best evidence of that would be what Shotwell actually did.

By the Court: Not the market but what you actually did.

By Mr. O'Brien: I understand that, if the Court please, but the market at any given time in corn is a rather definite thing and the same is true of corn syrup.

By the Court: Well, you mean the ceiling price?

By Mr. O'Brien: No. I don't mean the ceiling price. I don't think there was any relationship between the ceiling price.

By the Court: You mean the black market price?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, if you call it that.

By the Court: Well, what else would you call it?

By the Witness: I call it under the table.

By the Court: Be that as it may, I don't think

3256 we are going to go into Mr. Cohen's dealings so far as corn and corn syrup are concerned unless it has some relationship to Shotwell.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, that is the relationship and I submit—

By the Court: What is the relationship?

By Mr. O'Brien: The one which I have just described that I will repeat again, if the Court please. I say that during that time, at any given time in those years of shortage there was a definite market price on corn syrup.

By the Court: Well, if you can establish that with this witness.

By Mr. O'Brien: What I am trying to do is show what that was and the relationship and the hook-up will be what Shotwell paid, because it isn't enough for me, as I see it, to prove what they paid without establishing some occasion for the payment of that amount.

3257 By the Court: Well, you can establish through this witness the fact that there was a shortage of corn syrup, or that in order to get their corn syrup, it was necessary to buy the raw corn and send it to the refineries for the production of syrup. You can assume all such facts may be a matter within his knowledge.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Witness: Well, I would answer it—do you want me to answer?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. No. I will ask a question, Mr. Cohen.

By the Court: Let him ask you a question, Mr. Cohen.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Let us go back to the procurement of corn syrup. Your procured some corn syrup from Hubbinger?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you provide the corn?

A. I didn't handle that personally to Hubbinger. That was Dave Lubben handling that. Not with Reserve. He handled that with Eatsum.

3258 By Mr. Lockley: I object. He has no personal knowledge.

By the Court: He said he didn't handle it. The balance may be stricken.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now did you handle any of the transactions which involved the procurement of corn?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And was the corn available in the year 1946?

A. Yes, for the extra money it was always available.

Q. Sir?

A. It was always available for extra money.

Q. And how much extra over the ceiling?

A. It would cost approximately two and a half cents on the corn syrup extra. That is how it worked out.

Q. That is too fast calculating for me, Mr. Cohen. How much was the raw corn, and then how much was the syrup?

A. It was approximately two and a quarter a bushel and you had to give the farmers two and a half a bushel, so it cost us approximately two and a half cents a 3259 pound for the corn syrup, extra.

Q. That means fifty cents a bushel?

A. I did not say that. I said two and a quarter a bushel.

Q. Two and a half a bushel?

A. Yes.

Q. Two and a quarter over?

A. That is right.

Q. Translating that into corn syrup—

A. Instead of costing him six cents, it would cost him eight and nine cents for the corn syrup.

Q. Now the corn syrup ceiling price was six cents?

A. Approximately. I don't know the exact price. It changed daily.

Q. It changes according to the supply and demand?

A. No, not according to the supply and demand. The supply of corn.

Q. Supply of corn?

A. Shortage of corn at any time and it goes up a fraction. They don't go up much higher than a fraction of a cent, or a quarter, not much higher.

3260 Q. And the price, the ceiling price of corn syrup, did that remain the same through 1945 and 1946, at six cents?

A. About a half a cent more or less, that is how it worked out.

Q. That was the ceiling, six cents, or a half a cent one way or the other?

A. That is right.

Q. Well, I think you said the total price ran from 12 to 14 cents a pound?

A. 16, too.

Q. 12 to 16 cents?

A. 13, 14, 15, 16.

Q. Do you know how many pounds of syrup can be processed from a bushel of corn?

A. No.

Q. Approximately?

A. No. I haven't got the figures with me.

Q. Have you known in the past what those figures were?

A. I used to have a record, but I haven't got it with me now.

Q. To refresh your recollection, would you say
3261 that a bushel of corn would produce approximately 34 pounds of syrup?

A. I think 43 pounds, if I am not mistaken. Maybe I am wrong.

Q. And in instances where you did procure the corn, how much per bushel of syrup did the refineries give you?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object to this general nature of the testimony. We are extending over a period of two years. I don't know whether we are talking of 1945 or 1946.

By the Court: We are not concerned with Mr. Cohen's dealings in the corn market. That hasn't any bearing on the Shotwell dealings.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I certainly intend to connect it up, and there is a very definite reason. I would like an opportunity to do it while Mr. Cohen is here. He is from New York City, Brooklyn. If you decide I am not connecting it up and it has no bearing, I suggest you strike it at that time, but I certainly think it is es-3262 sential in my theory of the case, and I would like to be permitted to ask him many questions. I don't intend to pursue him in this way.

By the Court: You say you are going to connect it up?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, sir, I do.

By the Court: And if you do not, I will entertain a motion to strike.

By Mr. O'Brien: What is the last question?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By the Witness:

A. I told you approximately 43 pounds.

By the Court: Mr. Cohen, you don't speak loud enough for the jury to hear.

By the Witness: Approximately 43 pounds.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. That is what a bushel would produce?

A. Oh, it would produce twice as much, but it wasn't what the refineries gave you.

Q. They would give you half of what it would produce?

A. That is right.

3263 Q. Were there some times that you remember when they would give you less than half?

A. No.

Q. That was not in your experience?

A. No, sir.

Q. Speaking of corn syrup, Mr. Cohen, the prices per pound which you have mentioned, from twelve cents—varying from twelve cents to sixteen cents, was that in carload or tank car lots?

A. Well, tank cars would be a penny a pound less and barreled cars, it would be more. It cost approximately a penny a pound a barrel, the barrel plus labor.

Q. What was the resale price on syrup, Mr. Cohen?

A. It all depends on conditions. If a man needed it he paid a big price. If he didn't need it, he didn't buy it.

Q. In 1946.

A. Fourteen, fifteen, sixteen cents. It all depends.

By the Court: You will have to raise your voice.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. A little louder, please.

3264 A. Fourteen and fifteen a pound and sometimes more.

Q. You told us some of the sources from which you would acquire syrup. Did you use the syrup in any business or did you buy it for resale?

By Mr. Lockley: I think that is immaterial, your Honor, what he did with it.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just want to—

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. I bought it for resale.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And as I understand it, you paid at least twelve cents a pound and the resale price per pound was around fourteen, fifteen cents?

A. Sometimes thirteen and twelve and a half cents, it all depends on the market.

Q. In the first half of 1946?

A. Sometimes you get more. You don't know the exact price. If I am stuck with a couple of cars and I got to move it or pay extra storage, I do it at half a cent a pound and sometimes break even not to have any expenses on it.

Q. In instances where you bought—where you supplied corn to the refineries, did you get anything 3265 other than corn syrup? Did you get any other by-products of the corn?

A. No, sir.

Q. Just the corn syrup?

A. That was the agreement.

3266 Q. And who got the other by-products?

A. The refinery. They got two or three products out of it.

Q. What were they?

A. They got oil, starch. And they got something else.

By Mr. Lockley: I think that is immaterial, too.

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. Lockley: What the refinery got out of it is certainly going far afield.

By Mr. O'Brien: I don't think it is immaterial.

By the Court: Well, we disagree on it. That is all.

By Mr. O'Brien: I am speaking of counsel, of course, and just thinking out loud. You provide a bushel of corn, you get the corn syrup, the refinery keeps the by-products. Some part of what you pay for you don't get.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Can you tell me, Mr. Cohen, whether there was any variation or difference in the price for corn syrup, 3267 depending on the part of the country you were selling it in?

A. Well, I sold it f.o.b. New York. What the freight was—I never paid freight.

Q. Did the syrup command the same or a different price in Texas?

A. The same price. Well, we ship lots from Chicago. It still would be the same price. The corn syrup really comes from here.

Q. During your transactions in corn, or corn syrup, did you meet a Charles Ryan?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that it is immaterial.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Major Ryan.

A. Oh, yes. I thought you said Reiner.

Q. Speaking of the volume of your transactions in 1946, 1945 and 1946, what quantity of syrup did you procure through Lubben or his companies?

A. I don't know the exact amount, but a big volume.

Q. What do you mean by a big volume?

A. A big volume.

Q. What would that amount to?

A. A couple million pounds, maybe.

3268 Q. Did you have any occasion to procure corn syrup from Dukorsky?

A. No, I only had one deal with him with Lubben. We went in partnership on a corn deal, but I never dealt with him outside of that, as far as my memory is concerned.

Q. Did he have the Sweet Tooth Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any transactions with that company which involved the procurement of corn for the refineries?

A. What company.

Q. The Sweet Tooth Company.

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor.

By the Witness: He was only one of the partners.

By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, in the deals in which corn was procured, Mr. Cohen, procured by you, did you pay for the corn, or did you pay only the overage?

A. Only the overage.

Q. Who paid for the corn?

A. The refinery.

3269 Q. And the syrup which the refinery furnished you, did they bill you for that with an invoice—

A. No, they gave us a certain amount of corn syrup at the legitimate price.

Q. At the ceiling price?

A. That's right.

Q. And did the refineries pay the ceiling price for the corn?

A. They paid us—that's right.

Q. And when you paid the overage did the refineries make the syrup, or part of the syrup, available to you?

A. Certainly. That was the agreement.

Q. From the corn on which you had paid the overage?

A. That's right.

Q. Was there any instance in which you paid overage that you failed to get the syrup from the refinery?

A. No.

Q. How many pounds of syrup in a tank car, do you know?

A. Oh, about 96,000 pounds.

3270 Q. And if it is barreled up, how much in a car?
A. Half of it.
Q. About half, forty-five, forty-six thousand?
A. And less still.
Q. I asked you about Major Ryan. Did you also tell me in connection with these corn or corn syrup deals, meet a Lieutenant Harris?
A. I don't think so. I may have seen him in the office, but I was never introduced to him. It is enough to know one Major. How many do I have to know?
Q. Did Ryan have any connection with the procurement of corn, with your procurement of corn?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. What was his connection with that?
A. He was the originator of it.
Q. What does that mean?
A. He had the contact with the refineries, and with the farmers, to get the corn. He originally started with Lubben. Eatsum Food Products showed him how to work it, and he got a big bonus, I understood.
Q. And is it he who would pay the overage for 3271 the raw corn?
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, as to what he—
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. To your knowledge?
By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. Did he have any connection other than the one you have just described, Mr. Cohen?
A. What do you mean? Connection with what?
Q. Well, with the corn deals, or corn syrup deals?
By Mr. Lockley: That's a very general question, your Honor. I feel I have to object to it.
By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien: I don't want to lead him, if the Court please. I am just trying to find out what his activities were.
By the Court: No, I will sustain the objection.
By Mr. O'Brien:
3272 Q. I ask you, Mr. Cohen, to tell us, if you can, the total volume of corn syrup transactions that you had in the year 1946?
A. You are asking me big questions.

By the Court: I can't see that we are concerned with that.

By the Witness: One kid by the name of Kupperman in Chicago, he knows the answers.

By the Court: I can't see any purpose in going into Mr. Cohen's transactions, as to the volumes of business. He was qualified as one who can express an opinion as to what the so-called overages were, generally paid, and we are not concerned with the many ramifications of his own business.

By Mr. O'Brien: I didn't want to go into that.

By the Court: That is what you are going into.

By Mr. O'Brien: I just mean as with a doctor's qualifications, some are more expert than others, and I think the volume of business this man had—

3273 By the Court: I think I must place some reasonable limit on your interrogation of his activities.

By Mr. O'Brien: All right.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, Mr. McConnell calls my attention to Major Ryan, and you say he had some special method which he originated for the procurement of corn and corn syrup?

A. That was the method.

Q. Was that it?

A. The way we did it.

Q. Oh, you mean that until your contact with Major Ryan—

A. Lubben's contact. It wasn't my contact.

Q. —the corn and the corn syrup was not procured in that way?

A. Not by us. Other people have done it.

Q. And that was Ryan's idea?

A. Oh, yes. A good idea.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

By the Court: Well, it is about adjournment time. We will be in recess, members of the jury, until ten 3274 o'clock tomorrow morning.

By the Witness: Is that all, your Honor?

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing until the Jury files out, and the Judge, please?

This Honorable Court will recess until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above-entitled cause until the following day, being Friday, October 2, 1953, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m.)

(Caption—No. 52 CR 143)

3275 Chicago, Illinois, Friday, October 2, 1953, 10:00 o'clock a.m.

Court met pursuant to adjournment.

Present:
Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.
Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By the Clerk: 52 CR 143, United States of America v. The Shotwell Manufacturing Company, et al., case on trial.

3276 MICHAEL COHEN, a witness heretofore called herein on behalf of the Government, having been heretofore first duly sworn, resumed the stand and further testified as follows:

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Cohen, did you during 1945 or 1946 have any—

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. Kirby.

By Mr. Kirby: It is not plain to me whether Mr. O'Brien was through with Mr. Cohen and Mr. O'Brien isn't here to be asked.

By the Court: I am sorry. I think we will wait for him.

By Mr. Kirby: Yes. There is only one bank of elevators this morning and it is hard to get up here. As for me, a young man like me, I can walk up a floor.

By Mr. Lockley: I was going by the transcript, Mr. Kirby; on page 3273 Mr. O'Brien said, "I think that is all."

By the Court: We will wait for him.

By Mr. Kirby: We can still wait for him, I assume.

3277 By the Court: I walk up the stairs every morning, Mr. Kirby.

(Mr. O'Brien arrived at this point.)

By Mr. O'Brien: I apologize for being late, Judge. I had a long distance phone message. I am sorry.

By the Court: I think you were through, Mr. O'Brien, with your direct?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, Judge.

By the Court: All right, Mr. Lockley.

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, and Mr. McConnell, are you going to make any examination?

By Mr. McConnell: No.

By Mr. Kirby: No.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Cohen, during the years 1945 and 1946 did you have any transactions of any nature with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any of the individual defendants here, Mr. Cain, Sullivan or Huebner?

A. No, sir.

3278 Q. When did you first meet Mr. Cain or Mr. Huebner or Mr. Sullivan, if you ever met them?

A. I met Mr. Sullivan.

Q. When was that?

A. He gave me the summons.

Q. When was that?

A. Last year.

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at this time, then, I move to strike the portion of the witness's testimony which related to the generalities on the condition of the corn and corn syrup market on the ground that it is irrelevant to the issues in this case. It is immaterial and incompetent and in no way identified with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

By the Court: Well, I will take your motion under advisement and defer my ruling on it. Mr. O'Brien says he is going to connect it up.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, sir.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Cohen, do you know of your own knowledge whether The Shotwell Manufacturing Company or any 3279 one of the individual defendants were ever paid a single penny by anybody in the black market for corn or corn syrup?

A. No, sir.

Q. Isn't it true that established candy manufacturers had a quota with corn syrup processors?

A. Yes, sir. All big outfits, yes, sir.

Q. Did you have such a quota?

A. No, sir.

Q. If you had had such a quota, would you have found it necessary to buy on the black market?

A. No, sir.

3280 Q. You said you knew a Major Ryan?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever pay any money to him?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Is that in connection with the corn market?

A. Yes, sir. I bought corn syrup off of him.

Q. How much did you ever pay him?

A. Well, he gave me a bill of six and a half cents and I paid him seven cents cash, fifteen cents a pound.

Q. What was the total amount of the money?

A. What?

Q. What was the total amount of money?

A. Between 150 and 200 thousand dollars, I give him.

Q. Do you know if Mr. Lubben ever paid any money to Mr. Ryan?

A. I haven't seen it.

Q. I don't understand you. I say, do you know if Mr. Lubben paid any money to him?

A. I never seen him give any money.

Q. I see. You weren't there?

A. No, sir.

Q. You testified that the corn syrup market in 1945
3281 and 1946 was about six and a half cents OPA price and about five and a half cents over-ceiling, is that correct?

A. That is right.

Q. And that that could be, in turn, sold from anywhere from fourteen to fifteen or sixteen cents?

A. That is right.

Q. That is correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, did you mean by your testimony that everybody who ever bought any corn syrup in 1945 and 1946 had to pay this price?

A. If he didn't pay—if he bought it from the refineries, he got the legitimate price. If he bought it outside the refineries, he had to pay the black market price.

Q. People who had quotas, did they have to pay those black market prices?

A. No, sir.

3282 By Mr. Lockley: That is all, Mr. Cohen.

By Mr. McConnell: Just a minute.

By the Court: I think they want to question you.

Redirect Examination by Mr. McConnell.

Q. As I understand it, you had no quota yourself?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you know any company that did have a quota for corn?

A. I didn't get that.

Q. Did you know any company that did have a quota that tried to get corn under the quota—I mean, corn syrup, under the quota?

A. Every one that had a quota, had the legitimate quota from the refinery. There's about a half dozen refineries that got all they were entitled to. They—if they bought it in '46, they would get the same quota they had in '44, or '45, the same amount. They couldn't get more than they had the year before.

Q. The refinery had to get the corn from some place to grind it, no matter whether they had a quota or not?

3283 A. I don't know. I know from my experience they give all their customers a quota. The people that were in business ten or 15 years got all they wanted.

Q. What company do you know that operated on a quota?

A. All of them. In New York, either Paul, Lofts, Baricini, all of them. Everybody had a quota. They all got just what they were entitled to. They got the same amount they got the year previous.

Q. How did the refinery get the corn then? Would the refinery get the corn and from where?

A. From the farmers. They paid the legitimate price. They dealt with the farmers that always took care of them. But the new farmers, they got their quota, but they couldn't get more than they wanted. When they wanted extra, they had to get out and get it the other way.

Q. I thought you said here that you couldn't get any corn moved to the refiners without paying a black market price.

A. That's the new people. But the old people, like the big corn refiners, like Corn Products, had their 3284 quota. They wouldn't give any new customers any, but the old customers got all they wanted, all they needed.

Q. The farmers didn't know anything about that?

A. But they had their farmers that gave them for years and years the same amount.

When they wanted extra corn syrup, they couldn't get it without paying black market.

3285 Q. If they wanted to go beyond the quota?

A. That's right.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. You say you paid some money to Ryan?

A. Yes.

Q. And was that when he was with Lubben?

A. No, when they left Lubben.

Q. After he was with Lubben?

A. That's right.

Q. He went in business for himself?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Kirby: O.K. Thank you.

By the Witness: Am I through now?

By Mr. Lockley: Not yet, Mr. Cohen.

Recross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. You said that when the corn refiners received raw corn through this arrangement the person who procured the raw corn for them would get a half, or a portion of the corn syrup—

A. That's right.

3286 Q. —derived from that?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, that was sold to the black marketeer who arranged the purchase of raw corn?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, what happened to the other half that the refiner kept?

A. Kept for themselves.

Q. And what did they do with it?

A. They sold it to the legitimate trade.

By Mr. O'Brien: If he knows.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know what the condition of the corn market was during all of 1945?

A. Shortage.

Q. All of '45?

A. '45 and '46.

Q. January, February, March?

A. All the way through.

Q. How about November, December?

A. '45 and '46. The last two months of '46 it eased up a little.

Q. It eased up a little. It was still tight?

A. A little tight. '47 there was surplus.

3287 By Mr. Lockley: All right. Thank you.

By the Witness: Am I through now?

By the Court: I think you are through now.

By Mr. Lockley: Just a minute.

By the Court: I think you are through.

By the Witness: He told me to wait.

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, your Honor. I am conferring with my co-counsel here.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you know if Major Ryan worked for Mr. Lubben in the procurement of corn?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you.

3288 Redirect Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

By Mr. O'Brien: Just a minute now, Mr. Cohen. The World Series doesn't start at Brooklyn until this afternoon.

By Mr. Cohen: You held me back last year, too, you know.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Did you ever have any dealings with Corn Products Refining?

A. No, not in the last ten years.

Q. Did you know that Corn Products Refining—well, you had no dealings, you had no communications with them whatsoever?

A. No, sir.

Q. So you do not know of what position Corn Products Refining took with reference to its ability to furnish past quotas?

A. My experience with the Corn Products for 30, 40 years, during the 1st World War—

Q. I am not talking about the 1st World War now, but just during this period of 1945 and '46. Did you have any dealings with Corn Products?

A. No, sir.

3289 Q. And you don't know what their position was on quotas?

A. I know from my experience how they would act, because I have been with them for thirty, forty years. I dealt with them.

Q. I understand. But you had no dealings yourself with them?

A. Not in the last war, no.

Q. And when the corn went short, do you know whether Penick and Ford was still fulfilling its quotas?

A. How would I know about it?

Q. Allright. And do you know whether Union Starch was fulfilling its quotas?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know whether Hubbinger was fulfilling its quotas?

A. No.

Q. You mean you do not know, or they were not?

A. I wasn't in that line to know. I wasn't dealing with them.

Q. Were you acquainted with the Staley people down in southern Illinois?

A. Yes. I never dealt with them in the last twenty 3290 years, but I dealt with them back years ago. I know them personally.

Q. Do you remember whether it is true that the Staley people during all of '45 and 1946, continued to operate as usual?

A. I don't know whether they did or not.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Mr. Cohen, when you said you saw Mr. Sullivan last November, this is the fellow you saw (indicating) isn't it?

A. Yes.

Q. The young Sullivan?

A. That's right.

Q. That was at the deposition hearing, that was in New York when they took your deposition under court order, wasn't it?

A. He met me in Brooklyn.

Q. All right. When he served the papers on you?

A. Yes.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, Mr. Cohen.

By the Witness: You are all through with me?

3291 By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir.

By the Witness: Make sure O'Brien don't call me back now.

(Witness excused.)

3292 CHARLES A. RYAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Charles A. Ryan.

Q. And, Mr. Ryan, you have known a David Lubben for some years?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In 1945 did you go to work in October for a corporation in which he was interested called the Burlan Corporation?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, before that, in 1945, did you have anything to do with making any arrangements with respect to a corn deal with the refinery known as Penick & Ford for Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And when did that take place?

A. In the summer of 1945.

Q. And at whose request did you arrange to make the deal?

3293 A. I went to Penick & Ford Company because—

Q. Mr. Ryan, if you will just kind of shout like I do we will all hear you better. Now, I talk louder than I should, but you do like I do and talk real loud.

A. I went to the Penick & Ford Company to ask if they had corn syrup available for Mr. Lubben, for his factory in the Bronx, New York.

Q. Did they?

A. They told me that due to the corn shortage that they were on allocation for corn syrup.

Q. Was there any way that you could get corn syrup?

A. I discussed that with Mr. Lubben and arrangements were made to supply the corn to get corn syrup.

Q. If you got the corn for the refinery you could buy corn syrup?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was in the summer of '45?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Ryan, when you said Penick & Ford were on 3294 allocation, what did you mean?

A. I meant that their regular customers were allocated corn syrup according to the past performance of the industry.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you. That is all.

By Mr. Kirby: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

By Mr. Lockley: Your Honor, at this time I would like to make a motion that the testimony of Major Ryan be stricken as being incompetent, immaterial and entirely irrelevant to the issues in this case.

By the Court: Well, I will defer my ruling.

ARDON BOWMAN, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?

A. Ardon Bowman.

3295 By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Bowman, I kind of shout so people can hear, and I have very few questions to ask, but will you shout your answers?

By the Witness: O.K.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Ardon Bowman is your name?

A. Right.

Q. Where do you live?

A. Minneapolis.

Q. You lived there some years?

A. Yes.

Q. You own your own home?

A. Yes.

3296 Q. You have been in business for some many years there?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever know of Frank Loperfido?

A. Yes.

Q. He was connected with Dave Lubben?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. And did you know him in the summer of 1945?

A. It may have been in the fall, summer or fall, probably.

Q. Did you ever meet Dave Lubben?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. I would have to guess on the date.

Q. Well, give us your best memory?

A. Probably the latter part of '45.

Q. Are you and have you been for some years known as Red Bowman?

A. Yes.

Q. Did your hair used to be redder than it is now?

A. Before it all came out, it was red.

Q. Well, Mr. Bowman, did Mr. Lubben or Mr. Loperfido, or anybody connected with Mr. Lubben, ever give 3297 you any currency?

A. No, sir.

Q. And specifically, on or about the 10th of October, 1945, were you given, by Mr. Lubben, or Mr. Loperfido, or anybody connected with them, currency in the amount of $79,100.00?

A. No, sir.

Q. Any amount whatever in the year 1945?
A. No, sir.
By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That is all.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Do you know a Mr. Heitmann?
A. I met Mr. Heitmann..
Q. Did you ever get any money from him?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know a Mr. Hankermeyer?
A. No, I don't believe so.
Q. Did you ever get any money from him?
A. I don't believe I know him.
Q. What were you doing in 1945, Mr. Bowman; what was your occupation?
A. Well, I was a business consultant, and in public relations.
3298 Q. Will you please speak up?
A. A business consultant, and did some public relations work.
Q. Where?
A. In Minneapolis.
Q. A business consultant for what sort of businesses?
A. Well, businesses such as—you want names, you mean?
Q. Well, at least the nature of the business.
A. Well, one business was in the business of manufacturing machines to produce cement blocks and bricks. I was employed by Brown & Bigelow, St. Paul.
Q. You mean you were a business consultant for just one firm in the business of manufacturing bricks?
A. No, no, no. No, I am not—I said there was a company that manufactured machines to make concrete blocks and bricks. I was employed by Brown & Bigelow during 1945. I believe that during that period I worked for the 7-Up Company of Minneapolis. I don't have—
Q. Where do you live in Minneapolis?
3299 A. I live at 42 Park Lane.
Q. Did you know Bob Hannegan?
A. No.
Q. Do you know a man named Howard Lawn?
A. I don't believe I do. I am not—I may, but I don't believe I do. I don't remember him.

Q. Do you know an organization known as Clinton Industries?

A. No, I don't think I do.

3300 Q. You don't think you do?

A. I am sure I don't. If I do, I don't remember. If I ever did, I mean.

Q. Will you tell me just what was the nature of the services you performed for your clients?

By Mr. Kirby: Well, I object. It is far beyond the scope of my questioning.

By the Court: I suppose counsel has a right to know what his business is,

By Mr. Kirby: Well, the examination in chief was limited to any dealings with Lubben or his company.

By Mr. Lockley: I intend to lay a foundation for impeachment of this witness, if your Honor please, and it is necessary. I have some information about him.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What was the nature of the services that you performed for your clients in 1945 and 1946?

A. Well, for one company, for instance, that I recall, I secured or helped them secure a price for a new—this new machine that I just mentioned. It was a general program of trying to advise and be helpful

3301 in any way that I could. The nature of my services, you ask—I did what they asked me to do.

Q. Did you arrange for the procurement of raw materials for any of your clients?

A. No, I don't believe I did. I don't remember doing anything like that.

Q. I am sorry. You have to speak louder. I didn't hear the last part of the answer.

A. I say, I don't remember. I did attempt to secure materials for any of my clients, yes.

Q. Did you ever attempt to secure any corn for any of your clients?

A. Not directly, no.

Q. Well, what do you mean by not directly?

A. Well, I mean I attempted to secure sweetenings for some of my clients.

Q. To secure what?

A. Sweetenings.

Q. Sweetenings?

A. Yes, corn sugar.
Q. Corn sugar?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that dextrose?
3302 A. Yes.
Q. Does that come from corn syrup?
A. I am not a chemist. I don't think so.
Q. Is it a by-product of raw corn?
A. Yes, it would be.
Q. Who were the clients that you were attempting to procure this sweetening for?
A. I don't have my records here, but among them was the 7-Up Company of Minneapolis. And I think the Garrett Candy Company.
Q. Which candy company?
A. The Garrett Candy Company.
Q. The Garrett Candy Company?
A. Yes. I don't have my records here. I can't tell you.
Q. Were you subpoenaed by the defense to bring your records with you?
A. I was.
Q. Did you bring them?
A. As to what?
Q. As to the years 1945 or 1946 or whatever the subpoena called for.
A. Records of what?
Q. I don't know what they called for.
3303 A. I didn't have any records that they required. They asked me to bring the records of any business that I had done with the Shotwell Manufacturing Company which I didn't know anything about and they asked me to bring any records that I may have with the Eatsum—I believe it was Eatsum Candy Company. I don't remember what the subpoena said even, but I know I didn't have any records and hadn't done any business with these people.
3304 Q. You say you knew Frank Loperfido?
A. Yes.
Q. In what connection did you know him?
A. I knew him as—he was working for a New York concern and I met him. I don't remember where, in what connection.
Q. Did you ever make a trip with him?

A. I don't—I don't remember.
Q. During 1945 or 1946?
A. I don't remember of any trip.
Q. Did you make a trip with Mr. Loperfido throughout the Midwest in the process of procuring corn?
A. I don't remember making any trip with Mr. Loperfido.
Q. Do you remember that you didn't make such a trip?
A. Well, I don't remember of making it.
Q. What other candy company did you work for or try to procure raw materials for?
A. I don't remember. I don't have any records here. I mean as to all the business that I did during that period.
Q. What were you doing for these candy companies?
A. For candy companies?
Q. Yes.
3305 A. Well, the candy companies, the same as every other company, had many problems. There was everchanging regulations in the OPA and sometimes there was an advantage for them if they bought, procured equipment at a certain period of time because they were given larger sugar base. I don't remember the orders, but—
Q. Are you what is commonly known as a five percenter?
A. No, I don't believe I am.
Q. That is what you called it, anyway?
A. Well—
Q. What did your call it again? What did you say your occupation was again?
A. Part of my work was as a business consultant and in public relations.
Q. You are a good friend of the Governor of Minnesota? Weren't you?
A. No, I don't think so.
Q. Did you ever attempt or arrange to obtain corn from any of the elevators in the Midwest?
A. I don't ever remember attempting to arrange corn from any of the elevators.
Q. Or the purchase of corn?
A. No.

3306 Q. Would you say positively you didn't do such a thing?

A. I don't remember of doing it.

Q. Did you ever attempt to arrange for the purchase of corn from farmers for delivery to elevators?

A. No, I don't remember doing that.

Q. Do you ever remember arranging for the purchase of corn from elevators to corn refineries?

A. No.

Q. Do you ever remember arranging for the purchase of dextrose, corn sugar or corn syrup from the corn refiners?

A. From the corn refiners?

Q. Well, maybe I have the wrong name for them. I mean the people who process corn and the corn syrup and other by-products.

A. I don't remember. Now, wait a minute. What was that? May I have the question again?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. You mean did I ever arrange—did I ever send corn to a refiner or arrange to buy from a corn refiner?

3307 Q. Right.

A. Sugar? Corn sugar, dextrose?

Q. Correct.

A. Yes, I got some sugar from a corn refiner.

Q. And for whose account did you buy it?

A. I don't remember exactly, but I am sure part of it was 7-Up Company of Minneapolis. I am sure it wasn't for anybody's account that was mentioned here, if that is—

Q. Are you sure it wasn't for the Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. I am positive.

Q. Are you sure it wasn't for General Confections?

A. I am positive.

Q. Or Reserve Trading?

A. I had no business with any of those people.

Q. You say you knew Frank Loperfido?

A. Yes.

Q. And you also knew Dave Lubben?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you meet Dave Lubben?

A. I don't recall. I only met him once and it was just for a moment.

Q. In what connection did you meet him?

3308 A. Well, during this period when I was representing different companies that needed sugar or syrup, I necessarily went any place I could learn to find out about it. I would go down to the sugar brokers and the syrup people in New York and there are dozens of them, and among them, I suppose I ran into the name —"Go see these people."—So I went down there. I think that is the time I met Mr. Lubben.

Q. Where was this? At whose office was it?

A. It was in his office, but I don't remember the address.

Q. Was that at 19 Rector Street?

A. It could be. I don't know.

Q. Did you pick up some cash money at that time?

A. No. No.

Q. Do you know Bill Giglio?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I don't remember where I met him.

3309 Q. Did you meet him at 19 Rector Street?

A. I believe that's where I met him, I am not sure.

Q. All right. In what connection did you meet him?

A. Well, I just met him, he was there; as I recall it.

Q. Did he give you any cash money at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did any of the people I have mentioned, Mr. Lubben, Mr. Giglio, or anybody else?

A. No.

Q. At 19 Rector Street, did they give you any money?

A. No, sir. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Heitmann give you any money in Minneapolis?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever tell Loperfido that your wife was a lawyer?

A. That I don't know.

Q. Well, is she a lawyer?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you have presently any records of any kind
3310 of business transactions during 1945 and 1946 with relation to the purchase of corn or corn by-products?

A. No, I don't have, relating to the purchase of corn or corn by-products.

Q. Do you have any of your 1945 records at the present time?

A. Actually I didn't buy any corn or corn by-products.

Q. Well, do you have any records of any of your activities on behalf of your clients with respect to those matters in 1945 and 1946?

A. My clients would have the records. I have records of what they—of what I was paid by these people, if anything—so—

Q. You say you didn't buy any—do you mean that you arranged for somebody else to make the purchase?

A. I didn't—do you mean did I buy the corn sugar and sell it?

Q. Did you arrange for somebody else to do that?

A. Well, I arranged for my clients to buy wherever they could, yes, if that was the thing they were 3311 after.

Q. Did you get any kind of a commission for that?

A. I was paid a retainer, usually, and my expenses were paid.

Q. Do you know a Major Ryan?

A. No, I don't believe so.

Q. Charles Ryan, I believe it is.

A. I don't remember ever meeting him.

Q. Do you know a Lieutenant Harris?

A. No.

Q. I believe his first name is Frank, Frank Harris?

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. Lockley: All right, Mr. Bowman.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you, Mr. Bowman. That's all.

(Witness excused.)

JOHN T. BOND, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

3312 Q. Now, what is your name?

A. John T. Bond.

Q. You speak up like a witness should. We have been having trouble this morning hearing these people, so you speak up nice and loud.

Where do you live, Mr. Bond?

A. Los Angeles, California.

Q. And how long have you lived on the West Coast?

A. All my life.

Q. In Los Angeles all your life?

A. Since 1927.

Q. What has been your business career, Mr. Bond?

A. I have been 35 years in the candy business.

Q. With a variety of companies?

A. Three.

Q. Which ones?

A. My own for nine years, Rockwood and Company for 13 years, and in the brokerage business the balance of the time.

Q. Is the Rockwood Company—is that the Rockwood Chocolate Company?

A. The legal name is Rockwood and Company, but they manufacture chocolate in Brooklyn.

Q. Well, are they one of the largest chocolate 3313 companies in the country?

A. The second largest.

Q. Who is the largest.

A. Hershey.

Q. And Hershey is the largest, and Rockwood is next?

A. That is right.

Q. What was your office with the Rockwood Company?

A. The past number of years that I was with them, I was Vice President in charge of West Coast Sales.

Q. Did you at any time become a representative of Shotwell Candy Company?

A. I did, sir.

Q. When?

A. Either late in 1940 or 1941.

Q. And that continued until when?
A. Until it was terminated by them, I believe, in 1945.
3314 Q. Now, Mr. Bond, did you know a David Lubben?
A. I did.
Q. Had you known him for some years prior to 1944, 1945 and 1946?
A. I met David Lubben, I would say, in about 1943 for the first time.
Q. What was Mr. Lubben doing then?
A. Lubben had just gone with Mr. Burry, or Burry Biscuit Company.
Q. And they were where?
A. Elizabeth, New Jersey.
Q. And did you at any time introduce Lubben to the Shotwell people?
A. To the best of my knowledge, I did.
Q. So far as you know, they hadn't known him before?
A. That is correct.
Q. To whom did you introduce Lubben at Shotwell?
A. Mr. Huebner.
Q. In what connection? What did you tell him about Lubben?
A. Do you want details?
Q. Well, I want your best present memory, yes.
A. As a broker for various concerns.
3315 Q. Is this what you know?
By Mr. Lockley: Tell the conversations.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Tell what you told Huebner. That is what we want to know.
A. Well, I think you should have the background, if you want to know.
Q. Well, all right, if the government doesn't object, well, give it.
A. As a broker, I was always concerned with getting additional merchandise. Being an ex-vice president of Rockwood, I knew where many contracts were that were not being used after the war started and I was told that if I could get additional merchandise that I, in turn, would get additional quotas of candy to sell.
As a consequence, I suggested that they contact Mr.

Lubben or that I introduce them to Mr. Lubben, and as a result of that I did get additional quantities of merchandise to sell.

Q. That is, Lubben was presented to the Shotwell people then as a person who could get raw materials?

A. As a person who had access to raw materials.

Q. That were in short supply?

3316 A. That is correct.

Q. And your experience was particularly in chocolate, in the chocolate field?

A. Correct.

Q. And you say that there were some companies that had allocations of chocolate that were not using them?

A. That is correct.

Q. Did you consult with Mr. Lubben and tell him about such companies?

A. Certain companies, yes.

Q. And they were which companies?

A. The Burry Biscuit Company, Palmer Candy Company, and then there was also the people who manufacture Mounds.

Q. Is that the Peter Paul Candy Company?

A. The Peter Paul Candy Company.

Q. Do you know that actually chocolate was shipped from all of those companies to Shotwell?

A. I do not know anything regarding any shipments.

Q. You just made the arrangements for them to get started?

A. I made no arrangements.

Q. Well, I mean—

3317 A. I told them where the contracts were that were not being used.

Q. Told Lubben?

A. That is correct.

Q. So he could get them for Shotwell?

A. That is correct. I do not know that.

Q. Now, your business on the West Coast so far as Shotwell was concerned then increased?

A. It did, sir.

Q. You got more materials?

A. I got more merchandise to sell.

Q. Now, was a pound of it sent to you and you were charged over the ceiling?

A. I never purchased any merchandise.

By Mr. Lockley: When?

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Was a pound of it sent to any of your customers from Shotwell for which they were charged over ceiling?

By Mr. Lockley: May I suggest a foundation.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. In 1945 or 1946?

A. To my knowledge, there was never a pound of 3318 Shotwell merchandise shipped on which I received my regular brokerage on which there was an overage, over, above ceiling, ever charged.

3319 Q. Now what candy was increased to you, you sold that to your regular customers?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did that candy that Shotwell shipped to you go into the black market?

A. To my knowledge, no.

Q. You placed it with your regular customers?

A. Legitimate customers.

Q. Mr. Bond, from your experience in the chocolate field, would the shipments of cocoa beans—where did they fit into the picture?

A. Cocoa beans are the prime factor in the manufacture of any piece of chocolate. They are imported from the Gold Coast of Africa and from Central and South America. I don't imagine you want the processes by which it is manufactured into chocolate.

Q. No. They are imported and they are the basic materials for the manufacture of chocolate?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now in the years 1944, 1945 and 1946, was there a system of Government restriction on the purchase of cocoa beans?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, to 3320 this witness testifying to such matters. He is not an expert in that.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, there are not many men in the United States more expert than this witness.

By Mr. Lockley: He wasn't in the chocolate business at that time. He was in the candy business and he didn't work for Shotwell in 1945 so I hardly see how his testimony can be competent.

By Mr. Kirby: 1946, I am inquiring about, Mr. Lockley.

By the Court: If he knows from his own experience, he may answer.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Did you know, Mr. Bond, from your experience in the chocolate field what you are now telling us about the import of the cocoa beans and where they come from?

A. I have always kept track of the daily market up to the present time on cocoa beans.

Q. Did you, during the war years, keep track of existing regulations of the Government with respect to cocoa beans?

3321 A. To a certain extent.

Q. Do you yourself have a familiarity with them or can you tell us or describe the state of the market in cocoa beans in 1944, 1945, and 1946?

A. Well, the market was pretty well frozen at that time.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. The quotas, for instance, that people had received before, they were permitted to have again, and it was very hard to get any additional quantity unless it was what we call second hand merchandise.

Q. And what do you mean by second hand merchandise?

A. Second hand merchandise—a manufacturer, for instance, might decide he was going to discontinue making chocolate eclairs or chocolate coated grams, in which event he usually took his quotas of chocolate and then resold them to someone else, which he was permitted to do.

Q. And then that chocolate was available on the market and that is one of the things that you talked to Lubben about?

A. That is correct.

Q. There were quotas for cocoa beans?

A. That is correct.

3322 Q. Do you know anything personally about whether Mr. Lubben was engaged in the purchase and sale of cocoa beans during 1944 and 1945?

A. I do not know of his activities.

Q. Were you involved at all in any consultations in connection with Shotwell attempting to purchase cocoa beans and getting allocations of cocoa beans in 1944, 1945 and 1946?

A. I knew where some of these contracts were. I told him I had advised Mr. Lubben and he was the one that would know regarding it.

Q. So, for their search or for their further work in that field, you turned them over to Lubben?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all, Mr. Bond.

By Mr. Lockley: Do you have any questions, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Bond, you stated that you introduced Mr. Lubben to Mr. Huebner. Do you know where that was?

A. In Chicago.

Q. Do you know about when?

3323 A. No, I do not remember the date.

Q. Well, can you give us the year?

A. I wouldn't want to say the year. It is either 1943 or 1944.

3324 Q. At that time you introduced him as a person who might assist Shotwell? Assist them in acquiring some raw materials?

A. That is correct.

Q. Was there a specific raw material that you had in mind?

A. Chocolate, primarily.

Q. And were you present when there was a conversation between Mr. Huebner and Mr. Lubben regarding the arrangement for purchase of chocolates?

A. At the time that I introduced him, we discussed the matter of additional quantities of chocolate, and I told him that, where certain contracts were, and Mr. Lubben and Mr. Huebner were present at that time.

Q. That is, you told Mr. Lubben where certain contracts were?

A. That is right. I had previously discussed it with him.

Q. With Mr. Lubben?

A. That is correct. I had also previously discussed it with Mr. Huebner.

Q. Now will you tell me as best you can exactly what was said during the conference with Mr. Huebner and Mr. Lubben?

3325 A. Well, I knew at that time Mr. Lubben was trying to get their line in New York on the same kind of brokerage business that I had, and I also stated that if they could get some of the Burry contracts and get some of the Palmer Candy Company contracts on other merchandise that I knew about, and knew the contracts with the Rockwood Chocolate salesmen, that perhaps I could get additional merchandise as a result of their having additional quotas to sell in my territory.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben agree to attempt to arrange such purchases of chocolate?

A. He said that he would try.

Q. Do you recall the terms that he laid down to Mr. Huebner at that time?

A. There were no terms that I remember.

Q. Well, do you recall whether as a condition for selling the chocolate he was to become a broker for Shotwell on the East Coast?

A. No, I do not.

Q. You don't remember whether that was discussed at that time?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recall whether there was any discussion 3326 as to whether Mr. Lubben would sell this chocolate at the ceiling price, or at the black market price?

A. No, I do not recall any conversation regarding that.

Q. All you did then was just bring the two men together?

A. That is correct.

Q. Now you said there was a quota of chocolate at Peter Paul's? They made chocolate—they made candy, too, didn't they?

A. They made candy, yes.

Q. Are you in a position to tell us why they would have a surplus of chocolate to be disposed of?

A. At that time cocoanut was very short. Their main product was cocoanut and they couldn't get sufficient cocoanut to use the quantity of chocolate that they had available.

Q. So they were willing to sell their quota of chocolate, is that correct, to somebody else?

A. That was a common practice.

Q. Was it likewise true of the Burry Biscuit Company, if you know?

3327 A. They discontinued completely their chocolate operation, and therefore had the quota available.

Q. The quotas were the property of Mr. Lubben, weren't they, of Burry Biscuit Company, and he had bought it out in the meantime?

A. That, I do not know. I do know when he discontinued working for the Burry Biscuit Company, he set up the Eatsum Food Products, in which the Burry Biscuit Company, I understood, had a financial interest.

Q. Did you ever lend Mr. Lubben any money?

A. I did.

3328 Q. Did you ever get paid back?

A. I did.

Q. Did you ever know him to lie to you?

A. Never.

Q. You were fired, you said, in 1945?

A. That is correct.

Q. About what time? About what time, by Shotwell?

A. I don't remember the date.

Q. Do you know who took your place?

A. Their sales manager, Emmet Hogan.

Q. Did you have a contract with them?

A. I had no contracts. I have no contract today.

Q. Were you told why you were being replaced?

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I don't think that has anything to do with the matter.

By the Court: No, I don't.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to it.

By the Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, after you were fired by The Shotwell Manufacturing Company—

By Mr. Kirby: I don't think the use of the word 3329 "fired" was used by this witness. They made a change in the distribution method on the West Coast.

By Mr. Lockley: You used the same expression.

By Mr. Kirby: That does not mean there can be any implication that this gentleman was fired. They have the highest regard for him.

By Mr. Lockley: You used the same expression when

Mr Lubben said he was to be retired from his position as broker on the East Coast.

By Mr. Kirby: Well, our attitude as to the merit and worth of Mr. Bond and Mr. Lubben is strikingly different, and I use the word "fired" advisedly. But it doesn't apply to Mr. Bond.

By the Court: The objection is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, in any event, after your services with The Shotwell Manufacturing Company were terminated, did you continue to sell as a broker, Shotwell merchandise on the West Coast?

A. I did.

3330 Q. Where did you get it?

A. From Eatsum Food Products and later known as General Confections.

Q. Were they in large or small quantities?

A. Quite large quantities.

Q. In carloads?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you ever sell any Cardinal chocolates?

A. Lots of them.

Q. As a broker?

A. Lots of them.

Q. For whom?

A. For General Confections.

Q. Whose merchandise was Cardinal chocolates?

A. Shotwell Manufacturing Company.

Q. Now you stated that there was a quota on both cocoa beans and chocolate. Were people who were in the business of using such products in 1941 or 1942 able to secure a supply in 1945 and 1946?

A. Any manufacturer who had a quota was able to secure the same quota based upon whatever the Government allowed on that particular commodity.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Shotwell had such quotas in cocoa and cocoa beans 3331 in 1945 and 1946?

A. They had lots of quotas.

Q. They had lots of quotas. Do you have any personal knowledge of Mr. Lubben obtaining any raw materials for The Shotwell Manufacturing Company in 1945 or 1946?

A. What do you mean by raw materials, chocolate?

Q. I mean chocolate or corn syrup or sugar or anything else that goes into the manufacture of candy.

A. Well, these quotas that I told him about I know later went to Shotwell, according to his story.

Q. But which year? What year did those quotas go to Shotwell, if you know?

A. I wouldn't know the year. It was probably 1945 or 1946.

Q. And you introduced him in 1943 or 1944?

A. That is correct.

Q. How soon after that did he become their broker?

A. That I don't know.

Q. Could it had been 1944?

A. Yes, it could have.

Q. And he arranged the procurement of chocolate for Shotwell?

3332 A. He could have.

Q. Do you know of any other such arrangement Mr. Lubben had with Shotwell after the original one you participated in?

A. No. I was not familiar with those arrangements after the original.

By Mr. Lockley: Thank you, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: That's all. Thank you, Mr. Bond.

By Mr. O'Brien: Mr. Mammel, will you take the stand, please.

By the Court: You have been sworn, Mr. Mammel. You don't have to be sworn again.

CHARLES MAMMEL, called as a witness on behalf of the defendants, having been heretofore first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. Mr. Mammel, you testified the other day to a summary which you had made based on the testimony and the Government's exhibits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And I think you said, did you not, that the 3333 $10,000.00 payment made by Mr. Heitmann was not included in your figures for the year 1945?

A. It was not included as such, no.

Q. Just what, if any, consideration—withdraw that. Was it included in your figures for the year 1946?

A. It was not as such, no.

3334 Q. Was it given consideration in any way in either of those two years?

A. I considered it a part of the currency payment for which we had no checks in support—cash checks, checks made to cash.

Q. Well, you did give it some consideration in one year or the other?

A. Well, I did not top the other currency items that Lubben had testified were paid.

Q. You are telling me what you did not do, Mr. Mammel. I would like to know how you did consider it, and in which year you gave it consideration?

A. I can best explain that by giving you the exact—

Q. Will you get your summary and tell us exactly from that?

A. Yes, right. I can tell you from that.

By Mr. Lockley: Just the summary you had the other day?

By the Witness: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, will you look at this summary, Mr. Mam-
3335 mel, and tell me where and how any consideration was given to the Heitmann testimony, or to the—well, it is the Heitmann testimony, rather than an exhibit.

A. There is nothing in here.

Q. Is your total for the year 1945, $177,000.00?

A. That is correct.

Q. $177,146.23?

A. That is correct.

Q. Is there any item that you have used in reaching that total which you have given consideration to the Heitmann—on which you have given consideration to the Heitmann testimony?

A. No.

Q. What are the individual items that go to make that total?

A. Do you want me to read them all?

Q. Yes. There are only about 12 or 15, aren't there?

A. Only. Exhibit No. 27, $10,849.00. Exhibit 28, $6,-183.00. Exhibit 40, $18,000.00. Exhibit 40-B, $15,000.00.

By the Court: Sixteen?

By the Witness: Fifteen, 15.

3336 By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Fifteen?

A. 15. Exhibit 40-D, $22,124.13. Now, those last three items, there is a settlement sheet, 40-E, which makes it $55,124.13, so of course, that was considered in connection with it.

Exhibit 43, $2,403.00. Exhibit 45, $6,459.74. Exhibit 48, $4,455.00. Exhibit 55, $20,000.00. Then there is $5,524.00, and those two items together are on—

Q. 55-B?

A Settlement sheets, 55-A and 55-B. Then we have an item of $36,148.35, and the latter one is Exhibit 63.

By the Court: What is that figure again?

By the Witness: $36,148.35.

A. And those two that I mention are combined in settlement Exhibit 63-A and B, and that makes a total of $177,146.23.

3337 Q. Now, tell me this, before you get to that 30,000 and that 36,148, which are lumped to make $66,148.35, are they not?

A. That's correct.

Q. Before you get to that, what is the last—or latest date of payment that you have in your schedule?

A. Well, I didn't put the dates down here, but it would be that Exhibit 55.

Q. And the date?

A. A and B there.

Q. Yes, sir. 55, that is a check—

A. That's right.

Q. —dated May 25, 1945, is it not?

A. That's about right.

Q. That's the $20,000.00 check?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, when you go past that to the fifty five twenty four item—

A. Right.

Q. —you have a memo which is Exhibit 55-A?

A. Well, yes, either A or B. They are both, I guess.

Q. All right. And that relates to, on its face, May and June, 1945, overages?

3338 A. That is, I think, about right, yes.

Q. Yes, sir. And then you get to the 30,000, did you consider Lubben's testimony that he had paid that?

A. I considered Lubben's testimony that he had paid that $5,524.00 and the $30,000.00.

Q. Right. Now did you consider Lubben's testimony that he had paid the $36,148.35?

A. Correct.

Q. Now, when I say he had paid, I mean he personally.

A. That's right.

3339 Q. Now, if in addition to the items you mentioned, it is to be considered, as Mr. Heitmann testified, that he made a payment of $10,000.00 to Mr. Huebner late in the year 1945, that is in addition to anything which you mentioned?

A. If he made the payment and it is not part of the thirty-five thousand, then it would be in addition to the hundred and seventy-seven thousand.

Q. Now, which thirty-five thousand are you talking about?

A. That's the thirty thousand that we just talked about and the $5,524.00 which I considered Mr. Lubben paid.

Q. Correct.

A. See—

Q. Lubben so stated.

A. That is correct.

Q. And Lubben stated that Heitmann separately paid some money too, did he not?

A. Yes. Well, you got two of them there at that time, see. It could be on top or it could be apart. I, of course, wouldn't know.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark this Defendants' Exhibit No. 53 for identifiation.

3340 (Said document was marked Defendants' exhibit 53 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Going for a moment to the year '46, Mr. Mammel—I am sorry, I forgot that—without going through the detail of the items in '46 perhaps you can tell us whether you know if you have considered separately the $10,000.00 payment that Heitmann said he made, have you considered it in your figures for '46, or given it any recognition?

A. No, I excluded it in '46 for the same reason that I did in '45.

By Mr. O'Brien: I would like to offer in evidence, if the Court please, the affidavit of Arthur B. Cunningham, former counsel for the Government in these proceedings, which I have had the reporter mark Defendant's Exhibit 53 for identification.

(Document handed to counsel.)

By the Court. Well, I think it is about recess time. We will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

3341 By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, the Government objects to the admission of Defendants' Exhibit 53 for identification. It is an affidavit by former counsel for the Government at the time a motion for a continuance was made.

By the Court: Let me see it.

(Document handed to the Court.)

By Mr. Lockley: It is pure hearsay, and I believe it is incompetent.

By the Court: Yes. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: I may say, Judge, for the record, that such a statement made by the Government—

By the Court: I will defer my ruling if you want to be heard on it later.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Yes. All right.

Is that all Mr. Mammel?

By Mr. O'Brien: That is all that I have.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

(Witness excused.)

3342 By the Court: I wonder if I might examine more carefully the Cunningham affidavit. Then I will be better prepared when you renew your offer.

(Document handed to the Court.)

WELLINGTON MORLEY CRAMER, JR., a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your full name, Mr. Cramer?

A. Wellington Morley Cramer, Jr. Cramer spelled with a "C".

Q. And you live where?
A. 72 North Main Street, Cohassett, Massachusetts.
Q. What is your occupation?
A. I am a manufacturer of chewing gum.
Q. At the present time?
A. Yes.
Q. And what is the name of your company or companies?
A. Gum Products, Incorporated, and Two Star
3343 Confectionery Company, Incorporated. And several other smaller subsidiaries.
Q. Are you the folks who make the bubble gum?
A. Yes, we do.
Q. And was that your business in 1945 and 1946?
A. No, we didn't make bubble gum, too much, in those years. We made a straight gum, for adults, and candy, also.
Q. Also candies?
A. Yes.
Q. And you have dropped or disposed of the candy line?
A. Yes, entirely.
Q. During the years 1945 and 1946 did you or your companies have any dealings with David Lubben or his companies?
A. Yes.
Q. Did they involve the purchase and sale of candies or raw materials?
A. The purchase of raw materials and the sale of the finished goods, the candy from those raw materials.
Q. You would purchase raw materials and you would manufacture and sell candies?
3344 A. Yes.
Q. Do you know Mr. Cary of the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company?
A. Yes.
Q. What, if any, dealings, briefly, did you have with that company or with Mr. Cary in the years '45 and '46?
A. We had no dealings with—
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I object. I fail to see what materiality Mr. Cramer's dealings with the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company has to do with the issues in this case.
By Mr. O'Brien: I will develop that.

By the Court: It is a preliminary question, I suppose. He may answer.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you read the question?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. We had no dealings with the Blue Ribbon Trucking Company as a company. Mr. Cary sent trucks to Boston with sugar in them for us and he would collect —he would come the next morning, or that same 3345 day, and collect for the sugar, himself.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. And did those collections include cash payments over the ceiling for the sugar?

A. Well, it was not only over the ceiling, but was for the sugar itself. It was for the total price of the sugar.

Q. I see.

A. Plus the trucking.

Q. Made in cash?

A. Paid in cash, plus the trucking charges.

Q. In the year 1947 did you have a transaction with Mr. Lubben involving $15,000.00?

A. Yes, I did.

3346 Q. Will you tell us the circumstances of that and about when it was?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor, unless there is some relevance to the issues in this case.

What Mr. Cramer's transactions were with Mr. Lubben, would appear to be completely immaterial.

By Mr. O'Brien: Again it is a preliminary question, Judge.

By the Court: You are going into the transaction now?

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is essential as a preliminary. I will connect it.

By Mr. Lockley: Connect it with what?

By Mr. O'Brien: Oh, I don't have to blueprint my examination.

By the Court: No.

By Mr. O'Brien: I say I will connect it.

By the Court: You couldn't ask a witness what happened ten years ago and then say you are going to connect it up, I suppose.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, it is not that.

3347 By the Court: I must have some inkling as to whether or not it is going to be competent.

By Mr. O'Brien: I think unquestionably so. I am interrogating the witness about a series of two transactions which occurred and of which there is evidence in the record.

By the Court: Well, what is the question now, before the witness?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By the Court: I think I must have an offer of proof.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had before the Bench, beyond the hearing of the Jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien: There are two pieces of testimony in the record. First, on Mr. Lubben's examination, we asked if he had borrowed $15,000 from Mr. Cramer. He said no. That was on Mr. McConnell's examination. On my further examination he said that he had procured

By the Court: Procured the cash?

By Mr. O'Bien: The check for the $15,000. Not 3348 cash, a check. From Mr. Hart. And Mr. Hart was Mr. Cramer's subordinate.

In other words, they are different names in the office. It was all from the same source. That is in the record.

Number two, of course, there is a great deal in the record, brought in by the Government and by Mr. Lubben, on the Riviera meeting in August of 1948, your Honor will recall.

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: And in that same connection, there is admittedly, both on the testimony of Mr. Lubben, and on the testimony of Mr. Davidson, in the record, the statements that they went to Mr. Cramer, and there is an account given as to what transpired there.

Now, my primary purpose is to show his version of what did occur.

By the Court: To show what?

By Mr. O'Brien: For Mr. Cramer to show what happened in the meeting at Boston with Lubben, Davidson

By Mr. O'Brien: No, your Honor.

3349 By the Court: Subsequent to the Riviera meeting?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes. There was a Riviera meeting, and then, if your Honor will remember, Lubben went up to see Cramer.

By the Court: That's right.

By Mr. O'Brien: Now, the things which his testimoney will show occurred at the meeting in his office are connected with the thing itself—is the primary thing, but nevertheless it is connected with, and in sequence with the event that I am now interrogating him about, which happened some few months earlier, about six months earlier.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, if this is impeachment your Honor, it is impeachment entirely on a collateral issue.

By the Court: I think so.

By Mr. O'Brien: No.

By the Court: As far as any loan of money is concerned, it is impeachment on an entirely immaterial issue.

By Mr. O'Brien: It isn't. I am not saying it is a matter of impeachment in respect of borrowed 3350 money.

The so-called loan of money is the first step which explains some of the things which transpired at the meeting. It is exceedingly material. It is serious subject matter as to what occurred at that meeting. And it is a matter that can't be an immaterial matter, because the Government in Lubben's direct examination—

By the Court: Well, I didn't remember the meeting with Cramer.

By Mr. Lockley: You brought it out on cross examination.

By Mr. O'Brien: But they brought out the whole Riviera meeting.

By the Court: Yes, the Riviera meeting hasn't anything to do with it. The Riviera meeting is separate and distinct. Cramer wasn't there.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's true, but then the terminal conversation in that meeting, according to the testimony, ties up directly with that.

By the Court: I think you did ask Mr. Lubben about his meeting with Cramer after the Riviera meeting, and you asked Davidson some questions about that, also.

3351 By Mr. O'Brien: That's true.

By the Court: That may have some bearing on some of the issues of this law suit, but I don't see that whether or not he ever borrowed money from Cramer has any bearing on the issues of this law suit.

By Mr. Lockley: This is an attempt to broaden the scope of an already broad cross examination. It is matters which they brought out on cross examination, which relate to an entirely immaterial and unconnected issue, and now they are attempting to impeach the witness on that collateral matter.

By Mr. O'Brien: No, you call it impeachment—

By the Court: What you have done continuously, and what I have tried to indicate my objection to, you have brought out certain matters on cross examination which are foreign to the issues and then you want to impeach on those foreign issues.

By Mr. O'Brien: No. There is a lot of talk about impeachment, Judge, but what happened in the Riviera meeting, and what happened in connection with it after the Riviera meeting, is quite important, and has a lot 3352 to do with all of the issues in this case.

It is a matter of direct testimony, as well.

By the Court: Well, supposing I hear the testimony, and I will receive it, subject to the motion to strike.

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had in open court, within the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

By the Court: I will receive the testimony subject to a motion to strike.

3353 By Mr. O'Brien: Would you read the question, Mr. Reporter?

(Question read by the reporter.)

By Mr. Lockley: I object to the form of the question, unless he first lays a proper foundation for it.

By the Court: What are you calling for now, conversations with Lubben; is that it?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes, your Honor. It is the transaction.

By the Court: Then I suppose you should limit it to that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, of course, that is what we were talking about in the prior conversation. I asked if Mr. Cramer had a transaction with Lubben in 1947, concerning an item of $15,000, and now I am asking about when.

By the Court: Ask him more directly what took place.
By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. What took place, Mr. Cramer?
3354 A. In October, 1947, Mr. Lubben came to my office in Boston and told me that he needed money, he was raising money to pay his income taxes. He said he had been to several others, and got money from them, and he asked $25,000 from me.
I explained to him that that was too much money for me, I didn't have it, and any money I did give him, I would have to have thirty days in which to raise it.
So on November 10, 1947, I issued a check to him for $15,000, which was delivered to him by—I don't know, someone else delivered it to him.
By the Court: When was this?
By the Witness: November 10, 1947.
By the Court: 1947?
By the Witness: Yes, 1947.
By Mr. O'Brien:
Q. The conversation was in October?
A. Early in October of the same year.
Q. Were you ever reimbursed for the money?
A. Never.
Q. Thereafter, when did you next hear in any way from Mr. Lubben?
3355 A. In August of 1948, eleven months after that, about eleven months. 1948, in August. I think it was early in August.
Q. And what transpired at that time?
A. One afternoon about four o'clock, the switchboard operator announced to me that there were three men in the outer lobby waiting for me. And I walked out, and two of them I knew, Mr. Lubben and Mr. Cary. And they introduced me to a Mr. Davidson.
Mr. Lubben said he had to see me right away. And I said, "Well, our office closes at four thirty. My wife has made other arrangements for this evening. I did not know you were coming, so I can't see you now. I will see you tomorrow morning."
So they departed and came over the next morning, ten, ten thirty, some time.
Q. All three of them came in the morning?
A. No, there were only two.

Q. Which two?

A. Mr. Cary and Mr. Lubben.

Q. And did you have a talk with them then?

A. I had a talk with Mr. Lubben. Mr. Cary was 3356 in my office, was in and out. He did no talking. He would sit a few minutes, then he would leave, and he would come back, and so forth. I talked with Mr. Lubben.

3357 Q. And what was said?

A. Mr. Lubben said, "Boss,"—he always referred to me as "Boss"—"I am in trouble. The Internal Revenue agents—"

Q. Keep your voice up, Mr. Cramer.

A. "The Internal Revenue agents are after me for records and taxes, and so forth, and I have come up to see you about it."

He said that he and Eddie had taken a slow boat to—it was either the Dominican Republic or Haiti, with a bundle of money. He told me that the living conditions were wonderful, you could live down there for very little money, servants were cheap, and the business opportunities were great.

I told him—I hadn't seen him for eleven months and I told him that we had had our troubles, with the deflationary period of business. And then he said, "May I use your phone? I want to call Byron Cain in Chicago."

And I said, "Yes."

Q. Before that, Mr. Cramer, let me ask, after he told you of their trip, did he say what it was that he wanted?

A. After the trip on the boat—he told me all about 3358 the living conditions, and he said he needed $135,000.00 to go away, either to Haiti or Dominican Republic. I don't remember which country, but he needed $135,000.00.

I thought he was joking, because to me $135,000.00 is a large sum of money.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to what you thought.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Never mind that.

By Mr. Lockley: Just keep it on what the conversation was.

By the Witness: Thank you.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Now, what was it that was said about the telephone?

A. He asked me—he said he was going to call Byron Cain in Chicago. He said, "May I use your wire, Boss?" I said, "Go right ahead."

He called a number—he called for an outside wire and then he called a number in Chicago and he said, "Byron Cain—is this Byron Cain?" or something like that,
3359 and he said, "This is Dave Lubben. I am talking from Morley Cramer's office."

He said, "I need $135,000.00 to leave the country and I am calling you to see what you can do to help me."

And they had a conversation. I don't know how long it was. But he finally hung up the phone and turned to me and said, "Well, Boss, you're it. You have got to raise the 135,000. Byron Cain has made a disclosure."

I said, "Well, look, Dave, $135,000.00 is a lot of money. We have lost $473,000.00 in this company up to July 31st of this year. I have no money. That is ridiculous."

So he immediately dropped it and asked me for $2,000.00. He said, "Well, give me $2,000.00 so I can get my books back from the accountants in New York, Sproul & Scholz."

He said, "If I have those books I can do lots of things."

"Well," I said, "I haven't got $2,000.00 to give you."

He said, "Would you give me one thousand?"

I said, 'No, I wouldn't give you one thousand. I haven't got it." I didn't, either.

3360 So he said, "Well, you think it over. It is a serious thing."

So I said, "Well, call us up Monday. Maybe Mr. Hart, our treasurer, would give it to you. But I haven't any money at all."

And he left the office. I have never seen him since.

3361 Q. At the time of that meeting, was anything said about a meeting at the Riviera Club?

A. No, no.

Q. Had you heard, or did you know that there had been a meeting at the Club Riviera?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything said in that conversation about the sale of Mr. Lubben's properties?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Lubben tell you that Cain had suggested that he get in touch with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he tell you anything of a syndicate for the purpose of raising money for him to leave the country?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you had any prior conversation with Byron Cain, or anybody at Shotwell, about any such subject matter prior to the time that Lubben, Cary and Davidson came?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or prior to the time that you had this meeting with the two of them?

A. No, sir.

3362 Q. Did you call Byron Cain at Chicago, or did Lubben call him?

A. Mr. Lubben called him.

Q. Do you remember an incident which occurred in your office early in the year 1945, concerning chocolate?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When Mr. Lubben was present?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state about when it was?

A. I think it was early in the spring of 1945.

Q. And who was present?

A. Mr. Lubben and myself.

Q. And what occurred, what was said, tell us the circumstances.

A. Mr. Lubben came in to my office and said, "Well, Boss, I just got two cars of chocolate from Augie Nelson for Shotwell."

Q. Who is Augie Nelson?

A. Augie Nelson is the New England sales representative for United Chocolate Refiners, Mansfield, Massachusetts.

Q. They are at Mansfield, Massachusetts?

A. Mansfield.

3363 By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Cramer, you stated that you made a loan to Mr. Lubben of $15,000?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you get a note for that loan?

A. I believe there is one somewheres.

Q. You know there is, don't you?

A. No, I never saw it.
Q. Did you give him the $15,000 check?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Who did give it to him?
A. Mr. Hart, my treasurer. I was in San Francisco on that date, November 10.
By Mr. Lockley: All right. That is all.
By Mr. O'Brien: That is all, Mr. Cramer. Thank you.
(Witness excused.)
By Mr. Lockley: If your Honor please, I move to strike the testimony as being incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial to the issues in the case.
By the Court: Well, the portion of his testimony regarding the $15,000 loan may be stricken as imma-
3364 terial. The other may stand.

PATRICK J. GRACE, JR., a witness called herein on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?
A. Patrick J. Grace, Jr.
Q. And where do you live, Mr. Grace?
A. 418 67th Street, in Brooklyn.
Q. What is your profession?
A. I am an attorney at law.
Q. Practicing in the State of New York?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Do you recall an occasion in 1948, on which you went to the Club Riviera in New Jersey with Byron Cain?
A. I do, sir.
3365 Q. About when was it?
A. I would place it the end of June of 1948.
Q. And prior to going had you had dinner with Mr. Cain?
A. I had.
Q. Where?
A. At the Hotel Gotham.
Q. And after dinner were you visiting with him?
A. I was, in his room at the Hotel Gotham.
Q. During that visit was there a telephone call?

A. There was, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Cain make the call or did he receive the call?

A. Mr. Cain received a phone call while I was there.

Q. At the conclusion of that phone conversation what if anything did Mr. Cain say to you?

A. Mr. Cain asked me if I would ride over with him to the Club Riviera, which is at the Jersey end of the George Washington Bridge.

Q. And did you?

A. I did, sir.

Q. Did you have any discussion on the way concerning the visit?

3366 A. We did.

Q. What, if anything, was said?

A. Mr. Cain stated that he had made an appointment to meet a Mr. Lubben, and he mentioned in the cab on the way to the club that Mr. Lubben had represented him as a sales representative, and that he had some business dealings with him during the sugar shortage.

Q. When you arrived, you and Mr. Cain, at the Riviera, was Mr. Lubben there?

A. Not at that time, sir.

Q. What did you do, go in and get a table?

A. We got a table; yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben later arrive?

A. About fifteen or twenty minutes after we arrived, Mr. Lubben arrived.

Q. Was he alone?

A. No, there was another gentleman with him.

Q. Do you recall who it was?

A. I was introduced him, and his name was Mr. Davidson, an attorney.

Q. Did they join you at your table?

A. They did, sir.

Q. Was there conversation?

3367 A. There was a conversation.

Q. Between you folks at the table?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Davidson participate in the conversation?

A. Generally, about to the same extent that I participated.

Q. And will you tell us what was said?

A. Mr. Cain and Mr. Lubben discussed generally what

Mr. Lubben was doing, how his business was, and everything else.

Mr. Lubben stated that his business in Jersey was not too good. And Mr. Cain said that he was an excellent salesman and would suggest that if he stayed in the selling end rather than the manufacturing end he would be better served.

Then there was some other conversation of general business conditions and state of current events.

And Mr. Lubben said to Mr. Cain, "Byron, I think I am being investigated for taxes." And he said, "It would be in connection with some of the transactions that we had some time back."

I have no recollection of Mr. Cain making any reply
3368 to Mr. Lubben's statement as to the fact of him being investigated for taxes. General matters were discussed.

3369 Mr. Lubben then said that he thought he was to be able to secure either a Coca Cola or Pepsi Cola franchise outside of the country and that he was making—or had made an application for a passport, and that he had no money, but in order to secure the franchise he would need a substantial amount of money. And he asked Mr. Cain whether or not, if he secured the franchise, if he would lend him some money.

Q. Did he say how much money?

A. No, sir; he did not.

Q. What, if anything, else was said?

A. Mr. Cain said, "The question is kind of premature, Mr. Lubben"—or "Dave"—"because actually you have no franchise." But he said, "If the thing should crystallize," he said, "I am going back to Chicago tomorrow and I won't be available in Chicago for two or three weeks. But if anything develops where you have the franchise, and you know just what it is going to cost, contact Mr. Grace and Mr. Grace can always contact me in Chicago or wherever we are."

That was generally the end of the conversation.

3370 Q. I ask you two other things. First, in that conversation was any mention made of Mr. Hannegan's name?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or of Mr. Giglio's name?

A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know—or did you know Mr. Hannegan?
A. No, sir.
Q. You do know that he was the former Postmaster General of the United States?
A. That I did. I knew that.
Q. He is deceased, is he not?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And do you know Giglio?
A. No, sir.
Q. Had you ever heard of Giglio?
A. No, sir.
3371 Q. Have you told the jury the whole substance of that conversation?
A. I think so.
Q. As you recall it?
A. Yes.
Q. During the conversation on that subject matter, did Mr. Davidson participate?
A. To about the same extent that I participated. That was casual comments, but there was no general participation by either Mr. Davidson or myself.
Q. Now following that and immediately upon your leaving the Riviera, did you all leave together?
A. Yes, we all left the Riviera together.
Q. How did you and Mr. Cain get back to New York?
A. Mr. Lubben drove Mr. Cain and myself back to the Hotel Gotham. Mr. Davidson stayed outside of the club.
Q. He did not accompany you?
A. He did not accompany us.
Q. Following that when, if at all, did you next meet Mr. Lubben?
A. Some time around the—between the 10th and the 15th of July I received a telephone call from Mr.
3372 Davidson requesting an appointment at my office for Mr. Lubben. I made an appointment for the 15th of June at three-thirty in the afternoon—July—at three-thirty in the afternoon. Mr. Davidson and Mr. Lubben appeared in my office on July 15th at three-thirty.
Q. Now when they appeared, what was the first conversation that you had?

A. The very first conversation that we had was when Mr. Lubben came into my office, which is a room probably eighteen by twenty. He said, "We would like to discuss something with you, Mr. Grace." I said, "Fine."

He said, "Now, could we have the discussion downstairs in the restaurant?"

I said, "I see no reason for any discussion in the restaurant. We can have it right here in my office." He says, "I am always concerned about a recording device."

By the Court: What was that? I didn't hear it.

By the Witness: A recording device. "I am concerned about a recording device."

3373 I said, "You need have no concern about a recording device. I know nothing about what you are going to discuss and it can be discussed freely in my office."

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Then what was said?

A. He then said that he had secured a Pepsi-Cola or a Coca Cola franchise, I can't remember whether it was Pepsi-Cola or Coca Cola, but he had secured a franchise and needed $40,000.00 to tie it up and wanted to know if Mr. Cain would lend him $40,000.00.

He stated at that time that he had or was then securing his passport for South America. I said, "I can't commit myself with Mr. Cain, but I will contact him within the next three or four days and let you know."

Q. Was that all that transpired during that visit?

A. That's all that transpired.

Q. Did Mr. Davidson say anything?

A. Nothing at all.

Q. Did you thereafter talk to Mr. Lubben?

A. Mr. Lubben called me on the 5th of August. I attempted to return his call and couldn't contact him,

3374 and shortly thereafter, Mr. Davidson called me and I told him I then communicated with Mr. Cain and Mr. Cain had no desire to lend any money to Mr. Lubben.

3375 Q. Was that the end of it?

A. That is the end of the conversation, except that I did omit one thing. At that time when he asked for the loan of $40,000.00, he said whatever property he had in Jersey would—he would give as collateral security for the loan.

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Grace, when did you first meet Mr. Cain?
A. I met Mr. Cain in the middle of June of 1948.
Q. And when did this meeting take place at the Riviera?
A. I would place it the last week in June.
Q. And you had met him then just before that?
A. Prior thereto, yes, sir.
Q. Well, was that in connection with a legal matter?
A. No, sir. It was social.
Q. Through whom did you meet him?
A. A Mr. O'Neil.
Q. Who is he?
A. He is a man who was in the candy business that 3376 i knew from Brooklyn.
Q. Did you ever represent him?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you ever represent Mr. Cain?
A. No, sir.
Q. What was the nature of your law practice in 1948?
A. General practice, sir.
Q. Did you handle any tax matters?
A. None whatsoever.
Q. Do you know what 253 Broadway is?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. Have you ever been there?
A. I may have, on one occasion.
Q. And when was that?
A. That would be maybe in 1951.
Q. Did you know a Mr. Dan Bolick?
A. Yes, sir, I do.
Q. Did you know that he was the Special Agent in charge of the Intelligence Unit of the Treasury Department at that time?
A. I knew he was a man of prominence in the Internal Revenue.

Q. Did you ever have any meetings with him in 1948?

3377 A. I met Mr. Bolick in and around Labor Day of 1948.

Q. That would be around September?

A. September, 1948.

Q. The early part of September.

A. That was at Prospect Park West and Union Street, on the street. I was walking and he was walking.

Q. Just a casual meeting?

A. A casual meeting, sir.

Q. Had you ever met him before that?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. That is the only time you met him in 1948?

A. The only time that I can recall meeting him in 1948.

Q. How long had you known him?

A. I had known Mr. Bolick for approximately fifteen years. I had known Mrs. Bolick for thirty-five years and Mrs. Bolick's mother, I have known—my family has known for fifty years.

Q. What is at Prospect Park and Union Street that you should recall so vividly that you met him on that particular corner?

A. Because it is right around the corner from where my brother lives at 886 Carroll Street.

3378 Q. Who is your brother?

A. My associate in the practice of law.

Q. How long were you at the Club Riviera?

A. I would say about two hours.

Q. How long had you been with Mr. Cain prior to that time?

A. We had dinner. I met him, I would say, around 7:30. We had dinner at the Gotham, probably finished around 9:30 or a quarter to 10:00 and got upstairs to his room to change and wash up and we decided we might go someplace else.

Q. This was about 7:30 that you met him?

A. Right.

Q. And then you had dinner?

A. Yes.

Q. How many meetings had you had with Mr. Cain prior to that one in the Gotham?

A. I met him for the first time at the Waldorf when I was introduced and met Mr. Cain. Between that and the Riviera, I had dinner with him once before.

3379 Q. Who arranged this meeting at the Gotham Hotel?

A. Mr. Cain called me when he got to New York and asked if I would have dinner with him. My family were away and I said I would have dinner with him.

Q. Did he state the purpose of his desire to have dinner with you?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did you discuss?

A. We discussed nothing. It was a social meeting.

Q. You had met him just a couple of weeks before?

A. That is correct, sir.

Q. He called you and asked you to come over and have dinner with him?

A. Yes.

Q. And you didn't discuss any business?

A. None whatsoever.

Q. Now can you recall any particular place where you were in the Club Riviera?

A. We were on an elevated platform to the left of what would be the band stand. In other words, it would be about corresponding to where the jury is sitting on my left in a large room.

Q. Does your law firm do tax work?

A. No.

3380 Q. Was your brother employed by the Government at that time?

A. I had one brother who was in the Federal Housing Administration.

Q. Did the name of Mr. Hannegan come up during the course of this meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. Had you ever met Mr. Hannegan?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did Mr. Cain mention that Mr. Hannegan had been a guest at his home?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you say that you had been down to the office of Mr. Dan Bolick?

A. No, sir.
Q. Do you know a Daniel Tobias?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you meet him?
A. I think Mr. Tobias called me on a couple of occasions and on one occasion came to my office.
Q. And did you give him some money at that time?
A. I did, sir.
Q. At whose instructions?
A. At Mr. Cain's.
Q. What did Mr. Cain tell you to give him?
3381 A. He had told me that he wanted Tobias to get certain records in connection with one of the companies that he took care of the books for that was owned or ostensibly owned by Lubben; that he wanted supplemental information in connection with the voluntary disclosure which he was making or had made in Chicago.
Q. Did you pay Tobias?
A. I did. I paid Tobias $500.00 in check.
Q. Is that all you gave him?
A. That was all I ever gave him. It was a check payment.
Q. Didn't you give him another $250.00 in cash?
A. Never, sir.
Q. Do you know whether or not those records that Mr. Cain was seeking to have Mr. Tobias get for him were ever delivered to Mr. Cain?
A. I don't know.
Q. Did Mr. Tobias ever bring any of them to your office?
A. No, sir. He was to send them directly to Mr. Cain.
Q. You mentioned something about Mr. Cain—wait. First, when did Mr. Tobias come to your office?
3382 A. I would place that around the 20th of July. In fact, I can give you the exact date if I can have my diary.

(Witness refers to document.)

July 21st.
Q. July 21st. Have you ever discussed any tax matter with Mr. Cain?
A. No, sir.
Q. What did you mean by "disclosure?"
A. He had told me that he had made a disclosure to the Government.

Q. Who did.
A. Mr. Cain.
Q. I thought you said that you never discussed any tax matters with Mr. Cain?
A. I don't consider that a discussion as to a tax matter.
Q. He told you that he had made a disclosure?
A. That is correct.
Q. And he asked you to pay Mr. Tobias?
A. To ask Mr. Tobias to get certain information and for me to advance the check which I did and I received reimbursement from Mr. Cain.
Q. Did you get a receipt from Mr. Tobias?
3383 A. I did, sir.
Q. What sort was it?
A. "Received $500.00 for services rendered in connection with the books," and I forget the name of the corporation.
Q. Did you know that those books didn't belong to Tobias?
A. I had no knowledge as to whom the books belonged to.
Q. When did Cain tell you to give the money to Tobias?
A. It would have been about the same time.
Q. How did he tell you?
A. I spoke with him on the telephone and told him that Mr. Tobias wanted $500.00 for the work he was going to perform, and would he authorize me to draw my check and he said yes, and I did.
Q. Where was Mr. Cain at that time, if you know?
A. Chicago.
3384 Q. He was in Chicago?
A. If I recall, yes.
Q. This is July 21st?
A. No. In and around July—it could have been the 16th, the 17th. I think I paid Mr. Tobias on the 21st. That is when he came into my office.
Q. Did you ever write to Mr. Tobias?
A. No, sir.
Q. Do you recall during the conversation at the Club Riviera you suggested that Mr. Lubben take a trip to South America as he wouldn't be available as a witness?
A. Never such a suggestion.

Q. That would be a serious breach of professional ethics as a lawyer, wouldn't it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you are aware of that?

A. Very well aware of it.

Q. Was there any conversation at the Club Riviera about a syndicate being formed?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know whether your brother ever went to see Mr. Bolick at Mr. Cain's request?

A. I am quite sure he did not.

3385 Q. Or any member of your law firm?

A. I wouldn't say whether he did or didn't. I am quite sure he did not.

Q. Have you ever been in Mr. Bolick's office at 253 Broadway?

A. No, sir.

Q. Has Mr. Cain or any of the defendants here or the Shotwell Company, the Shotwell Manufacturing Company, ever paid you a fee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. For your services?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: I object to what fee they paid.

By the Court: He said his relationship was wholly on a social basis. If it was otherwise, I suppose counsel has a right to explore it.

By Mr. Kirby: That was a different time entirely. He is talking about a different time now.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness: I answered: yes.

By Mr. Lockley:

3386 Q. When was this?

A. In October of 1948.

Q. October of 1948?

A. October of 1948.

Q. And in what connection was that fee paid?

By Mr. Kirby: I object to that as a matter of privilege between attorney and client, as to what his services were for.

By the Court: He may answer.

By the Witness:

A. Mr. Cain spoke with me. He at that time said he expected to open up another plant in New York. He said that he was very much disturbed about the fact that he could not get his taxes straightened out in Chicago and he wanted to know whether or not there was any possible way that he could have the thing paid, no matter how much the taxes were, to get the thing disposed of.

He asked if I would speak to somebody to find out whether or not that could be accomplished. In the case that I met Mr. Bolick that I testified to, I met him and asked him whether or not there was any possible way of the taxes being paid no matter what it was, to get 3387 the thing completed so the representatives would be out of the Shotwell Candy Company offices and he said there is nothing that can be done, that it had to proceed the way it is proceeding.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What did Mr. Bolick have to do with a Chicago taxpayer?

A. That was purely getting an opinion from a friend as to whether or not it could be done as a matter of record.

Q. Did you get a fee for getting an opinion for a friend?

A. Mr. Cain retained me in the event the thing was to be brought to Washington and he then said, in connection with a retainer, if I rendered no services, it would be applied on account of services to be rendered to Shotwell on other matters.

3388 Q. Did he specify what he meant by the case being sent to Washington?

A. To have the thing down there so that all the taxes could be paid and determine the final amount.

Q. Did you have any connections in Washington?

A. No, sir, I did not.

Q. Well, are you a tax lawyer?

A. I am not, sir.

Q. At the time of your conversation with Mr. Bolick on the street corner, as I understand it, were the words "voluntary disclosure" discussed?

A. I wouldn't remember whether or not it was or wasn't.

Q. You remember exactly where you met him and the exact day, but you don't remember what was said?

A. I didn't remember the exact day. I said it was in and around Labor Day, as I recall.

Q. Now, can you remember what was said?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall, did you arrange a meeting?

A. No, sir.

Q. You were talking to Mr. Bolick as a lawyer on behalf of your client. Did you make any memoranda 3389 of that meeting?

A. I did not, sir.

Q. Did you ever inform Mr. Cain of that meeting?

A. I think I did.

Q. And how?

A. I don't recall whether or not I called him or sent the letter to him.

Q. What did you tell him?

A. I related the substance of the conversation. I said unfortunately the thing will have to be straightened out in Chicago.

Q. What was the substance of the conversation you related?

A. Just what I related to you.

Q. Tell me again, please.

A. That the matter would have to stay in the Chicago office and there was no summary way in which the additional tax could be fixed and paid and that investigation would have to proceed in Mr. Cain's office.

Q. How much was the fee you received?

By Mr. McConnell: I object to that.

By the Witness: I don't think that is—

By the Court: I don't think we are concerned with 3390 the amount. The objetion is sustained.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you ever render any other services for Mr. Cain?

A. No, I did not.

By Mr. Lockley: All right. That's all.

By Mr. O'Brien: That's all. Thank you.

(Witness excused.)

By the Court: Well, it is about adjournment time, members of the jury. We will be in recess until two o'clock.

By the Marshal: Will the audience please remain standing while the jury and the Judge leave the court room.

This honorable court will recess until two o'clock this afternoon.

(Whereupon an adjournment was taken in the above entitled cause to 2:00 o'clock p.m. of the same day, being Friday, October 2, 1953.)

3391 Chicago, Illinois, Friday, October 2, 1953, 2:00 o'clock P.M.

Court met pursuant to recess.

Present:

Mr. Edward J. Calihan, Jr.,
Mr. John Lockley.

Mr. Vincent O'Brien,
Mr. Thomas C. McConnell,
Mr. William T. Kirby.

And thereupon the following further proceedings were had herein, in the presence and hearing of the Jury:—

By Mr. O'Brien: If the Court please, Mr. McConnell went over to Judge Hoffman's court room. He said he had spoken to you about it.

3392 By the Court: Yes, he had.

By Mr. O'Brien: It will be about an hour.

ANDREW B. ROSE, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. My name is Andrew B. Rose.

Q. And where do you live, Mr. Rose?

A. I live in Louisville, Kentucky.

Q. What is your business or occupation?

A. I am a vice president of the Liberty National Bank of Louisville.

Q. Were you formerly connected with the Manufacturers Trust Company of New York City?

A. I was.

Q. In the main bank or one of its branches?

A. No, sir; it was in the Columbus Circle branch.

Q. And were you with them in the years 1945 and 1946?

3393 A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I was an assistant vice president and was acting as officer in charge of that branch at Columbus Circle.

Q. In what division or department of the bank?

A. Sir?

Q. In what division or department of the bank?

A. Well, I had complete charge of the branch, all branch operations, credit, business development, everything.

Q. That included the commercial department?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. And did you in that capacity have any transactions with David G. Lubben or any of his companies?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first meet Mr. Lubben, approximately?

A. It was probably '43 or '44.

Q. And did you remain with the bank all through the year '46?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did each of Mr. Lubben's companies maintain 3394 an account with the bank?

A. Well, as far as I know; yes, sir. He might have had some I didn't know about.

Q. Perhaps I should specify. That would be Eatsum Food Products Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Both the proprietorship and the partnership. And General Confections, Inc.?

A. Yes, that's right.

Q. Of New York?

A. Right.

Q. During those transactions—well, let me ask you, Mr. Rose, do you recall whether the checks on those companies were drawn or might be drawn by Mr. Lubben; did Mr. Lubben have authority to draw checks?

A. Well, according to my recollection, Mr. Lubben had power to draw checks, but I think there were two other people who also had the power.

Q. Yes, sir. And do you recall who they were?

A. Well, I believe Mr. Hankermyer and then I think there was a girl named Freda. I have forgotten her last name.

Q. Would it be Freda Seiderer?

3395 A. No, I don't remember that name. Maybe there was some other one.

Q. Was Strum, Freda Strum, or was it Miss Beatrice Feldman?

A. I think Miss Feldman.

Q. And during the transactions with those companies were there occasions on which the bank would be asked to cash checks payable to currency or to cash?

A. Yes, I believe there were.

Q. Were those occasions infrequent or numerous?

A. I think it fairly frequently.

Q. And during the course of those transactions did you become acquainted with Mr. Lubben?

A. Well, I had become acquainted with him before that.

Q. Yes, sir. And you maintained that acquaintanceship—

A. That's right.

Q. —throughout the year '46, at least?

A. That's right.

Q. Could Miss Feldman cash checks at the bank?

A. Well, you are asking me to go back eight years. To the best of my recollection, she could. Though I can't be sure.

3396 Q. And Mr. Hankermyer, would you know?

A. Yes, I think he could, too.

Q. Anyone else that you can think of?

A. No, sir; I can't be sure that there was anybody else.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Lubben's home at Hillside, New Jersey?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you a neighbor of his?

A. Yes, I lived a mile and a half or two miles away from there in New Jersey.

Q. Were you of any assistance to him in finding that home?

A. Yes, sir; according to my recollection, I suggested that place to him as being a good place for him to buy.

Q. And did he buy it?

A. Yes, sir.

3397 Q. When was that, approximately?

Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I object. I fail to see the materiality of when Mr. Lubben bought his home, or the circumstances.

By the Court: Well, he may ask him.

By the Witness:

A. Well, I would say that it was probably in 1945.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Do you remember the cost of the home?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I don't see it is material.

By Mr. O'Brien: The price of the home.

By the Court: I don't understand the materiality of that.

By Mr. O'Brien: Maybe I should explain it. Mr. Lockley—

(Whereupon the following proceedings were had at the Bench, outside the hearing of the Jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien: I am generally interested to some extent, through this witness, to show Lubben's mode of living and his expenditures on the issue of whether he 3398 did or did not pay out the money he said he paid out, in relation to the monies or income which he had.

By the Court: I think that is entirely too remote. It doesn't have any reasonable relationship to the issues in this law suit.

By Mr. O'Brien: I beg your pardon.

By the Court: It doesn't have any reasonable relationship to the issues in this law suit. I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. O'Brien: Perhaps that calls for an explanation. Perhaps I should say now then, by way of other proof, that I offer to prove by this witness, if permitted by the Court, that in 1945, Mr. Lubben paid $45,000 cash—I don't say in currency, but $45,000 of money—

By the Court: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien: —for his home at Hillsdale, that place, and that he spent shortly thereafter $20,000 for the remodeling of the home, and an additional $10,000—he spent $20,000 remodeling the home, and for the landscap-

3399 ing, and construction of driveways, and work of that kind, and $10,000 in furniture, furnishings, which he procured from Altman's in New York primarily, and that Mr. Lubben had a practice of entertaining on a very broad scale at the different night places and supper clubs. That he entertained not only the witness, but others, in large groups, and that he was a free spender of money.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, do you intend to prove all of that by this witness alone?

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, no, not by this witness alone.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I fail to see that it is material or relevant in any way.

By the Court: No. I agree. I will sustain the objection.

(Thereupon the following proceedings were had and taken in the presence and hearing of the Jury:)

By Mr. O'Brien: I think that is all.

By Mr. Lockley: No questions.

(Witness excused.)

3400 WILLIAM HENRY SMOCK, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name, please?

A. William Henry Smock, S-m-o-c-k.

Q. Mr. Smock, will you talk in a loud voice so that we can all readily hear you, please?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Mr. Smock, have you been in the candy business for some time?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many years?

A. Thirty-one years.

Q. Where have your different places of candy businesses been?

A. The northwest, down in Minneapolis, and Milwaukee.

3401 Q. Do you know a man by the name of David Lubben who was in the candy business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And over what period of years did you know him?

A. Well, I first met Mr. Lubben, I think, about 1942.

Q. And you have known him continuously since then?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have some business dealings with him?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Now Mr. Smock, have you belonged to some organizations in the candy trade?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Trade associations?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Name some of them, please?
A. Oh, the New York Candy Association, Chicago Candy Club, Western Candy Brokers Association, Gopher Candy Club, I think, and that is about all.
Q. Have you ever written on any of the trade problems for publication in the candy field?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Tell us about that.
A. Well, it is a small magazine edited in Mil-
3402 waukee called The Confectioner.
Q. Have you written for that?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Have you, in the course of these associations become familiar with the general reputation of David G. Lubben?
By Mr. Lockley: I object to that.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. In the candy trade in the United States?
A. Yes, sir.
By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor. I fail to see that is the proper way to impeach.
By the Court: He may answer yes or no.
By Mr. Kirby: Yes.
By the Court: Has he answered yes?
By Mr. Kirby: Well, he answered he knows his reputation in the candy trade.
By Mr. Kirby:
Q. Isn't that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that reputation good or bad?
By Mr. Lockley: Well, I object, your Honor. The proper way to impeach Mr. Lubben is to question as to 3403 his truth and veracity, if it is at all admissable. I object on the ground it is immaterial.
By the Court: I think your question is too broad.
By Mr. Kirby: I will limit the question then to the question of truth and veracity.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Do you know his reputation in the candy trade for truth and veracity?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And what is that reputation?

By Mr. Lockley: I object.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Good or bad?

By Mr. Lockley: I object, your Honor, on the ground that it is immaterial and irrelevant.

By the Court: Well, you object to the foundation? I did not understand. What is the scope of your objection?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor, and I object furthermore to the foundation. He hasn't laid any basis for showing how long he has known Mr. Lubben, how intimate his acquaintance was and how he arrived at his opinion.

3404

Furthermore, I object on the ground that it is not proper attempted impeachment.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, he says he has known the witness since 1942. He has been extensively acquainted in the candy field and he knows the reputation of the witness. That is the complete foundation.

By the Court: You can examine him as to the foundation, I assume, Mr. Lockley, as to the sufficiency of the foundation.

I am not entirely clear as to the relevancy of the testimony. I would like to be refreshed on it.

By Mr. Kirby: I will pass to the Court Held vs. United States, which appears in 260 Federal Reporter. It is a short opinion and I am trying to do just exactly what Judge Walker speaks of in the first two paragraphs.

By the Court: Well, my recollection is that the testimony is competent and relevant. If you want to examine as to the sufficiency of the foundation, Mr. Lockley, and of course you have that right, you can examine him on cross.

3405

By Mr. Lockley: May I inquire at this time, your Honor?

By the Court: You may.

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Smock, you have known Mr. Lubben since 1942?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had personal business dealings with him since that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you base your opinion of him on the basis of those business dealings?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you base it on the fact that he was in the black market?

A. Nope, no, sir.

Q. Have you ever heard anyone in the candy trade discuss Mr. Lubben's reputation?

3406 A. Yes, sir.

Q. For truth and veracity?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Lockley: That's all.

By the Court: Very well. He may answer.

Direct Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is his reputation for truth and veracity?

A. Questionable.

Q. By that you mean bad?

A. That is right.

3407 Q. From your knowledge of Mr. Lubben's general reputation for truth and veracity, would you believe him on oath?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. Kirby: Thank you. That's all.

By the Witness: It got kind of warmed up.

By the Court: What is that?

By the Witness: It got kind of warmed up.

By the Court: Well, he just whispered something about the weather to me.

Cross Examination (Ctd.) by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Smock, you had dealings with Mr. Lubben?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Those were dealings in the black market, weren't they?

A. No, sir.

Q. You paid him currency?

A. No, sir.

Q. He paid you currency?

A. No, sir.
3408 Q. Not at any time?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never paid him anything over the ceiling?
A. No, sir.
Q. You never received anything over the ceiling from him?
A. No, sir.
3409 Q. During 1945?
A. No, sir.
Q. In the purchase of candy?
A. Well, when you say Mr. Lubben, all I know is that he was supposed to have been connected with a concern that I was buying from.
Q. Let us say that.
A. When you say Mr. Lubben, no.
Q. Did you purchase any candy from the Eatsum Food Products Company in '45?
A. No.
By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I want to object to particular transactions because I, indeed, think the rule is that he can testify except as to his general reputation.
By the Court: I think he may show the relationship. I think the question is competent.
By Mr. Kirby: It is his general reputation.
By Mr. Lockley: I wish to show his motive for testifying.
By Mr. Kirby: He is testifying because he was subpoenaed.
3410 By the Court: Go ahead.
By Mr. Lockley:
Q. Did you ever pay any premium to the Haberkorn Candy Company during the years '45 and '46?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. Those were black market premiums?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And did you sell candy that you so obtained in the black market?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. You were in the black market yourself?
A. Well, that is questionable. When I sold the candy and resold it, it is questionable whether I say I was in the black market.
Q. Didn't you operate your business out of a room in the Hotel Sherman?

A. Part of the time.

Q. Where you had hundreds of thousands of dollars?

A. Where I had what?

Q. Hundreds of thousands of dollars?

A. You mean that I had?

Q. Yes.

3411 A. No, no. I never had hundreds of—

Q. You handled that much.

A. I imagine over the years, yes.

Q. Did you ever know Dave Lubben to tell a lie?

By Mr. Kirby: I object on the ground that specific lies are not in issue.

By the Court: He may answer.

By Mr. Kirby: For instance, I couldn't ask this witness, or any other witness, to tell me each time he ever heard Lubben lie.

By Mr. Lockley: This is cross examination.

By the Court: I know, but this is cross examination.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you?

A. Will you repeat that again?

Q. Did you ever know David Lubben to tell a lie?

A. No, he never told me a lie.

Redirect Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. Did you ever know of lies he told to others?

By Mr. Lockley: I object on the grounds that it is hearsay.

3412 By the Court: Yes, I will sustain the objection.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. That is all. Thank you.

By the Court: That is all.

(Witness excused.)

3413 EDWARD I. SPROULL, a witness called herein on behalf of the defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. O'Brien.

Q. What is your name?

A. Edward I. Sproull.

By the Court: You will have to speak up, sir.

By the Witness:

A. Edward I. Sproull, S-p-r-o-u-l-l.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Sproull, you have the same trouble I do. You have to talk so the people down at the end, including the lady in the corner, can hear you. Don't pay any attention to him.

What is your occupation or profession, Mr. Sproull?

A. A certified public accountant.

Q. And you are a member of what firm?

A. Sproull, Scholz & Company.

Q. Where are your offices?

A. 17 East 42nd Street, New York.

3414 Q. Do you know David G. Lubben?

A. I do.

Q. When did you first meet him?

A. Early in 1945.

Q. What, if any, dealings or transactions did you have with him at the time?

A. At the time I met him?

Q. Yes.

A. I had none at all. I was introduced to him by Morley Cramer, who brought him into my office and introduced me.

Q. Thereafter when did you next see him?

A. I next saw him on one occasion shortly after that when he brought in his—some income tax returns that he had filed for prior years.

Q. Was there an occasion when he brought into your office and left with you for safekeeping the books of Eatsum Food Products proprietorship?

A. That was approximately May, 1945.

Q. And did that happen?

A. That did.

Q. And how long did the books remain there?

A. Until September, 1948.

Q. Now, in between those times did Mr. Lubben 3415 retain you or your firm to do accounting work for General Confections?

A. He did.

Q. About when was that that he first talked to you?

A. About May, 1946.

Q. What did he say?

A. He said he would like for us to be the accountant for the General Confections, Incorporated, which was a new firm he had started, and that was presently then up in the Bronx.

Q. Did you accept that employment at that time?

A. I did. At that particular time, though, he indicated there was another accountant, a Mr. Bercu who was presently employed as an accountant, and he says, "I would rather that you wouldn't start until after a few months" because he didn't want to incur the wrath of Mr. Bercu. So we did not start on the audit until August of—

Q. Ed, they can't hear you.

A. I am sorry. So we did not start actively on the audit until August of 1948—'46.

By Mr. Kirby: Mr. Sproull, they have got a concrete breaker outside so, added to our usual troubles, we have got to have a louder voice from you.

3416 By the Witness: I am sorry. Shall I repeat the answer?

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. I think you better.

A. We did not actively start on the audit until August, 1946, although we had been retained in May, 1946, to do so.

Q. Now, when you first did start did you do the work or did someone else do the work?

A. I did not do any of the work, but I took—

3417 Q. Who did?

A. My partner, Frederick W. Scholz, who was in charge of the audit work of our firm. I took him up to the Bronx, and introduced him to Mr. Lubben. And he thereafter became in complete charge of the audit.

Q. And who worked with him?

A. Mr. Joseph P. Meyer, M-e-y-e-r, senior accountant in our firm. There were others employed, other junior accountants employed from time to time, but those two were mainly in charge of all the work.

Q. And is it true that your firm from that time during the duration of its employment, furnished a general accounting service to his company?

A. Up until after the close of the fiscal period in 1947, the first fiscal year of General Confections.

Q. Well, at any rate, it was true all during the year 1946?

A. That's right.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry, Mr. O'Brien. I think you made a misstatement. Not all through 1946, was it?

By the Witness: From the time of the—3418 By Mr. Lockley: August to the end of the year.

By Mr. O'Brien: I should say the remainder of the year '46.

By Mr. Lockley: All right.

By the Witness: But our work covered from the inception of the corporation, our Audit did.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Well, there is no point about it. When I said the whole year, I surely didn't mean it. It is throughout the balance of the year of '46, at least, your general accounting service continued?

A. That is correct.

Q. And now you say it is true also that you doubled back and did some accounting work from the time of the inception of General Confections?

A. That's true.

Q. Now, those books and records of the proprietorship remained with you until September of 1948.

A. That's true.

Q. And what happened to them then?

A. I was served with a subpoena by Special Agent Twohig, to produce all books, records, and any records

3419 pertaining to the Eatsum Food Products or David G. Lubben.

Q. Mr. Twohig is the Special Agent at the end of the table?

A. That's right.

Q. And was he accompanied at that time by someone else?

A. He was accompanied by three other individuals, David G. Lubben, Mr. Lubben's attorney, and, also, I believe Special Agent Cortez.

Q. Sometimes called Cordez?

A. Cordez.

Q. Well, did they take the books and records of the proprietorship at that time?

A. They did. And I received a receipt therefor.

Q. Prior to that time had Mr. Lubben asked for those records?

A. He had, at different times.
Q. And had you given them to him?
A. I had not.
Q. Why?
A. Because he had an unpaid bill he owed me.
Q. How much?
A. $2,000.
3420 Q. Were you holding the records until the bill was paid?
A. That's correct. I so informed him on several occasions.

By Mr. O'Brien: Will you mark these sheets Defendants' Exhibits 54 and 55 for identification?

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 54 and 55 for identification.)

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. Mr. Witness, will you look at these two sheets, respectively marked Defendants' Exhibits 54 and 55 for identification, and tell me if those are sheets you handed me in response to the subpoena here?
A. They are.
Q. And where did you obtain them?
A. From David Lubben, who brought them into my office.
Q. Are you familiar with his handwriting?
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And is each sheet in the handwriting of Mr. Lubben?
A. Yes.
3421 Q. What did he say when he left that with you?

By the Witness: Will you repeat that, please?

(Question read.)

By the Witness:

A. He said, "These might be of help to you in my income tax return for 1945."

By Mr. Lockley: May I have a foundation as to the time and place, Mr. O'Brien?

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By Mr. O'Brien:

Q. When was it that they were left with you?
A. Early in 1946.
Q. And I notice the pencil figures, 1945. Is that in your writing or Mr. Lubben's?

A. That's my writing.

Q. Was that placed on there at the time?

A. It was placed on there at the time because the sheets did not have a year designated thereon and I asked Mr. Lubben, "Are these for '45?" And he said, "Yes."

By Mr. O'Brien: You may cross examine.

By Mr. Lockley: May I see those?

By Mr. O'Brien: They are not offered.

3422 By the Court: I think he has a right to examine them, even though you haven't offered them. He has a right to examine them, in the scope of your direct. You had the witness identify certain sheets.

By Mr. O'Brien: Yes.

By the Court: Counsel has a right to take the sheets and inquire of the witness with reference to anything that is within the scope of the direct.

By Mr. O'Brien: Well, I have no objection to—

By the Court: Isn't that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: I do not so understand it. I can hold the sheets for further identification and then offer them.

By the Court: Well, supposing you offer them tomorrow?

By Mr. O'Brien: Then they wouldn't get in evidence. No question about it.

By the Court: Are you laying a foundation for these exhibits with this witness?

By Mr. O'Brien: In part.

By the Court: Well, he has a right to inquire as to 3423 the foundation.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

Cross Examination by Mr. Lockley.

Q. Mr. Sproull, did you prepare Mr. Lubben's 1945 tax return?

A. I did.

Q. These are sheets which you say Mr. Lubben brought in and gave to you?

A. They are.

Q. Well, I note that they are only for the months of November and December. Is this all that he gave you?

A. That is all he gave me.

Q. Now, had you done any work on the books of the Eatsum sole proprietorship?

A. I merely took the trial balance off and prepared the tax return from that.

Q. You prepared the 1945 returns?

A. That's right.

Q. In 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. Did you also have his books for the year 1944?

3424 A. They were contained therein.

Q. Did you prepare Lubben's personal income tax return for 1945?

A. I did.

By Mr. Lockley: May I have your indulgence for just a moment, your Honor, while we look at these papers? It will just take a second.

By Mr. O'Brien: Judge, I don't think the right that you are talking about extends to copying from the papers.

By the Court: No, I don't think that you can do any more than examine the witness with reference to the scope of the direct. If there is objection made, the objection will be—

By Mr. O'Brien: And I object to Mr. Krane taking a mental photograph of them, too.

3425 By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Did you have any records of the General Confections Company when you were served with that subpoena by Mr. Twohig?

A. We had working papers.

Q. You had working papers?

A. We had none of the books of account.

Q. Did you have the 1945 return of Mr. Lubben at that time?

A. The '45 return?

Q. A copy of Mr. Lubben's '45 return?

A. I did.

Q. Did you have the two exhibits which Mr. O'Brien has just shown you at that time.

A. They possibly were around.

By Mr. O'Brien: Your Honor, I fail to see the materiality.

By Mr. Lockley: I intend to show it, your Honor.

By the Court: I think he has a right to ask whether or not they were in his possession.

By Mr. Lockley: This subpoena calls for—

By Mr. Lockley:

3426 Q. May I show you this subpoena first, Mr. Sproull, and ask you if that is a copy of the subpoena which was served on you?

By Mr. O'Brien: The subpoena relates to Eatsum.

3427 By the Witness:

A. That is a copy of the subpoena that was served by Special Agent Twohig.

By Mr. Lockley: It calls for all books and papers and memoranda of any nature whatsoever.

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that. That document is the best evidence.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I offer it in evidence.

By Mr. O'Brien: Why? It refers to Eatsum Food Products and nothing more.

By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit 168 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit 168 for identification.)

And please make that Government Exhibit No. 168-A for identification, and this one 168-B for identification.

(Said documents were marked Government's Exhibits 168-A and 168-B for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I also show you Government's Exhibit for iden-
3428 tification No. 168-B and 168-A. I ask you if Government's Exhibit 168-B is a copy of a letter you received from Mr. Lubben and while you are comparing, will you also compare Exhibit 168-A and see if that is a copy of a letter which you received.

By the Court: 168-A and 168-B?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, sir. There are two of them.

By the Witness:

A. 168-A is not a letter I received but it is a letter that was prepared in my office in the nature of a receipt which was signed by a Mr. Twohig at the time I would release the records.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. What is 168-B?

A. I don't recall anything about this letter.
Q. Is that in Mr. Lubben's handwriting?
A. That is in his handwriting.
Q. It is addressed to you?
A. It is addressed to E. Sproull.
Q. That was you?
A. This is not necessary for the reason that I had a subpoena on the same date.

3429 By Mr. Lockley: I offer Government's Exhibit 168 and 168-A.

By Mr. O'Brien: No objection. I have a better one.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I call your attention to the fact that that Exhibit No.—

By the Court: Well, let us get a ruling on your offer now.

By Mr. Lockley: I am sorry. I understood counsel had no objection, your Honor. I merely jumped the gun.

By the Court: All right. Are you offering 168, 168-A and 168-B?

By Mr. Lockley: Yes, your Honor.

By the Court: No objection. They may be received.

(Said documents were received in evidence by the Court and marked Government's Exhibits 168, 168-A and 168-B.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Mr. Sproull, I call your attention to the fact that this summons to appear, to testify, to produce books,

3430 etc., in the matter of the tax liability of David G. Lubben, d/b/a Eatsum Food Products Company which calls for all books, papers, memoranda of whatever nature, including journals, ledger, checks, invoices, and bills relating to Eatsum Food Products Company and David G. Lubben, did you have those books which I just identified in your possession at that time?

A. I apparently did but in all the confusion at that particular time, the four people coming in asking for books, and I also call attention to the fact that it would take considerable time to list all the items contained in those five transfer files of vouchers, checks, cancelled checks, twenty-two books of account.

Q. You mean you had these two pieces of paper some place else?

A. The tax return was in my tax file, the tax file.

Q. You had the tax return too?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you turn that one over to Mr. Twohig?

A. It escaped my notice.

Q. Did you do it eventually?

3431 A. I have it here with me.

Q. What did you do with it eventually?

A. I have it here with me.

Q. When did you discover you had it?

A. When this subpoena—not this subpoena, but the subpoena for the defense to produce anything was received. So I went through every file I had and I found these particular papers.

Q. When did you receive that subpoena?

A. I received the subpoena last—the original subpoena to appear into court, I received it last fall, I believe a year ago.

Q. And when did you make the search?

A. Well, not until recently because the case had been postponed and postponed several times.

Q. Did you notify anybody in the Bureau of Internal Revenue that you had in the meantime turned up these additional papers which were called for on the subpoena?

By Mr. O'Brien: I object to that, your Honor. If the Court will look at the subpoena he will see that it is an agent's subpoena from Twohig and not a court subpoena, and that it has to do and is directed to 3432 Lubben d/b/a Eatsum Food Products.

By Mr. Lockley: Well, I suppose—

By Mr. O'Brien: The papers which the witness gave me are two sheets of the partnership.

By the Court: Well, a special agent has a right to issue a subpoena.

By Mr. O'Brien: I know, but it is a statutory right that is not involved here and the papers that counsel is talking about are not papers that are called for in that subpoena.

By the Court: Well—

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Well, Mr. Sproull, did you consider them to be such papers? I notice here in Exhibit 168-A that you did turn over—

By Mr. O'Brien: These are the papers, Judge.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. —transfer of files containing papers, records, cancelled checks of the Eatsum Food Products, David G. Lubben, individual, and twenty-two books of account 3433 purporting to be the books of the Eatsum Food Products and David G. Lubben, Individual, and red folders containing the working papers and so forth for the calendar year 1946 for David G. Lubben, individual?

A. That is right.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, I want to add my objection. He is running this witness up and down the street.

By the Court: If you will state your objection instead of making a speech I will be glad to rule.

By Mr. Kirby: All right. I got impatient with him and I don't blame you for getting impatient with me, your Honor. The subpoena is for individual proprietorship papers. These papers he is quizzing him about are partnership papers. They aren't the same thing at all.

By the Court: The subpoena covers both Eatsum Food Products and David Lubben.

By Mr. Kirby: Not the way I read it. It is David G. Lubben.

By the Court: I read it very hurriedly. I stand corrected if I am wrong.

3434 By Mr. Kirby: David Lubben as a proprietorship. The books that are turned over are the proprietorship books. These are partnership books.

By the Court: "All books, papers, memoranda of whatever nature including journals, ledgers, checks, invoices and bills relating to Eatsum Food Products Company and David G. Lubben."

By Mr. O'Brien: Here is the company (Indicating). Here is Lubben doing business—that is the proprietorship.

By the Court: I don't know. I won't argue with you about how to construe a subpoena. I think the question is a proper one. He said that he didn't have the papers available or he overlooked them. He doesn't take the position it didn't cover David G. Lubben's papers. He said they were in the other place. He had the Eatsum papers and he overlooked them. That is his position.

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. It is possible you could have overlooked other papers?

A. I made a very thorough search recently.

3435 By Mr. Lockley: Will you please mark this Government's Exhibit No. 169 for identification.

(Said document was marked Government's Exhibit No. 169 for identification.)

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. I show you Government's Exhibit for identification 169 and ask you if you know what that is?

A. That is a report on audit of General Confections, Incorporated, prepared by our firm, signed by my partner, Frederick W. Scholz.

Q. Do you recognize his signature on the first page, do you?

A. I do.

Q. Was that an audit report prepared by you in your professional capacity as certified public accountants?

A. It was not prepared by—you say me?

Q. By your office?

A. By my office, not me.

Q. It would be prepared under your supervision and direction?

A. Under Mr. Scholz's supervision and direction.

3436 I had nothing to do with the audit.

Q. Well, is Sproull-Scholz & Company your firm?

A. Yes, sir. I was a partner of it.

Q. Do you deny that this report was filed by your firm?

A. I do not deny it.

Q. To the best of your knowledge, is it correct?

A. So far as I know.

Q. All right.

By the Court: Any further questions?

By Mr. Lockley:

Q. Do you still maintain that you filed Mr. Lubben's individual 1945 tax return?

A. It was prepared by me.

Q. All right.

A. I did not personally file it.
By Mr. Lockley: That's all.
By the Court: Is that all of this man?
By Mr. Lockley: That's all.
By Mr. O'Brien: I have no further questions.
By the Court: That's all.

(Witness excused.)

3437 JOSEPH P. MEYER, a witness called herein on behalf of the Defendants, having been first duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

Direct Examination by Mr. Kirby.

Q. What is your name?
A. Joseph P. Meyer.
Q. Now, Mr. Meyer, it is difficult to hear in this court room and they are breaking up some concrete outside and the matters I want to go over with you are important and you are going to have to talk loud. Now, will you try to do that?
A. I will.
Q. That wasn't a very good effort, now.
Where do you live?
A. 128 78th Street, Brooklyn, New York.
Q. Now, talk just that loud. It is strange, but it will be helpful.
What is your business?
A. I am a senior accountant.
Q. And how long have you been an accountant?
A. For about twenty years.
Q. Are you a certified public accountant?
3438 A. No, I am not.
Q. You are licensed as a senior accountant in New York State?
A. No. There is no such thing as licensed senior accountants.
Q. Well, we have them in Illinois.
A. In New York State there isn't.
Q. But have you been engaged in your profession in New York continuously?
A. Yes.
Q. And with what company in the years through 1940? Who were you with then?

A. I worked in private accounting until 1942. I was engaged as an accountant in June of—in September of 1942, and was so occupied until June of 1943 by Sproull-Scholz & Company.

Q. And that was Sproull, Edward Sproull, that just left the stand?

A. That is right.

Q. How long did you work for Sproull-Scholz & Company?

A. In June of 1943 I was drafted into the armed services, into the United States Navy, and became a payroll accountant for the government. I continued until 3439 December, 1945. I was discharged January, 1946, reengaged by Sproull-Scholz & Company and have continued to work for them until the present time.

Q. So you work for that company now?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, Mr. Meyer, you have heard of a company called General Confections?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Now, in the course of the trial here we have talked about three different entities that Lubben was connected with. One was the proprietorship, that was the first one. Now, you didn't have anything to do with that, did you?

A. I had nothing to do with the proprietorship.

Q. Now, the next thing was a partnership. You didn't handle the books of the partnership, did you?

A. That is right.

Q. So the entity that you had to do with is General Confections, the corporation?

A. General Confections is right.

Q. What was the period of General Confections' life? When did it start?

A. It started March 1, 1946, to February 28, 1947.

3440 Q. You mean the corporation or your connection?

A. Our audit covered the one fiscal year.

Q. Now, during the period of that audit, that covered how much of the year 1946?

A. From March of 1946 until December 31st of 1946.

3441 Q. Now, Mr. Sproull said you didn't actually start the work until August, but you went in and picked up from the beginning, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. So that your work covers the books and the accounting done on the books by outside auditors for the indictment year, 1946, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Now one of the things that we have come to learn in this trial about that General Confections is that the purchase book is missing, but was there a purchase book when you were there?

A. Yes, there was a purchase book.

Q. And what importance would a purchase book have in connection, for example, with purchases from Shotwell? What would it mean? How does it work?

A. Well, a purchase book is a book of original entry of your purchases. All your purchases should be placed in that book.

By Mr. Kirby: Now, I will ask the Court—I have the feeling that Mr. Meyer and myself have been talking 3442 loud. If you feel I am talking too loud—is it all right?

By the Court: I am not complaining.

By Mr. Kirby: I think it is better to be noisy than not to be heard.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. So that that book is the book, Mr. Meyer, the purchase book, in which they would post purchases from Shotwell?

A. That is right.

Q. And with that gone, we can't look at it, and we don't have it to check against, is that right?

A. That is right.

Q. Now, another book which we have learned—well, where was the purchase book the last time you saw it? Who had it?

A. It was in General Confections office.

Q. Lubben had it?

A. I don't know if Lubben had it, but it was in the office of General Confections.

Q. His company?

A. His company.

Q. When was that?

A. Well, sometime in 1947, after February, be-3443 cause we made our final audit up to the 28th or 27th of February, 1947, and in order to do that all the records had to be up to date as of that date. As accountants, we proceeded on their audit after that date, so it must have been after February of 1947.

Q. Now another book that we have learned is missing is the accounts payable book. Now that, I assume, would include the accounts payable sheet which respects Shotwell, wouldn't it?

A. That is right.

Q. And was there such a sheet?

A. There certainly was.

Q. Did you work on it?

A. I worked on it.

Q. And were overages posted to it or not?

A. On General Confections books? Overages were posted in one case on Shotwell's account.

Q. Any time more than just once?

A. I couldn't definitely say more than once, but I know of one case where one overage was placed against Shotwell.

Q. By a journal entry?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, please, Mr. Kirby.

3444 By the Court:

If he knows he can answer.

By the Witness:

A. By a cash entry.

By Mr. Lockley: We can't have you leading him.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. But other than that one when you saw the accounts payable of Shotwell, were there any others?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Well, we have had a lot of other—we have had Lubben's word, and so on, about a lot of things. Where is that book now, if you know?

By Mr. Lockley: Mr. Kirby, if you will just ask the questions and not make more speeches.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Where is the accounts payable book, if you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. The last time you saw it, who had it?

A. General Confections office.

Q. Now then, another book we have learned is missing is the cash disbursements book. What would be the importance of that with respect to transactions with 3445 suppliers of General Confections?

A. The cash disbursements book is used to list every check that the corporation issues. It would give you information about payments on all these purchases, or on any expenses of a corporation for the proper operation of its business.

Q. Well, does it include any check made simply to cash?

A. It includes all checks.

Q. Of any kind?

A. Of any kind.

Q. And is that the only bound book that tells us about those checks?

A. Whom they were charged to?

Q. The only bound book, is the cash disbursements book?

3446 Q. And where was that?

A. Unless—that is a book of original entry. Are you talking about the books of original entry?

Q. Yes.

A. That is the only book of original entry that designates cash.

By Mr. Lockley: Are you referring to General Confections?

By the Witness: General Confections.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now where did you last see that book?

A. In General Confections office.

Q. Mr. Lubben's office?

A. In Mr. Lubben's office.

Q. Now what was the first study in an accounting way that you set up in connection with your work at General Confections?

A. We set up an audit program.

Q. And that was a program of the different things that should be carried out in connection with the books?

A. That is right, how each accountant had to proceed in order to verify, audit the books, make proper corrections, proper adjustments, place anything on the books 3447 which had to be placed on which was overlooked in order to do a proper audit for the verification of the audit, the preparation of the tax return for General Confections.

Q. Now in the case of the instructions that you so prepared, did you make or give instructions as to the records that should be kept of any cash disbursements?

A. Our audit program included the strict analysis of all cash checks of all cash items in order to reconcile with the bank statement each month.

Q. Now have I—

By Mr. Lockley: Just a moment, please, Mr. Kirby. I move that the response be stricken, your Honor. He didn't answer the question.

By Mr. Kirby: He spo' of the instructions given.

By the Court: Well, it ay stand.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, with respect to the checks to cash, did I ask you—oh, I will withdraw that. How about checks to cash in the course of your audit? Did you come across some?

3448 A. Very many.

Q. Tell us about that, what you would find when you came there about checks to cash and who you talked to.

A. On our first audit which covered the period from March 1st to June 30th, after our bank reconciliation, we made a list of three pages of cash checks. Many of these cash checks were in the cash disbursements book but actually, there was no way of charging them from the cash disbursements book due to the lack of information.

Q. And how much in total of cash checks in that period lacked adequate explanation?

A. I would have to refer to my records.

Q. I asked you to check that out. Will you take a look at it? I asked you to make a summary of that. Give me the dates, please, the periods you are talking about.

A. In the first period, from March 1st to June 30th, there were eighty-one checks to cash totaling $323,663.23.

Q. And how many of those checks to cash were checks as to which there was inadequate information to tell who got the money?

3449 A. There were twenty-eight checks totaling $150,599.13.

Q. What did you do when you found that amount of checks unexplained to cash? Who did you talk to?

A. Mr. Scholz, Mr. Lubben and I talked about these checks.

Q. Was there anything given to you with respect to how those unexplained checks should be charged?

By Mr. Lockley: May I have a foundation as to the time and place?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. About when would it have been?

A. About August of 1946, I would say the latter part. We started our audit about August 19th. I would say the end of August or the first part of September.

Q. So at the end of August or the first of September, you were asking about these checks that run back as far as March and there was no explanation on them, and what did Lubben tell you? What support did he give?

A. Mr. Lubben endeavored to locate what he called cash authorization slips but we did not receive cash 3450 authorization slips for the entire checks that we questioned him about.

Q. Did he give an oral explanation about what he did with the money?

A. In some cases he did give an oral explanation about his handling of the money.

Q. And then did you enter it in accordance with the oral explanation he gave you?

A. We entered his explanation on our schedule prepared just for that purpose.

3451 Q. Which then would be charged against whomever he said to charge it against?

A, That is right.

Q. Now in the next period of the audit, did you again come across a lot of checks to cash?

A. That is right, we did.

Q. Tell us how many and the amount and what is the period?

A. The second—

By Mr. Lockley: May I have the time for this, too, Mr. Kirby?

By Mr. Kirby: Yes.

By the Witness: The second period—I will give the time as I give the whole details.

A. The second period covered from July 1st to October 30, 1946. Our audit was in the latter part of November, and it stretched into December.

I may be able to give you exact dates of when the audit is, but referring—by referring to my diary book, if you want the exact date.

By Mr. Lockley: That is satisfactory.

By the Witness:

A. In the second period there were 131 checks
3452 drawn to the order of cash, totaling $286,506.13.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What was the dollar amount?

A. In the second period, 16 of those checks were questioned, totaling $84,620.00.

Q. Did you again talk to Mr. Lubben for an explanation of those?

A. We did.

Q. Did you ever talk to Miss Feldman and ask her for an explanation of those?

A. Mr. Lubben referred me to Miss Feldman for additional information about some of the cash checks, and Miss Feldman endeavored to locate some further cash authorizations.

Q. And did she—

A. We received a few cash authorizations, but we did not receive cash authorizations for all 16 of these checks.

Q. Now Miss Feldman testified here and she said she had some recap sheets from time to time. The gentleman at this table liked to call them settlement checks. But these recap sheets, she said, explained where these cash checks went. Did she ever show you anything like that?

3453 A. No.

Q. But did you ask her for some kind of proof?

A. Mr. Lubben instructed her to give us any kind of proof regarding cash.

Q. Did she ever come up with that kind of information, that is, summary slips?

A. Never saw any cash summary slips. The only slips we saw had marked on them, "Cash authorization".

Q. Little white slips?

A. White slips.

Q. And they weren't complete?

A. In some cases they were complete, and in other cases they were not.

Q. Now, then, what was the next period of your audit?

By the Court: I think we will take our afternoon recess. We will suspend for ten minutes, members of the Jury.

By the Marshal: Will the audience remain standing while the Jury leaves the court room, as well as the Judge.

This Honorable Court will recess for ten minutes.

(Short recess.)

3454 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Mr. Meyer, you say you would ask Miss Feldman for some evidence to support the distribution of these checks to cash? And just tell Judge Nordbye and the jury, how did she do it, immediately was she able to come up with it right away or did you have to talk to her more than once, just tell what happened in those days?

A. I talked with Miss Feldman about ten times during the course of the first audit. The second period—

Q. What do you mean, you talked to her?

A. In order to get additional information. We would try to get additional cash authorization slips, or sufficient explanation, so we could properly find out what happened to the cash, so we could make adjustments for the proper distribution of the cash, whether it was purchases, did it cover expenses, or what the proper expense was, in order to properly audit the books.

Q. And even after you had gone to her the ten times you still didn't get the complete information, is that right?

A. We finally—on the first audit we finally had 3455 to sit down with Mr. Lubben and ask him further questions about cash.

Q. And take his word for it?

A. Take his word in order to make our adjustments.

Q. And over how long a period of time on that first audit were you bothering Miss Feldman to come up with some support?

A. Our first audit covered approximately three to four weeks. We endeavored to get the information from time to time. It may have been, as I said, about ten times. I can't recall exactly.

Q. Well, Miss Feldman testified here that she never heard of any list of cash checks that needed support. Now, that is what you talked to her about, wasn't it?

A. Talked to both Mr. Lubben and Miss Feldman about cash checks.

Q. Now, then, you told us about the first period and you have told us about the second period, and am I correct that you have brought us down now to November 1, 1946?

A. That's right.

Q. What was the next audit period?

A. The next audit period was from November 1,
3456 1946, to February 28, 1947.

Q. And how many checks to cash and what amounts were involved in that audit period?

A. Let me give you dates on it, also.

By Mr. Lockley: Can you please break it down to from November 1 to December 30 or 31?

By the Witness: I do not have that information.

By Mr. Lockley: I object to any portion of it that goes over to 1947, your Honor.

By Mr. Kirby: If the Court please, the audit was made in the normal course of business and in the normal course of business it included that three month period. Now, I can't change the fact that that is the audit that was made, your Honor, and I have to take it that way.

By the Court: All right. Go ahead.

By the Witness:

A. The third period covered from November 1 to February 28th, 1947. 51 checks drawn to the order of cash, totaling $145,875.91. 29 of these checks were questioned totaling $71,725.77.

3457 By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, in the three periods of the audit, what was the total dollar amount of checks to cash?

A. The total dollar amount for the three period audit was $756,045.27.

Q. And what was the total of the unexplained checks to cash?

A. The total amount of questioned checks or unexplained checks amounted to $306,944.90.

3458 Q. I am going slow, because I don't want to make a mistake if I can avoid it. This is one.

I would like you to look at an exhibit that the Government produced. It is No. 101, and Mr. Lubben said that that was in his handwriting. Did you ever see that before?

By Mr. Lockley: Well, your Honor, I think we can save the Court's time. He has already testified he had never seen any of those recap sheets.

By the Witness: I never saw it.

By the Court: Well, he has answered it.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Now, I call your attention to the fact that that recap sheet supposedly explains some deals with Shotwell, some cash deals with Shotwell for the period of your first audit. Now, is that a period in which you asked Mr. Lubben what happened to some of this cash?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Lubben at that time produce that sheet or anything like it for you to see?

A. No.

Q. I show you an exhibit, 102, which the young lady, Miss Feldman, said was a retype that she had made of 3459 the facts Mr. Lubben gave her about some cash to Shotwell on shipments, and I ask you if that is the period during which you on ten different times went back to Miss Feldman and asked her to produce some information; does it cover that period?

A. It covers the period in question.

Q. Did she show you that exhibit?

A. I saw no exhibit of this type.

Q. Ever?

A. Ever.

Q. Let me start out now with you at the beginning of this General Confections Corporation in '46. Lubben set that up when he wound up the partnership, didn't he?

A. That's right.

Q. And when he wound up the partnership there were some written agreements with respect to it?

A. That's right.

Q. And as an accountant did you set up on paper the deal that was made closing the partnership and opening General Confections in dollars and cents?

A. Yes, we did.

3460 Q. And did you make a summary then of General Confections' start, and what it owed as it started in business?

A. We did.

Q. Did it owe anything at all when it started in business? Let me put it this way—that question is too general; of course it owed money to people—but did it owe anything to the group that dropped out, the old Eatsum group, the Giglio group?

A. Yes, it owed to Eatsum for the inventory that was taken over by the new corporation.

3461 Q. In other words, the new corporation got all the inventory but was supposed to pay for it?

A. That's right.

Q. And did you set that up on paper, how much they were supposed to pay for it?

A. That's right.

Q. And have I asked you to review your figures on that?

A. We have examined schedules on it.

Q. Well, I have asked you particularly to look that up.

A. That's right.

Q. All right. Now, how much money, when General Confections got all this inventory, were they supposed to pay for it?

A. In the neighborhood of $300,000.00.

Q. And did you keep a record of whether they did pay for it?

A. We kept the record of all their payments to Eatsum against that inventory.

Q. Now, I show you a photostat of a check which is identified as Government's Exhibit 73 in the amount of $35,536.00 and ask you to look at that. That is a check to cash, isn't it?

3462 A. That's right.

Q. Have you got the work sheet that you made up in 1946, seven years ago, as to the payments that were to be made for that inventory to the old partnership?

A. I made sheets in connection with that inventory and payments against that inventory.

Q. Do you have them here?

A. Yes.

Q. Where are they? Do I have them or did I leave them at the table, or do you have them? Where did I leave those? Did I pick them up?

I don't see it. I remember it is a long yellow sheet.

(Documents handed to counsel.)

By Mr. Kirby: Will the Reporter mark these then Defendants' Exhibits 56 to 59, inclusive, for identification.

(Said documents were marked Defendants' Exhibits 56 to 59, inclusive, for identification.)

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Are these sheets, which have been marked Defendants' Exhibits 56 through 59, the sheets which I asked you about that represent the setting up of the obligations of General Confections to pay for that inventory?

3463

A. That's right.

Q. Now, let me ask you whether that check for $35,536.00 is posted in any way on these sheets that you made seven years ago?

A. It is.

Q. Mr. Lubben testified that he cashed the check and he brought it out and gave it to Shotwell. Now, how is it posted on the records you made six years ago?

A. It is posted March 28th, cash disbursement sheet 4, check No. 149, a debit to Eatsum Food Products, $35,536.00.

The check in my hand is 149 for the same amount.

Q. The same date?

A. The date on the check appears March 29th.

Q. Now, what that means in substance, Mr. Meyer—and I hope I don't offend you. I will try to be right about this.

By Mr. Lockley: You will, unless you ask him what it means.

3464

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. What does it mean; where did the money go according to the record six years ago?

A. According to the record, the money was paid to Eatsum Food Products.

Q. In other words, the company got the inventory and they were supposed to pay those other fellows that cash, is that right?

A. That's right.

Q. And it was posted that that is where it went?

A. That's right.

Q. Was it ever changed?

A. It was never changed on our records.

Q. Did they ever say it was wrong?

A. Nobody ever questioned us about it.

Q. Well, now, they came up in the trial here with an exhibit, 73-A, which I show you, and I ask you, did they ever show you that?

A. I never saw anything except cash authorization slips and invoices.

Q. Yes. The question is, did they ever show you that?

A. No.

Q. Well, that was introduced here and they said—

3465 does that show that $35,536.00 check—or, I mean, does it show an amount?

A. There is a pencil figure of 35,536.

3466 Q. What is the exhibit number on the back of it? Will you turn it over and see?

A. Exhibit 73-A.

Q. Well, that amount of $35,536.00 is the same amount as is shown on the books as actually having been paid to Eatsum, isn't it?

A. That's right.

Q. Well, did they ever hand you a piece of paper like that and say, "Look, you have got it posted the wrong way. It didn't go there. It went to Shotwell"?

A. I never saw this sheet or any duplicate, or any original of this photostat.

Q. They accepted the posting to Eatsum?

A. It was in the books and records of General Confections as such.

Q. If you will bear with me, Mr. Meyer, I want to go down a number of exhibits which have been introduced with respect to supposed cash paid to Shotwell, and the first memo for the General Confections period that they showed was this 73-A, which you just said they never showed you?

A. That's right.

3467 Q. And a payment of $35,536.00 on the bottom of it, which you say—at least that amount—was represented by this check which went to Eatsum, this check being 73, is that right?

By Mr. O'Brien: Exhibit 73?

By the Witness: Exhibit 73.

By Mr. Kirby:

Q. Yes. Am I correct about that?

A. Right.

Q. So this bit of proof we have had here was not posted that way at that time?

A. That's right.

Q. Now, the next one that they talked about was an Exhibit 13, which is in Lubben's handwriting. Now, did you ever see that before?

A. No.

Q. Well, that is supposedly an explanation of where some cash checks and cash went, and that is in the period you asked Miss Feldman and Lubben if they had any reco.. to show it, isn't it?

A. It is.

Q. And they didn't show that to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Well, do you notice part way down in there,
3468 in that so-called instruction sheet, it says, "Now you have two checks totaling $4,600", do you see that?

A. Right.

Q. So in the proof they showed two checks, each for $2,300, Exhibits 92 and 93, which I now show you, and those two checks obviously total $4,600, like it says on that memo there, don't they?

A. Yes.

Q. Well, Mr. Meyer, those checks were posted seven years ago, weren't they?

A. That's right.

Q. And can you look up for me in the working papers of seven years ago and tell me how they were posted then?

A. Yes, I can look on my work sheets to try and identify them.

Q. All right. Is that this pile over here? I left some papers here which I think I should move over here. Oh, maybe they are here. I am not too good at these papers. You figure out, will you, where that is?

A. Yes, I can locate three ninety-six, and four seventy-four on my schedules.

3469 Q. All right. Check 396 is Exhibit 92, isn't it?

A. 396 is Exhibit 92.

Q. Who endorsed the check?

A. William Heitmann and Edward L. Urban.

Q. Now, will you look at the records you made seven years ago and tell me what it says about that check then?

A. The heading is "It was charged to accounts payable."

Q. First of all, does it show No. 396?

A. It shows the date first, 4-29-46, No. 396, cash, 2300, endorser William H. Heitmann, Edward L. Urban, charge to accounts payable. The explanation column says, "Liquid syrup 25 drums."

By the Court: Sit back, Mr. Meyer. I don't hear you. State it again, please.
